Mr. Murphy is not a wealthy man by any means, but one who after years of faithful hard work and service, has accumulated a savings account of good proportions. Imbued with the desire to do something worthwhile during his lifetime, he makes the laudable decision to devote his possessions to the service of God, reserving simply sufficient to live on. His sacrifice is a beautiful tribute to his spirit of faith and a very practical manner of showing his appreciation for God's goodness to him all through life. Many there are who could imitate his example and exchange their earthly treasures for the heavenly ones which "neither moths nor rust consume."

Realizing that "it is a poor will which does not mention Jesus Christ among the heirs", an unknown friend makes provision for the foreign missions in the distribution of the goods which he left behind at his death. Long years hence his generous act of remembrance will be giving assistance to future generations of young students, and their prayers will daily go up to God for the soul of their kind benefactor who made the Priesthood possible for them. We are deeply grateful to these, and all our friends whose assistance means so much to us.

WERE IT not for such occasional large donations we would be badly off in our efforts to keep going forward in our important Catholic work. We depend on our mail each day to bring us the means necessary to pay our current bills. Sometimes we are disappointed; other times we are jubilant; at all times we have need of a great deal more in order to be secure for a short time in advance. The "mites" we receive from our good friends are

(Continued on page 157)

VISITORS at LUNGCHUAN

By Rev. D. E. Stringer

LET ME tell you something of our Prefect Apostolic's first official visit to "The Castle", as I fondly call my mission of Lungchuan. Now, I have never been in a castle, but I have read a few mystery and ghost stories. You know the kind where castles are concerned. Deep and dark dungeons, gigantic spider webs, bats, and what-nots. If you can imagine such a setting, then you have an idea of what our "Castle" isn't like. I think that anyone of Monsignor McGrath's party would describe it somewhat after this fashion: "In the charming village of Lungchuan they have many beautiful trees, and rain. Flowers of many hues abound, and rain. The people teem, and so does the rain. The native foodstuffs are quite palatable, but not the rain. The Dragon Boat Festival was beautiful to see—in the rain." When I offered Monsignor a choice bit from the works of Mr. Chesterton entitled "The Romantic in the Rain"—well, let's forget about what happened. Isn't there some old song that goes: "It rained when I found you, it rained when I lost you"? I think the visitors could very well harmonize on that.

The word "old" brings to mind something that happened to me in Shanghai the last time I was there. It has no connection whatever with this story, but perhaps Father Editor will allow it to get by. I had been asked to get some radio bulbs. So bright and early one morning I sauntered down town to perform my errand. As I entered a store I was politely greeted with: "Well, what can we do you for, Sir?" No, no, I have it twisted; the clerk said: "What can we do for you, Sir?" We got to be quite chummy, and before long I was listening to a history of radio progress. When I saw an opening I chimed in with a question: "What about the So-and-So radio?" "Why, that is an old one, Father; very old, very old." I was beginning to wonder who among the ancient Greeks possessed a radio when I was abruptly brought to a stop. "Yes, Father, it must be all of two years old." How's that for modernity in China? Goodness knows how old the bulbs were—for he didn't have any. As I went out I was half-expecting to see the children with long flowing beards. But let's get back to the account of that official visitation at Lungchuan.

Rough Travelling.

The party was made up of Monsignor McGrath, Fathers Morrison and McNabb, and myself. We had not long been bundled into our two boats when the weather went against us. Rain and wind galore. The boatmen were forced to halt after struggling upstream for two hours. While dinner was being prepared I figured the trip would have to be called off as a miniature cloudburst hit us. We decided to keep on going as far as Pi-wu-ka, where we could enjoy the hospitality of the genial pastor, Father Boudreau. He boasts a new style of bed; "three seasons" is the name. You know that kind? No "spring". Ah! I thought so.

Sunday afternoon found us again on our way, experiencing intermittently wet and dry spells. When within 50 li of our destination the flood gates of heaven seemed opened and we literally got "the works". We anchored in a little inlet, and in two hours we saw the river rise two feet. It was, of course, impossible to row against it. The boatmen seemed to enjoy this forced cessation of their labours. Let me remind you that at this point we were five days on the journey, and had been reduced to reading the ads. from the papers we had along with us.

If ever any of you readers have to spend five days in one of these boats you'll understand how anxious we were for a chance to get a stretch. Monsignor and I decided to walk. A boy was sent to hunt up a carrier while we packed the very necessaries to take with us. Our frame of mind was something like that of a schoolboy getting ready to go on his annual picnic, and our reactions were identical when the servant returned with the news that the road was impassable. The river had overflowed its banks. We were not to be put off that easily, and sent him to ascertain if there was another road. Yes, there was another—a path leading over a mountain and joining the main road after seven li. Just the thing—perhaps a bit of adventure.

An Unpleasant Walk.

It was drizzling when we left the boats. An hour's walking brought us to the path. The climbing was laboriously slow. The wet, slippery surface combined with the now sultry weather didn't help us a bit. Once over the top, our way led through the rice paddies, and our walking was changed to sidelong ambling along the narrow, soft, yellow mud banks which separated the rice paddies. Finally, we came in sight of the river far below us. A few houses had been flooded, and water was everywhere. Trying to decide in mid-air whether it is best to fall into a river or into a muddy rice field is something that cannot always be done right. One of us, and it wasn't the Monsignor, solved the problem by choosing the happy (?) medium—mud to the elbows and water to the knees.

We breathed with relief when we came to a cobblestone path at the main road. Around a corner we saw that the road was submerged. Turn back now? Not a bit of it; if that water is not over our heads we're going to wade it. We went in over the knees, all right, and just then we regretted that a camera was not among our belongings. It is not often that a Prefect Apostolic visits a parish by wading his way along. At any rate we arrived in Lungchuan—and it was raining! The following day Fathers Morrison and McNabb straggled in, loud in their praises (?) of everything about the parish. If anyone should have it in mind to ask Father McNabb what they do in Lungchuan when it rains, do not be alarmed if his eyes flash and he answers in an obviously restrained tone, "They let it rain!"

Incidents.

During Monsignor's stay everything about the Mission was quite "nao nieh", as the Chinese say—quite bustling. On Pentecost Sunday morning he solemnly blessed the church. In the afternoon the Christians tendered their distinguished guest a banquet. The items of the menu may interest the readers of "China". If anyone has any doubts as to the edibility of the foods mentioned, let him write to Father Morrison and he will receive a glowing eulogy of Chinese fare. How would you like this menu? Hotei (bacon), tripe, pig's lungs, pig's tongue and bamboo shoots, sharks' fins, chicken pattie, turtle, chicken, water-lily hearts, soup à la eggs and bean-curd, squid with red pepper dressing, fat pork, watermelon seeds, pumpkin seeds, bi-lo, plums, Chinese grapefruit, candied peanuts, sugar tarts and rolls, and wine.

For the benefit of those people who so graciously answered the "Call to Arms" I will mention a case of obstinacy overcome. It was the misfortune of one of my Christians that he had to perform a public penance. During four years he had steadfastly refused to do so. I thought the Monsignor's visit an opportune time to bring the matter to an end. The old gentleman was called, but the only satisfaction he gave us was the assurance that he would think it over. It seemed that human respect was going to gain another victory, but after a few days the penitent came to us voluntarily and signified his intention of doing his duty. Here is the reason as he gave it to us.

He had been in church, he said, and dosed off to sleep. He dreamed he saw the picture of the Blessed Virgin, which adorns our church, come to life, and he asked her when he should die. To his repeated inquiries he received no answer other than a nod of the Virgin's head towards the Tabernacle. Interrupting him in his story, he answered my question by telling me that he never neglected a daily prayer to the Blessed Virgin to obtain a happy death. That night while he slept he dreamed again and saw three Chinese characters which translated would mean "Peace comes through being in accord with God". The combined urge of these two dreams could not be ignored, so he humbly performed his public penance—certainly no easy thing for anyone, let alone a Chinese with his cult of "face". The old man is now very fervent in his observance of his duties as a Christian. If the forty thousand masses and communions offered in response to the "Call to Arms" effected but this one reunion of a soul with its God, then they who offered these spiritual works can feel amply rewarded.

A humourous incident of the visit to Lungchuan was the following. One morning a man came to Father Wong and asked if it could be arranged for the Monsignor to visit his house. Fr. Wong, knowing him to be a pagan, inquired the reason for such a request. It came to light that, with the Monsignor as a drawing card, the visitors to that house would be many, and the number that would remain to gamble would enable our friend the pagan to loaf a few days on the profits derived from a percentage on each "pot".

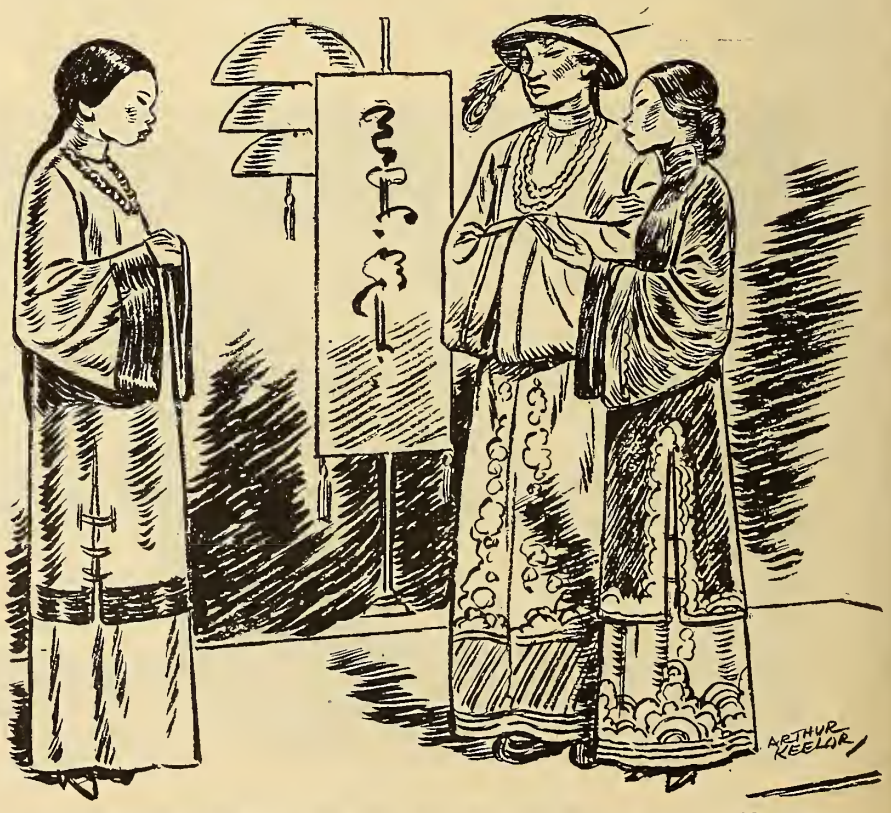
The visit to "the Castle" was brought to a happy termination on the Feast of Corpus Christi, when Monsignor confirmed a class of sixteen. Friday morning, the Christians turned out in force to escort the party to the boat. A special chair was procured for the Monsignor, and to the din of exploding firecrackers the procession moved off to the river front, and the memorable first official visitation of Lungchuan parish was at an end.

Father Venadam is justly proud of his Lishui altar boys and choristers. And don't they look fine in their new soutanes and surplices? Father Arthur writes that it was due to the generosity of Mrs. Annie McInnis, Sydney, N.S., that he was able to secure these for his boys.

A CHILD BONZESS

HE was the greatest personage in the whole district, and his wife was the daughter of the Prefect. They were rich and powerful, and therefore it was thought that they should have been contented; but it was only people who did not stop to consider who said this, for they had no son. They had been married some years, but their only child was a daughter, and in China it is a terrible thing, almost a disgrace, to have no heir to come after the father and to see that all the rites which are supposed by the pagans to ensure peace to the soul are carried out.

At last one day it occurred to them to promise to give their daughter to be a bonzess if a son were born to them; and before very long their wish was fulfilled and Tchan-Se was the happy mother of a baby boy. But by this time they had grown very fond of their little daughter, and when the bonzess-in-chief sent word to say that she expected the fulfillment of their promise, they excused themselves by saying that the little girl was too young yet to be sent away from home.



The next time that the same message came, they pleaded that their daughter was delicate and not as yet fit for the life of a bonzess; but when a third time the message arrived, and this time the words which were used to express the meaning of the bonzess held a menace, Tchan-Se and her husband no longer dared to ignore the demand. For a long time they consulted together as how they could manage to evade their promise, and at length they decided to go to the temple and lay the whole case before the bonzess, or pagan nun.

It is not the custom in China to say exactly what you mean at once, and a conversation which took place between the bonzess and the great personage had to be gilded with such compliments and beautiful speeches that it was a long time before the real object of the visit came under discussion. Each time that the bonzess had sent for the little girl, she had received, with excuses, presents both for herself and for her temple; and today, too, the child's parents had come laden with beautiful things, hoping thereby to appease either the gods or the priestess, they were not quite sure which.

The bonzess received the callers and was touched by their munificence, but she hinted that although she herself would be willing to forget the promise of dedication, there were powers that were not so easily put off; she also hinted at terrible calamities that she would be unable to avert, that might fall not only upon the little girl but on her brother as well. This seemed finally to decide the child's fate, when suddenly an idea struck Tchan-Se, and she turned again to the bonzess.

"We have in our household," she said, "a girl who has been brought up with our own daughter, and who is, I must confess it, more beautiful, more intelligent, and more docile than she is. The destiny of this child is in our hands. She is in fact our slave; but having, as I say, been brought up with our children, she is much superior to her state. If we give you this girl, and undertake besides to pay——" Here she referred to her husband, and he, after a moment's thought, mentioned a sum that was not to be despised, even by a bonzess. "Will you, under these conditions, consent to take the child, Mou, in place of our daughter?"

The offer, as they knew, was a good one for the bonzess. The recipient would be at liberty to keep or to spend the money as she desired. The gods would be propitiated by the offering of the other girl, and besides a slave would probably be an easier subject to govern than the spoilt child of a rich man who entered against her will.

The bonzess received the callers, and was touched by their munificence.

After due consideration the bonzess consented, and the parents went on their way rejoicing. No one considered what the slave child herself might think of the bargain. After all, though she had been treated so well, as the companion and friend of the daughter of the house, she was in reality only a slave, and therefore she could be disposed of just as a rich man disposes of any piece of his property. Mou was at this time a big girl of twelve years old, and in China this is counted to be a grown-up age. Mou perhaps did not feel as grown-up as she would have done had she lived all her life in the streets, but the treatment she had always received had in other ways developed her intelligence, and when she was told what her fate was to be, she not only thoroughly understood, but she also thoroughly disapproved of it.

It was useless for her to cry and protest, and beg her little mistress to intercede with her mother for her. It was a choice between the two children, and Tchan-Se was certainly not going to sacrifice her own daughter for the fancies of a slave. There was nothing for it but to submit, and, worn out with tears and protests, the child was carried off and formally given over to the bonzess for the service of the temple.

Little Mou had dreaded the idea of becoming a bonzess, but in reality, she found, it was in most ways far worse than she had expected. Knowing that she had been a slave, the others gave her all the hardest tasks to do; and when from weakness or incompetence, these tasks were badly done, or sometimes not done at all, the poor little thing was beaten till her arms and back were black and blue. Her only joy was sometimes to creep to a corner of the temple, whence she could watch the happy children who were free to play in the streets and wander where they chose.

Day after day the poor little prisoner gazed on the earth outside, and by degrees she began to know the children by sight. There were several who always passed together, and took her fancy very much, and she tried to be at her look-out always at the same time, so that she would have a chance of seeing them. They were better behaved than the others whom she saw, and there was something in their faces that she liked.

Then she found that they passed back the same way in the evenings, and after that she tried to be at the look-out twice a day, though she found the evenings more difficult to manage than the mornings because then she was not supposed to be in the temple. In fact, she was forbidden to be there; but she had become so accustomed to be told how naughty she was, even when doing her best to be good, that now she had given up trying. As she was going to be scolded in any case, she thought she would please herself as much as she could.

One day Mou had been naughty, and had not really tried to do her tasks well, so the consequence was that she was beaten very hard. The next day she was so stiff and sore from the beating that, though she did try her very best, she could not sweep and dust as she was expected to do, and despite her bruises and her cries, she was beaten even harder than before.

Her shaved head showed that she had been admitted among the bonzesses.

For a long time she had woven fancies about herself, in which she escaped from the bonzesses and made her way to the home of the children she watched for, morning and evening, in the temple. This evening, however, Mou was too tired and too sore to think of anything pleasant, and it was more to get away from everyone, than to look out as she usually did, that she crept into the temple. Finding herself alone, as she had hoped to be, she no longer tried to restrain her sobs. She never thought how near she was to the children outside, who were due to pass by now, but whose very existence she had forgotten for the moment.

When the sound of sobbing fell upon their ears they stopped and looked around and finally decided that it must come from the little opening in the temple, above their heads.

"Who is there?" called the eldest one softly, standing on her toes to raise herself as much as possible. She wished to be heard by the child who was weeping—for they knew from the sound that it was a child—and yet not to attract the attention of the passers-by.

The second time that the question was repeated Mou heard what was said, and, sitting up, she peeped out into the street. Something had told her that her friends—for so she styled the unknown children—had come to her rescue.

"Oh, I'm so unhappy!" she replied, "and I'm beaten black and blue, and if I'm caught here I'll be beaten worse again."

What could the would-be comforters out in the street say to this? For a moment even the big

(Continued on page 158)

SIGNS of the TIMES
in Chekiang

Hangchow is living up to the reputation of "The Autumn Tiger". This term is used to describe unusually hot days at the end of summer and the beginning of autumn. The heat of recent days has been exceptionally trying, but the week-end has cooled off by very heavy showers, which seem to be the result of some typhoon in the offing.

The holiday season is over, judging from the signs of lively activity in the schools and colleges. Crowds of students are flocking to the various educational centres, and the examining boards are working under full pressure. The new Government school for girls, erected on the site of the old Manchu parade ground, is nearing completion. Within its portals modern Miss China will find a splendidly equipped institution with the latest school contrivances. There can be no doubt of the Hangchow educational authorities moving with the current scholastic developments. This new high school is well prepared to aid the young generation to fit itself for the economic struggle of the future.

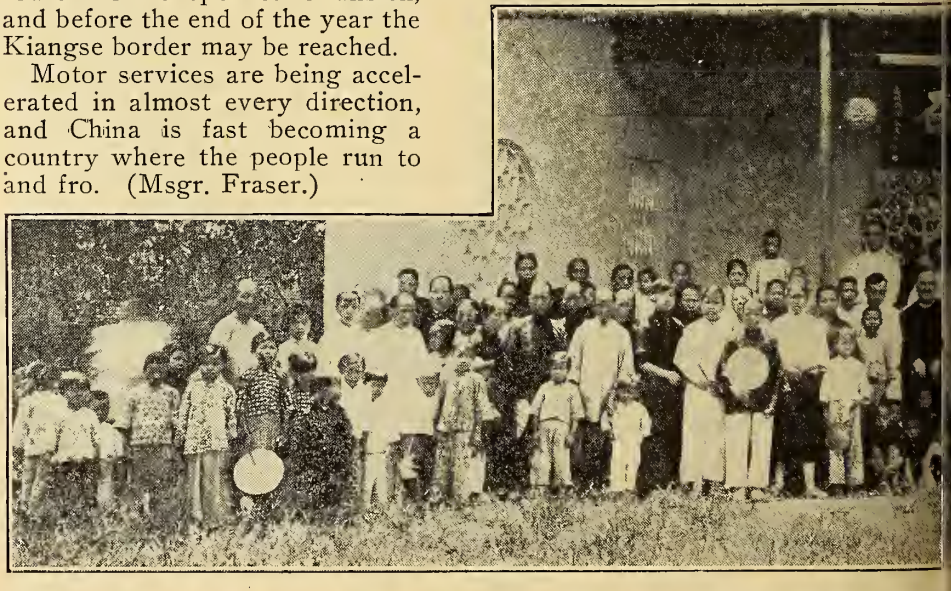
Signs of progress in the administration of "Heaven Below" are never wanting. The young women police, in their smart uniform, look very picturesque as they speed about on brilliantly painted cycles. The latest innovations are the police booths erected at strategic points of the city and environs. These neat little bureaux, covered in with glass and electrically lighted, are fitted up with telephones and furnished with appliances used by the police force which enable them to get in vital touch with the remotest parts of the municipality with lightning speed.

At the main cross roads illuminated direction posts are nearing completion. These concrete pillars supporting an iron frame cylinder are surmounted by a clock with a large dial-plate. The Hangchow public have now the benefit of standard time, but old-time customs still linger, even in this progressive city, for the crier may be heard every night beating out the watches with his bamboo and gong.

Anniversaries and Mottoes.

The usual crop of anniversaries and autumn conferences are being announced. White streamers stretch the streets to impress the populace with their duty to pool their energies and resources in helping the Government in its effort to make China clean. The People's Party are celebrating the first united conference, and delegates are receiving a royal welcome. In bold letters the Party is exhorted to exert itself in securing "Freedom and Equality" for the land and people.

In the meantime the trade depression continues to be a source of worry to the trader. Strange to say, the price of rice has become so cheap that the ordinary farmer is faced with ruin; in some districts it scarcely pays to till the soil. Notwithstanding the dry summer, good crops have been garnered, but the scarcity of ready money is compelling many small shopkeepers to put up the shutters. China is facing the same problem of over-production which is bringing such chaos to other parts of the world.



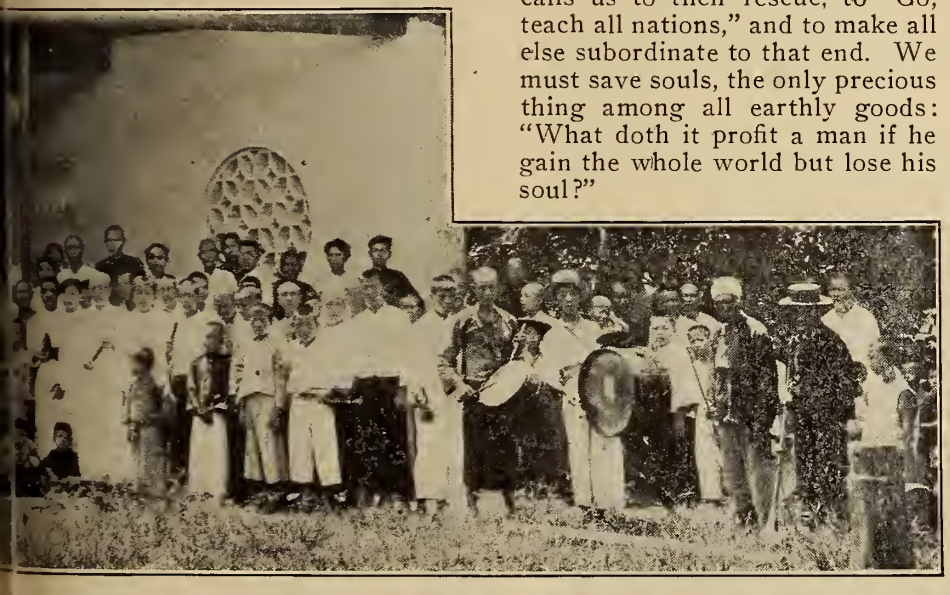
The Hangchow-Kiangsi railway continues its popularity and conveys crowds of enthusiastic passengers to and from Kinhwa and Lanche day and night. In a very short time it is expected the route will be open to Chuhsien, and before the end of the year the Kiangse border may be reached.

Motor services are being accelerated in almost every direction, and China is fast becoming a country where the people run to and fro. (Msgr. Fraser.)

CANADA AND ITS MISSIONARIES.

Rome.—There are 1,622 Canadians working in the mission fields of the world—431 priests, 218 brothers and 973 sisters, according to the statistics compiled by the Missionary Union of the Clergy.

Of these, some belong to strictly Canadian institutes, as the St. Francis Xavier Foreign Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, and the Quebec Foreign Missions, Pont-Viau, among the institutes for men, and the Missionary Sisters of the Immaculate Conception, Sisters of Charity, Sisters of Providence and several others, among the mission sisters. The majority, however, represent Canadian provinces of larger European congregations. In all, 23 congregations for men, working in 56 different ecclesiastical territories, and 38 institutes of sisters are represented. Priests and brothers, according to the continent on which they labour, number: 292 in North America, 173 in Asia, 158 in Africa, and 26 in the Pacific Islands. The Sisters: 557 in North America, 287 in Asia, 86 in Africa, and 43 in the Pacific Islands. 374 of the total 1,622 are working among Indians and Orientals of Western Canada, in dioceses which, though not directly under the Congregation of Propaganda, are nevertheless correctly considered as mission territories. (Fides.)



The picture above was taken during the past summer on the occasion of a visit to Lishui by McGrath, P.A., Monsi

WHERE XAVIER DIED.

The shrine of St. Francis Xavier on Sancian Island, off the South Coast of China, which marks the place where the Saint died while waiting to enter China, has been restored and plans are being made for pilgrimages there. Sancian Island is 100 miles by boat from Hongkong.

St. Francis Xavier died on this little island in 1552 while waiting for a boat which was to bring him to China, where he hoped to carry on missionary work. Bishop Guillemin, of the Paris Foreign Missions, erected the beautiful chapel in 1869, and brought from Europe, the same year, a bronze statue of the Saint, which he erected on a huge stone pedestal on the hillside behind and above the chapel. The building of two churches on the island in 1869 must have been a stupendous undertaking because all the materials, and perhaps all the workmen, had to be brought from Hongkong. The Maryknoll Missionaries were given charge of this sacred spot some years ago, and they have restored and renovated the shrine, which had fallen into ruins. A new pier of reinforced concrete, 200 feet long, has been constructed at the entrance to the shrine, and plans are under way for a pilgrimage from Hongkong in the near future. It is hoped that later on pilgrimages will be undertaken from North China, Japan, Europe and America. (Fides.)

ving some old acquaintances. In the centre are Fathers Beal and Morrison, Monsignor Serra and Venadam.

ONE BILLION SOULS to be Saved

Who can fully comprehend the meaning and import of this—one billion souls to be saved! So many million heathen still living in this world ignorant of their God and their eternal destination! And yet these souls of the heathen are as immortal as our own; created for the same eternal happiness. Our faith teaches us this. No one of these billion souls will cease to exist after their earthly courses have been run. All will live forever, either supremely happy in the contemplation of God in heaven or eternally miserable in the depths of hell.

The Greek artist Zeuxis had employed all his skill and talent in his famous painting of the Adonis. A fire threatened to destroy his house and home. Terror-stricken at the thought of losing his greatest treasure, he anxiously cried out: "Let all be destroyed, but save my Adonis!"

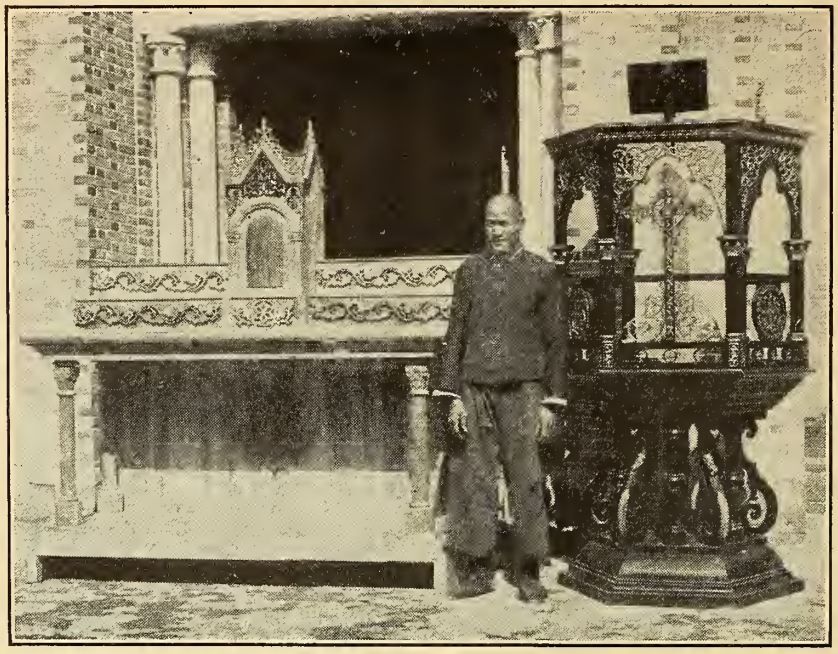
In the same manner the Divine Artist created in each human soul His own portrait—the image of His goodness — living, divinely beautiful and immortal, the highest treasure of terrestrial creation.

And now He sees this precious treasure to which His great Heart is attached with the most tender love one thousand million times in danger of being precipitated into the eternal flames of hell. He calls us to their rescue, to "Go, teach all nations," and to make all else subordinate to that end. We must save souls, the only precious thing among all earthly goods: "What doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world but lose his soul?"

Nothing is more touching in the Gospel than when Jesus weeps, when He cries, "I thirst!" as His eyes close in death, and His loving Heart is drained of the last drop of blood. This is His way of estimating the value of the human soul. Or is it possible that He was in error when He offered His life and precious blood as the price of redemption?—"For you are bought with a great price." When the Spirit of divine love and truth seeks a sanctuary wherein to dwell, He chooses the human soul as a living temple, created by the divine breath of God and sanctified by His grace. He alone is worthy and incomparable; all earthly splendor and glory must vanish in the ravishing light of His beauty and grandeur. "Know you not that you are the temple of God?"

Now what do some of the saints say, who are endowed with a deeper understanding and are more competent to estimate the ineffable value of the soul?

"The whole world is not worth a single soul."—St. Gregory the Great.



"Soul, thou art worth as much as the precious blood of Christ."—St. Bernard.

"The soul is the image of the Creator, the breath of God. Learn, O man, to know thy dignity and thy nobility."—St. Ambrose.

"There is in the whole world but one good — salvation—and only one evil — perdition."—St. Francis Xavier.

Like blind men, the precious souls of one thousand million heathen blunder along the edge of the precipice of eternal misery and pain. We have the means and can help them. God, the Creator of these souls, summons and calls us to their rescue. "Go, teach all nations." Whosoever saves a soul from ruin rescues his own from death. What more does it need to impel us to take an intimate part in the greatest work that can be undertaken for God's glory—the salvation of souls?

—Rev. H. Fischer, S.V.D.

A hand-carved altar and pulpit for one of our mission churches. The pagan craftsman is proud of his beautiful work, and you will agree that he has reason to be so.

A Virago in Action

Mighty oaks from little acorns grow, and likewise a terrible family row can be caused by a trifle. We are in the turnip season, and the women and children are busy cutting up the turnips to be dried and stored away for winter use. A brass slicer, much in the form of a cheese grater, is used to quickly reduce the turnips to thin strips, which are spread out on bamboo mats to dry. It just happened that the village blacksmith had no grater, but he had quite a crop of turnips this year. On the other hand, the village inn-keeper, a refugee from the Communists in Kiangsi Province, had a grater but no turnips. So what more natural than that the blacksmith should borrow the innkeeper's grater? In fact, the inn-keeper had no objection whatsoever, and if Eve hadn't eaten that cursed apple there would have been no trouble, and the blacksmith's turnips would have been duly cut, dried, and consumed. But, alas and alack, the inn-keeper's wife was not born free from the taint of that original sin. No, sir, she will not lend the turnip grater, and the blacksmith can go buy his own grater, etc. From sizzling verbal encounters the irate spouses proceeded to fistic engagements, and about noon a real battle was on, and no blows barred. About this time the neighbors sought to intervene, for the inn-keeper's wife had by now become little short of an infuriated demon and threatened to wreck the place. Her physical powers were not, by any means, to be despised, and the haymakers she was flinging in all directions were being to take their toll amongst the would-be peacemakers. The inns here are supplied with a goodly number of tiny earthenware stoves for the use of travellers, and one by one these stoves had been hurled and kicked at the hapless husband, and the air was clouded by the ashes from these improvised hand grenades. And what she called him, and what he called her, O me, O my. The Billingsgate fishmongers are still in the kindergarten class when compared to our friends, the inn-keepers from Kiangsi. But, as the tourist in Naples gasped, as he sucked and sucked at his string of spaghetti, "this can't go on forever", and so our raving Amazon was pinned down, her unlucky lesser half exiled to the far extremity of the village, and slowly the rumblings of the storm rolled away, and peace descended on us once more. But the blacksmith didn't get the grater.—Rev. J. E. Venini.

MANDARIN ENCOURAGES TEACHING OF RELIGION

Since last November the seminaries of Sienhsien, Hopeh Province, have been visiting the jails of the city to speak to the prisoners and instruct them. The Purgatorian Sisters have also been visiting the prisons and nursing the sick and injured. One day recently the Mandarin arrived just as a young seminarian was speaking to a group of ex-bandits. He waited until the young man had finished and then he repeated the discourse in his own style. "We cannot do much besides looking after your bodies," he began, "but the missionaries are thinking about you and wish to take care of your souls to make you better. This is a great benefit, so make sure that you heed them well. When you go back to your homes, give good example. It will not be difficult. Get busy and secure for others the good fortune you have had of learning of this doctrine which has changed you into other men."

Some of the old prisoners were so struck by the devotion of the Sisters in looking after their ills and cuts that they said, "But how can we help but become Christians when we see things like these. In this religion there is real love for men."

FLOOD RELIEF IN CHINA.

The story of how 1,400,000 men built 5,000 miles of dykes along the Yangtze in eight months during the 1931 flood disaster was related to a gathering of British soldiers in Shanghai by Mr. J. E. Baker, chief of the commissary division of the now defunct National Relief Commission in China.

The Mississippi flood of 1927 was thought to be the greatest flood disaster in history, said Mr. Baker, but the Yangtze flood in 1931 was the greatest in all history, surpassing that of the Mississippi in far greater proportions both in the area inundated and people affected. The area flooded in China was as big as that of England and half of Scotland put together, and the people directly affected numbered more than fifty million.

The amount of earthwork done in connection with the protective dykes along the Yangtze, its tributaries, the Grand Canal, and the Huai River, all joined together, would build an embankment 6 feet high and 6 feet wide round the world at the equator.

A CHINESE SHOPPING DISTRICT

By Rev. W. H. McNabb

SINCE we want to give the business section of Lungchuan the once-over, we'll turn east after leaving our front gate. "Main Street" is quite long, and both sides are lined with shops of every description. Although it is the business street, you must not imagine, therefore, that it is a "busy" street. It has none of the Western hustle: things go along very slowly, and the people on shopping tours have no need to be careful of motor cars, street cars, or even bicycles—for there just aren't any. The only unusual activity on that street is occasioned by the passing of a troop of soldiers or by the appearance of a foreigner.

The grocery store has the usual things one would expect to find there—and oftentimes a good many unusual things. Some of the preserved eggs look as if they had been just dug up from King Tut's tomb, but evidently they make a good dish to judge by the number of customers buying them. Rice is sold in bulk, and in every grocery store it is piled high in large vat-like containers. Packages of matches fill the shelf behind the counter. A rusty oil lamp hangs in a convenient place to supplement the service given by a single electric bulb of doubtful utility. The city's supply of electricity is meagre indeed, but what can one expect from a mere gas engine whose generating power is sadly overtaxed.

The shops are all of the open-air variety. And "variety" there surely is. Adjoining places of business include in order a grocery store, a barber shop, a blacksmith's forge, a tailor's, a "medicine shop", and a tinsmith's.

The barber shop boasts two large mirrors, which reflect the neatly-shaven head of the proprietor; at the blacksmith's two young lads are developing their muscles while an old man holds the red hot metal for their blows —from nails to plowshares can be bought here. Most of the tailors do their work entirely by hand, but some of the more modern ones make use of an imported "Singer Sewing Machine". This is the most common "foreign" machine in our section of China; hand labour is so cheap and so plentiful there is not much need for machinery. Perhaps that explains why the "Depression" hasn't made much difference in things over here. Of course, there is a certain amount of "unemployment", but it never seems to affect the usual run of affairs.

To the foreigner, the "medicine shop" is not always recognizable as such—at least it has that much in common with the modern Western "drug-store", but for a different reason. Here, in many cases, the drug-store appears to be nothing but a counter, but underneath that counter are little drawers, each with their own special medicine. Much of their stock in trade is made up of herbs and roots whose claims to fame have come down through long years of usage. Many of the remedies, though crude enough, have their own merits and effect cures. A few whose knowledge of "medicine" has carried them into foreign fields produce for sale such imports as Pink Pills for Pale People.

The unwary stranger would think at first sight that the tinsmith's is the proper place to stock up with Campbell's soups. The cans on his shelves, although bearing the unmistakable label, do not, however, contain soup. The cans are just waiting their turn to be converted into pots or spoons or whatever the customer wants made. Do your own explaining, aided, perhaps, with a drawing, and it is surprising what the tinsmith can do with these soup tins.

And then there is the vegetable-sellers' row. The countrymen sit near their baskets as the customers do their selecting. The amount of vegetables carried by any one "merchant" is, as a rule, limited to the contents of two baskets. Finally, an important adjunct to the "business district" is the transient peddler who moves up and down the street ringing a bell or twisting a noisy clapper to announce his presence. He carries his "shop" with him on the ends of a wooden pole, and his two cupboards (each about four feet high) conceal about as varied a stock as a "five and ten" store. Business is business with the Chinese as with other peoples, and if their "stores" are somewhat different than what we are used to, yet they have the same purpose—to cater to the needs of the people and to provide a living for their owners.

HOPEFUL SIGNS.

The increasing interest of our people, and particularly of our school-age generation in the Catholic missionary endeavours; the multiplicity and diffusion of missionary literature; the extraordinary number of sacerdotal and religious vocations, compared to a few decades ago, are surely hopeful signs. They are like the buds on the trees which, in the words of the Master, bring with them the sure promise of Spring. —(Missionary Bulletin).

A new view of Lishui, the mission centre of our District of Chuchow in China. Convent of the Grey Sisters of the Immaculate Conception shown at right.

The Cries of China

THERE is nothing which more astonishes a foreigner, and frights a nervous person, than the cries of China. Newcomers to this land of noises often remark, that they cannot get them out of their head, or go to sleep for them, the first week that they are in China. It has always been a delight to me to listen to them, and I prefer them to the song of larks and mockingbirds, with all the music of the fields and woods.

The cries of China may be divided into vocal and instrumental. As for the latter, they are present under a very great disorder. Any individual peddlar of wares has the privilege for hours together of advertising his particular stock with the clanking of a brass kettle or a frying pan. The policemen's thump, thump throughout the night keeps the night prowlers informed as to his whereabouts, and saves him the annoyance of coming across a thief. The beggar's harp has indeed something musical in it, and can be heard day or night at almost any street corner. Bugles resound from every hill and street, wherever there are soldiers, and that is everywhere; during the day at all hours and during the night at regular intervals, according as the spirit moves them, or their superstition leads them, the soldiers blaa.

Vocal cries are of a much larger variety and, indeed, so full of incongruities and variations and tones, that to the inexperienced foreigners, who do not understand the meaning of such enormous outcries, this land seems a home of hoodlums. The most outstanding cries are those of the coolies carrying burdens. In China everything is carried on the backs of coolies, who accompany all their labor with a sort of sing-song moaning, or a rhythmic groaning, keeping time with their work. It is a sort of a "he ha, he ha, ha he, ha he". If there are two on the job, the first will use one tone and say one syllable and the other will use a different tone and answer. When they are working in large groups it makes a pleasant effect. To me it always sounds like groaning, and is a picture of a nation in distress. And, indeed, in no other country is there so much groaning, nor so much reason for it.

Passengers on the Lishui Ferry.

Then there are the cries of the peddlars. In no other country in the world is there such a variety. Everything, every conceivable article of food, every imaginable toy, any useful piece of clothing, any and many odds and ends, from American tooth paste to Chinese back scratchers, can be bought on the street. And for every separate kind of thing there is a special call. Some things demand such a high pitch that it sets our teeth on edge. Some things are uttered in the deepest bass. Every bit of all which is still as unintelligible to me as when I arrived on the first day. So far I can distinguish two calls, that of lobo—turnip, and that of iogo—a certain kind of oily doughnut. But it seems as if the Chinese house-wives understand them well, for as soon as one utters the particular kind of ware she is in need of, she appears at the door and makes her purchase.

Some of these last mentioned musicians are so very loud in the sale of these trifling manufactures, that, during my stay at the hospital in Hankow, they caused me more than one nightmare, and tempted me either to commit murder or break up their goods. When I wake up at night with one of their cries sounding in my ears, I still do not know whether it is a fire, or the Reds are invading the city, or it is just a vendor selling matches. At first I was inclined to fear the worst, but now I always interpret things by opposites. The louder the yells the cheaper are the things the fellow is selling, and the less danger there is. Some day there will actually be a riot or war and I will sleep peacefully through it and not be the wiser. It must be admitted, however, that the newspaper criers over here are more temperate than their clan is in the States. An "extra" in the States is yelled out with the same precipitation as "fire". The reason is, I suppose, that the people here have been fooled so often and so badly that they refuse to be excited by any news appearing in print.

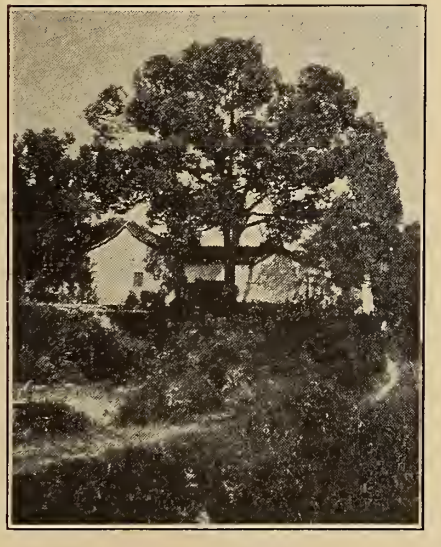
Nor must I omit, under the head of cries, the many family quarrels which are aired out on the streets. When I first heard them I was nonplussed and my imagination pictured riots and uprisings. Now I apply the old proverb: "Much cry, but little wool." At least there is but little wool sent flying.

There is one set of cries which always amuses me, namely the cries of the school children studying their lessons. In China all lessons are studied out loud, each pupil studying on his own lesson and bringing in all the required tones. Some yelling at the highest pitch of their voice, others in contented grumbles. It reminds me of nothing more than a contented barnyard, with chickens cackling, roosters crowing, dogs barking, guinea hens squeaking, horses whinnying, cows mooing, calves baaing. As there are no large schools in my missions, these school yells are multiplied a hundredfold, and it lasts from the rising of the sun until its setting.

There is still another variety of cries one often meets with, and of which I am not at all fond. These are the cries of beggar women. They can present their pitiable lot with greater passions than even Shakespeare was master of, and they all have the gift of tears. While the lot of most of them is pitiable, their cries and tears are plain counterfeit. At first I was taken in by a couple of them, but now I laugh at them. When they see that I recognize their game, they laugh at themselves. If you make them confess the truth, you will find that they are quite well provided for after all.



All these cries, together with the constant sounding of gongs in pagan temples, the numerous street singers, the cackling of chickens, quacking of ducks, squealing of pigs and howling of dogs, form an impression which is far more homelike than the cranking and honking of cars, the screaming of gears and the grinding and crunching progress of the street cars, which drown out the more human noises in the cities of the Occident.—Rev. A. Wecker, in "Franciscans in China".

PRAYERS ANSWERED AT HUANG D'AN.

A short note from Father King, received on October 23rd, reports the Retreat for our missionaries had concluded at Lishui and the priests were now "hastening back to the front".

"All is well at Huang d'An," he says, "and our little flock there is indeed worthy of great praise. When Father Amyot and I left there on Sept. 1st, to go up for Retreat, we had a very touching manifestation of the religious spirit of these people. We had to leave exceptionally early, but yet there were nineteen attended Mass, and ten of them received Holy Communion. Some men and boys came to the chapel as early as 3.15 a.m., although we had made no announcement of an early Mass. More than 200 were at Mass in Huang d'An on the Feast of Our Lady's Assumption. There was no room, of course, to accommodate them all in our old chapel, which wobbled and shook, but did not actually collapse. Many of our Christians returned to their villages after Mass, but we had 106 at Benediction and Rosary in the evening.

"Quite a remarkable thing happened on the Feast. At Mass, as requested by the people, we had offered special prayers for rain. It came down in abundance at 8.30 that evening, and, strange to relate, irrigated thoroughly only the fields of those who were Christians. In a pagan village less than a mile distant scarcely a drop of rain fell to save the drooping rice plants. Everybody noticed the strange occurrence."

A scene along the road from Lishui to Pi-wu-ka.

CHARITY TO MISSIONS.

(Continued from editorial page)

appreciated very much; they assure us of the goodwill and the interest of people who are making sacrifices on our behalf. We thank God that the poor are our helpers. Their own poverty does not lessen their Catholic spirit and their sense of responsibility to their Faith. The widow's mite drew from the sacred lips of Christ that brief, touching eulogy which shall forever remain the consolation and joy of the poor when presenting their gifts, with the goodwill of their hearts, to advance the interests and the glory of that God Who, without needing our help, is so condescending in receiving and so generous in rewarding it. No one has ever yet been impoverished by almsgiving.

We have mentioned these gifts editorially in order to emphasize the spirit of Christ-like charity which has prompted and inspired them. Maybe these generous friends are teaching a needed lesson to our Catholic people on the use of their worldly possessions. To us they demonstrate the fact that the Catholic Missions have a claim on the charity and the sacrifice of the individual members of the Church. All of us can and should be missionaries. Only a chosen few are called apart to devote their entire lives and all their energies to the spreading of the faith, but the work of sustaining these cannot be left to an insignificantly small number of the faithful. Every Catholic is obliged to assist and co-operate to the best of his ability to carry on the work successfully. Only in this way the great work of the propagation of our holy faith will be able to prosper and flourish. We believe that the only thing needed to evoke generous support for the missions is the spread of information concerning them. If Catholics only knew and understood this great and important obligation of their Church, if they realized their personal responsibility in the matter, and if they considered the manifold blessings which attend those who aid the work of the foreign missions, then we are persuaded that their generosity would be manifested accordingly.

A CHILD BONZESS.

(Continued from page 151)

one was at a loss. Then another question broke the ice, and after that the story of the unwilling little bonzess was told to them in full.

At this second visit it was the story of the outsiders that had to be told. They were on their way to school—that was the first piece of information they gave; but after that came stories of their school life, which were continued not only on that evening but for many days to come. Even these few moments' daily intercourse with other children, as a relaxation from the continual company and scoldings of the grim bonzesses, seemed to help little Mou to bear with her life more patiently. But what she heard about the wonderful school, from which her friends would not lose a day from any consideration, created in her poor little starved heart such a longing to share its delights that at length, driven to desperation by a continual series of cruel beatings, she decided to run away.

It was a dreadful thing to do, and her friends outside were so good that she was afraid at first to mention it to them. But at last she made up her mind to do so, and then that very evening they told her that for a whole month they could not pass that way because the school was giving them holidays. One or two promised to come and see her if they could; but as the days passed she found that they were too full of holiday-making to remember their promise, or at least just yet. Deprived of her only comfort, and worn out from beatings, she made up her mind at last to creep out at night when all the world was dark and climb up over the fence, to liberty.

The Sisters were not unaccustomed to children going to them for protection; but when little Mou came to their door, trembling, and marked from head to foot with all her beatings, they were at a loss to know what was best to do with her. Her shaved head showed that she had been admitted amongst the bonzesses, that she was not only a little servant maid; and if it was discovered that she was at the convent, might it not bring danger upon the helpless inmates of their little hospital?—for the Christian religion was only just tolerated in the town.

A TITLE FOR YOUR WILL

St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary for the education of young men for the priesthood.

But a little questioning made it apparent that it was not only protection that the child asked; she wished to be a Christian. The children had told her what they were taught, they had repeated some of their prayers to her, and it looked as though our Lord Himself had taught the child to know Him, for it hardly seemed possible that the children's words alone could have enkindled such faith and love in her heart. She wanted to be a Christian, and to give up her life to the service of God, just as she had been forced to give it up to the service of the temple.

It happened that two Sisters were about to start for another convent down the river, and it was suggested that the child should be smuggled out of the town amongst their baggage. It would have been inhuman to send Mou back to the people who did not scruple to ill-treat her so cruelly; and then, when the little thing was taken into the chapel, it was plain that to send her back to paganism would have been even more inhuman, when it was so evident that God Himself had given her the gift of faith.

The orphanage down the river was already filled to overflowing, and "Ma Soeur" did not know where the money to buy food was to come from in another week or two, unless kind people at home in Europe happened to remember her and her large family. Yet little Mou, having come so far and with the marks of her bruises still fresh upon her, could not be refused. A corner was found for her, and very soon she felt not only at home and happy, but useful in the school. From the day she had learnt of the existence of God her resolution of dedicating herself to His service never wavered. Everything she did had this end in view, and there was no one more obedient, more docile, more in earnest than she. But she had many things to learn still, and for some years she must go on swelling the numbers for whom the nuns have to provide.

As for the bonzesses, they had inquiries made, and even her former master tried to find out what had happened to her; but as their only idea was that some of the child's own people had found her out, no suspicion fell on the convent. If, some day when little Mou had attained her wish, and is a real nun, she is sent back to the town where once she was a bonzess, there will be no danger of her secret being discovered; for it was reported that a child had died amongst her people soon after her escape from the temple, and the bonzesses are quite sure that this child was Mou.—"The Schoolmate."

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Following are the contributions received between Sept. 16th and October 19th: Miss Rose McKenna, $1; J. C. Chisholm, $1; Mrs. S. E. Sheehan, $5; Mrs. Alex. McNeil, $4; J. J. Carolan, $1; Annie J. MacDonald, $10; Agnes Coules, $1; Emile Pinel, $2; W. T. Featherstonhaugh, $4; Ursuline Convent, Calgary, $2; P. Plunkett, $1; Halifax Seminarian, 50c; Rev. Friend, Nfld., $5; Robert Kiely, $5; Alice Carney, 50c; Mrs. Lynch, $1; Mrs. Broderick, 50c; Children of Mary, Pres. Convent, Renews, Nfld., $10; Mrs. J. Morry, in honor of St. Therese, $5; James Chafe, $2; Mrs. Fitzgibbon, $2; Leo Smyth, $5; Kathleen Bird, $2; Mrs. Annie MacIsaac, $1; Julia M. Murray, per Mgr. Blair, $5; Rev. H. Brunet, $30; Agnes M. Ryan, $1; Miss Rose Brophy, $2; Master Wm. Reardon, 50c; Miss Elizabeth Sullivan, $5; A Friend, Salmonier, Nfld., $5; Miss E. Roche, $4; Mrs. E. Brown, $1; Miss C. Reilly, in thanksgiving, $1; J. J. Carolan, $1; Margaret McManamy, $2; Pupils, St. Nicholas School, P.E.I., $5; M. J. S., $5; Pupils, Sisters of Notre Dame, Souris, P.E.I., $5.50; Anon., Windsor, Ont., $1; Rev. J. R. Richard, $1; Miss Roberts, $3.21; Miss Elizabeth O'Loughlin, $5; Mrs. John Claeys, $6; Mrs. T. A. Harris, $2; Mrs. Thos. A. Phalen, $5.

Burses

Miss Mary V. McCormick, Perpetual Help Burse, $5; Friend, Sacred Wounds Burse, $25; J. Sniderhon, St. F. X. Burse, $1; Friend, St. Jude's Burse, $1; In Memory of M. Walsh, Sacred Heart Burse, $40; Friend, Hamilton, Sacred Heart Burse, $3; James McCrea, Little Flower Burse, $10; A Friend, $25.00 to each of 12 Burses.

Building Fund

Patrick J. Healey, $2; Friend, $200; Alice Conway, $10; Harry Joanette, $5; Mrs. B. B. Kay, $5; D. J. Rankin, $1; Friend, $5; Mrs. A. R. Macdonald, $2; Miss A. C. Sweeney, $5; Miss Annie McGoldrick, $2; His Excellency, Bishop Alex. MacDonald, $10; Wm. R. McDonald, $1.50; James Carroll, $1; Miss Catherine McRae, $1.

Judge: "It seems to me that I have seen you before."

Prisoner: "You have, your Honor; I gave your daughter singing lessons."

Judge: "Thirty years."—Watchman Examiner.

A fellow dialed his home telephone number.

"Hello," he said. "Is that Mrs. Brown?"

"Yes."

"This is Jack speaking. I say, dear, will it be all right if I bring home a couple of fellows to dinner?"

"Certainly, darling."

"Did you hear what I said?"

"Yes—you asked if you could bring home a couple of fellows to dinner. Of course you can, dear."

"Sorry, madam," said the fellow as he hung up. "I've got the wrong Mrs. Brown."—New York Morning Telegraph.

Fat Man (fondling baby): "What do you think of my son, Jim?"

Jim (surveying father): "Well, I'd say that he was a stave off the old barrel."—Bell Hop.

Smith: "Jones expects 100 per cent. disability on his accident insurance policy. He says he is completely incapacitated by the loss of a thumb."

Smythe: "What's his vocation?"

"He's a professional hitch-hiker."—Foreign Service.

"Does your husband always lie to you?"

"No, some nights I'm too tired to ask questions."—Jester.

"What will the girl of eighteen be in ten years' time?" asks a critic. Twenty-one.—London Opinion.

Wife (to boxer returning from fight): "'Ow did you git on, Bill?"

Bill: "Fine—put 'im to sleep in the third round."

Wife: "Good. Well, now you can try your 'and on the baby."—Passing Show (London).

A chorus man out of a job was given a small part in a play. He merely had to walk on, seat himself and say, "Well, here I am." At rehearsal he did not give satisfaction.

"No," bellowed the director. "Try it again. Now come on like a man."

"My goodness," simpered the chorus man, "for $15 a week he wants me to do character parts."—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Neighbor: "Why is your car painted blue on one side and red on the other?"

Speedy: "Oh, it's a fine idea. You should just hear the witnesses contradicting one another!"—Everybody's Weekly (London).

Mistress: "Now, Matilda, I want you to show us what you can do tonight. We have a few very special friends coming for a musical evening."

Maid: "Well, ma'am, I ain't done no singin' to speak of for years, but if you-all insists upon it, you can put me down for 'The Holy City'."—Pathfinder.

"So Joe was the life of the party?"

"Yeah. He was the only one who could talk louder than the radio."—Life.

Patient: "Is the doctor in?"

Attendant: "No, he stept out to lunch."

Patient: "Will he be in after lunch."

Attendant: "Why, no, that's what he went out after."—Boston Transcript.

Just as Al Jolson was about to go on the air in one of his radio programs, he got a long distance call from a pal in a distant city.

"The broadcast was great! You were marvellous, Al!" the friend gushed.

"But heavens, man!" shouted Jolson, "I haven't even started yet."

For a moment there was silence, then this comeback: "Yeah, but you forget the three hours' difference in time. You're all through here."

The Bishop of London, speaking at a meeting recently, said that when he was in America he had learned to say to his chauffeur, "Step on the gas, George"; but so far he had not summoned sufficient courage to say to the Archbishop of Canterbury, "O.K., Chief."—Wall Stret Journal.

Peter (saying his prayers): "And please make Cyril give up throwing stones at me. By the way, I've mentioned this before."—Humorist.

Wife (as husband is leaving): "Dear, will you remember to bring home something for the rats this evening?"

Hub: "Something for the rats? Certainly not! If the rats can't eat what we have in the house, let them leave."—Boston Transcript.

"Did you ever attend a school for stuttering?"

"N-n-no, I j-j-j-just picked it up."—Purple Parrot.

A new system of memory training was being taught in a village school, and the teacher was becoming enthusiastic.

"For instance," he said, "supposing you want to remember the name of a poet—Bobby Burns. Fix in your mind's eye a picture of a policeman in flames. See—Bobby Burns?"

"Yes, I see," said a bright pupil. "But how is any one to know it does not represent Robert Browning?"—Watchman Examiner.

"K-k-k-ka-kantcha s-s-see whu-whu-where you're g-ga-ga-ga—"

"Going?"

"—going, ya b-bu-bu-big Boo-Boo-Boo—"

"Boob?"

"Thu-thu-thank you!"—Life.

John: "Yes, I had a little balance in the bank, but I got engaged two months ago, and now——"

Joan: "Ah, love makes the world go round."

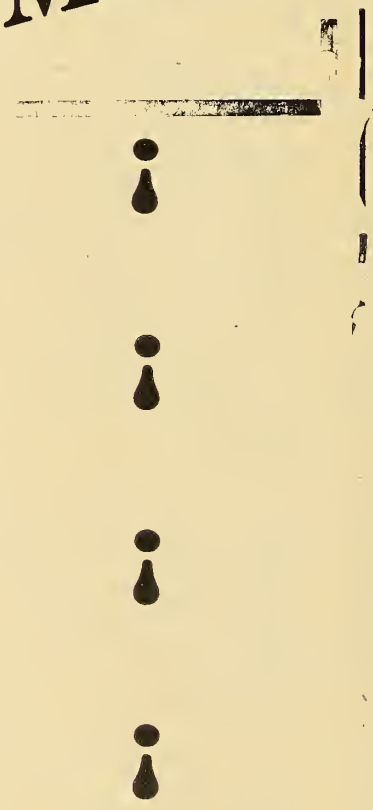
John: "Yes, but I didn't think it would go round so fast as to make me lose my balance."—Christian Science Monitor.

Young Wife: "Now, Bill, I want you to go around to the minister and arrange for having the baby christened."

Bill (shipyard worker): "You mean to say you are going to let somebody hit that little thing over the head with a bottle?"—Farm Journal.

The advertising man was proposing. "Remember," he said, "this is the last day for this astounding offer."—Lehigh Burr.

Burglar (to belated assistant): "You're late. I told you 'arf past one."



Young Burglar: "I forgot the number of the 'ouse. I've had to break into every 'ouse in the street."—Passing Show.

"Do you remember that couple we met on the steamer we took such a violent fancy to—I mean the couple we invited to visit us?"

"Yeah. You don't mean to say ——"

"Yes, the idiots are actually coming!"—Life.

Just a Moment, Please!

WE have been telling you about our new building at China Missionary Seminary. It is now completed and our students are comfortably housed in it. We are naturally delighted at the large number of students with us this year, but we have the responsibility of caring for them and of finding means to meet increased current expenses. Our Building Debt of more than twenty thousand dollars is a matter of grave concern to us, and we are appealing now to our friends—to you who are reading this—for help. Anything you can do to lighten our burden will not be without its reward from Our Divine Lord in whose name we make this request for financial assistance. Even a small gift will be much appreciated.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER
China Mission Seminary
Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.
Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS

DECEMBER, 1933

INTERNATIONAL VARNISH CO. LIMITED

TORONTO

PRODUCERS OF

TRADE ELASTICA MARK.

Varnishes

Paints, Lacqueret and Kwickwork Auto Enamels

Special Seat Finish for Church Pews

Our Decorative Department is at your service at all times and enquiries promptly replied to.

Gerrard and Carlaw Phone HA. 2178

All Estates Must be Administered

If you should die without a Will your Estate would be distributed according to the laws governing the devolution of estates regardless of your present wishes or what might be the circumstances of your family.

WE INVITE CONSULTATION REGARDING THIS IMPORTANT MATTER AT ANY OF OUR OFFICES.

Capital Trust Corporation
Limited
OTTAWA MONTREAL TORONTO

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.

OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide 2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West Toronto

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 27,000
Entered as second class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XXII. DECEMBER, 1933 No. 11

THE GREATEST event in the history of the world will soon again be commemorated in the celebration of the Feast of Christmas. The circumstances connected with the coming of God to earth show us clearly indeed that "the ways of God are not our ways." One would imagine that the advent of One so mighty, "the desired of the nations", would be attended by all the magnificence that earth could know; one would think that the Mother of the Incarnate God would be chosen from the queens of the earth, from the richest and most renowned of these queens; and one would expect that he who was chosen as earthly guardian of the Divine Child would be none other than the world's most powerful prince. How differently did God ordain and dispose things!

Instead of the earth's most magnificent mansion, the Son of God chose a hillside stable-cave as His birthplace; instead of on earthly royalty, the privilege of being God's mother was bestowed on a humble Virgin in the unknown village of Nazareth, but never had this world seen, nor will it ever again see, a creature having such surpassing spiritual riches as had Mary the Virgin-Mother of Christ; and the honor of being the guardian of this pure Virgin and her Divine Child was given, not to any earthly potentate, but to Joseph, an unknown carpenter of the same humble village of Nazareth who, in the sight of God, was "a just man".

* * * *

CAN ANYTHING be more touching or more simply beautiful than the words of St. Luke in telling us the story of this wonderful first Christmas night, a story which has ever had the power to touch the hearts and minds of men in a harrassed and care-distracted world and turn their thoughts to the blessings implied in the angelic greeting: "Peace on Earth". The sweetest story ever told is this Gospel account of our Saviour's nativity. " . . . . the Angel Gabriel was sent from God into a city of Galilee, called Nazareth, to a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary . . . . And it came to pass that . . . . there went out a decree from Caesar Augustus, that the whole world should be enrolled . . . . And all went to be enrolled, every one into his own city. And Joseph also went up from Galilee out of the city of Nazareth into Judea, to the city of David, which is called Bethlehem: because he was of the house and the family of David, to be enrolled with Mary his espoused wife, who was with child.

"And it came to pass, that when they were there, her days were accomplished, that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her first-born son, and wrapped him up in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger; because there was no room for them in the inn.

"And there were in the same country shepherds watching, and keeping the night-watches over their flock. And behold an angel of the Lord stood by them, and the brightness of God shone round about them, and they feared with a great fear.

"And the angel said to them: Fear not; for behold I bring you good tidings of great joy, that shall be to all the people: for this day is born to you a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord, in the city of David. And this shall be a sign unto you. You shall find the infant wrapped in swaddling clothes, and laid in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly army, praising God, and saying: Glory to God in the highest: and on earth peace to men of good-will.

"And it came to pass, after the angels departed from them into heaven, the Shepherds said one to another: Let us go over to Bethlehem, and let us see this word that is come to pass, which the Lord hath showed to us. And they came with haste: and they found Mary and Joseph, and the infant lying in the manger. And seeing, they understood of the word that had been spoken to them concerning this child."

* * * *

FATHER FABER, in "Bethlehem", writes about China thus: "We ponder in a puzzled way over that enormous hive of human life, where age has followed age and God is still unknown. How little did it feel the need of a Redeemer on that December night! How little does it feel it now! If anywhere on earth we can see unaltered what we might have seen that first Christmas-Eve, it is in that strange, unattractive, vexatious, disappointing land. As the winter stars shone unconsciously that night on the hurrying currents of those turbid rivers or in the stagnant pools of the rice-fields, so were the hearts of the dwellers there unconscious then, so are they almost unconscious now. It is chiefly the speechless unconscious babes of China that are the sweet prey of the Babe of Bethlehem, an artifice of grace which almost looks as if it stooped to suit itself to the condition of the land it fain would bless."

(Continued on page 174)

To All Our Readers — A Happy Christmas

THE MISSIONS
AS GOD SEES THEM
"The Kingdom of God knows no racial divisions"

By
RT. REV. W. C. McGRATH,
Prefect Apostolic of Chuchow

SOME people are never quite clear on certain features of what is often termed "this mission business, anyway". There is a certain amount of bewilderment, and the situation is rarely clarified by such statements as:

1. "The work of the Foreign Missions is certainly the most important work of the Church. After all, if Catholics in Western Canada have lost the faith they have done so through their own fault, whereas the Chinese never have had a chance."

Or, on the contrary:

2. "It is most unreasonable to talk about sending men and money to China when so much remains to be done right in our own Canadian West. The time to attend to Foreign Missions is when we have solved our problems at home."

We sincerely hope that you disagree with both statements. For there is no "most important work" in the Church in the sense that all should concentrate their efforts upon that particular work to the exclusion of all other works of God. If you were to listen to some zealots of either cause argue their case you would infer that all the priests in the world should immediately be placed either upon Home or Foreign Mission territory. There would not seem to be room for some in each field. As for the "fallen-away Catholics" and their degree of culpability, the so-called argument is a two-edged sword. It cuts both ways. You can use it according to your point of view. You can say, for example: "Fallen-away Catholics have had their chance and thrown it away. Give at least a similar chance to the poor Chinese since there aren't enough priests to go around." Or again, you can remark: "Since the fallen-away Catholic is more culpable than one who 'never had a chance', his condition is more helpless and hopeless, and hence he has a greater claim on our charity. So try to save these stray sheep and leave the Chinese to the Mercy of God"—as if there existed any free creature who "never had a chance"!

Hence statement No. 1 is very misleading. But statement No. 2 comes right out with a delightful rapier thrust which gives the coup de grace to all Foreign Mission endeavour. Attend to Foreign Missions, it says, only when we have solved our problems at home. And we cannot refrain from asking: "When, kind friend, will we have solved all our problems at home?" And the answer we cannot hold back is: "Surely not before the crack of doom." After which, no doubt, Foreign Mission work should begin.

The thing that most wearies and saddens all true friends of both Home and Foreign Missions is the idea which seems to persist in the minds of some otherwise well-informed people that it is necessary to defend the one by attacking the other. Honestly, we should fear for the success of our own work in this portion of the Lord's Vineyard in China were we disposed to look upon the great mission work in the West with any feeling other than one of pride and enthusiasm; with anything on our lips or in our hearts but a prayer that God may bless and sustain the zealous efforts of those missionaries in Western Canada whose work is as "heroic" (if you insist upon the word) as anything we know in China.

"HE DIED FOR ALL"

Some are called by God to the Foreign Field, others to the Field at Home. In God's sight they are not two fields but one, and even if you are disposed to stress the differences, you will feel that in the heart of every true Catholic there is room for a little sympathy for both. For that matter, what is this difference, anyway? Is it slant eyes or yellow skin or the thousands of miles of Pacific Ocean that roll between? Are these things of consequence in the sight of the Eternal God Whose image is borne by every human soul?

It is "only natural" that work at home should appeal more strongly to many people than work among pagans in a foreign land. But we must try to rise above what is "only natural" else there will be no mission work of any kind, either in Canada or in China. If it were a question of motives that were only natural, none of those heroic young priests would be wearing their lives out in seeking the stray sheep on the vast Western prairies. Charity is something more than natural. It is supernatural. It is the driving force of the Missions at home and abroad. It is that Divine fire which "begins at home" but which, if it "ends there", must surely die.

As for the merely natural feeling at home in regard to the Chinese people, we know it only too well.

(Continued on page 167)

The Human Side of Our Holy Father

OUR HOLY FATHER fills the awesome role of Vicar of Christ upon earth. No more dizzy pinnacle of honor can be imagined for mortal man. This is true of every Sovereign Pontiff; and to the grandeur of his office Pope Pius XI brought personal qualities and attainments which have won for him the reverent admiration of his children and even of a world which refuses to adore the Master whom he serves.

Praise has come to him from many sources; it still reverberates on all sides. For example, on the day of his election to the Papacy, Cardinal Mercier paid him this worthwhile compliment: "Il a des idées larges." Stanley B. James, well known to readers of Catholic magazines, writes that "His is, from every point of view, one of the dominating personalities of our time." The Rector of the U.S. Catholic University did not hesitate to prophesy, "He will certainly take a place among the great Popes of all times"; and —two years ago—"If he lives another ten years, his place in history as the greatest man of the twentieth century is almost secure." A non-Catholic, in his book, "Makers of the Modern Age," pays Pope Pius XI what he deems the highest of tributes by ranking him with Lenin and Mussolini!

All must admit that he is a master diplomat. None question the fact that he stands among the great scholars of the world, and has always made his learning serve high purposes. When, as Cardinal Ratti, he presided at the dedication of the new Catholic University of Milan, the motto, "Learning for learning's sake," was chosen for it by a number of scholarly Catholic men; he corrected it to run, "Learning for learning and learning for life."

But the Holy Father is not only the most exalted figure in the world, not only very gifted and very learned; he is, too, intensely human: a man to be loved as well as revered. As he himself said to a visitor shortly after his elevation to the Papacy, "I am no dry-as-dust scholar, but very human."

The daily life of our Holy Father is passed thus: He rises at seven o'clock, and half an hour later says Mass in his private chapel. A breakfast of coffee, bread and butter follows. From nine o'clock until midday he is in conference with officials of the Church; public and private audiences come next. After they are ended, Pope Pius eats a light luncheon and, unless the weather is very inclement, walks for an hour and a half in the gardens of the Vatican. At eight o'clock he goes to his private chapel, where, with the members of the household, he recites the Rosary and spends some time in adoration of the Blessed Sacrament.

At nine o'clock he dines. It is a custom, which Pope Pius X alone disregarded in several hundred years, that none may sit at table with the Sovereign Pontiff; but Pope Pius XI passes the time by having his secretaries bring him his private correspondence. The two following hours he passes in his library, where his attendants—many of them young men—gather about him; and with them he discusses the news of the day, the latest books, or some notable scientific discovery, as freely as a loving old father would chat with his sons. After they leave him for the night, the Pope has an hour—the only one in his long day—for the books which he loves or devotions that he has had to postpone. It is well after midnight before he goes to rest.

Those who are privileged to meet him, not in the hampering formality of a public audience, but privately, are charmed by his gentleness and benignity. He smiles often and readily; he laughs heartily. Severe when severity is necessary, much more often he is lenient and even genial. Hedged in by etiquette and traditions centuries old, he is, nevertheless, modern to his finger tips. He rides in an automobile, talks over the telephone, broadcasts to a listening world through his own station, and issues encyclicals on the burning questions of the day.

Among his more intimate characteristics may be mentioned an unruffled calm. Nothing disturbs him. When one of his secretaries mislaid an important paper during a particularly busy and hurried day, he explained to the Holy Father, "I put it down in a fluster, and now I cannot find it." "But why a fluster?" was the reply. "There is never occasion for a fluster."

That Pope Pius XI is fearless of bodily injury his record as a mountain climber proves; and his moral courage is as great as his physical. Early in his pontificate when Fascism talked violent anti-clericalism, and suited the action to the word, our Holy Father

(Continued on page 167)

The first time that all our priests were together in Lishui was during the annual retreat held in September. To these sixteen priests of St. Francis Xavier Seminary is entrusted the big task of converting more than a million and a half pagans in the Prefecture of Chuchow, Chekiang, China. Although so far distant from friends in their homeland they feel that they will be remembered and united with them this Christmas season in the strong bonds of prayer. Seated (left to right): Rev. J. Venini (Oshawa, Ont.); Rev. V. Morrison (Savage Harbour, P.E.I.); Rev. Fr. McArdle (Retreat Master); Right Reverend Monsignor W. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap. (St. John's, Nfld.); Rev. R. Serra (Palau Sabardera, Spain); Rev. Paul Kam, Rev. W. K. Amyot (Ottawa, Ont). Standing (left to right): Rev. J. King (Newburg, Ont.); Rev. W. McNabb (St. Thomas, Ont.); Rev. J. McGillivray (Glace Bay, N.S.); Rev. J. MacDonald (Windsor, N.S.); Rev. A. Gignac (Ridgetown, Ont.); Rev. A. Venadam (Pomquet, N.S.); Rev. Paul Wong, Rev. L. Beal (Otterville, Ont.); Rev. D. Stringer (Ottawa, Ont.); Rev. B. Boudreau (New Bedford, Mass). Correspondence for any of these missionaries may be addressed to Catholic Mission, Lishui, Chekiang.

Our seven theologians at Brignole Sale College, Genoa, Italy, with Father Gerald Doyle (centre), now at Canadian College, Rome. Below: The thirty-eight students at Scarboro Bluffs this year, with the President of the Seminary, Very Rev. J. E. McRae.

THE HUMAN SIDE OF OUR HOLY FATHER

(Continued from page 165)

boldly denounced it whenever it encroached upon the rights of God and of His Church. "They may ask for my life but not for my silence," he said.

That his charity is both tender and world-wide he has repeatedly shown by word and deed. As is well known, the first utterance of his pontificate, spoken to the Cardinals still assembled in conclave, was: "I declare before the members of the Sacred College that I have at heart the safeguarding and the defense of all the rights of the Church and all the prerogatives of the Holy See; but having said that, I wish my first blessing to go as a token of the peace to which all men aspire, not only to Rome and to Italy, but to all the Church and to the entire world. I will give it from the exterior loggia of St. Peter's."

The three great Pontiffs who had preceded him, "Prisoners of the Vatican," had not appeared on the outer balcony; and the heart of the world was touched by the breadth of love which actuated this first public act of Pope Pius XI.

And on the occasion of the radio address which inaugurated the Vatican station, speaking to his children in all lands, none could doubt the sincerity of such words as, "Our heart swells with love for you"; and to the missionaries in every far corner of the world, "From Our heart we greet you." Many a missioner, lonely in a strange land, hearing his words, must have been fired with new courage. Henceforth he knew, as never before, how loving and understanding a father he had in Pope Pius XI.

His zeal is all-embracing. If it has a special predilection, it is for missions and missionaries. "Pope of the Missions" is the title which has been conferred upon him. It was from the depth of his apostolic soul that he cried, in the Encyclical "Rerum Ecclesiae," "After pondering on the fact that pagans still number almost a billion, We have no peace in Our spirit, and We seem to hear sounding in Our ears, 'Cry; cease not; lift up thy voice like a trumpet'."

Those who have heard Pius XI speak, either informally or on important occasions, tell how the depth and sweetness of his piety betray themselves; how he utters the holy name in accents which reveal that it is music to his ears. "Our dear Jesus," he will say in the course of a few-minute talk; and every hearer bears away in his mind and heart the most eloquent sermon he has ever heard on love for Christ our King.

In conclusion, two little incidents will serve to accentuate the tender kindliness of our Holy Father. When he was in Poland, not very long before his election as Pope, Msgr. Ratti saw one day a poor woman who was weeping bitterly. On making inquiry he learned that a cow, her one possession of any value, had just died.—Before that day closed the poor woman had another cow.

On his desk, beside papers of state and books of theology, there stands a small toy dog of black and white wool. Some time ago, as the Holy Father was addressing a group of pilgrims, he noticed among them a little child who held in his hand a toy dog. The child caught his glance and concluded that the Pope was eager to own it, so then and there he presented it to him. Pope Pius accepted it gratefully, and ever since it has had a place of honor on his study table.—Who would not love him? Simple and fatherly no less than the greatest figure of our day.—Florence Gilmore in "The Christian Family."

THE MISSIONS AS GOD SEES THEM

(Continued from page 164)

It is one, unfortunately, of prejudice which is as ineradicable as it is unfounded. And we cannot say that anyone is very much to blame. People just don't know the Chinese. But even those who would refuse to let a Chinese laundryman past the storm door must realize that there is even in this man whom they distrust so unreasonably something more than slant eyes and a penchant for tricks that are vain. They know that a Chinese soul isn't "yellow" any more than the soul of a Celt or a Nordic "superman". They know, if they are Christians, that the gentle Saviour died for Chinese souls as well as for yours and mine.

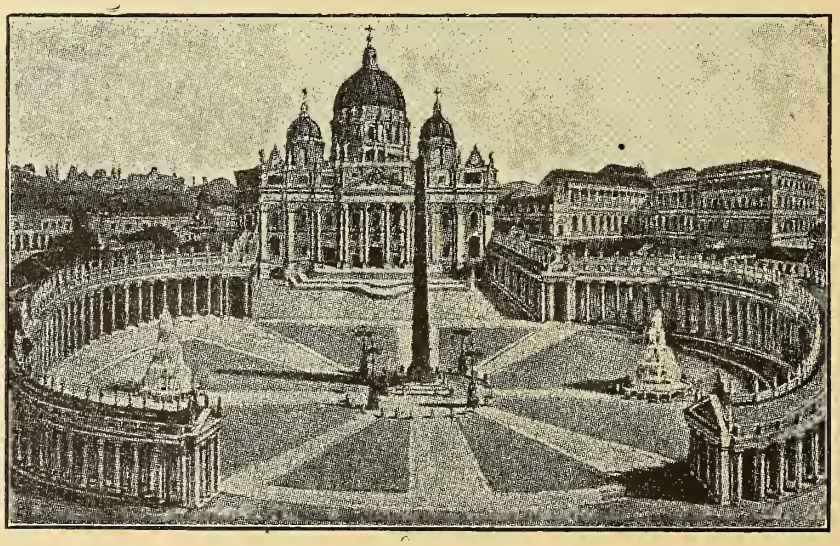
No, dear friends, the Kingdom of God knows no racial divisions. Canada and China are not two fields but one. The soul of an innocent Chinese child at this moment is more closely united to you as a fellow member of the Mystical Body of Christ than is the soul of your own friend or relative who may have fallen victim to the tragedy of mortal sin. It is, after all, only eternal values that will endure.

May God ever bless that great Christlike work of the Western Missions. We ask it in the same prayer with which we pray that He bless His work in China, too. May He inspire kind friends to regard Mission work both in Canada and in China as but one united effort to reclaim for the Sacred Heart forever the souls for whom It bled.

Msgr. John M. Fraser and five Chinese youths whom he has sent to the seminary at Hangchow to begin their preparatory studies for the priesthood.

The SACRED CONGREGATION for the PROPAGATION of the FAITH

THE CHURCH has received from Jesus Christ the command to preach the Gospel throughout the whole world, to extend to all peoples the fruits of the Redemption, to unite all mankind in one flock under one Shepherd: "Go", said Jesus to His Apostles, "teach all nations" (Matt. 28: 19). "I have appointed you that you should go and should bring forth fruit" (John 15: 16).



It is this activity which is expressed in the Gospel phrase, this apostolate which wins new peoples to the Kingdom of Christ, which we term Missions. We apply the title Mission Countries to territory in which the preaching of the Gospel has scarcely commenced, or where Catholic life has not yet been sufficiently developed to warrant the establishment of a regular ecclesiastical administration, a stable and definite hierarchical organization.

The chief direction of the missionary Apostolate is entrusted to the Sacred Congregation de Propaganda Fide, founded by Gregory XV, author of the Constitution Inscrutabili divinae Providentiae arcano, on June 22, 1622. According to Canon 252 of the Code of Canon Law: "The Congregation de Propaganda Fide has jurisdiction and charge of the Catholic missions for the preaching of the Gospel and Catholic doctrine, and whatever is connected with and necessary for the management of the missions. Councils held in missionary countries are subject to the Propaganda. Its jurisdiction is limited to those districts where either the hierarchy is not yet established, or, if established, is still in its initial stage. Moreover, societies and seminaries founded exclusively for the training of missionaries are under the jurisdiction of the Propaganda in matters which have to do with their constitutions, their administration, and concessions required for the ordination of their subjects. In addition, this Congregation is held to refer to the competent Congregations the cases concerning faith, marriage or general rules of the sacred liturgy and interpretation of liturgical laws. As regards the religious, the Propaganda has jurisdiction over them in as far as they are missionaries, individually and collectively; in their character as religious they are under the jurisdiction of the Congregation of the Religious."

At present, the Congregation of Propaganda (as it is commonly shortly called) is composed of 22 Cardinals, ten of whom reside elsewhere than Rome. It has a Secretary and Sub-Secretary, assisted by other officials, and numbers 24 Consultors.

Territories Under Propaganda.

THE CHURCH today has missionaries in all parts of the world. Only two countries, and these are in Central Asia, as yet remain closed to any Christian endeavour: the Mohammedans of Afghanistan forbid any missionary to cross their borders, and punish with death any native who becomes a Christian; Tibet, the inaccessible Buddhist stronghold, not alone forbids the entrance of missionaries but closes itself to all exploration by foreigners.

Geographically speaking, one can say that the jurisdiction of Propaganda embraces the greater part of the known world. It includes:

(a) Africa, with the exception of two archdioceses and a few dioceses;

(b) Asia, with the exception of the patriarchial archdiocese of Goa and its suffragan Sees in the East Indies, which belong to Portugal, and the diocese of Macao in China, likewise a Portugese possession;

(c) Oceania and Australia, with the exception of almost all the Philipine Islands.

Moreover, Propaganda has subject territories scattered throughout North, South and Central America.

In Europe there are certain ecclesiastical territories subject to Propaganda in Protestant or orthodox countries where Catholics, being in the minority, live under conditions similar, in some respects, to mission countries. Thus, subject to Propaganda are the Catholics of Norway, Sweden, Finland, Denmark, Iceland, Gibraltar, and the Catholics of the Latin rite in Bosnia, Albania, Greece, Bulgaria, European Turkey, and Palestine and Cypress.

Previous to 1908, some large countries were still subject to Propaganda; this was the case with Great Britain and Ireland, Holland, Luxemburg, Canada, and the United States. Pius X, during the reform of the Roman Curia, placed all these countries under the ordinary care of the different Roman Congregations, leaving to Propaganda about twenty Vicariates and Prefectures-Apostolic which, up to that time, had been under the supervision of the Congregation for Extraordinary Ecclesiastical Affairs.

PREFECT OF PROPAGANDA
His Eminence, Cardinal P. Fumasoni-Biondi, formerly Apostolic Delegate to the United States.

In 1917, all Catholics of the Oriental rite, and, consequently, their missions, became subject to the Congregation for the Oriental Churches which had formerly been united with Propaganda.

Catholics in Mission Countries.

ON June 30, 1930, the number of Catholics in mission countries properly so called—that is, in infidel countries alone — was 13,665,141, divided as follows: Western Asia, 72,000; India, 2,535,958; South Eastern Asia, 1,411,440; Oceania, 385,217; China, 2,520,303; Japan, 106,000; Africa, 3,934,678; Americas, 2,301,144.

Considered in themselves, these figures are consoling. Yet there remains the painful consideration that if the population of the whole world is approximately two billion people, there are yet about one billion three hundred million pagan souls to be converted and saved.

Let us see now what forces are at the disposal of Propaganda for the preservation and the spiritual government of converts as well as for the conversion of infidels.

Missionaries Under Propaganda.

LEAVING OUT Europe and Australia, at the end of June, 1930, the total number of mission workers dependent on Propaganda was 163,422, of whom 15,234 were Priests, 4,952 Brothers, 27,272 Sisters, 51,606 Catechists, and School Teachers, and the remainder general mission helpers. This formidable army is at work in the mission countries. Native missionaries, who constitute roughly one-third of the Priests, Brothers and Sisters, number 16,299. Their number is increasing steadily, especially in Africa and in the four Asiatic countries, Indo-China, China, India, and Syria, which are the most important territories and the most fruitful and well-developed from the point of view of Catholic missions. The following table shows the missionary personnel contributed by five European nations.

Country	Priests	Brothers	Sisters	Total
France	2,974	713	3,541	7,754
Italy	866	208	1,582	2,876
Germany	649	245	1,677	2,807
Holland	729	456	1,301	2,503
Belgium	1,001	245	911	2,175

Although the nationality of all missionaries is not definitely certain, it can be seen from the above figures that these five nations together supply 38% of all workers employed in mission fields.

The missionary priests are either members of the old Religious Orders (the greater percentage being Jesuits and Franciscans) or of Religious Congregations of more recent origin, some of which have been established within the past century expressly for mission work. Some are secular priests, members of some Society or Institute or Seminary for Foreign Missions, as, for example, the Paris Foreign Missions, the Milan Foreign Missions, etc. Others still belong to no particular organization but are subject only to their respective mission superiors.

Almost half the European Brothers are sent by the Religious Orders and Congregations from which the priests come; others are members of Religious Institutes of Brothers. These latter devote themselves chiefly to the instruction and education of youth, to the care of the sick, or to agriculture, or various trades and domestic works.

SECRETARY OF PROPAGANDA
His Excellency, Archbishop Salotti.

The collaboration of Missionary Sisters is even more necessary than that of Brothers. From long experience it has already been demonstrated what great influence women exert in the conversion of the world. Rarely can the work of the female Religious in hospitals and schools be done so effectively by seculars. In our days, a very large number of Congregations both old and new send their religious into distant mission countries; in recent years there

(Turn to page 174)

PAGANISM and CHRISTIANITY

A CONTRAST

by
Rev. X. Rosso, O.F.M.

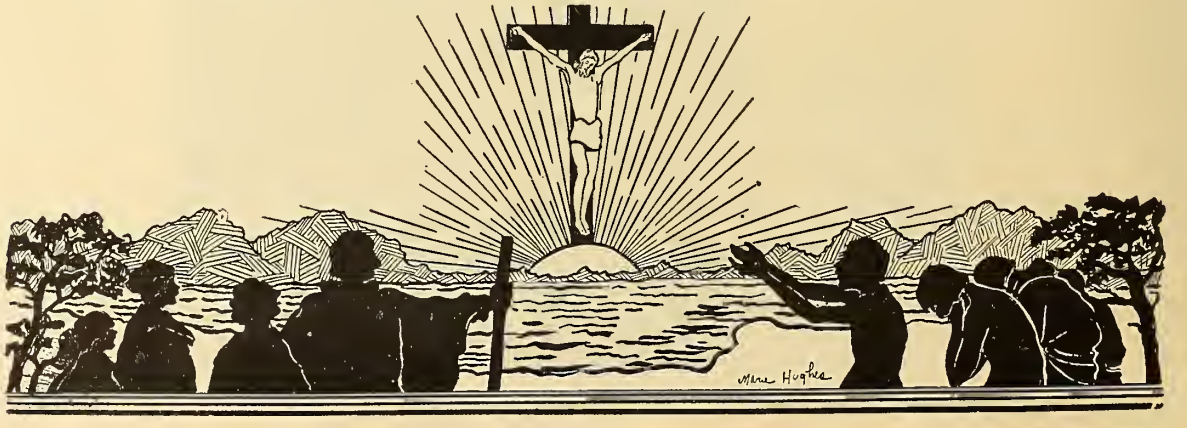
PAGANISM to a Christian in a Christian land is only a theory—it has no actuality—it has no power to touch the intimate things of the spirit, for it is confined to the realms of thought and memory alone. In a pagan country, paganism is a question of life and death—paganism is actual, it influences the beginning and the end of every act, it has its reactions in every vicissitude.

A Christian who lives in the midst of paganism, willingly or unwillingly, must enter into conflict with this power, he must struggle against it and must conquer lest he be conquered. Hence the continual study, the continual comparison between good and evil, the true and the false. The Christian doctrine is the diamond which uninterruptedly comes into contact with the hard immovable rock of paganism and from the conflict the diamond comes forth with a more brilliant luster while the rock's face is only scratched.

Paganism and Christianity are as opposite as good is opposite to evil. A long and intense analysis leads to a deeper understanding of the two trees and their fruits, the Christian good and the pagan evil.

The Orient may well be styled the observatory of the world, for here all the variations and vibrations of the human soul are registered; here the dividing line of the world between the City of God and the citadel of the devil is clearly defined. On this sounding-board all experiences are received and thrown back on the world—the experiences of the uneducated as well as of the learned. Any one living in China will quickly, and, as it were, naturally pass from the views he forms of Chinese paganism to generalizations about the true and the false.

The sun and the moon are divinities in China. And elsewhere? How many nations do not perdure in this belief? A metal or a wooden statue is considered a god, in China as well as in other countries throughout the world; and thus it was in every age, barring a few exceptions.



Emperors, philosophers, statesmen, even Catholic priests, have been deified in pagan lands. In Greece, in Rome, India, China, Japan, in fact in every place where paganism holds sway, it was ever thus. Totemism is a universal pagan, shall I say, doctrine. The tortoise and the dragon are sacred in China; the cow is sacred in India and in ancient Egypt it was the bull Apis.

Spirits! What pagan people does not believe in and fear them? Lightning, thunder, fire, the forces of nature, are the embodiment of spirits good and evil. China might be called the spirits' kingdom, or rather the absolute monarchy of spiritism. Probably there is no nation on earth that offers such consistent and varied cult to the devil as the Chinese people. For every occasion, such as birth, espousal, marriage, the opening of a new business, and for various occasions of the year, the devil is adored and appeased.

Man! What is man in China? His spiritual life is practically nil. In the realm of intellectual life there is but a semblance of spirituality. Man is not honored with personal dignity; much less is he united to his neighbor in the bond of brotherhood. The strong man is feared, the weak man is oppressed. The citadel of the devil which does not recognize God as a father and men as brothers, often witnesses the gruesome scene of man killing man, nay indeed, of man eating man.

Love your friend, love your enemy! This law can be proper only to the City of God. Only in theory can man elevate himself by his own power; in practice, without the Christian religion, he is no more nor less than an animal. A Christian is by exception bad; a pagan by exception is good. There is no such thing as moral independence in paganism. So-called moral independence really depends on Christianity; it gathers the fruit from the tree while spurning the roots.

Justice, the glory of the Occident, could not be natural in our soul without the Christian religion. What does paganism retain of justice? In China nothing remains but the name; there is not the least foundation of just dealing, and it is this fact which makes us West-

Courtesy, "Fransciscan Missions".

REV. ROLAND ROBERTS
Ordained to the Holy Priesthood by His Excellency Bishop Murray, C.SS.R., at the Cathedral in Victoria, B.C., on Sept. 23rd.

REV. CRAIG STRANG
Ordained to the Holy Priesthood by His Excellency Archbishop Roche, at the Cathedral in St. John's, Nfld., on Sept. 21st.

erners strangers in China. The mind of the pagan Chinese is so distorted that justice cannot even strike root.

The Chinese does not cultivate truth; on the contrary, falsehood is the foundation of his dealings (no one who is acquainted with persons and places in China will say that I am wronging the Chinese by making this statement). Everything is falsified, every sentiment, every taste. Only the obvious is sought for. What I assert about the Chinese a missionary in Africa last year asserted of the natives of that country, and he noted that fact as if it were a peculiarity of that place; but I contend that it is a mark of the citadel of the devil, whom Tertullian calls: "the falsifier of nature".

What is Christianity's glory is paganism's shame. Christianity has raised from the lowest status to a real pinnacle of eminence, for instance, womanhood, infancy, the aged. In other words, she has taken the weak and made them strong.

The position of woman in paganism is humiliating, to say the least. In China, woman has no freedom in the choosing of her consort, nor has she the right to arrange the affairs of the home. She has no part in public, and a very insignificant part in family life. She is the slave, the tool, the plaything of her master, man. If she has children, good. If her child is a boy, it is nursed and brought up; if a girl, it is liable to be exposed or it may even be killed. Cases of such unspeakable cruelty are not rare.

What a contrast to Christianity: "Suffer the little ones to come to me, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven". "What you have done to the least of these, you have done unto Me". That is the City of God!

The principles of paganism are bound to bring forth a multitude of creatures who will always be deprived of education, of a home, of the means of sustaining life. Products of such circumstances and environments will be beggars for existence—not only that: they will also be centers of physical and moral infection. In paganism the poor, the sick, and the aged are despised; charity is an enigma. They are often left to die in their misery not even receiving as much as a word of compassion. How different the attitude of the Saviour who "went about doing good".

Extend the comparison, search deeper, and you will come to this conclusion: In modern times as well as in antiquity, in China as well as in other countries, allowing for small variations because of place, paganism is always and everywhere the same. In the spiritual kingdom there are only two trees the good and the bad,

(Continued on page 174)

The Grey Sisters of the Immaculate Conception and the young girls under their care at Lishui. Left to right: Sisters St. Angela, Mary Daniel, St. Juletta, Mary Catherine, and Mary Genevieve.

LITTLE FLOWER'S ROSE GARDEN

Edited by FATHER JIM

CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP

The only conditions of membership in the Rose Garden are: (1) To say every day the Prayer for the Conversion of China; (2) To go to Holy Communion once a month for the Intention of Missionary Vocations. Certificates and pins will be sent to all members.

On the third of this month the whole Church celebrates the feast of one of the greatest missionaries who ever lived. Members of our "Rose Garden", in common with all missionary clubs, ought to have a special devotion to St. Francis Xavier. The "Little Flower" shares with St. Francis the title of special patron of missionaries. Although he died 381 years ago the body of Xavier is still preserved incorrupt in the city of Goa.

St. Francis Xavier was one of the first companions of St. Ignatius, founder of the Society of Jesus. In 1541 he went as a missionary to India, then a far-off world buried in the darkness of idolatry. For eleven years he labored in India and Japan and converted to the faith hundreds of thousands of infidels. Not content with the mighty conquest of India and Japan, his heart went out in sympathy to the hundreds of millions of Chinese to whom God was unknown. With the hope of bringing these people to the knowledge of the true God, Xavier sailed from Malacca in 1552 and soon reached the island of Sancian, off the coast of China. Here he was stricken with a deadly fever. In utter destitution, without proper food, under a wretched shelter, exposed to the biting December winds, deprived even of the last sacraments, the great Apostle Xavier breathed out his noble spirit on the third of December, 1552. His body lay unburied for two days and then, without any of the ceremonies of the Church, it was consigned to a lonely grave by the seashore.

When word of his death reached India, some influential Christians sent orders to have the body exhumed and brought to Malacca, where it arrived on the twenty-second of March, three and a half months after Xavier's death.

So far God had allowed His great Apostle to die a death that would seem to befit an outcast; but now He was about to manifest to the whole world the high degree of sanctity to which Xavier had arrived.

When the ship that conveyed Xavier's body reached Malacca, the city was in a pitiful condition. A fearful pestilence had been raging for many weeks, and the populace was simply melting away under the scourge. As soon, however, as the body of Xavier was brought ashore, the plague suddenly disappeared; no new cases developed and all who were already infected, Mohammedans and infidels, as well as Christians were cured immediately. In consequence of such manifest miracles the name of Xavier was enshrined in the hearts of the Mohammedans and infidels and Christians alike. From Malacca the sacred remains were transferred to Goa, and here again God testified to Xavier's sanctity. The report had reached Goa of the wonderful miracles that had taken place at Malacca and hence, when the saint's remains arrived in the harbor, the streets were lined with people suffering from every known human ailment. Many who were too sick to be moved from their beds were carried by friends and laid in the streets. While Xavier's body was being carried through the streets to the Church of St. Paul, the wonders of the "Apostolic Age" were renewed. There went out from the body a power to heal all. The blind suddenly recovered their sight; the lame and the paralyzed recovered the use of their limbs; the deaf recovered their hearing; the dumb recovered their speech; lepers were made clean; the bed-ridden arose and walked. Tears of joy overflowed from grateful hearts, while shouts of triumph broke forth from hundreds of lips as they beheld the instantaneous and miraculous cures all about them.

The miracles wrought here were so numerous, were so stupendous in their nature and were witnessed by so many thousands that they caused a great sensation not only in India, but also throughout Europe. The story of Xavier's Apostolic labors and his power to obtain favors from God was told in every land. Very soon an unbounded confidence in the intercession of Xavier diffused itself throughout all Catholic countries. Prayers directed to him, invoking his aid, brought such manifest proof of his power in heaven that on the twelfth of March, 1622, Xavier was canonized as a saint.

Dear Boys and Girls:

As this will be the only opportunity to say a few words to you before the Holy Christmas Season I want you to know that I will keep you in mind when I offer the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass on the Feast of the Incarnation, and in that way I can best express my thanks to you all for the splendid way you have been helping the Missions all the year in your prayers and by your generous gifts. This Christmas will be the happiest in your lives if Almighty God grants you even a few of the many heavenly favours I shall ask for you, my cherished little helpers in this great missionary "Rose Garden". My own Christmas will be all the happier if I hear from you. And you won't forget to pray for one another, either, will you? And especially at Mass on Christmas Day, and in your visits to the Crib, you should say some very fervent prayers that the poor pagan children in China will soon come to know of that God who came to earth as a little Infant for their sake, as well as for ours.

FATHER JIM.

MITE-BOXES

"Dear Father Jim:

At the request of Sister Adele I am writing to ask you if you would please send us six or more mite-boxes for our classrooms. We want to save our pennies for the Missions as we have done every other year. Everybody in our school, Immaculate Conception School, Peterboro, belongs to the Holy Childhood Association. We receive 'China', and enjoy Father Jim's corner most. I am in Jr. IV. Class and am 11 years old. We will be very thankful for the mite boxes. Respectfully, Marcella Baldwin."

Father Jim is always very pleased to send mite boxes to the schoolrooms, and now that another Christmas season is drawing near I hope many schools will continue to save their pennies for the Missions. Every penny is a help, and God's blessing will be with the young boys and girls who sacrifice their spending money to help the priests in China save souls. I hope, too, that many classes will enroll as members of the Holy Childhood Association.

The Children's Prayer

By L. Mitchell Thornton

The lifted hands of the children
Are white as the petals of flowers;
The voices of little children,
Somehow, are clearer than ours.
And Mary the Mother will listen,
And Mary the Mother will care,
Far more than to clamor of princes,
To children whispering in prayer.

The lifted eyes of the children
Look up to the angels above;
The simple songs of the children
Soar up to the Fountain of Love.
And Mary the Mother will bless them,
And Mary the Mother will share
The hopes and the dreams of the children,
The children who seek her in prayer.

(The "Little Missionary")

Working Together

"My cousin, Rose Madden, told me about your Rose Garden, and now I want to join. Rose gets 'China' from her teacher, and she gives it to me after she reads it. I would be very pleased if you would pray for my dear father and mother, as our house was burned down a few months ago. Your friend, Mary B. Madden, 42 Lower Main St., Glace Bay."

Likes the Pictures

"I have been reading the 'China' book since I can remember. I have read the Rose Garden page and I am writing to join it. I am 11 years old and in Grade 4. The 'China' book is a very nice book to read. I have read it always. It is a very nice book, and the pictures of the ones you put in are also very nice. Good-bye, Father Jim. My address is Veronica Keating, Box 361, New Waterford, N.S."

New Members

Virginia Favetta, 404 Marks St., Port Arthur, Ont.; Marie and Beatrice Johns, 61 Laing St., Toronto; Mary Hughli, Sacred Heart School, Sault Ste. Marie; Gladys Gallant, Summerside, P.E.I.; Bernadette, Genevieve, and Joan of Arc Bonneau, Prescott, Ont.; and Margaret McAvoy, Brook Vale, Lot 30, P.E.I.

Young missionaries at St. Mary's Convent, Peterboro, sent $10 for the missions.

A Real Nice Letter

"Dear Father Jim:

I am writing you this letter to ask you about all the baby boys and girls and are they all going to Mass, and would you like a present, and are the 'China' people very poor and in need, and how old have a girl got to be to decide to be a sister, and will you like to have my picture. I have two sisters and two brothers. The sisters are Rita and Mary and the boys are James and William. James sings in the choir and he serves Mass, he is in high school. Dear Father, please may I join your Rose Garden club I was ten the 14th of April I am in Grade 4. Please Father excuse my letter because I am not used to writing letters and will you ask some of the Rose Buds to write to me. Good bye from Elizabeth Taylor, Box 297, New Waterford, N.S."

Elizabeth, I was very delighted with your long letter and I hope you will write me again. You have asked a lot of questions, and I am glad. The baby boys and girls in China are not as well off as the boys and girls in your school, and they do not go to Mass because they never had a chance to learn all about God, but I feel sure that the prayers you and other Canadian girls and boys are saying for the poor pagan children will help them to know about God sometime and thus get to Heaven. Yes, the poor people of China are very much in need. That's why we ask the grown-up people in Canada to help them and to send priests and nuns to help them. I would be very glad to get your picture and I hope you liked the certificate and badge I sent you. God bless you, dear little friend, and thanks for your lovely letter.

Sometimes I fear new members are a little discouraged when they do not receive their badges and certificates of membership almost immediately after they write to me. As a rule, I attend to their mailing as quickly as possible, but occasionally it happens that delays are unavoidable, especially when it is a question of filling out certificates for large numbers in schools, etc. Those who are still on the "waiting list" can, in the meantime, begin to fulfil the conditions of membership, and I promise you that Father Jim will always do his very best not to keep you waiting unnecessarily. It does my heart good to get so much mail, but it is a real "heart-breaker" when I can find room to mention only a few in our column.

Spiritual Help for the Missions

Members of our Rose Garden have time and again proven their great interest in the Missions by offering spiritual help in generous measure. We value greatly the spiritual bouquets sent us both from the schools and from individual members. The following acts have been offered by Grade 2, College St. School, Halifax; Grades 8, 9 and 10, Rustico Convent, P.E.I.; and by the Senior Third Class, St. Joseph's Girls' School, Ottawa.

Masses heard	219
Holy Communions	267
Rosaries	413
Prayers	855
Way of the Cross	99
Acts of Mortification	304
Visits to Blessed Sacrament	225
Ejaculations	24,847

Choose Your Pen Pals Here

Kathleen Boulogne, 56 Dingwall Ave., Toronto; Helen Walsh, Box 112, Newmarket, Ont. (especially to hear from Eileen Muldoon, Beech Grove, Que.); Pauline Michaud, Box 358, Thorold, Ont.; Frances and Johanna Sullivan, 252 Plummer Ave., New Waterford, N.S.; Lillian Kennedy, 7 Echo Drive, Ottawa; Alice Gallant, Duvar, P.E.I.; Joseph Ashmore, 1516-11th Ave. W., Calgary; Margaret, Gerrard, and Alonzo Moran, Holland Centre, Ont.; James Love, St. Gregory's School, Oshawa, Ont.; Ralph Gallant, Summerside, P.E.I.; Finlay Campbell, Riverville, N.S.; Harold Hendrickson, Plato, Sask.; Margaret Lavoie, 172 Coleman Ave., Toronto; Mary Josephine McLellan, St. Peter's Bay, P.E.I.; Irene Starling, 63 Dundurn Ave., Hamilton; Marguerite and Anna Morton, Grande Clairiere, Man.; Marjorie and Josephine Mulcahy, Bay Bulls, Nfld.; Phyllis Gyves, Fulford Harbor, B.C.; Kathleen Connors, 27 Blackett St., Glace Bay, N.S.; Josephine, Patricia, and Louisa Williams, Bay Bulls, Nfld.; Kathleen, Margaret, Evelyn, and Rita O'Brien, 54 Hastings Ave., Toronto. These last-named young ladies sent a nice spiritual bouquet, for which I thank them very much.

They live far apart, but they're all happy members of our young missionaries' club. Let's have your picture, too. Here we present to you (from left to right): Irene Bruce, Long Hr., Nfld.; Emma Plexman, 209 Elm St. W., Sudbury, Ont.; Jeanette Yelle, 11923 82nd St., Edmonton, Alta.; Berenice and Joseph McNamara, 23 Wilson St. E., Perth, Ont.; Mary Turner, 1585 St. Andre Street, Montreal; Louise Norman, Long Hr., Nfld.; Laura Gallucci, 342 Dufferin St., Port Arthur, Ont.

EDITORIAL

(Continued from page 163)

ALMOST TWO thousand years have gone by since that first Christmas, and Catholics who are enjoying the luxuries and benefits of Christianity, which are the heritage of that coming of God amongst men, will find it difficult to appreciate the infinite pathos in the simple remark of a little Chinese convert: "My people have no Christmas". Catholics, unfortunately, are only too apt to forget that even now there are people — many hundreds of millions of them —who do not know, and never will know, anything of the meaning of Christmas, unless those who do know it do something to spread the knowledge they mercifully possess. The articles in this issue of "CHINA" tell of the Missions, and Missions are the Divinely-appointed way to bring the knowledge of Redemption to all mankind. "Go ye into the whole world and preach the Gospel to every creature". Read the article beginning on page 168 dealing with "The Sacred Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith" and you will understand something of the vast organization which gives direction to all Catholic missionary activity; read "Paganism and Christianity" (on page 170) and it will help you to appreciate the difference between moral conditions in Christian lands and those in a land where there is no Christmas. The article entitled "The Human Side of Our Holy Father" (on page 165) should serve to endear to our readers even more than ever this great Pope of the Missions who, in his own words, "knows no peace in his soul, recalling ever that the pagan masses number still a billion". The pictures in this issue include almost the entire personnel of our Institute's missionary forces at home and abroad, priests and future priests who are devoting their lives to hastening the day when China will join with Christian nations in singing its "Gloria in Excelsis Deo".

NOVENA BEFORE CHRISTMAS

A Novena of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament is celebrated yearly in our Seminary Chapel preceding the Feast of Christmas. This Novena is for all those benefactors who during the year have helped our mission work. All the intentions recommended to our prayers by our friends are remembered in a very special manner during these days.

PAGANISM AND CHRISTIANITY

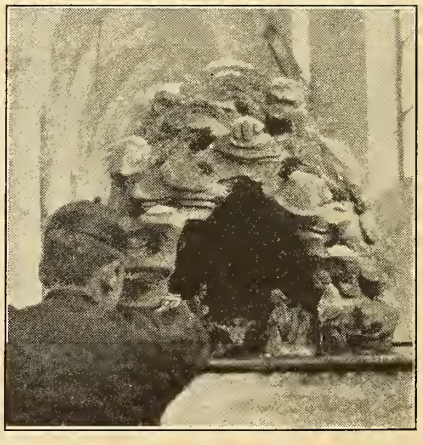
(Continued from page 171)

bearing good and bad fruits. Christ, in history, set up the distinction. His appearance dispersed the citadel of the devil; under the banner of His bloody cross, He established the City of God.

"By this shall all men know that you are My disciples, if you have LOVE, one for another.—"Franciscans in China."

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

We are very grateful to the kind friends who have helped us by their donations. The following contributions came to us between October 19th and November 14th, 1933:



Mrs. S. E. Sheehan, $5; Mrs. T. G. McGuire, $1.25; St. Mary's Academy, Windsor, Ont., $2; "E. McN.," North Bay, $1; St. Mary's Girls' School, Lindsay, $1; Mrs. J. H. McNeil, 50c; Miss Kathleen O'Meara, $1; Morrison Estate, $34; St. Clare's Girls' School, Toronto, $3; Friend, Reserve Mines, $2; Friend, Windsor, Ont., $1; St. Francis de Sales Deaf Society, Toronto, $2; A. J. MacDonald, $1; Miss L. A. M. Melaney, $10; Mrs. Maddigan, in thanksgiving, $5; Classes 13 and 14, St. Francis Rotary School, Toronto, $2; A friend, St. John, N.B., in thanksgiving, $1; Mrs. W. Collins, Jr., in thanksgiving, $5; Kathleen Bird, $2; Rev. P. J. Kirby, $5; J. M. Dooley, $10; Mrs. Crowe, $2; Mrs. J. Butler $1; J. J. Carolan, $1; Friend, Halifax, $2; Mrs. F. Carr, $1; Helen Glancey, 50c; Mrs. D. LeBlanc, $2; Estate, Anna MacDonald, $500; Estate, Sarah Kelly, $25.

Burses

Don. Beaton, MacPherson Burse, $2; Jos. Dumond, Sacred Heart Burse, $5; Margaret Bennett, Holy Souls' Burse, $2; Mrs. T. J. Pierce, Blessed Sacrament Burse, $1; Mrs. P. Kelly, St. Theresa's Burse, $3.15.

Building Fund

Mrs. K. Anderson, $1; Miss Loretto Martin, $15; Andrew V. Kelleher, $1; Mrs. O'Brien, $1; Subscriber, Bay Roberts, Nfld., $1; Rev. Jas. P. Whalen, $5.

The Crib in Father Gignac's Church at Tsingtien.

THE SACRED CONGREGATION

(Continued from page 169)

have been founded religious congregations of women devoted exclusively to foreign mission endeavour. Almost all the Religious Congregations, both of men and of women, whose work is strictly foreign missions, depend on Propaganda. In mission countries all religious are subject to the jurisdiction of Propaganda in matters concerning their missionary activities.

The Financing of Propaganda.

THE Congregation of Propaganda has many enterprises to finance, including the entire support of students at the Urban Pontifical College of the Propagation of the Faith, whose purpose is the training of priests for every mission country; Propaganda contributes also to the expenses of the Apostolic Delegations which are subject to it.

In its early days, Propaganda was well endowed by its promoters, Father Dominic of Jesus and Mary, a Carmelite, and the Blessed John Leonard; the palace where Propaganda now is conducted was a gift of the Spanish prelate, Vivès. Its founder, Gregory XV, made generous provision for its upkeep, and in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries large gifts were made to Propaganda by popes and cardinals. The French Revolution, the Napoleonic Wars, and the Italian laws against ecclesiastical property resulted in a tremendous decrease of the patrimony of Propaganda.

At present, the financial administration depends on the Cardinal-Prefect, under the immediate direction of a prelate known as the Sub-Secretary of the Treasury. To aid the missions materially, and to provide for the education of a Native Clergy, Propaganda dispenses the revenues secured through the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, the Society of St. Peter the Apostle for Native Clergy, and the Association of the Holy Childhood. These three Pontifical Works are under the direction of Propaganda.—Rt. Rev. Joseph Monti, in "L'Illustrazione Vaticana".

"Let not the hope of some day doing great things for the service of God make you neglect present opportunities; in so doing you would lose the one without gaining the other." — (St. Ignatius).

SMILES

An efficiency expert was sent out in the Colorado mountains to advise the miners. One old miner, driving the expert through the snow and cold, spread a buffalo laprobe over the knees of both of them as they sat side by side.

"You ought to turn the hair on the inside," said the expert: "don't you know it's a great deal warmer to have the hair next to your body?"

The old miner obeyed, and then sat there chuckling.

"What are you laughing about? Are you laughing at me?" exclaimed the expert, with an air of dignity.

"No," replied the miner, finding it difficult to restrain himself. "I was just thinking about the buffalo. What a fool he was all his life long not to know a simple thing like that!"

"How do you explain the miracle of an apple ripening and falling to the ground?" asks a correspondent.

"The boys in the neighborhood must have overlooked it."

Irate Caller: "You spoiled my article by a misprint."

Editor: "I'm sorry. What did we get wrong?"

Caller: "A proverb I employed. You printed it 'A word to the wife is sufficient'."

Boarding-House Waitress (during soup course): "Water, sir."

Guest: "No, thanks. I have a plateful already."

Flapper Ann: "Good-bye, mother."

Modern Mother: "Just a minute, dear. Sign the visitors' book in the parlor before you go!"

Persistent Tramp (successful at last): "Thanks, ma'am. Is there anything I can do by way of return?"

Housewife (shortly): "Yes — don't."

"When the judge ruled that Jones had to pay alimony, how did he feel about it?"

"Chagrined."

"And how did his wife feel about it?"

"She grinned."

It was his first great speech, and he wanted it to be a success. His oration was long and passionate, and he wished to end it with a warning. He could have couched his warning in the old proverb about locking the stable door after the horse was stolen, but that was too commonplace. He wanted something original. He thought of something better. Then he shouted: "Don't, I beg you, don't wait till the house takes fire before you summon the fireman."

"What happened when the police searched your house?"

"It was fine. The police found the front door key which my wife had hidden, a penny stamp I lost weeks ago, and four collar studs."

"I think, Harry," said Mrs. Barton, "I'll ask those new people next door to have dinner with us tonight."

"What for?" asked her husband.

"Well, the butcher left their meat here by mistake, and it seems only fair."

Customer: "I'd like to see some good second-hand cars."

Salesman: "So would I."

Maid: "Madam, master is lying unconscious in the hall with a piece of paper in his hand and a large box by his side."

Mrs. X (joyously): "Oh, my new hat has arrived."

A keen sportsman turned up, by error, half an hour too early for the meet. He jumped off his mount and tossed the reins towards one of the village children. "Hold my horse for a few minutes, boy." The boy looked in scared fashion at the big horse and said:

"Will 'e bite, sir?"

"No, no, not at all."

"Will 'e kick, sir?"

"Of course not."

"Will 'e run away, then?"

"No, no, of course he won't."

"Then," asked the lad in a burst of curiosity, "why do you want 'im 'eld?"

"How long does the train stop here?" the old lady asked of the guard.

"Stop here?" answered the functionary. "Oh, four minutes. From two to two to two-two."

"I wonder," mused the old lady, if that man thinks he is the whistle?"

Golfer: "Isn't the Major out of that bunker yet? How many strokes has he had?"

Caddie: "Seventeen ordinary, sir, and one apoplectic!"

The plumber was a mild sort of a man, but he could not get away from the fact that his assistant was constitutionally lazy. For a long time he said nothing, but at last he could contain his exasperation no longer.

"Lummie, Bill," he complained, "you bother me, standin' there with both 'ands in your pockets! For goodness sake take one of them out!"

A nice little boy had a favorite Irish terrier called Paddy. The dog became ill and died. On the fateful morning the mother crept into the boy's bedroom and said, "Dear, I'm sorry to tell you Paddy's dead." The little boy gave a disinterested grunt. In a short time he rose and whistled for the dog.

"But, dear," said his mother, "don't you remember I came to you and told you that Paddy was dead."

"Oh, Paddy," said the boy, bursting into tears, "I thought you said Daddy."

"When I was twenty my ambition was to save the world."

"And now?"

"Now I'm satisfied if I can save a small part of my salary."

Immigration Official: "And what do you plan to do now that you're in the United States?"

Immigrant: "Anything to earn an honest living."

"Well, you'll make good. There isn't much competition in your line of business."

The little girl returned from school and said: "Oh, mummy, we had a lovely lesson all about Mr. Adam and Mrs. Eve, and they lived ever so happily in the Garden of Eden until the servant came."

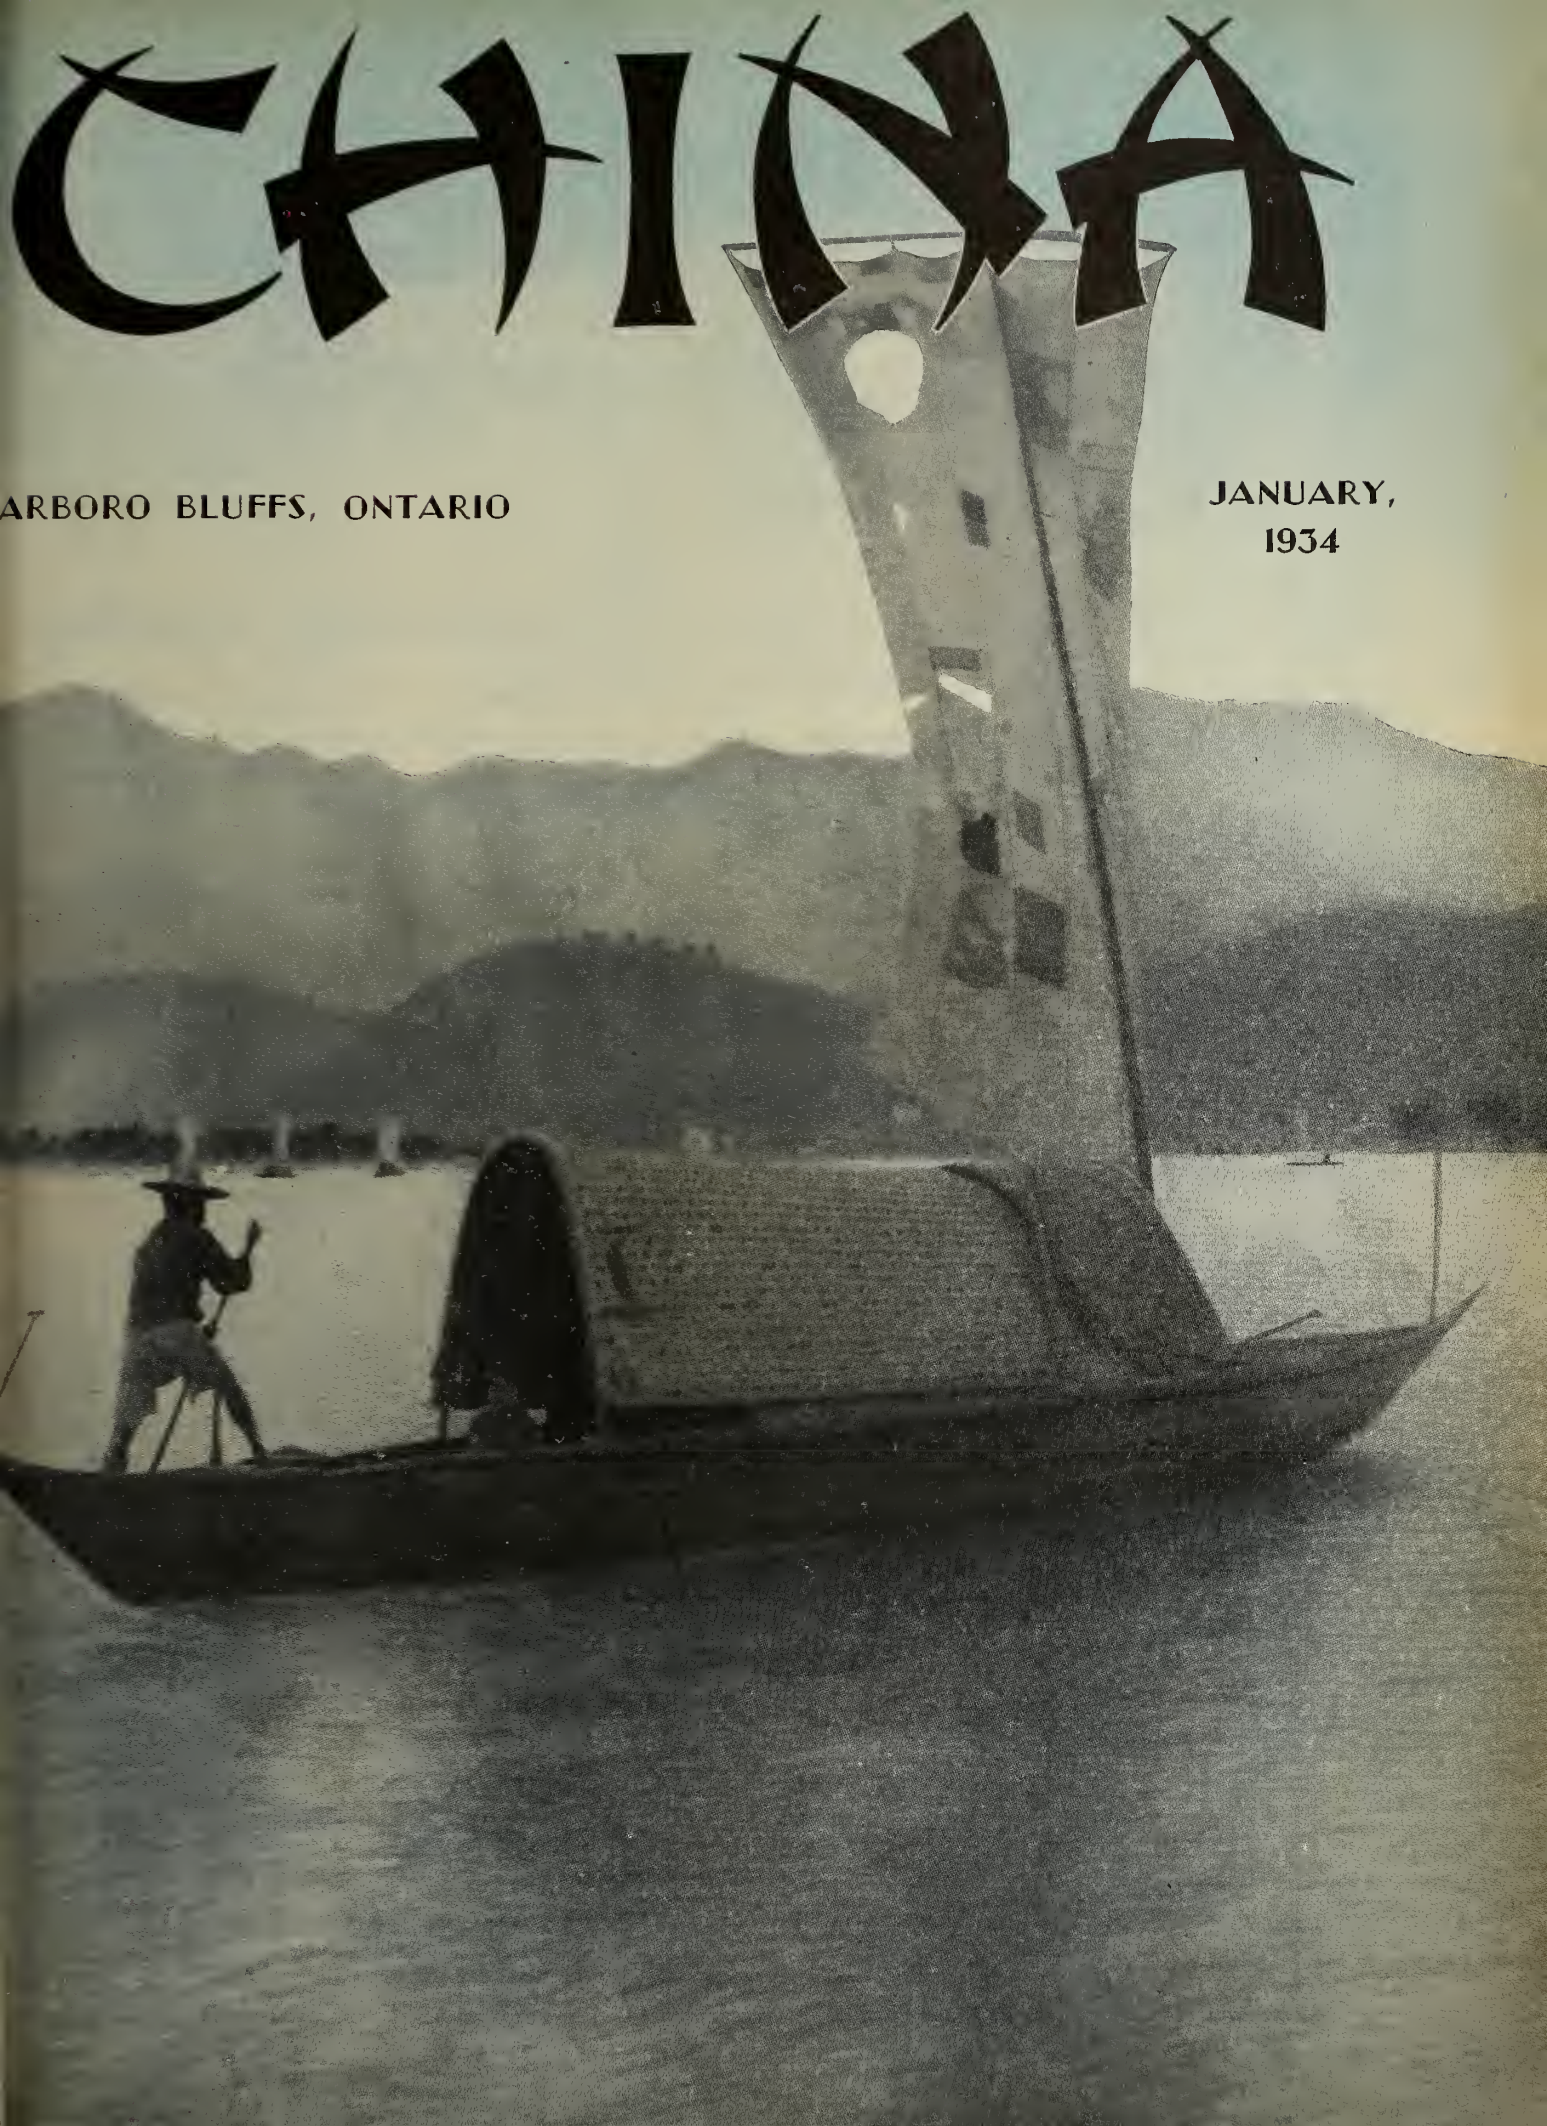
The company promoter was trying to raise capital for a new scheme.

"I'm telling you," he said to a financier, "it will make gigantic strides later on. Just now, of course, it's only in its infancy."

"Perhaps," replied the financier; "but I'm not in mine."

He: "But, darling, we arranged to keep our engagement secret."

She: "Yes; but I could not help it. Yesterday Joan said no idiot would ever marry me, and I had to contradict her."



HELP us to complete our Burse in honor of St. Francis Xavier, Patron of Missions and Patron of our Seminary. Contributions to Burses are used to pay for the education of students for the missionary priesthood. Such a work is deserving of your support. To date, St. F. X. Burse amounts to $1,654.40. It needs $3,345.60 to be completed. A little from many will do it.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER
China Mission Seminary
SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.
Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President

CHINA

ARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

JANUARY,
1934

INTERNATIONAL VARNISH CO. LIMITED
TORONTO
PRODUCERS OF
TRADE ELASTICA MARK.
Varnishes

Paints, Lacqueret and Kwickwork Auto Enamels

Special Seat Finish for Church Pews

Our Decorative Department is at your service at all times and enquiries promptly replied to.

Gerrard and Carlaw Phone HA. 2178

Safety and Good Interest Return

5% We allow 5% interest on sums of $100.00 or over placed with us for five years; 4¾% for one to four years. 3½% on Savings which are subject to withdrawal by cheque. $1.00 Opens an Account.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST GUARANTEED

Capital Trust Corporation
Limited
TORONTO OTTAWA MONTREAL
Under Dominion Government Inspection

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.
OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press
263 Adelaide St. West Toronto

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McNeil, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, P.A.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 27,000
Entered as second class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XV. JANUARY, 1934 No. 1

Considering the joyful acclaim with which people welcomed the Year 1933, it will be interesting to note the buoyant good humour with which they will "give it the boot" a few days hence, and usher in another New Year. We suppose it will always be thus: the beginning of another calendar year always holds out promise of better things to come, and the hope that we entertain for better conditions in the future prompts the joyful welcome we extend to the New Year. It is all too true that the year just finished has failed to bring that expected and long-hoped-for betterment of business conditions; even if we would, we could not forget that 1933 has been decidedly a year of "Depression", and we are all sadly aware of what that word implies. But "times of depression" have not been an unmixed evil. There have been bright days shining through the dark, and we like to think that people the world over have been brought closer to God in their needs than they ever would have been in more comfortable circumstances. Reverses in material things have meant advances in spiritual affairs.

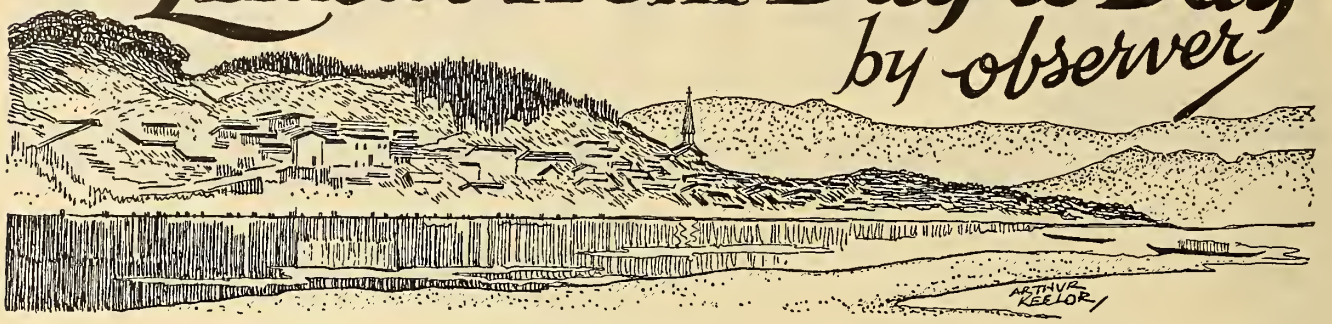
* * * *

It was reported at the first Italian National Missionary Congress, recently held at Padua, that six million conversions have taken place during the pontificate of the present Holy Father. In the same period, the number of native clergy has risen from 2,670 to more than 5,000, twenty new mission districts have been entrusted to the care of native clergy, and almost 2,000 clerics are now studying in seminaries in pagan countries. The number of missionaries has increased by 4,000. Surely these are facts that speak mightily of the mission progress of the present day.

The claim of Pope Pius XI to the title of Pope of the Missions has now come to be generally acknowledged. Not only by administrative and legislative measures has the present Pontiff so distinguished himself, but he has again and again raised his voice in behalf of the missions of the Church, pleading with the faithful throughout the world to support them by generous spiritual and material aid. Whilst a most glorious leadership on his part is certainly not lacking, the question remains as to how far the members of the flock of this Supreme Shepherd are responding to his appeal. In his Encylical Letter "Rerum Ecclesiae" urging Catholics to "the custom and practice of daily mission prayer" he writes: "Even though the missionaries labor zealously; though they work and toil and even lay down their lives in leading the pagans to the Catholic religion; though they employ all diligence and industry and all human means, still all this will be of no avail, all their efforts shall go to naught, unless God touches the hearts of the pagans to soften them and to draw them to Him." Surely the great Shepherd of Christendom, and his humble missionaries, too, know whereof they speak when they beg YOU to save souls by your prayers.

* * * *

It is fitting that this New Year edition of "CHINA" should refer to the splendid work done by the Catholic weekly newspapers of Canada in giving publicity to the work being carried on by St. Francis Xavier Seminary. We know right well that the success which has attended our missionary efforts since the beginning has been made possible by the interest of the public at large, and gladly do we acknowledge the big part played by these Catholic papers in making us known to their large circle of readers. During 1933 especially, generous space has been allotted week after week to the featuring, by picture and story, of our Chuchow Missions. One of our priests in China, writing under the non-de-plume of "Sinicus", has given the needed personal touch to the relations between our Canadian missionaries and their thousands of Catholic friends in every diocese in Canada, and this is the result of a happy spirit of co-operation for which we are very thankful to the following weekly newspapers: "The Catholic Record", London, Ont.; "The North-West Review", Winnipeg, Man.; "The Canadian Freeman", Kingston, Ont.; "The New Freeman", Saint John, N.B.; "The Beacon", Montreal, P.Q.; "The Casket", Antigonish, N.S.; "The Prairie Messenger", Muenster, Sask.; "The Western Catholic", Edmonton, Alta.; and "The British Columbia Catholic", Vancouver, B.C.



A NEW YEAR RESOLUTION: "HELP THE MISSIONS!"

It is our privilege once again, as an Old Year passes, to extend to all the readers of "CHINA" our sincerest wishes for their success and happiness in the year just commencing.

Lishui from Day to Day

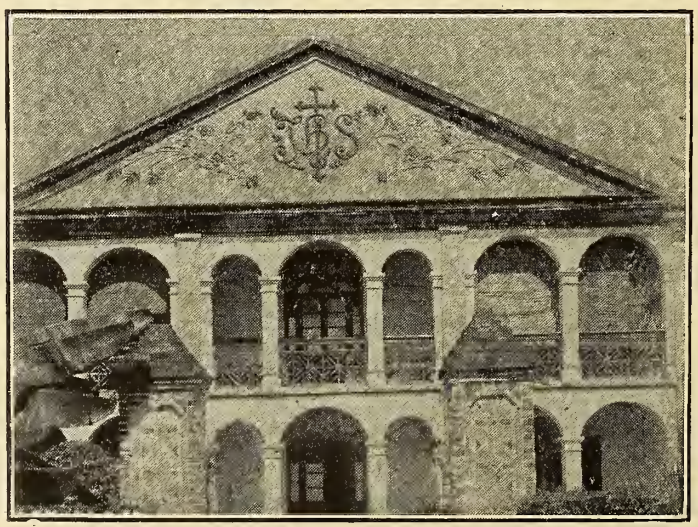
by observer

GREETINGS from Shanghai! Father Beal and I have made a record trip from Yanchinuen, one of the most remote mission outposts in the district, a little village lost among the mountains where the people are so poor that they have not even enough rice but subsist on corn and sweet potatoes.

* * *

It is now nearly two years since we have seen the white lights of the big city. Imagine real motor cars, radios, buildings more than two storeys high, and a place where you can get a real cup of coffee. And what a thrill we did get yesterday steaming up the Whangpoo to Shánghai, when from the deck of our little Chinese coastal steamer we espied the great Empress of Canada at her pier. There were hundreds of steamers of all kinds, tramps, freighters, President liners and the rest. But we noted with pride that not one of them could compare with our great white Empress. It did seem to bring Canada just a little nearer.

* * *



And Shanghai! It is daily becoming more like New York. This morning we had to wait in our rickshaws at a street intersection for nearly a quarter of an hour to let the stream of traffic pass by. What you see in the course of a morning rickshaw drive down the Bund and along Nanking road simply beggars description.

* * *

The East and the West have met alright. Anchored just off the Bund, her twelve-inch guns lying comfortably in their turrets and an aeroplane resting on its runway on her upper deck, H.M.S. Kent stands like a grim and ever-watchful sentinel. Two years ago, when rumours of "trouble" were still rife, they told us that she could raze Shanghai to the ground in about twenty minutes. And Shanghai's skyline, let me tell you, almost rivals that of New York.

* * *

Clustered around the Kent, like ants around an elephant, are hundreds of sampans and small junks, while bumptious and officious-looking little tugs are steaming here and there as if they really had somewhere important to go. A large white pilot boat is on her way out to meet the Empress of Russia, while aeroplanes are circling overhead.

This is the priests' house in Lishui to which "Observer" makes reference here.

On shore, rickshaws and tan-tan men and human beasts of burden dragging truckloads of freight are dodging in and out among Packards and Rolls-Royces and Pierce-Arrows. Beside the many ladies of Shanghai's smart set, Chinese ladies attired a la Rue de Paix, are beggar women and children in rags, and derelict-looking old white Russians with a pathetic-looking stock-in-trade of shoelaces and pencils as an excuse for demanding a "dime for a cup of coffee".

* * *

And the foreign children. We just can't keep our eyes off them. It seems almost unnatural now to see children with blue eyes and golden hair. For the past two years the only white faces we have seen have been our own. Only once—in Sungyang—did I see just such a child, a fleeting glimpse of loveliness as we passed by in our sedan chairs on the way to the outside missions. A little girl of about five years, with golden curls hanging over her shoulders, was playing in a narrow, dirty street with four or five Chinese ragamuffins. She was speaking Chinese, of course. It seemed almost a sacrilege.

* * *

Back "home" in Lishui things are progressing favourably. Father Boudreau has just finished his new church, the gift of an anonymous friend from Newfoundland. It was erected at a cost of approximately $2,000.00, and you will see from the picture on the next page that it is a substantial and attractive-looking building. Now Father Boudreau is supervising the erection of a school at Lishui which is to serve for the whole Prefecture. As yet we cannot afford schools for many of the outside missions.

This is to be a boys' school. A new girl's school for the present is out of the question in spite of the fact that we could fill one tomorrow if we had the building. Just now there are about forty children housed in a few ramshackle old buildings in the compound of the Sisters. Many more would like to come, because school life for the children, under the care of the Sisters, is just a little bit of Heaven compared to the treatment they receive at home. But for the present we can only refuse them—and hope.

* * *

I certainly never intended, when starting these few notes, to make them a recital of our needs, but now that we are on the subject, we may as well tell you the whole story. It is rather a glorious story, at that, because it implies that Canada is going to do big things for the Missions.

* * *

There is our house at Lishui, the central house for the whole district where our annual retreat is held and where our priests come in out of the wilds for an occasional rest when the going has been a little hard. It looks like a million dollars, due to a cleverly disguised front, but it is forty years old, rat-ridden, and shakes with the palsy if anybody moves too fast upstairs.

* * *

Up till now it has served the purpose in spite of overcrowding once in a while. But there are sixteen of us over here now, four more priests to come next year, please God, and over forty students preparing for China. Forty students! The Seminary course is six years. Figure it out for yourself. In six years from now —even in three or four years from now! Well, you won't call it extravagance if we say that a new house will be an absolute necessity this year or next if we are to prepare to receive the young men who soon will leave the shores of Canada for Lishui.

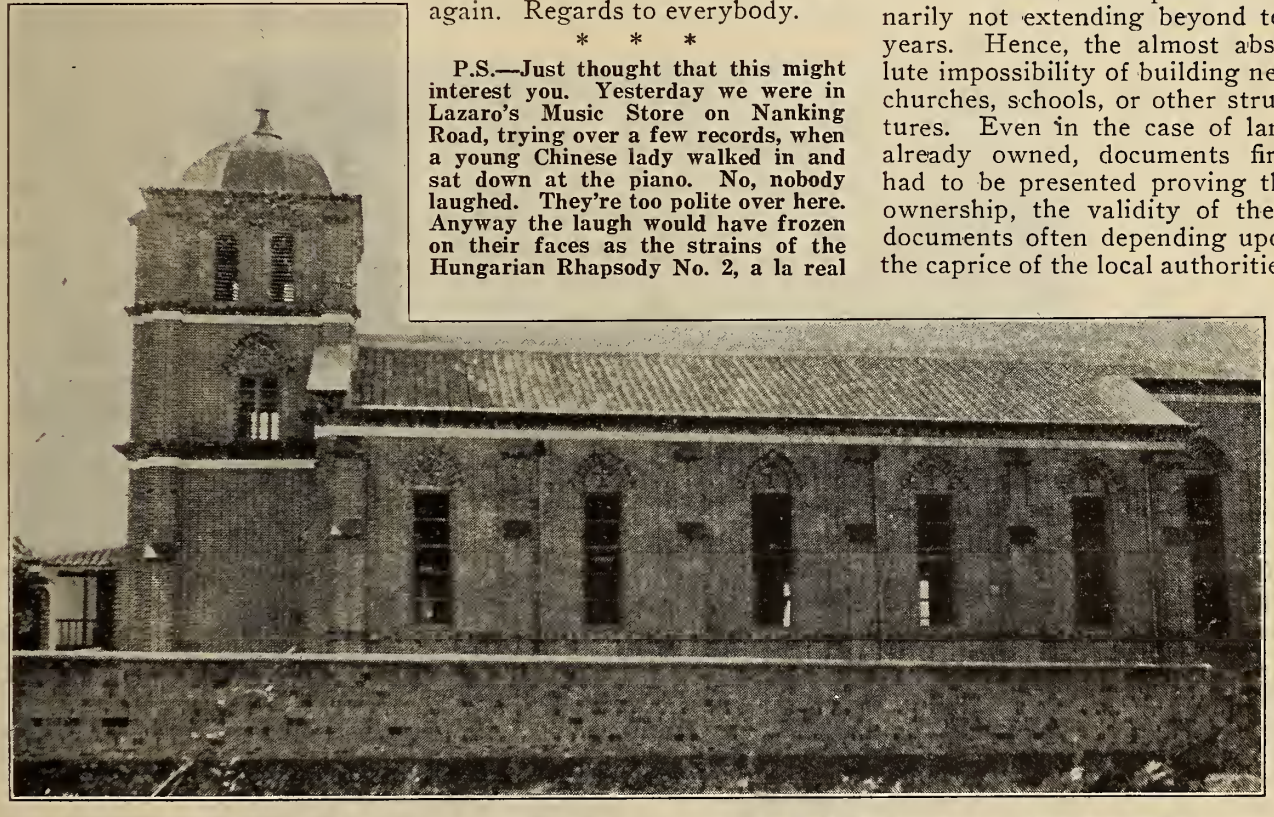
* * *

Hence, dear friends, if you can see your way to help us financially, need we say that it will be deeply appreciated! Any little offering you have may be sent by cheque or money order direct to Monsignor McGrath, Lishui, Chekiang, China; or, if you prefer, to the Seminary with the request that it be forwarded on to him.

* * *

After a little necessary medical attention we will soon be on our way "home to our mountains" again. Regards to everybody.

* * *



P.S.—Just thought that this might interest you. Yesterday we were in Lazaro's Music Store on Nanking Road, trying over a few records, when a young Chinese lady walked in and sat down at the piano. No, nobody laughed. They're too polite over here. Anyway the laugh would have frozen on their faces as the strains of the Hungarian Rhapsody No. 2, a la real virtuoso, began to issue forth from that piano. She also rendered a Chopin waltz that would have made old De Pachmann sit up and take notice.

Father MacDonald told me last night that Maestro Pace, the local impressario, has a Chinese lady pupil who will, he says, startle the world later on. It may have been the same lady for all we know. By the way, Father MacDonald, who has been over ten years in China, is a native of St. Andrew's, P.E.I. It would be impossible to tell you how much he has done for all our men who come to Shanghai from the mission outposts once in a while. He wouldn't want us to tell you anyway.

CHINA MISSIONS MAY NOW HAVE PROPERTY TITLES.

Catholic missions of China have been granted the right of leasing property in perpetuity, according to a Fides telegram from Shanghai.

This important decision, issued by the Executive Department of the Nanking Government, restores, in part, freedom of action to our missions and brings to an end a long and distressing controversy. One of the major difficulties faced by China missions in recent years has been the prohibition, placed on them by the government, of acquiring immovable property. Permission could be had only to rent buildings or land for a certain limited period ordinarily not extending beyond ten years. Hence, the almost absolute impossibility of building new churches, schools, or other structures. Even in the case of land already owned, documents first had to be presented proving the ownership, the validity of these documents often depending upon the caprice of the local authorities.

The erection of this beautiful new church by Father Boudreau in his parish of Pi-Wu-Ka, China, was made possible by the generosity of a friend in Newfoundland. In congratulating Father Boudreau on his zealous work we wish other friends would make possible the building of similar churches in Chuchow Prefecture.

AND TO OTHER PAGAN LANDS

Here Is Catholicism

THIRTY-SIX NATIONALITIES REPRESENTED UNDER ONE ROOF IN A ROMAN COLLEGE

By DR. W. E. ORCHARD, noted convert to the Faith.

PROPAGANDA. . . . No, not the thing; but the place, and the persons; in short, the College for the Propaganda of the Faith, the great Missionary College of the Church.

For propaganda has acquired an unfortunate connotation since the war, having been associated with methods dictated by the aim of misleading the enemy and heartening people at home, in neither case caring anything about the truth. The propagation of the Catholic Faith can never stoop to such methods.

Its one aim is to tell the truth to the enemy, if, for the moment, those who follow religions contrary to the Catholic Faith may be so designated; for it must be in such a way as to recognize and welcome everything that may be true and good in those religions, while at the same time showing where they are false or fall short, by setting alongside it the complete and perfect truth of Christianity: a difficult business.

Neither can support for such work be gained from those who already know the Faith by providing them with optimistically colored accounts of how the great fight is going on: it is bound to be a long, slow business.

But there is no choice. The Church is committed to the task of carrying the Gospel to every creature, and has been commissioned to make disciples of all the nations. There can be no bounds to its concern; no race or clime can be left out on the plea that the difficulties or the dangers are too great; and no halt can be called until the Gospel has been preached to all the world and Our Lord shall have decided that the end has come.

It is reported that in some Protestant quarters there is an increasing difficulty in securing support for foreign missionary enterprise. That may be in part due to the great financial depression which is the most tangible bequest of the Great War, and Catholic Propaganda must be feeling that strain perhaps even more; but because of the vowed celibacy of the priests and religious who undertake this work, and the willingness of Catholic missionaries to say good-bye to home, if needs be, for ever, Catholic missions cost far less than with the Protestants; as the latter have been forced to recognize, but dare not try to imitate.

But there are deeper reasons why Protestant missions must not only continue to feel the strain, but eventually break under it. The support of foreign missions among Protestants has in the past been largely confined to those who hold a very narrow type of theology; yet as their theology has broadened, it has become so broad that any sanction for taking Christianity to those who already possess a religion has been entirely lost.

It is no uncommon thing to meet Protestants, who would be indignant if their Christianity were questioned, who nevertheless think that the different nations have developed that kind of religion which is best suited to their mentality, while the more backward races would be unable to appreciate or respond to it. Ever since the early Reformers, who in many cases were entirely opposed to the Gospel's being taken to the heathen, Protestant missions have had to fight to convert their own people at home.

But to abandon the universality of Christianity is to surrender its essential truth, and surely the acid test of one's faith is whether it is worth while passing on, and is of such value and necessity that it must be proclaimed to the whole world.

In 1900, Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President of Saint Francis Xavier Seminary, assisted at a seance in the College of Propaganda when 33 languages were spoken in the course of the evening's programme.

Association with students of other nationalities is a boon to our seven "stalwarts" at Collegio Brignole Sale, Genoa. Here we see them with two of their Chinese fellow-seminarians.

Heresy of "Selective" Faith

Every Catholic must shrink from the contamination of such an obviously destructive heresy that Christianity is only suited for special people or for chosen races. Yet sometimes Catholic apologists have been betrayed by their antipathies into speaking as if Christianity were peculiarly suited to the Western world or the Latin races, and of regarding the Oriental and the Jew as if the only duty was to build barriers against their influence.

No doubt the Western world needs be protected against Oriental thought, with its awful ideas of pessimism and delusion; and the Jews may become a world menace when they lose their religion and give themselves up either to financial exploitation or atheistic communism.

But here, as elsewhere, the best form of defence is to attack; these races must be converted to Christianity, or the world is going to remain hemispherically divided, and humanity exposed to the danger of a worse kind of war than ever we have experienced who have passed through the greatest catastrophe of history, the European War.

The College of Propaganda

Against all that type of thinking there stands in Rome its practical as well as theoretical antidote: the College of Propaganda; and if a proof of the thoroughness and vitality of the Catholic Church be sought, it can be found.

The College was previously housed in the great, dingy, brown building off the Piazza di Spagna. The new buildings are between St. Peter's and the Janiculum, overlooking the city, and are of glistening white stone. They are vast and airy, most suitably designed for the coolness and quiet that study needs, and are the last word in efficiency and convenience. They themselves convey an impression of something considered, purposeful, confident; indeed, they remind one more of the scientific theatres and laboratories of some modern university, save that they are grouped round the chapel, which nevertheless by its plainness and austerity seems devoted to the generation of power more real and powerful than anything science knows.

But it is the persons who excite the greatest interest and hope; for in this business everything depends upon them; the quality of character, the sense of a Divine call, their mental and spiritual equipment. Let us stand aside and watch them as they pass, coming from a visit to the Blessed Sacrament on their way from classes to the refectory.

As they walk swiftly by we notice how silent and springy is the walk of some, and as we look up at their faces we see they are dark-skinned; in fact they are of every color, from almost ivory white to almost ebony black. Thirty-six nationalities are represented, we are told: out of the two hundred students, twenty-five are from the far Orient, Chinese or Japanese; and altogether forty-eight nationalities will be found gathered to the lectures given at the College. It is Pentecost perpetuated.

Religious Unity in Being

There can be nothing so completely and fully international in the world. I think most of my Protestant mission-loving friends would be converted on the spot, for they have nothing like this. And here they would see solved at once, what their own mission efforts have compelled them to seek, namely, unity; for on the foreign fields the perpetuation of their divisions hovers between a farce and tragedy. Propaganda would surely convince some of my internationalist, socialist friends that the Church they so much criticize for not sharing their ideals and hopes has attained what they are after, while they have only been talking about it. Here is Catholicism; a religion already universal; the only Church that can unite the world.

When the students are settled to their tables in the spacious and pleasant refectory, and grace and the short reading are over, they, as well as we at the high table, begin to talk, not quite so noisily as schoolboys, and not so boisterously as in Hall at Oxford or Cambridge, but still in a very free and friendly fashion.

Head Student a Jamaican Negro

Close here on the right nearest to the high table is a curly-headed, coal-black negro showing his white teeth in happy laughter. Why does he sit there? We are told that the College is divided into houses of twenty-five, not sorted according to their nationality; on the contrary, carefully mixed, and all changed once a year, so as to make for every one the widest possible contacts. Each house has its own head student chosen for his capacity for managing his fellows, and the head of one of the houses is this Jamaican negro, who is therefore set in command over British, Americans, Scandinavians, and Orientals!

In addition, his house is at the head of the table, because he himself is the head student of the whole College, that distinction being gained because he has outdistanced all others by his studies and examinations, and many of them university men.

The glorious internationalism of it all and the triumph over racial prejudice set so vividly before one's eyes so rouse my emotions and satisfy my enthusiasm that I can scarcely do justice to the lunch that is set before us all, which is so excellent that I pleased the Bursar by saying each course deserved a special grace.

After the meal is over the men go off for a short siesta and then to their games; for everything is done to keep them in good health and spirits, in order that they may be equal to the strict discipline and intellectual demands that the seven years' course in philosophy and theology makes.

Yet there are no signs of repression or strain, as was soon proved by what was then arranged for the sake of the visitors. Some of the Father Strang celebrating his first Holy Mass in the chapel of St. Bonaventure's College, St. John's, Newfoundland.

(Continued on page 14)

OF SALVATION TO NUMEROUS SOULS.

A Mission Trip in Kinhwa

By

RT. REV. J. M. FRASER

ON Sunday last I took a trip to Tangchi for the first time to see the place. It is twenty miles west of here. A new line of railway has been recently opened connecting it with here. Father Kiang accompanied me. We rose early, before four. Father Kiang said Mass and breakfasted. It was pouring rain, and had rained the whole night. Rickshaws were waiting for us at the door. We were rushed through the dark, dismal streets to the station a couple of miles away. The train was supposed to start at 6 a.m. but did not pull out till seven. We crossed the newly-built railway bridge, 700 feet long; steel, on concrete piers; cost about a million dollars. Half way to our destination we passed through one of our Mission stations. There is a railway station which will make its visitation quite convenient. The rain did not improve the roadbed laid on a newly thrown-up mud embankment. The train moved along very cautiously.

We arrived at the Tangchi station an hour-and-a-half late. The newly erected station was a small house in the middle of a great patch of mud ankle-deep. It was like walking on wet ice. We managed to get into the chairs awaiting us. The poor chair-bearers struggled for two miles and a half through the sticky, slippery mud, along a newly built motor road to the city of Tangchi, where we found the Christians assembled in their little chapel. An abundance of fire crackers and cannon crackers were let off to welcome us. Father Kiang put up a piece of cloth for a confessional in the priests' room and started to hear confessions. About twenty went to confession. Then morning prayers and catechism were recited, followed by Mass. While I was celebrating, the Rosary was recited. It would be hard to describe the "chapel". It was a poor little back room about 10 x 10 feet in size; no ceiling, and no front wall. Besides the tiny altar and the celebrant there were thirty persons crowded inside. On my right were two old men, and on my left an old woman right up against the altar. I doubt if Mass was often offered in such tight quarters. It was noon before we sat down to combined breakfast and dinner. The catechist's bright little boy entertained us. He knows his prayers and catechism so well! He is a great favorite, I am told, with the teachers at the public school he attends. After dinner, which was all that could be desired, we inspected a large piece of ground next door, belonging to the Mission. It is a fine building site, and I am longing for a priest to come along and build himself a church, residence and school on it. Pray that Tangchi (boiling torrent) will soon have that blessing.

Mounting our chairs again we proceeded to the next chapel, five miles away, in a place called Zioka. After several hours of travel in the rain (we did not get wet, as the chair was covered with oil paper) we noticed that the carriers seemed to have lost their way. Every now and then they would ask directions from the farmers. They were told that they were going in the right direction, to go straight ahead. Finally we came to Zioka, but oh, what a disappointment! It was a place with the same name, in the next county, and not belonging to our district; and the place we wanted was seven miles away. It was now too late in the day for me to visit Zioka. So Father Kiang set off on foot to that place, losing confidence in the bearers, and I proceeded to the railway station.

We passed through a large town crowded with visitors. A comedy was being enacted, and as these are free and acted in the open, the country folk from all the towns around were present. My chair could hardly squeeze through the street. It knocked down a nicely-dressed child, on the muddy pavement. I felt so sorry to see the mess. Night came on while we had still miles to make over a quagmire of a road. Fortunately, few cars passed us; but when they did, it rained mud. I was protected by the covering of the chair, but the poor peasants, when they saw those road hogs coming would crouch in the gutter and try to shield themselves with their umbrellas from the liquid shower. The cars looked like speedboats plowing through liquid mud. Soon we got on to a side road leading to Tangchi which as yet has no surfacing and consequently cannot be used in such weather. Here we met no cars; but the mud and slime! It was like wading through a rice field. We thought we would never arrive. The carriers were all in, and it was impossible for me to walk with leather boots. I was alone with the pagan carriers, Father Kiang and the Christian baggage carrier had gone off in another direction. We were traversing a vast cultivated plain, but there was not a person, not a house, nor light in sight. At last in the distance, miles away, we espied the tiny railway station we had left in the morning. This heartened the men; they used every ounce of their strength. Once they let the chair down in the middle of the mire to take breath and light a cigarette.

What a relief it was when at length we struck the railway tracks. Here I descended, and aided by the men, walked the ties quite a distance to the station. The station-master disappointed me with the information that the train was delayed on account of damage to the tracks, and would not arrive for three hours! But he was very kind and invited me inside his office, which is a great privilege here in China. I said my Office and conversed with him while waiting. I had had only one meal so far, and nothing was to be bought there. Every now and then the telephone would ring and announce the whereabouts of the train. At long last it did arrive. I got into a coach on the only vacant seat; all the other seats harbored sleeping officers and soldiers.

(Continued on page 14)

AS A CATHOLIC YOU HAVE THE

90% OF CHINA MISSIONS FUNCTIONING NORMALLY.

A much larger proportion of Catholic missions are functioning normally than was the case five years ago, 90% of the 119 ecclesiastical territories in China now being able to prosecute mission life practically undisturbed, while few of the others are suffering seriously.

Energetic mission work is possible, it is estimated, among 350,000,000 of China's 400,000,000. As a result, mission societies are assigning new forces with greater confidence and mission leaders are going forward with their programs for advance. They are greatly encouraged by the new laws permitting the leasing of property in perpetuity. For some years many missions have been unable to secure a clear title for land.—Fides.

A USEFUL FISH.

The Chinese steamer, "San Hsin", on the Canton-Shanghai run, limped into Canton to tell the remarkable story of how it was "rescued" on the high seas by a large fish, described as a silver carp weighing thirty-five pounds.

Whilst passing the Yuchu Forts en route to Canton, the boat, with two hundred tons of cargo, struck a reef and was badly holed. Water was rushing into the hole of the boat with great rapidity, and the vessel was in danger of sinking. Several pumps were kept working to draw the water back to the sea. To the astonishment of the crew, however, the inrush of the water suddenly stopped and it was possible to keep the boat afloat and continue its journey.

Immediately after its arrival the cargo was unloaded, and upon inspection of the damaged hold, it was discovered that a large-size fish—a silver carp—had wedged itself squarely in the hole caused by the accident, which fact accounted for the retarded inflow of the water.

The fish was dead when it was removed ashore, but instead of making a feast of it, the crew unanimously decided to have it interred with the epitaph: "Here lies the remains of a fish that has saved a ship from sinking and her crew from drowning."—Reuter.

NEW DIRECTORS OF PEKING UNIVERSITY.

By decree of the Propaganda of August 5th the Holy See has named Very Reverend Father Grendel, S.V.D., Superior General, Chancellor of the Catholic University of Peking, which on June 20th passed formally into the hands of the Society of the Divine Word. The Society has named Reverend Joseph Murphy, S.V.D., University Rector. As Superior General he will be able to direct the Society's finest talent toward the University, so dear to Pope Pius XI.—Fides.

ENRICHED BY THEIR GIFTS.

Are donors to the missions enriched by their gifts? Missionaries may say, as did St. Paul to the Philippians: "I have received the things that you sent, an odour of sweetness, an acceptable sacrifice, pleasing to God." And they will add, in the words of the same great missionary: "Not that I seek the gift, but I seek the fruit that may abound to your account."

MEN FOR THE "19TH" DESERT

Mass desertion, and no bones about it, provided an extraordinary scene on the waterfront on Wednesday afternoon (Oct. 25) when the S.S. Tin Yat came alongside her wharf in Hongkong from Canton.

Her third class accommodation was packed with Chinese soldiers destined for the 19th Route Army, who are fighting the Communists.

Before the Tin Yat had time to form a link with the shore by gangways, the men poured out from the ship from every available opening on to the wharf and fled into the street, discarding their uniforms and equipment as they ran.

Once into the street, the soldiers scattered in all directions, some trusting to their feet, others engaging rickshaws and others jumping upon a passing tram. Within a few minutes of the ship's arrival, there was not a soldier to be seen.

The last seen of the affair by a "Hongkong Telegraph" representative was a disconsolate Chinese army officer looking pensively at the pile of uniforms, blankets, etc., discarded by his troops in their flight and afterwards collected together.

Church of the Holy Rosary at Kinhwa, where Monsignor Fraser is now. This church was built in 1922. At the right is shown the presbytery.

SOLEMN DUTY OF ASSISTING THESE MISSIONARIES.

"PASSING the YEAR"

With the Chinese

FATHER JOSEPH VENINI TELLS US ABOUT NEW YEAR, 1933, IN KANKOU, CHEKIANG

TO-DAY, January 26th, is the first day of the Chinese New Year. It was ushered in last night to the accompaniment of a perfect bedlam, caused by the explosion of string upon string of fire-crackers. To-day, all is quiet on every front, and everyone is a year older than he was yesterday. Here, the age of persons is not reckoned from birthday to birthday (neither is it in certain other climes, I am told, especially among those of a certain sex) but from the first day of each succeeding year. Thus everyone gets away to a fair start from scratch and there can be no cheating. So, if one should happen to be born say on the last day of the last month (some years have thirteen, others twelve, months), on the first day of the first month of the New Year this one would be considered no less than two years old, despite the fact that not more than forty-eight hours have elapsed since he entered this vale of tears.

THIS New Year Festival is the one real holiday of the Chinese. Cuo nieh they call it; literally, "to pass the year". On this occasion they all do things up brown, each to the best of his ability, which is another way of saying according to his pocketbook. As regards the external, or secular, or whatever is the right name for it, feasting, the holiday might be compared to our Christmas. Gifts are exchanged, greetings sent to friends, and much frenzied financing indulged in. The end of the year is the accepted time for rendering account of one's stewardship, and hence nearly every one is mad in a strenuous effort to pay one's debts, and nearly everyone is still madder in a still more strenuous effort to collect one's debts. Nevertheless, a merry time is had by all. As nearly as I can figure it out, with the money exchange almost four to one in my favor, and judging from the number of people who have tried to borrow money from me, I am the only person left in this town with any cash. If such be the truth, I am to retain my title. Diogenes was unsuccessful in his search; experience has taught me likewise, and so I do not choose to loan.

"PASS the year" this festival is called, and pass it they do. I doubt if there was a single man, woman, or child old enough to smear everybody with lollypop, who went to bed before one o'clock this morning. Certainly no one in this locality did. I can swear to that. Business in many lines ceased several days ago because the people were so busy getting ready to "pass the year". The general order to cease fire went into effect last evening, that is, the evening of the last day of the passing year. What would correspond to our Christmas dinner is partaken of everywhere from 10 p.m. on into the wee hours of the morning. To-day the town presents the appearance of a deserted village. At noon very few had revived sufficiently to be able to leave the place of their slumbers. In the afternoon a few groups of young men are gathered about amusing themselves tossing pennies. The ban on gambling has been lifted for five days, so all may, and do, gamble unmolested to their heart's content. Even the little girls may be seen playing with their lone pennies, but not "for keeps".

It does seem that somebody's goose is about to be cooked.

TO-MORROW everybody will be astir in good time for it is the first day that opens the season for visiting one's friends to wish them a Happy New Year. The season is also productive of an extra abundant crop of superstitions. As I went to the front gate this morning to take a look-see, the huge sticks of incense, stuck in the walk in front of each home, were slowly burning themselves out. The ordinary sticks of incense are only about ten inches long and very narrow. Those used for the New Year celebrations are fully two and a half feet long and as thick as the wrist of an average man. As I stood at the gate, a nearby blacksmith's son came out of his home. He immediately tore off to where a group of his companions were gambling with their pennies Soon the boy's elder brother put his head out of the door and called to him: "Mind you, now, don't go into anybody's house." I asked the cook the meaning of the order and he informed me that it is absolutely taboo to visit anybody on the first day of the year. The idea seems to be that it would be a mark of impoliteness as it might embarrass one's host. When the youngsters visit anyone at the New Year Season they are usually (so I am told) rewarded with a few coppers. But to pass out coppers on the first day of the year would be the height of folly, as that would surely indicate a greater output than income for the whole year. Likewise, on the first day of the year, one should not say that something is wanting in the house. For example, if one should ask for an Eskimo pie he should not be told there was no Eskimo pie, but in all seriousness he is handed a piece of sweet potato, and thus the principle is saved, and Eskimo pie will be plentiful during the coming year. No doubt we have here the origin of that clever American masterpiece, "Yes, we have no bananas to-day".

THEN again, should a family be so unfortunate as to have one of its members die on the final day of the year, no mention is made of the fact, the event is completely ignored. The body of the deceased is left in its bed unnoticed, and the inmates of the house "pass the year". On the third day of the year the fact is recognized that one of their number is no more. The weeping and wailing is then permitted to go on as is customary at funerals here, and in this case, too, the principle is saved that no unbecoming act, no portent of misfortune, shall be allowed to contaminate the year on the day of its inception.

THOSE things seem so silly, so superstitious, to us. At least they may be condoned on the plea of ignorance, and of century-old traditions. Those who do such things here in this pagan land are simply doing what the others do and have always done; they are simply keeping up with the Joneses. But what would you say if you were told that people were doing such things in America or in Europe? What would you say if you were a priest, say in Italy, and as you were walking down a busy thoroughfare at mid-day in the midst of crowds of people, and you saw a college professor, a student, a clerk, a customs official perhaps, people with an average education—perhaps even more than an average education judged by worldly standards—what would you say, I ask you, if you, a priest, should see those people deliberately seek something made of iron, a drain pipe or a hydrant, to touch this iron article because they believed that by doing so they would render you, the priest, powerless to cast a curse on them? Or to enter a street car and to witness some half-naked, brainless flapper make frantic efforts to open her purse and clutch her ring of keys, contented that she had thus succeeded in forestalling the priest and his maledictions? If one were willing and able to gather together knowledge of all the superstitions that were practiced in Europe and America I dare say there would be some new ones to teach the pagans of Asia. The black cats, the white horses, the rabbit's paw, the lucky and unlucky numbers, the horseshoes, the broken mirrors, not one of the pagan superstitions are more silly than any of these.

IN a Shanghai paper, owned or controlled, I believe, by some missionary body, runs an advertisement by Madame de Bunk, the famous clairvoyante, who for the small stipend of a few cents will reveal for you the secrets of your future. A great many of the paper's correspondents are missionaries living in the interior of China, and their letters quite often describe the Chinese superstitions and how the poor people are being continually duped by the fortune-tellers. Pigs is pigs, but business is business.

Problems Can be Solved by

CATHOLIC WILLS

For Mission Needs

The instinct is strong to keep "what we have". Yet when death summons we must go to the grave "clutching in our dead hands only that which we have given away". If you feel you cannot share your earthly possessions now with God, perhaps you will be mindful of Him and His Missions when drawing up your last will. You can be sure that what you leave to carry on Catholic Mission work will merit a blessing on your soul, and cause your name to be held in benediction long after you are dead. In China, our priests need funds for new chapels, for new schools, for new homes, and for payment of salaries to catechists. In Canada, our Seminary needs support for the training of young apostles and for the maintenance of their home. Donations to our Burse Fund and our Building Fund are our greatest present needs. Think of our Mission work when making, or changing, your last will. Here's how you can do it; insert this clause in your will:

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO, THE SUM OF .....

YOU CAN AT LEAST PRAY FOR THEIR SUCCESS.

LITTLE FLOWER'S ROSE GARDEN

Edited by FATHER JIM

CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP

The only conditions of membership in the Rose Garden are: (1) To say every day the Prayer for the Conversion of China; (2) To go to Holy Communion once a month for the Intention of Missionary Vocations. Certificates and pins will be sent to all members.

Greetings, Boys and Girls!

Starting off the New Year let us all renew our efforts to help the salvation of souls by our prayers and sacrifices on behalf of the Missions. 1933 has seen a tremendous increase in the number of boys and girls who have joined our Club. Great things are going to be done during 1934, and as a "bud" in our "Rose Garden" each one of you is pledged to do his or her share, and I know you will, too.

Let me remind you of three important anniversaries occurring this month: the birth of the "Little Flower" on January 2nd, 1873; her Baptism on January 4th; and her taking of the Religious Habit on January 10th, 1889.

May God continue to bless you all throughout the year, and ever increase in your hearts a real love for your Catholic Faith and the desire to share it with the poor pagans of China.

FATHER JIM.

In sending us a splendid spiritual bouquet from the pupils of Junior III, B., St. Stanislaus School, Guelph, Rev. J. Prendergast, S.J., writes: "This 'spiritual cheque' shows the results of what the children of this class are doing for the missions. I had intended to have this reach you for the big Feast, but I pray that St. Francis Xavier, your Heavenly Patron, may to-day present this 'cheque' to Our Lord, and through his intercession may it show its efficacy in abundant blessings for you and the Seminary."

To these young missionaries at Guelph, and to many others who have sent spiritual bouquets for our missions, we are very grateful. It is "cheques" such as that mentioned above which do the work on the missions, bringing down heavenly grace from God on the poor souls who need it so much.

I was very pleased to hear from Sister St. Eulalia reporting the "Ursuline Buds" at Quebec as keen as ever about their membership in our Club. "We thank you very much for your certificates and badges. For so many days the morning greeting had been: 'Has Father Jim written yet?' that when your letter came there was great joy."

This is an actual photograph of Saint Thérèse, the "Little Flower", taken in the garden at the convent, where she lived her "little way" of sanctity.

A Prayer for the Conversion of China

(To be said daily by the members of the "Rose Garden")

O Lord Jesus Christ, who didst come on earth to save the souls of men, open now Thy most Sacred Heart in mercy to the people of China, who still sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, and shower Thy graces on them, that they may come to the knowledge of Thy Gospel. Bless also and protect Thy missionaries, and make their work fruitful for Thee of countless souls. —Amen.

(300 days' Indulgence)

With Ecclesiastical Approbation

Alex. Watson wrote me a fine letter from 614 Curry Ave., Windsor, Ont. He and his brother Robert joined our Club two years ago, and now that their sister, Margaret Mary, has made her First Holy Communion she becomes a member, too. Alex. had the privilege of serving Mass for Monsignor Fraser in Windsor. Thanks for the gift you sent, Alex. I hope "rice eating" will not hurt yourself and Bobby in your "preparation" for becoming missionaries.

From St. Rita's School, North Bay, Ont., comes this letter from Jack Vendetti. "We find 'China' very interesting. Our Third Book Class have saved pennies to get a year's subscription, and we are going to help the Chinese Missions. There are about 40 pupils in our class who want to become members. We offer our masses and communions for the missions." Thanks, Jack; write again, and send me the names of your classmates and I will send them certificates and badges.

An "old friend" is Mary M. Kerr, Box 47, Perth, Ont. Mary complains that Mary McAskill owes her a letter. She says, too, that she is glad to see so many new members coming to our "Garden" because it means more prayers for the Conversion of China. By the way, Buds, if you do not yet know the prayer for China by heart, cut it out of this issue, and make sure you say it every day.

A very welcome gift for the Missions was sent by the Little Flower Club at St. Mary's Girls' School, Halifax.

And isn't this nice? From Zita Cameron, Antigonish, N.S. "You may be surprised to hear from a little girl away down here. I am the President of our Sodality of the Infant Jesus. Our class holds a meeting once a month; we have little plays and we sing hymns. Each child pays a small fee. We are sending you today three dollars of our money for the China Missions. We hope to be able to send some more before the end of the school year."

It's next to impossible to keep Sudbury out of these columns—not that I would want to, but there you are! Just read what Billy Maloney has to say, writing from St. Thomas' School. "I am writing a few lines to tell how the pupils in our school are getting along in their promises made last year. There are only four in our class who do not belong to the Rose Garden, and here are their names: Ellen Whalen, Leah Giroux, Leo Primo, and Gregory Mulville. We are trying very hard to fill our mite box. Some of the pupils are sending you their pictures. We have offered a spiritual bouquet for the Chuchow missions, which we enclose; also fifty cents for 'China'. Please pray for our class." You bet I will, Billy, and for all the boys and girls who help us by being "buds". And these pictures will be published at a later date, too.

The teacher at Dornoch, Ont., says that "my pupils have told me so much about you, Father Jim, that I feel as if I am acquainted with you personally." She pays some compliments to her pupils, too, but of course we don't want the boys and girls at Dornoch to know that. If Father Jim ever decides to make himself known, Dornoch School would be a suitable place for the "revelation", for I think I have no more faithful correspondents than the buds there.

"Classes 13 and 14 of St. Francis Rotary School, Toronto, have read about your work in the China Magazine, and we find it very interesting. We would like to help you tell those poor pagan children about Jesus and His Blessed Mother. We are very poor and not able to send much money. However, we have collected two dollars by sacrificing our coppers which we would otherwise have spent on candy or shows. We are also enclosing a spiritual offering of our prayers. This we gladly do for Our Dear Lord who has done so much for us. May God bless your missionary work. Signed, Virginia Giammottalla."

The letter you have just read shows how much in earnest are the young readers of "China" when it is a question of doing things for the missions.

It is typical of the spirit in evidence among our Catholic boys and girls in schools all over Canada and Newfoundland, and it is our happy boast that thousands of such young people are active members of our missionary "Rose Garden" Club. May their numbers increase.

SOME "BUDS" YOU'LL BE GLAD TO KNOW
Left to right: Anita Flesch, Box 693, Cobourg, Ont.; Annie J. Mahoney, Lourdes, N.S.; Yvonne Arsenault and her sister, Summerside, P.E.I.; Gertrude Walsh, 374 Watson St., St. John, N.B. Representatives from four different provinces. Have you sent your picture to Father Jim yet?

Patroness of the Missions

IN the chapel of the Carmel at Lisieux, there is a wall-painting representing the four favorite saints of the Little Flower: St. Agnes, St. Cecilia, St. Joan of Arc, and Blessed Theophane Venard. Blessed Theophane, with palm in hand, heads the group which faces toward the reliquary of St. Theresa of the Child Jesus.

The Flower of Carmel was supernaturally attracted by the character of the young apostle. "I have read the lives of several missionaries," she wrote on May 13, 1897, to Father Roulland of the Missions Etrangeres in Paris. "Among these the life of Theophane Venard has touched and interested me more than I could say."

She entertained devotion to him because of his cheerful and quiet courage and his smiling simplicity, because she discovered in him a model of the spiritual infancy which she herself was to exemplify to the world. She prayed to Blessed Theophane and caused others to pray to him. Her wish was to go to the Carmelite Convent at Hanoi, to the very country where he had suffered martrydom. And from there came ardent requests for her coming. She turned for advice to her holy friend.

On May 28, 1897, four months before her death, she said to Mother Agnes, her sister: "Do you remember that last year, toward November, when my departure for Tongking was being planned, we started a novena to Blessed Theophane Venard in order to know the will of God? At that time I used to follow all the exercises of the community; I even went to Matins. Just during the novena I again began to cough, and since then I have been growing worse. He is calling me."

One of her happiest days, we read in Histoire d'une Ame, was that on which she providentially received a relic of Blessed Theophane. Several times she had expressed a desire to possess something which had belonged to her holy friend, but when she saw that her request was not heeded, she spoke no more of it. She was highly pleased when the Mother Abbess presented her with the precious relic; she kissed it devoutly and did not want to part with it.

When she was about to die, possessing nothing, she nevertheless desired to leave a remembrance for her Sisters of Carmel.

"Theophane is a little saint," she said to them. "As a parting remembrance I have copied for you some passages of the last letters he wrote to his parents; they are my thoughts; my soul resembles his."

This is what she wrote with a hand already touched by death:

" . . . I find nothing upon earth that can make me happy; my heart is too vast; nothing of what is called happiness can satisfy it. My thoughts fly toward eternity; time will end. My heart is peaceful as a tranquil lake or a cloudless heaven; I do not regret the life of this world; I thirst for the waters of life eternal.

"Yet a little while and my soul will leave this earth, end its exile and its struggle. I fly to Heaven. I go to the land of the blessed to see the beauties which the eye of man has never seen, to hear the harmonies which the ear of man has never heard, to enjoy delights which the heart has never tasted.

"I have arrived at the hour which each one of us so ardently desires. It is true that the Lord chooses the little ones in order to put to shame the mighty ones of earth. I do not rely on my own strength but on the strength of Him who on the Cross vanquished the powers of hell.

"I am like a spring flower which the Master of the Garden can pluck at will. We are all flowers growing on this earth, flowers which God will pluck in His own good time, some earlier, some later.

"I, a little passing flower, shall go first. One day we will meet again in Heaven where we shall enjoy true happiness."

Do not these lines written by the prisoner of Tongking seem to have been expressed by the Little Flower herself?

As shown by the list of missionaries murdered in China in the last six years, the toll of sacrifices laid upon missionaries in China has not yet been fully paid.

To our missionary brethren who might find themselves called upon like Theophane Venard and like the modern victims of China to seal their apostolate with their blood, we wish that they might remember and share the sentiments of Blessed Theophane which their heavenly patroness, St. Therese of the Child Jesus, applied to herself when she felt the approach of death.

—"Franciscans in China."

Father Morrison with the schoolboys and their teacher at Sungyang.

A MISSION TRIP IN KINHWA

(Continued from page 8)

Some time after eleven p.m. we pulled into Kinhwa. Our little sacristan and several of the schoolboys were awaiting me—they had been there for three hours in the cold, raw weather; a waiting room is in the course of erection. At a quarter to midnight I was able to sit down to a hurried meal, the second that day.

Father Kiang, after leaving me continued his journey on foot with our cook carrying the luggage (Mass box and bedding). When night came on they bought a lantern. Entering the hills they lost their way. There were no passers-by. They knocked at a farmer's house and asked for directions. The old couple took them for highway men and begged them to do them no injury. Father Kiang explained that they were from the Catholic Mission, which did nothing but good. At last after much persuasion the old man consented to show them the way. He had kindly offered as a compromise to harbor them for the night. In leaving, the old lady again besought them not to do any harm to her husband who was a "good, simple man". The Christian station was reached. Next morning the old guide, who by this time had become thoroughly reassured, consented to round up some of the converts who lived near his village. He returned to the chapel not only with them but also with several of the pagan villagers. His contact with the priest and Christians had converted him, and he in turn had convinced his neighbors of the wonderful religion he had discovered. They gave in their names as catechumens.

HELPING GOD'S WORK

Those who readily and regularly give financial help to the Missions are none the poorer for it, but without their assistance we would be badly off. Help to swell our donation list next month. From Nov. 14th to December 11th, 1933, we received the following gifts for our work:

Mrs. J. Cree, $1; Rev. Chas. McRae, $8.50; Agnes Coules, $2; Mrs. McAdam, $1; A Friend, Toronto, in thanksgiving, $3; Mrs. S. E. Sheehan, $5; In memory Mrs. Bridget Pinel, $3; Sodality of Infant Jesus, Antigonish, per Zita Cameron, $3; Mrs. Susie MacDonald, $2; In memory, "M.A.M.", Toronto, $5; Philip Grubb, 50c; Mrs. C. Del Monte, $3; Mrs. C. Brownlee, 50c; Rev. Fr. Feurth, $1; Mrs. J. Fry, $1; Little Flower Club, St. Mary's Girls' School, Halifax, $2; Rev. A. J. MacDonald, $1; Friend, Alexandria, Ont., $25; Patrick Maloney, $2; In memory of O'Connor family, Wakefield, Que., per Edward O'Connor, $250; J. F. Perry, 50c; D. and F. McCarthy, in honor of St. F. X., $5; Mrs. J. H. Schneider, 50c; Miss Ruth MacDonald, $5; Mrs. J. J. McHale, in thanksgiving, $10; Agnes Boylan, 50c; Kathleen Bird, $2; Alex. and Bobby Watson, $1; Anonymous, Toronto, $100; Tessie Crilly, $2; "F. C.", London, $2; Morrison Bequest, $10; Crusaders, St. Joseph's School, Blind River, Ont., $2.

Building Fund

A. MacDougald, $1; Rev. F. Monaghan, $5; Mr. John Moore, $2; Mrs. Jas. Duffy, $1; Mrs. Philip Beal, $1; E. J., Toronto, $1; Mrs. Mary Summers, $3; Sister Pitre, $2; Mrs. Mary Power, $1; Miss Louise Pautler, 50c; James De Coste, $1.50.

Burses

Mrs. G. Allen, St. F. X. Burse, $1; Mrs. Mary Power, St. F. X. Burse, $1; Dolores Macdonnell, in thanksgiving, Little Flower Burse, $1; J. J. Heydon, St. F. X. Burse, $10.

THIS IS CATHOLICISM

(Continued from page 7)

students gave us an impromptu concert, one playing the violin and another the piano in a manner worthy of concert-hall professional standards; and then the Rector sang some Neapolitan songs, laughing together with his students at his much more amateur performance. One could hardly imagine the Head of an Oxford or Cambridge college daring to do this. And yet the Rector is recognized as the supreme authority, which must be strict, and, if needed, can exact severe penalties; though we are assured these were rarely ever called for, only two or three having had to be sent down in as many years.

As we leave this inspiring place, which holds so much of the hope of the world, there comes to us the serious reflection that many of these happy youths will soon find themselves in positions of great loneliness and responsibility, some of them, no doubt, destined to wear the episcopal purple, but some the richer purple of martyrdom. For some will have to go to savage lands and some will be sent to disturbed countries like Russia. But so the Faith must be handed on, and at this cost.

Surely those whose only part is to support such work will not be found wanting in much lesser sacrifice, and those of us who have suffered some little unpleasantness for the sake of the Faith we profess will not fail or prove unfaithful.

COMMUNISM'S REIGN OF TERROR

Canton, Nov. 1.

The massacre of 2,000 Communists, who attempted to desert from the Red army and surrender to the Government, is reported in a Chinese despatch from Yutu, South Kiangsi. Yutu is one of the Communist strongholds in Kiangsi, where all inhabitants have been forced to become members of the Communist Party and many to serve in the Red army.

Recently, about 2,000 men, no longer able to stand the hardships in the Communist camp, deserted and made an attempt to cross the line at night to go over to the Government troops. Their plot, however, was discovered and nipped in the bud. Rounded up and disarmed, the deserters were ruthlessly slaughtered.—Reuter.

NONSENSE

A Negro met an acquaintance of his, also colored, on the street one day and was surprised to see that his friend had on a new suit, new hat, new shoes and other evidences of prosperity.

"Hey, boy," he said, "how come yo' dressed up dis way? Is you got a job?"

"I'se got somethin' better'n any job," replied the other. "I'se got a profession."

"What is it?"

"I'se a orator."

"What's an orator?"

"Don't you know?" replied the resplendent one in surprise. "Well, I'll tell yo' what a orator is. Ef you was to walk up to an ordinary Niggah and ask him how much was two and two, he'd say, 'foah', but ef you was to ask one of us orators how much was two and two he'd say: 'When in de cou'se of human events it becomes necessary to take de numeral of de second denomination and add it to de figger two, I says unto you—an' I says it without feah of successful contradiction—dat de result will invai'bly be foah.' Dat's a orator."

First Cannibal—"The chief has hay fever."

Second Cannibal — "Serves him right. We warned him not to eat that grass widow."

Professor—"Can any one give the derivation of the word auditorium?"

Student—"Yes—from AUDIO-hear, and TAURUS-bull. A place where you——"

Professor—"That will do."

Boy—"Mamma wants two pounds of butter like what you sent her last week. If it ain't exactly like that she won't take it."

The grocer turned to his numerous customers and remarked blandly: "Some people in my business don't like particular customers but I do. It's my delight to get them just what they want. I will attend to you in a moment, my boy."

Boy—"All right, but be sure and get the same kind. A lot of papa's relations are visiting our house, and mamma doesn't want them to come again."

"Do you like codfish balls, Art?"

Art—"I dunno; I never attended any."

Teacher—"Johnny, can you tell me what a hypocrite is?"

Johnny—"Yes, ma'am. It's a boy what comes to school with a smile on his face."

A school teacher asked her class in what part of the world the most ignorant people were to be found. A small boy volunteered quickly, "In London, England."

The teacher was amazed and questioned the lad as to where he had obtained such information.

"Well," he replied, "the geography says that's where the population is most dense."

John—"Just burned up a $100 bill."

Demijohn—"You must be a millionaire."

John—"Well, it's easier to burn them than pay them."

Visitor—"Now, little Walter, I know you help your mother a lot when she has a big party in the house."

Walter—"I sure do; when they are all gone she makes me count the spoons."

The curate of a very poor parish was showing a rich lady round, hoping to touch her heart and receive a substantial cheque for his people.

"We are now going through the poorest part of the place," remarked the clergyman, as the visitor's magnificent car turned slowly into a side street. "These people have little to brighten their lives."

"Oh, poor things!" sighed the wealthy woman sympathetically. Then, turning to her chauffeur, she said, impulsively:

"James, drive slower and switch on the headlights."

A girl from a telephone exchange fell asleep while at church.

The preacher announcing the hymn, said: "Number 428."

At that moment the girl awoke.

"I'll ring 'em again," she murmured.

The young mistress sent her colored maid, newly hired, for a bill of toilet articles.

"Mandy," said the mistress a few days later, "where is that tar soap you got for me the other day?"

"Lawzee, Miss," exclaimed Mandy, "what all's a blonde baby like you to do wid tar soap? Ah thought you ordered it for mah own pussonal use."

Eloise—"Just think of it! A few turns of a knob and you get Cuba."

Aloysius—"Yes, just think of it! A few turns of a knob and you get twenty years."

Building Foreman—"Excuse me, but are you the lady wot's singing?"

Lady — "Yes, I was singing. Why?"

"Might I ask you not to hold the high notes so long? The men have knocked off twice, mistaking it for the noon whistle."

A timekeeper for a railroad gang in Missouri asked a new workman his name.

"George Washington, suh," replied the dusky son of toil.

"You're not the man who cut down the cherry tree, are you?" asked the timekeeper jokingly.

"No, sah! 'Twan't me, suh. This is the fust work Ah's done for over a year."

"You are the biggest fool I have ever had the misfortune to set eyes on," exclaimed one lawyer to another.

"Order, order," said the judge gravely, "you seem to forget that I am in the room!"

The master told a class of boys to write an essay on "Mother" for their homework and the following day on going through them he found two of the essays, the work of two brothers, exactly alike.

He called one of them to him.

"John," he said, "how is it you've written just what your brother wrote?"

"Well, sir," came the prompt reply, "it's the same mother."

The Patron — "How much for steak?"

The Waiter — "Twenty-five and thirty cents."

The Patron—"What's the difference?"

The Waiter—"You get a sharp knife with the thirty-cent one."

A Scotsman invited to a golden wedding was told that each guest would be expected to bring a golden present.

He took a gold fish.

"What are the rates for your rooms, Mr. Manager?"

"Fifteen dollars on the first floor, ten on the second, eight-fifty on the third, and five on the fourth."

"Thanks, and sorry to trouble you unnecessarily, but your hotel isn't high enough for me."

Housekeeper — "I never feed tramps."

Ne'er-do-well—"I ain't asking yer ter, lady. Jest gimme the grub an I'll feed myself."

Beginning the NEW YEAR

YOU WERE GOING TO DO IT LAST MONTH—EVERY MONTH OF LAST YEAR—BUT YOU JUST KEPT "PUTTING IT OFF". WE ARE ASKING YOU NOW TO BE GOOD ENOUGH TO LOOK AT THE EXPIRY DATE ON YOUR "CHINA" ADDRESS LABEL AND IF IT IS NOT DATED TO 1934 PLEASE LET US HAVE YOUR RENEWAL SUBSCRIPTION AT ONCE. WELCOME "CHINA" TO YOUR HOME THIS YEAR WITH A PAID-UP SUBSCRIPTION. THE COST (FIFTY CENTS FOR ONE YEAR) IS SMALL, BUT THE HELP IT GIVES OUR MISSION WORK IS VERY IMPORTANT. EVERY CATHOLIC HOME IN CANADA AND NEWFOUNDLAND SHOULD BE KEEPING IN TOUCH WITH OUR MISSIONARIES THROUGH "CHINA".

SUBSCRIBE to "CHINA"

DO IT NOW!

Kindly make cheques and money orders payable to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President.

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

FEBRUARY,
1934

INTERNATIONAL VARNISH CO. LIMITED
TORONTO
PRODUCERS OF TRADE ELASTICA MARK.
Varnishes

Paints, Lacqueret and Kwickwork Auto Enamels

Special Seat Finish for Church Pews

Our Decorative Department is at your service at all times and enquiries promptly replied to.

Gerrard and Carlaw Phone HA. 2178

Safety and Good Interest Return

5%

We allow 5% interest on sums of $100.00 or over placed with us for five years; 4¾% for one to four years. 3½% on Savings which are subject to withdrawal by cheque. $1.00 Opens an Account.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST GUARANTEED

Capital Trust Corporation
Limited
TORONTO OTTAWA MONTREAL
Under Dominion Government Inspection

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.
OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-2-4-5

The Garden City Press
263 Adelaide St. West
Toronto

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McNeil, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, P.A.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 27,000

Entered as second class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XV. FEBRUARY, 1934 No. 2

THE CLERGY AND THE MISSIONS

A little while ago a parish priest visited us, and after seeing the students filing into the chapel he turned to us with the remark: "If anybody had told me twenty years ago that it was possible to have such a number of splendid young men gathered together from all over Canada for the purpose of preparing for Foreign Missions, I should scarcely have credited the fact. I firmly believe that we can count the increase in vocations to the Foreign Missions as being a very special manifestation of the 'shower of roses' which Saint Therese promised she would send down on earth after her death."

* * * *

There was good reason for our priest friend's surprise. Twenty years ago it would have been a matter for wonderment had anyone prophesied the present flourishing condition of missionary seminaries in Canada from the standpoint of numbers. But the years have brought about a wonderful change. No longer, thank God, is mention of Foreign Missions received with the surprised look and the shake of the head which betokened the introduction of an unknown and mysterious subject. The Catholic people of our land have become educated to regard the Foreign Missions in their true light; they have come to accept as "perfectly natural", yet, withal, as something "heroic", the spectacle of young priests bidding adieu to their families and friends and going off to a distant foreign clime in order to exercise their priestly office amidst a strange people and in strange surroundings. Our Catholic people, we repeat, have become acquainted with the work of the missions as a normal, and indeed an essential, functioning of the Church in carrying out her Divine Founder's injunction to "preach the Gospel to every creature".

* * * *

Agencies which have constantly given "publicity" to Catholic Missions, such as the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, the various mission periodicals, and the Students' Mission Crusade Movement are now reaping results in the form of an increasing number of vocations and in the sympathetic attitude of the general public, an attitude which has led to the supplying of the necessary spiritual and temporal aid to organizations whose concern it is to maintain the forces engaged in Foreign Mission enterprises. The school and the pulpit —the teacher and the priest—have done yeoman service in the past decade to make Canadian Catholics "mission-minded", and "China" gladly pays tribute to their zeal.

* * * *

We would say a special word of commendation for the Clergy whilst expressing our appreciation for all they have done to forward the cause of the Missions, and for their support of our own missionary efforts in particular. We fully realize that what success we have achieved has been due in large measure to the whole-hearted co-operation of priests in every section of Canada and Newfoundland. Not alone by recommending our work to their congregations, but by their own personal contributions have they given us encouragement and confidence for the future. Some of our most regular and most generous benefactors are members of the Clergy, who, despite financial stringency which makes it difficult to maintain their own portions of the Master's Vineyard, yet find opportunities to help the propagation of the Faith in foreign lands. Their vision is truly Catholic, and their zeal is expansive enough to include others outside the immediate boundaries of their own parishes.

* * * *

The Seminaries of Canada are taking care that graduates of the future will continue the splendid traditions of missionary zeal which characterizes the present generation of clergy. In every Seminary in Canada, as we know from correspondence with them, there is being instilled into the hearts of their priests this spirit of all-embracing Charity for God's Missions away from "home". The formation of mission societies among seminarians is stimulating their interest in Foreign Missions. Prayers, almsgiving, and study of mission problems constitute the means to this end, and affiliation with various pious associations and the Pontifical Works for the Propagation of the Faith guarantee the continuance of their well-directed missionary activities.

With a Clergy at home to whom the Missions are a vital issue, we can look forward to the day when the laity will, without exception, respond to their leadership and imitate their personal example in doing things for Foreign Missions.

DURING LENT—PRAY AND SACRIFICE FOR THE MISSIONS

The RELIEF of KANCHOW

Catholic Missionaries Save a Chinese City

The story of the heroism of Bishop O'Shea and Father Meyrat during the Red siege of Kanchow.

By "OBSERVER"

AT the Procure, Shanghai, we had an interesting visitor today; a man who is sentenced to death and isn't worrying about it in the least. Fr. Meyrat, of the Mission of Kanchow, is the man in question, and the sentence may never be carried out. Suppose we tell you all about it, for it is a very wonderful story.

* * * *

His Excellency Bishop O'Shea and Fr. Meyrat are heroes of the memorable siege of Kanchow by the Reds during 34 days of this year. And both are marked men should the Communists ever get control. Fr. Meyrat is just returning from a short holiday at home. He smiled when we suggested that his nerves must have been in bad shape after such an ordeal, with the fate of the city hanging in the balance and with the Bishop and himself singled out for certain death should it fall. "Nerves," he replied, with real good humor, "My nerves were killed long ago." We don't wonder, considering that he has spent 33 years in China and the last five or six of them in Communist-infested Kiangsi.

* * * *

You have heard, of course, the whole world has heard, of the memorable siege of Kanchow. But Fr. Meyrat supplied us with details I never saw in any account of the siege. It is now universally admitted, and by none more gratefully than the notables and business men of Kanchow itself, that it was the heroism of these two men that saved the city from certain destruction.

* * * *

Did you ever wonder why the Communists made a practice of liberating all prisoners as soon as they captured a town? It is because in their desperate hand-to-hand fighting they always force this rabble crew to the front to demoralize their adversaries and then they bring their crack troops into play. And when a town is taken this crowd is free to loot and rape and murder at will for a three-day period, after which strict discipline is enforced. It was from this that the Catholic missionaries saved Kanchow.

* * * *

With practically all of that section of Kiangsi under their control, the Reds made a desperate bid for the key-city of Kanchow. And the gallant Garrison Commander fought like the hero that he was while the city walls were crumbling around him and his ammunition perilously near exhaustion. Appeal after appeal he sent to Nanking. And again and again the high-sounding answer came out of the ether: "Fight to the last man". It might easily have been another case of a "Chinese Gordon" and his tragic end were it not for the fact that this man turned his radio equipment and codes over to the Mission with the request that if the foreigners insisted on staying and courting certain death an appeal from them might get results. "They won't listen to me," he said.

* * * *

It did get results, after twelve telegrams had been despatched, and, of course, duly intercepted by the Reds, who had secured the code from renegade soldiers. It took the relieving force two weeks to reach the city. Meanwhile, Russian-directed artillery and 48 machine guns were playing on the city walls. Realizing that it was a desperate race against time the Reds fought like demons. Time and again they tried to force an entrance through the breaches made in the walls. But inner sand-bag defences had been thrown up and machine-gun fire from the defenders piled them high as they were driven to the attack.

In the thick of it all the Red Commander sent a special message to the mission. It was to the effect that when they took the town the Bishop and Fr. Meyrat wouldn't have to worry about ransom money as just one bullet was being reserved for each of them. They knew perfectly well that but for the foreigners they would by now have been in possession of Kanchow. The fact that a relief force was on the way inspired the gallant Hunanese to fight to the last breath.

* * * *

After the twelfth day it had become necessary to drop ammunition by aeroplane as there was no more in the town. Daily, planes arrived from Canton. They bombed the Red defences. They flew low and raked the Red lines with machine gun fire. Sometimes huge bundles of machine gun bullets would drop through the roof of some of the Mission buildings, but that was a mere trifle. One hole, more or less, in the roof wouldn't have made much difference had Chu Teh and his horde just got their clutches on Kanchow. The great climax was a three-day pitched battle under the city walls after the relieving force had arrived. The Reds took a terrific beating and Kanchow was saved and the defences have now been so reconstructed that it will never again be in danger.

* * * *

Just one instance will show the nature of the fighting. Fr. Meyrat was one day standing beside the Commanding Officer just inside the wall where the fighting was severe. No soldier was allowed to leave his post without orders under penalty of death. Suddenly a huge Hunanese leaped down beside them, stood for a moment and asked for a cigarette. "Are you hurt?" the officer asked as he significantly unloosened his revolver. For answer the man nodded towards his stomach which he was holding with his hands. A hand-grenade had practically disembowelled him and he fell dead almost as he spoke.

* * * *

We asked Fr. Meyrat all kinds of questions. Were they really Reds or just one of China's many mere rebel hordes? He told us that all the documents bore the sign and seal of the Chinese branch of the Third International; that the artillery was directed by Red Russian officers and that their wireless was in daily touch with Moscow. Happily for the Mission they were short on artillery shells and had to use them only to batter down the walls.

* * * *

One day the Reds announced that on the following noon they would send a little token of greeting to the three principal places in town, the Mayor's Residence, the Garrison Headquarters, and the Catholic Mission. Precisely at the appointed hour a shell was accurately place in each spot designated. When the fire started in the Mission had been extinguished and the debris cleared away, Fr. Meyrat found a brass ring from the shell. On it was inscribed: "Rochester, U.S.A., 1929". A pleasant little reminder of home for the American Mission and a gentle touch of irony on the part of the attacking force.

* * * *

We also wanted to know how it was that the notorious Communist leader, Chu Teh, had been able to elude capture for so long in spite of the fact that the Government had offered $100,000 for him, dead or alive. Knowing the "amenability" of Chinese in such matters we were surprised that some of his men, even of his personal bodyguard, had not decided to collect part of that reward. The answer was that Chu Teh had a bodyguard of 500 armed, fanatical women. Viragos, Fr. Meyrat very mildly called them.

* * * *

And that explains everything. The average Chinese, above all the average half-paid and half-starved Chinese soldier, might cheerfully sell his soul for considerably less than a hundred thousand dollars. But if die he must in the quest for such a fortune he draws the line at falling into the hands of 500 armed and fanatical Amazons who would rend him limb from limb. Others have felt the same way.

* * * *

"When you're wounded and lie on Afghanistan's plains
And the women come out to cut up what remains
Just take up your rifle and blow out your brains
And go to your Gawd like a soldier."

Chu Teh will probably remain "at large", rewards notwithstanding.

* * * *

Fr. Meyrat is now on his way back to his Mission. He hopes to be able to persuade Bishop O'Shea to take a well-earned rest. His Excellency has received from the Holy Father a special recognition of his bravery and the wonderful service rendered the cause of Catholic Missions, and the whole world knows by now that never was recognition more nobly won.

Belgium and Mercier! Warsaw and Ratti! Kanchow and O'Shea! We feel, that as the Holy Father prepared a fitting tribute for his heroic son, his own mind must have harked back to a not too distant day when the devil's hordes were thundering at the gates of Warsaw even as they thundered at the crumbling gates of Kanchow. Poland was saved as was Kanchow and God is still in His Heaven, and the gates of Hell will not prevail as long as there are God's heroes who refuse to be dismayed.

Views showing Father McGillivray officiating at a funeral in Lishui. Top: the funeral procession; centre: the blessing of the grave; below: the person being buried is the wife of the young man in the foreground with crepe on his arm.

DURING LENT—PRAY AND SACRIFICE FOR THE MISSIONS

From PRISON to PARADISE

Written specially for "CHINA" by a Sister of Charity at Chusan Island, Chekiang, China.

THIS year our Islands have suffered much from brigands and pirates. It was said that we had 300 brigands on the Island of Chusan, and 600 pirates on the seas around. The poor country people and fishermen lived in constant terror, life was not easy for them. Many times poor fellows have come to our hospital beaten black and blue. On one occasion a fisherman struggled in almost at his last breath. He had been taken prisoner by the pirates and had been hidden in a cave in the mountains for one month, during which time he was starved and continually beaten. Then, because his ransom was not forthcoming, they shot him through the head three times, threw him down the mountainside and left him, as they thought, dead. When he was brought to us he had several holes in his head and neck and it seemed indeed a hopeless case. However, after weeks of careful nursing he slowly recovered and has now gone back to his island home thoroughly convinced that it was the God of the Christians who cured him. He has promised to come and study in our catechumenate.

The executioner's bullet (the mark of which is clearly shown in the victim's forehead), opened the gates of Heaven to Tze Pao-ding, notorious bandit, who was shot at Chusan on November 12th.

In the villages on this Island the richer men who possess some property have not dared to sleep in their own houses at night. Many have gone to the houses of their neighbors night after night with their families. Shops have been closed up, business stopped, and formerly respectable villages have fallen into poverty and misery through the ravages of the brigands. Such a life could not go on, and eventually some of the well-to-do-men offered a large sum of money to the Government soldiers to come and make real efforts to catch the brigands. They have been very successful and now there are large numbers of pirates and brigands in prison.

Sad to say, one of the leaders of the band was a Christian boy, aged 29 years, named Li Yungsung. He belonged to a big village in the interior near Sinkomen. As a boy he came to our parish school here but had been very badly brought up by his mother. His father was an invalid. Li Yungsung was an only son and had his own way always, as many Chinese boys have. Eventually, he persisted in his intention of going to Shanghai to work; in the great city he fell into bad company and became a brigand because he could not pay his gambling debts. Three months ago Li Yungsung was caught by the soldiers and we heard that he was in the special prison here, the one reserved for those condemned to death. Thinking of his soul, two of our Sisters went to see him, explaining to the Chief Mandarin, when they sought permission, that the Sisters do good work not only for the body but also for the soul—that Li Yungsung was a Christian and if he was going to die, as he deserved, he needed help to prepare his soul for death. The Judge was very polite and quite understood, remarking that he himself had received part of his education in a Christian school under Father Lebbe at Shirshing and so understood the ways of Christians.

The boy was called into the Public Court of Justice before the two Sisters, and heavy chains were dragging on his legs. All around were pagan officials, who were rather surprised at the way the Sisters turned on the prisoner severely and gave him a first-rate scolding, telling him of the shame and disgrace and misery he had brought on his family and on all the Christians of the Island. He listened in silence, and then tears began to roll down his cheeks. The Sisters spoke to him seriously, reminding him of the Commandments of God and of his great sin in stealing from the poor. They told him of the near approach of death, and the boy became quite penitent and said humbly: "I lost my Faith; I listened to the Devil." He begged the Sisters to help him and to send him a priest that he might make his confession. He also asked for his books of prayers and instructions that he might prepare well for death. With the permission of the Judge, two days later Father Luke Yao, his parish priest from Sinkomen, went to the prison and heard his confession.

A little later he was sent to the ordinary prison, and when the Sisters visited there, caring for the sick prisoners, they always spoke to Li Yungsung. He used to come out to the little dispensary and ask to have the wounds on his legs dressed. He was very quiet and well-behaved, wearing devoutly the Miraculous Medal and scapulars outside his coat. Quite suddenly one Sunday morning the order arrived and with a few minutes warning he was taken to Sinkomen and shot. May the good God have mercy on his soul!

Unfortunately, Father Yao was away from Sinkomen on that day making a mission tour. We could not let him know in time, but on his return to Sinkomen he made inquiries. He was told that just before Li Yungsung was shot the officer asked him if he had any last words for his family. "No," the boy replied, "but I would like to go and see 'Yao Kong' (Father Yao) at the church on the hill there." They told him it was not possible to take him there. He then asked that someone should fetch "Yao Kong" or any priest. This was also refused, with excuse that there was no time. He then said: "Tell 'Yao Kong" from me that I wanted to see him and ask him not to forget me." After these words he was shot.

A few weeks later the famous leader of the band, Tze Pao-ding, was arrested with others by the soldiers in Shanghai. For years they had been trying to catch this man, but he was a very elusive brigand. We heard of his imprisonment, so when the Sisters visited the sick they asked to see him, and knowing that he was condemned to death, they spoke to him of his soul and the Christian religion. He listened very attentively and seemed to be very sorry and ashamed of his bad life. He confessed that it was his gambling debts that had driven him to brigandage. He asked us to write out on paper the prayers and doctrine we were teaching him so that he could study them himself. On our next visit he told us that he could not read, but an educated man in the same cell read what we had written for him, and Tze Pao-ding, his companion brigands, and all in the cell listened attentively and were much interested. At his own request, we baptized Tze, but we wated till later before baptizing his companions, who did not seem to us to be serious enough at first. After continued instruction they changed greatly and requested to be made Christians. During our last visit to instruct them a man in a cell opposite called out: "I, too, want to adore your God. In this book I have here the doctrine is beautiful; I have read it and want to believe in your religion." We asked him where he had gotten his book of Catholic doctrine. He answered: "The Christian brigand, Li Yungsung, gave it to me before he died, and he explained much of it to me."

It was said that Tze Pao-ding was remarkable for his simplicity and honesty in the Court of Justice. At each accusation he said simply: "It is true. I did it. I must be honest, as I am going to die." In the prison were many members of his brigand band, and earnestly he appealed that their lives might be spared. To the Judges he said: "These men are not big bandits like we three; we made them follow us; they are countrymen with families. Do not kill them. Kill us, the three guilty ones who deserve death." Each time we visited these men they were full of gratitude, saying that the Sisters were the only people in the world who wished them well. They assured us that their souls were in peace and that several times a day they repeated the prayers we had taught them, and that they would be their last words at the moment of death.

Sunday, November 12th, the order came and Tze Pao-ding and his two companions were taken to be shot. We may surely believe that our Divine Lord received them as He received the Good Thief on the Cross beside Him and from whom He asked but one small act of faith before He promised him that he should be with Him that day in Paradise.

ARE YOU HELPING THE MISSIONS?

Those who readily and regularly give financial help to the Missions are none the poorer for it, but without their assistance we would be badly off. Help to swell our donation list next month. From December 11th, 1933, to January 15th, 1934, we received the following gifts for our work:

James P. Larkin, $1; Sodality of the Child Jesus, St. Ann's Academy, Victoria, B.C., $5; A friend, St. Mary's, Nfld., $2; Agnes Donley, in thanksgiving to Little Flower, $5; P. W., Toronto, $5; Rev. Ralph Egan, $2; Frances Sheehy, $2; Mary Columbus, $1; John MacDonald, $2; J. J. Carolan, $1; Mrs. John Langmuir, $2; A friend, L. M., Barrie, $5; Stafford Higgins, $15; Mary V. Power, $1; Mrs. V. Buckley, $2; The Misses Garmey, $5; Teresa Flick, $1; Mary M. Grant, $2; Mrs. Edwin Harris, $1; Mrs. C. Wickett, $1; Gena Hobson, $1; Miss G. Malone, $5; Mrs. T. Finucan, $2; Ed. Svenciski, $1; His Excellency, Bishop MacDonald, $5; Harry Joanette, $4; Frances Murphy, $2; Crusaders, St. Michael's Academy, Belleville, Ont., $5; Rt. Rev. W. C. Gehl, $10; A friend, St. John, N.B., in thanksgiving to Little Flower, $1; Mrs. Steele, $50; Mrs. A. Lecteau, $2; Mrs. Jeffrey Sampson, $10; Edward O'Connor, $10; W. A. Fawcett, $4.50; Joseph Foran, $1; R. J. Twohig, $5; Mary M. Kerr, $1; Sisters of St. Joseph, House of Providence, Toronto, $10; Sadie Macdonald, $1; St. Mary's Boys' School, Halifax, $5; Miss Julia Pender, $1; Mrs. Julia Herbert, in thanksgiving to Little Flower, $1; St. Dunstan's Church, Fredericton, N.B., per Rt. Rev. F. L. Carney, $18; Pupils, St. Aloysius School, Sudbury, Ont., $7; Margaret Cronin, $3; Estate, Margaret C. O'Driscoll, $50; Estate, Mrs. Sarah McKinnon, $100; Friend, St. John, N.B., in thanksgiving to Little Flower, $1; James A. O'Halloran, $3; Crusaders, Mount St. Vincent's Academy, Halifax, $10; Mrs. L. H. Timmins, $10; Rev. E. J. Wilson, $5; Kathleen Bird, $2; Irene and Catherine Struthers, $3; K. B. Andrews, $2; Mrs. John Walsh, $1; J. J. Carolan, $1; Mrs. John Trainor, $5; Mrs. McGoey, $10; Beatrice Caverley, $3; Albert Cruickshank, $5; Pupils, St. Thomas School, Sudbury, Ont., $4; Mrs. S. E. Sheehan, $5; Jr. and Sr. IV. Classes, St. Thomas School, Sudbury, $2.50; Mrs. Mary Dion, $25; Miss V. de Leon, $2; A. B., Toronto, $2; Pupils, St. Ann's Convent, Renfrew, Ont., $3; Mr. and Mrs. Michael V. Brussard, $1.

Burses

J. J. Heydon, St. F. X. Burse, $10; Helen Moylan, St. F. X. Burse, $1; A friend, Barrie, Ont., St. Anthony's Burse, $5; M. McNeil, St. F. X. Burse, $20; John F. Lally, St. F. X. Burse, $1; Jos. Robillard, St. F. X. Burse, 50c; Miss Ella T. Leavey, St. F. X. Burse, $5; Ida M. Patten, St. F. X. Burse, $13; Rev. Chas. Corrigan, St. F. X. Burse, $1; Nora Mason, St. F. X. Burse, $10; Mrs. E. T. Draper, St. Anthony's Burse, $2; Convent of the Sacred Heart, Halifax, St. Madeleine Sophie Barat Burse, $50; Florence M. Stewart, St. F. X. Burse, $1.50; Rev. Father Feurth, Rev. Dr. Foley Burse, $5; Margaret G. Macdonnell, St. Jude's Burse, in thanksgiving, $1; Miss E. C. Kearns, Immaculate Conception Burse, $2.

Building Fund

Irene Robson, $2; Anna King, $5; Miss Ellen Malloy, $2; Emile Pinel, $3; Miss K. Stringer, $5; Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Wall, $4; Miss Mary A. Monaghan, $100; Anonymous, Alexandria, Ont., $20; Catherine Lewis, $1; Pupils, 6A Class, St. Willibrord's Academy, Verdun, Que., $1; Margaret Ryan, $1; Austin F. Hall, $5; Well-Wisher, Tignish, P.E.I., $10; Minnie Connors, $10.

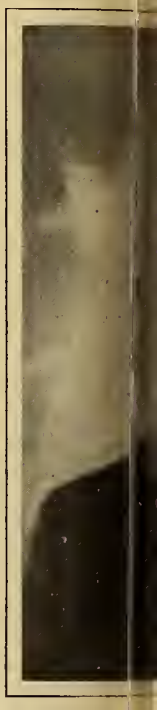
Mass Intentions are always a practical help to priests in mission lands. The missionaries often have no other means of support than their Mass stipends. Our priests will be glad to offer the Holy Sacrifice for your Intentions if you send your Mass offerings to the Seminary.

DURING LENT—PRAY AND SACRIFICE FOR THE MISSIONS

The HOME of C

Written specially for "CI

Illustrations through



CATHOLICISM was born in Canada, this very year, four centuries ago when Jacques Cartier in 1534 planted the cross of Christ on the Gaspe peninsula and dedicated the newly discovered land to his God, to his Church and to his King. When his little fleet weighed anchor in the Baie des Chaleurs we may say that the Ship of Peter touched our shores for the first time.

Four hundred years have rolled by and still the very map of our great and immense country continues to speak to us of the Catholicity of its first discoverers. The names of its rivers, of its islands and of its capes bear the stamp of their Catholic Faith. The little acorn planted by Jacques Cartier and Champlain, watered by the blood of the Jesuit Martyrs, has grown into that mighty oak whose branches now extend from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

Quebec stands to-day as the citadel of Catholicism in our land. There was a time when that grand old See extended its jurisdiction across the Continent of North America and reached from the frozen Arctic to the sunny shores of the Gulf of Mexico. Never was more beautifully and graphically realized the full meaning of that Prophetic verse of the Psalmist in which the Fathers of Confederation found the very name of our Dominion, and our Government its motto:

"His 'DOMINION' will extend from 'SEA TO SEA' and from the river unto the ends of the earth" (Psalm 71: v. 8). To-day the territory of our Dominion—"that land of magnificent distances"—is under the spiritual care and guidance of a fully constituted "Hierarchy". Twelve Archbishops, twenty-nine Bishops, and eight Vicars Apostolic now guide the destinies of the Saviour's flock in Canada. In a population of 10,376,786 (1931 census) there were in Canada 4,285,388 Catholics. They constitute the strongest religious body of the country. That Catholic life is strong and vigorous is evidenced by the fact that Canada has already sent thousands of her sons and daughters into the Mission Field Afar. Pagan lands are benefitting by this overflow of Canadian Catholicity.

In the face of these facts how can we maintain that Canada has still a Mission Field. Does it not seem a contradiction to assert that after four centuries of Catholicism our Dominion has within its boundaries the responsibilites of a mission territory just as equally pressing as those of China, Japan or other pagan countries. The solution to this religious problem depends on what in reality constitutes essentially a Mission Field in the eyes of the Church. The French Author, Georges Gogau, in the concluding chapter of his wonderful book, "Missions and Missionaries", has a lucid explanation of this point of doctrine which he calls "the philosophy of missionary action".

" 'Christ who came to save all men,' as St. Paul tells us in his Epistle to Timothy, desires that the revealed truths and the supernatural graces of which He has made His Church the intermediary should be within the reach of all men, available to all men, and this not at random, occasionally, but in a permanent manner. He desires that His Church be implanted everywhere, and that in all climes her organism of salvation be active. His Divine Commission as handed to us in St. Matthew XXIX, 19: 'Go and teach ye all nations: baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you . . . ' implies not merely the preaching of the Gospel by apostles, who, their messages delivered, would simply go away, leaving baptismal grace to increase and multiply by itself in souls, but the founding by these apostles of churches, whose spiritual chiefs, succeeding one another from age to age, will teach successive generations to observe what Christ has commanded. The characteristic of missionary activity, and what properly speaking constitutes its essence, is not to instruct and baptise, here and there, souls willing to be instructed and baptised; it is to assemble together in every part of the earth nuclei of souls whom the organized Church will set on the way to salvation, and maintain on that road; it is to prepare and to establish the Reign of Christ, not only on scattered souls, but as soon as possible upon the whole of a region where a common observance of Catholic practice will serve as the foundation of a Church. The aim of the missionary must thus be to establish the mystical body of Christ, that is, the Church, there where she is not as yet established; to consolidate her, there where she has taken root, to encourage and secure the gradual observance by societies and by individuals of the Commandments and the precepts of the Sermon on the Mount. From the above principles it follows that the missionary must endeavor to build on solid foundations; that his chief care must be to promote and to protect Catholic morality both in Societies and in individuals; that he must have a care to

A typical emigrant group from Central Europe at the Hostel conducted by the Sisters of Service in Edmonton, Alberta.

SION FIELD ADA

REV. G. DALY, C.SS.R.

The Field at Home".

promote the formation of a native clergy, so as to hasten the dawn of the day when the native Church he will have founded shall no longer require his help, but will entirely be able to provide for her own spiritual needs."

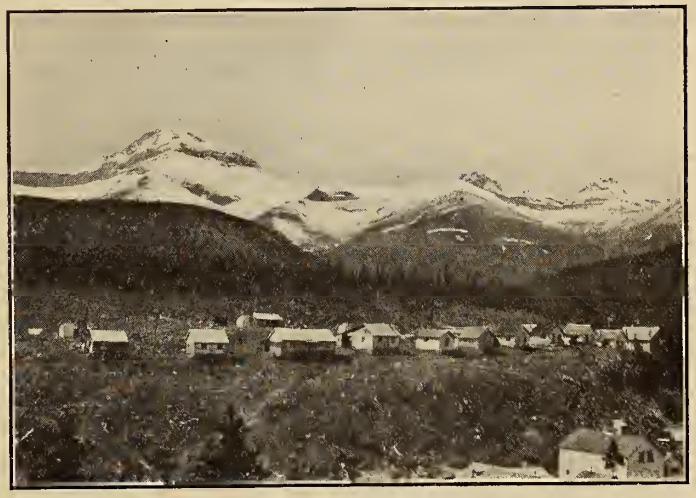
In the light of these principles one can understand how even a one-time Catholic country like England after the trials and the persecutions of the Reformation, reverted back to the state of a mission land. Thus she remained until at last a "Second Spring" came to the Church with the re-establishment of her Hierarchy.

Has not North Africa in the centuries past known also the glories and benefits of a fully constituted Catholicism. And yet to-day it stands out as a vast necropole over which Islamism still keeps watch. Slowly the Church is emerging from the tomb and we owe to the enlightened zeal of the great Cardinal Lavigerie to see the Sees of St. Cyprian and St. Augustine restored to their primitive glory.

To what causes, therefore, should we retrace the existence of a Mission Field in Canada? The Church here has not known persecution like England or Northern Africa, and yet there are vast stretches of our Western Provinces where she is not established so as to provide from her own resources for the spiritual needs of her children. The opening up of these new provinces and the sudden and immense immigration which followed are the explanation of this fact.

From the very dawn of Canadian history until some fifty years ago our Northwest Territories that extended from the Great Lakes to the Rockies and from the American boundary line to the Arctic were looked upon as the privileged domain of the roaming tribes of Indians and of the buffalo herds. Even some of our pioneer Bishops of the West believed that these territories would ever remain the great waste lands of the Dominion. But the plough of some more venturesome settlers had scratched the rich loam of the Red River district and given to the world the famous Manitoba hard wheat. The potentialities of that virgin soil became evident. Ever since the "call of the West" has gone through the land and been re-echoed throughout the world. Our Government opened wide the gates of the country and offered free homesteads to land-hungry settlers from Eastern Canada, the British Isles, and Continental Europe.

A tidal wave of immigration swept over the land and in the space of a few years the solitudes of the Prairies were created into the most prosperous Provinces of the Dominion. The barren wastes of the West had suddenly become the "granary of the world".



This unexpected transformation created tremendous problems for the Church. The vast majority of the immigrants from Continental Europe were her children. They did not speak the languages of the country and a great number of them belonged to the Greek Catholic Rite. They settled where land was available. To organize the Church among those hundreds of thousands through an immense territory, it would have required an army of priests speaking various languages and knowing their customs. This impossibility created there and then a Home Mission Field in Canada. It is true a marvelous development has taken place. The vast territory of the Prairie Provinces has been divided up into flourishing dioceses; Catholic institutions of education and charity have blossomed like flowers in a desert and Catholic life holds great promises for the future.

But throughout the vast hinterland of these Catholic centres lie hundreds of thousands of Catholics who are not in touch with the Church, with her teaching and her Sacramental life. They are just as destitute of spiritual help as many Catholics in the Foreign Mission Field. It will take years and years before the Church will have there developed her normal life and organization. In the meantime it rests with us to send out missionaries and help just as we are doing in the Field Afar.

As Msgr. McGrath stated in a recent edition of this magazine, there is in reality but one mission field in the Church. Geographical or racial lines mean nothing to God. The salvation of souls through the Church is the only thing that matters. And the Catholic heart should always be large and generous enough to embrace with liberal sympathies the Mission Field as a whole, be it at home, or abroad.

* * * *

(Editor's Note: To Catholics who want to "do their bit" for the Home Missions we very gladly recommend that they become readers of "The Field At Home", a quarterly magazine published by the Sisters of Service at 2 Wellesley Place, Toronto, which interprets in words and pictures what these valiant Missionaries are doing to preserve the Catholic Faith among thousands of New Canadians. Worthy of every Catholic's support are these Sisters, whose unselfish labors are directed towards the extension of the beneficent influence of our Holy Mother the Church.

A mining settlement in Luscar, Alberta, where the missionary Sisters of Service have done excellent catechetical work.

DURING LENT—PRAY AND SACRIFICE FOR THE MISSIONS

On a MISSIONARY JOURNEY

With

MONSIGNOR FRASER

ON NOVEMBER 11th, 1933, I paid my first visit to the subprefecture of Pukiang. This is the seventh out of the eight counties of Kinhwa District that I have visited since my arrival in China eleven months ago.

Taking the Mission servant boy with me, I left Kinhwa by train at 9.30 a.m. The weather was perfect. The last four months of the year in China are very agreeable. On opening the morning paper, which arrives here the day after publication, the first thing to catch my eye was an article on the very railway I was using and the scenery through which it passes:

"The Hangchow-Kiangshan Railway runs its long steel fingers through cultural landscapes and lovely valleys. This wonderful light railway offers an attractive outing to the keen hiker, especially at this season of the year when the magic summer fades into autumn mists and the whole countryside is ablaze with changing hues. The track penetrates a charming undulating country, with woodlands, orange groves and bamboo trails. It is a fat land, full of the fruits of the earth, and a veritable fairyland to wander in, where foot-paths dip and rise. At last, the beauties of Chekiang are now open to easy travel, and the cost is small in both time and money.

"One distinctive effect of this great modern enterprise has been to give a stimulus to the building trade. Quite a burst of building activity is manifest on every hand. Houses, shops, small factories and hotels—'modern and clean' as one enterprising proprietor designates his new-fashioned hostelry —are in course of construction all along the 'Iron Road'. From the railway stations, motor roads are radiating out in all directions, linking up the busy marts of town and village. This mode of rapid transportation has quite caught on with the country folk, and the rural class, who formerly seldom left their homes, are seized with the wanderlust and the novelty of joy rides. In the vicinity of the stations new communities and business centres are springing up with mushroom growth on sites which have never known intrusion save by the ploughman and his ox. The garnering of bounteous harvests is an interesting sight, and a journey to Kinhwa through this rich country is a feast to the eyes. But, alas, this peaceful countryside is not devoid of sighs and groans, and the man with the loudest complaint is the farmer. He says he is being worked to death for little profit. Cheap rice and dear labour is compassing his ruin. In the matter of commerce, too, it is noticeable that business worries furrow many faces, and even the small shopkeeper is baffled by depression and the economic puzzle.

Lanchi, Model City

"The decree has gone forth that the town of Lanchi (in the Kinhwa District), an important trading centre, has to be transformed into a model inland city. A young official has taken office as mayor and is primed with all authority, and the latest academic learning, to see that the transformation takes place with the least possible delay. This up-to-date official is not afraid to mix with the throng. He ventures out, incognito, personally to witness what is going on behind the scenes, in the various sections of the county. The gamblers and opium eaters are scared to death, for already, it is said, more than two hundred have been gaoled for such offences. The street pedlars, and stalls, have disappeared from the side of the roads, and ramshackle shops are being torn down. Streets are to be widened, and kept clean, and receptacles are being provided for rubbish. Model markets are to be erected for the sale of vegetables and other produce, and sanitation is to be brought to a high level of efficiency. These are busy days for the professional house-wrecker, and every erection which spans a street or alley, shutting out the sunshine, is in course of demolition. Since the order went forth, the streets look much cleaner, and, if present plans materialize, Lanchi will become the paragon of beauty in the West of Chekiang."

Father Tcheng boarded the train, as arranged, at Suchi, and we had a very pleasant chat together until we arrived at Ginchau. On leaving the station we crossed a bridge and came to the terminus of the Pukiang bus line. After refreshments at a tiny stall, candy and "wenden" (pork enclosed in pastry and steaming hot), we boarded a crowded bus. For the next hour nothing unusual, people mounting and descending. Opposite me sat an officer in mufti holding in his arms a new-born baby; beside him sat his delicate-looking wife. Every now and then she would gently lift the muslin cloth from the child's face to see if he were sleeping. The officer was very careful to keep people from crushing against the baby. One could see that they had a most affectionate love for their child. On arrival at Pukiang they were met by soldiers in uniform, and a servant carefully bore the baby to their home.

Father Tcheng's "boy" had never seen or been on a motor bus before. The heaving made him "seasick", the inevitable result. The catechist was at the depot to meet us. We were invited to enter two sedan chairs; men shouldered the baggage, and four policemen followed up as an escort. At the Mission gate quantities of crackers were set off. This, the northern part of Kinhwa District, is Father Tcheng's parish. The chapel and parlour are downstairs, with three sleeping rooms upstairs. There is also a fine, large piece of property attached for future building purposes, big enough for church, residence, school, etc. Fortunate will be the young missionary who gets this place.

Some of the principal persons of the city came to see us. Besides conversation on the news of the day, we instructed them in Catholic doctrine. To one, a Protestant, but not yet baptized, I gave a book called "The True Religion of Jesus", written expressly for non-Catholics. The Chief of Police, a Catholic, was delighted to see me. He used to be my parishoner in Chuchow. He wanted to accompany me on horseback with a bodyguard to the next mission, but I would not hear of it.

The Christians went to confession, and next day, Sunday, Father Tcheng preached, and I said the

FATHER ANDREW KIANG,
the youngest priest in the Kinhwa mission, who, with Father Ly, a newly ordained priest, is assistant to Msgr. Fraser. The Monsignor speaks highly of the Chinese priests who are his co-laborers in Kinhwa.

Orders have gone forth that Lanchi, the principal commercial centre of the Kinhwa district (where Msgr. Fraser is working) is to be transformed into a model city which will become "the paragon of beauty" in the west of Chekiang Province. This city has a pagan population of 238,000, and a Catholic population of 500 souls. It is in easy communication with Shanghai. There is a Catholic chapel in the city, but no priest yet. Notice the towers, or Chinese pagodas.

community Mass and distributed Communion. The catechist treated us liberally. There was at table, besides chicken, beef, which is an unusual treat, and all sorts of good things. In the afternoon we made a tour through the city, which is small, only about a mile across. Through curiosity we visited a large pawn shop, the solid wall of which towered above the street. Many poor people were redeeming their winter clothing and bedding. The men behind the counter looked like Shylocks. Eighteen per cent. is charged on the money loaned in exchange for clothing. If not ransomed within two years it is sold.

Next day we boarded chairs and set out on a long journey over the mountains. Though the bearers were brisk walkers, it took us eight hours. The first part of the route led through a smiling plain, richly cultivated, interspersed with trees in autumn hues—a riot of colour. The prettiest was the tallow-tree, with bright red or purple leaves and snow-white berries. These are melted and used to manufacture candles.

It took us several hours to cross a very high pass in the mountains. At places it was very steep, and hundreds of steps aided the ascent. Towards evening we arrived at our destination, a village, many of whose inhabitants have recently entered the Church. I noticed that scrolls were pasted on the houses, "Welcome to Monsignor Fraser". Here we were treated royally. Our mission quarters, however, is empty of furniture except for the benches and table-altar in the chapel upstairs, but the good Christians came to the rescue with everything needed. We are in hopes some day of having a resident catechist, or better still a Canadian priest. He will find fertile soil for the spread of the Faith in these simple-minded mountaineers who live amidst wonderful scenery and in healthful surroundings.

Next day after Mass and a sick-call, concerning which Father Tcheng told me he was much edified with the piety of the dying woman, we said farewell. At her request, I sent her a beautiful picture of the Holy Family for her bedside. To other important Christians I also made a gift of pictures. These good people accompanied us for several miles and then with many bows and good wishes took their leave. Another eight-hour journey by chair through rugged mountains and verdant valleys brought us to the nearest railway station. We passed three old ladies with staffs, preceded by a young lady and a boy bearing a basket full of candles and incense. They politely got off the path to let our party pass. They overtook us at a wayside temple where we sat to rest. Going straightway into the temple, they lit candles and incense and began to bow in adoration of the idols. At another place we rested at a very beautiful temple, exquisitely carved and decorated. The idols were richly gilded and profusely coloured, and, as usual in China, represented handsome personages. At another stop we entered a small temple converted into a school-house. The Master was absent. We told the boys how futile it was to adore idols which can neither hear nor see. One of them said they adored the idols at New Year's, and then, I think more in fun, began to bow to the deities on the altar beside their desks.

Idolatory has a firm grip on the population. They are inured to it from their earliest infancy. Not long ago I was standing at our entrance gate. It was a bright moon-

(Continued on page 30)

YOU CAN USE THIS COUPON IN RENEWING YOUR SUBSCRIPTION

"CHINA"
St. F. X. Seminary
Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.

Dear Fathers:—

Enclosed find $.....as a subscription to "China" for ..... . years.

Name ..... Name .....

Address ..... Address .....

....

(If you have changed your address, please give us the OLD address as well as the NEW one)

LITTLE FLOWER'S ROSE GARDEN

Edited by FATHER JIM

CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP

The only conditions of membership in the Rose Garden are: (1) To say every day the Prayer for the Conversion of China; (2) To go to Holy Communion once a month for the Intention of Missionary Vocations. Certificates and pins will be sent to all members.

Dear Boys and Girls:

I was seriously considering asking for an "assistant" to help me with the "Rose Garden" correspondence, but when I thought that it might deprive me of the real pleasure of reading ALL your letters, I decided I would not take the chance, so now there's nothing left for me but to keep on working "overtime" in order to keep up with "business". No, thank you, there's no "depression" in our Club, but the staff of one is away behind in filling "orders".

Lent is approaching—and all our youthful missionaries are reminded to make this Season especially valuable for the Missions. Decide on ONE LITTLE THING that you are going to do for the missions daily during Lent, and having decided, stick to your decision. You'll be glad at the end of Lent if you have been faithful to your ONE LITTLE SACRIFICE EVERY DAY.

Best wishes from

FATHER JIM.

A priest from China Mission Seminary was privileged to attend the final meeting of the Crusade Unit at St. Brigid's School, Toronto, before Christmas vacation. A splendid programme of missionary items was given by the Crusaders, and short talks given by the three priests of the parish as well as by the visiting priest. We wish success to this enterprising Unit during 1934.

In response to the request for more pictures for the "Rose Garden", I have received a good number, and in due time they will adorn our pages. Especially glad was I to get group snaps from Dornoch, Ont., and St. Thomas School, Sudbury.

Clara Yielle, of 313 Albert Rd., East Windsor, Ont., sent me a long and interesting letter telling of a club formed amongst fourteen of her companions to help the Missions; the members meet twice a week in Clara's home and talk over ways and means of doing their share for the Missions. It was a letter that called for one of the very few "personal" answers that Father Jim finds time to write.

The girls of St. Clare's School, Toronto, made our Missions the object of their Mission Sunday activities, and as a result we received from them a fine spiritual and material offering. That's the spirit, St. Clare's!

Comment is unnecessary on this beautiful letter from Edith Murphy, Crusade Secretary at St. Mary's Academy, South Windsor, Ont. "The students of St. Mary's Academy are deeply interested in your lovely magazine, 'China', which comes every month. We enjoy Father Stringer's and 'Observer's' contributions a great deal. Although we have missions of our own in Basutoland and Japan we will do our utmost to send a little help now and then for the cause of foreign missions in China. Our teacher has told us something about the foreign missions and the great work that is being done to bring poor souls out of the darkness and into the light and kingdom of God. We will ask God to grant you, dear Father, and the Chinese Missions every success, and we hope that you will remember us in your holy masses."

JUST IN TIME

Clara Lang is a new Christian, the wife of a pagan army officer, in whose heart the divine precept of charity has taken deep root. She attends Mass every morning and usually receives Holy Communion during Mass, which means getting up at five o'clock and walking nearly a mile to the church on her little bound feet.

Yesterday morning on her return from Mass as she was nearing her home she found a middle-aged man lying on the street, his face and clothing one mass of sloppy mud and filth —how long he had been lying there in the rain she did not know. He was too sick to stand on his feet, even with her help. Touched with pity, Clara asked several workmen who were passing by to carry the man to her home, thinking only of cleaning up the man and getting him into some clean dry clothes. The workmen bore the man to her home as she requested.

In the warm room he soon recovered consciousness sufficiently to understand what she was saying and informed Clara that he had not been feeling well for several days and now felt as though he was going to die. The good Christian woman thereupon spoke to him of life after death and told him in a few simple words the fundamental truths of the Christian religion. She asked: "Do you believe all this?" He answered in the affirmative. She then spoke of the necessity of baptism and asked if he wished to receive the sacrament—again he answered: "Yes".

Feeling that it might be well not to be in too big a hurry about baptizing him, as she was not absolutely sure that he was in danger of death, she told him that as soon as he had gotten better she would bring him to the priest for further instruction before he was baptized. He still insisted that he was going to die; Clara, nevertheless, was doubtful; she did not administer private Baptism.

A few minutes later she left the room to prepare breakfast for her husband who had not yet gotten up. After she had started the rice cooking she returned to the room where her patient lay; she spoke to him, but he did not answer — she called to him in a louder voice and then found that he had again lost consciousness. Clara was frightened and not a little nervous. The thought came: "He seems to be dying; he asked to be baptized: Hurry up! get some water!" She ran into the kitchen, grabbed the first empty receptacle at hand, a gourd dipper, filled it with water and rushed back to baptize the dying man. A few moments later he breathed his last.

And Clara Lang was worried that the Baptism might have been invalid because she had not used holy water. —"Franciscans in China."

DURING LENT—PRAY AND SACRIFICE FOR THE MISSIONS

On several occasions we have recorded the fact that the young missionaries at St. Michael's Academy, Belleville, Ont., have ransomed a Chinese baby. Here's the latest letter from St. Michael's, received at Christmas time. "We are sure you will be pleased to hear we have saved up five dollars to buy another baby, and we want it to be called John Francis after our Pastor. We offer up our prayers, Communions, and Masses for the missionaries. Every Friday afternoon at three o'clock we have a meeting. The President is Nellie Dorian; Vice-President, Phyllis Asseltine, and Treasurer is Jack Kelleher. One day we had a play for our C.C.S.M.C., and Monsignor Nicholson and our Inspector, Mr. Nicholson, were present. Yours truly, Jack Barrett."

Our "Ursuline Buds" from Quebec also remembered us with a gift, and a welcome note remarks that it is a pleasing sight to see all the members of their "Rose Garden" club wearing their badges of the Little Flower. The Ursulines in China and a missionary in the Canadian Northwest are the special objects of their missionary prayers in addition to the Canadian missionaries in Chuchow.

"We read 'China' every month and are impressed by the instructive and interesting articles concerning our zealous Canadian missionaries. We are sending herewith a Spiritual Bouquet and a small material offering as a token of our sincerest appreciation. We hope God will bless your work and prosper you in your temporal and spiritual affairs. Sincerely, Lillian O'Hearn, President, Form 1D, St. Joseph's High School, Toronto."

Lucretia Pepin and her sister Alfreda from Blind River, Ont., sent along their pictures when they asked to be made members of our Club. Lucretia tells me of the formation of a Crusade Unit in her school, of which she has been elected Secretary-Treasurer. You'll find members of the "Rose Garden" always to the fore in missionary activity everywhere.

A Prayer for the Conversion of China

(To be said daily by the members of the "Rose Garden")

O LORD JESUS CHRIST, who didst come on earth to save the souls of men, open now Thy most Sacred Heart in mercy to the people of China, who still sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, and shower Thy graces on them, that they may come to the knowledge of Thy Gospel. Bless also and protect Thy missionaries, and make their work fruitful for Thee of countless souls. —Amen.

(300 days' Indulgence)

With Ecclesiastical Approbation

ZEAL

Our interests and zeal should be as wide as the world. Therefore, let us pray and work for the intentions of Holy Mother Church. All the interests of God will then be the objects of our interest and zeal.

The world is in a sad state because it has neglected God. Pope Pius X of saintly memory has told the world the remedy—"All things must be restored in Christ." If all people and nations would come to the Feet of Our Eucharistic Lord by receiving Holy Communion frequently and making Jesus Hostia their King, then all things would be properly restored.

ANNIE McNEIL,
Halifax, N.S.

The long and newsy letters that come frequently from some of our "pioneer buds" are always a delight to Father Jim. Especially, I wish to thank the following for their regular mail: Alma Chayer, Chiswick, Ont.; Eva LaLumiere, La Fontaine, Ont.; Evangeline Pierce, Bridgeport, N.S.; Frances Cooney, Montreal; Norma Mills, Toronto, and Jack Connors, Kingston, Ont.

Many thanks to the pupils of St. Aloysius School, Sudbury, for a gift of seven dollars received for the missions at Christmas time.

Winnifred Conroy, 901 Fairfield Road, Victoria, B.C., would like to hear from some of the older buds. Winnifred, 18 years old, joined our Club when she heard of it through Patricia Howard, who has since become a Grey Nun in Vancouver. One good friend tells another, and thus the work goes on. Winnifred in her turn got her sister, Lily, to join, as well as a friend, Francis Cownden, 1527 Comosum St., Victoria.

Mary M. Kerr, one of our very staunchest members, writes frequently, and I appreciated Mary's card and gift for the Missions at Christmas.

CHOOSE YOUR PEN-PALS HERE

Often I get letters asking for the names and addresses of members of our Club to whom fellow-members may write. As a rule, I cannot encourage such requests, but I feel that the names appearing monthly in our columns ought to supply pen-pals from widely-scattered sections of the country. Here are some whose names have not yet appeared. They are pupils of Grade 5, Mt. St. Bernard College, Antigonish, N.S.: Nora McKenna, Mary Oicle, Mary Bell MacDougall, Adele MacGibbon, Isabel MacLellan, Anna Duggan, Isabel MacDougall, Zita Cameron, Mabel MacNeil, Sarah Wheten, Mary Rita MacDonald and Rachel Grant. And here are some names supplied by Mary Keeping, Marystown, P.B., Newfoundland: Gladys and Madeline Foster, Winnie Power, Sadie Pittman, Lottie Mullins, Veronica, Sarah, Alice, Mary A., Marie and Bernice Ducey, Rita Smith and Earnestine Pittman. And from Quyon, Que., we have Mildred McCann, Rena Murphy, Stella Murphy and Hilda Brown. Also anxious for pen-pals are: Agnes Ryan, 11 Newton Rd., St. John's, Nfld.; Anita Arsenault, Ira and Eldric Gaudet, Margaret Gerrier, Edna Arsenault, Frances Gallant and Marion Arsenault, all of Summerside, P.E.I.

From the very young—and sometimes from the very old—come letters to Father Jim. In this group of pictures we introduce you to some of our youngest friends. At the extreme left is a swell snap showing Henry Carr Casey, of 348 Simcoe St. N., Oshawa, Ont.; then we have Mary Chafe, of Petty Hr., Nfld., wearing her First Communion veil; next is little Miss Doreen O'Brien, from St. Gregory's School, Oshawa, Ont.; and the curly-headed young lady in the next picture is ten-year-old Marjorie Mulcahy, from Bay Bulls, Nfld., as she appeared when four years old; three years ago Dan McNeil, Steele's Hill, C.B., got his picture taken, and we're glad to present Dan to you now; and the snap at extreme right is of Vivian Goslin, 635 Carnegie Ave., Oshawa, Ont. Vivian is 10 years old now.

DURING LENT—PRAY AND SACRIFICE FOR THE MISSIONS

A MISSIONARY JOURNEY

(Continued from page 27)

light evening. Unknown to them, I watched two little tots, not more than two or three years old, who, when they caught sight of the full moon joined their chubby hands and, kneeling, bowed down to the ground in adoration. When they saw me watching them they scampered off to their home. How sad to be dedicated to idolatory at such an early age! I hope readers of "China" will pray much that we succeed in gathering the rich harvest in this Kinhwa District, which is an ideal Mission from every point of view.

NATIVE CLERGY IN MISSION LANDS.

Rome.—Twenty per cent. of the Catholics of Asia are under native bishops, while it is estimated that 60% of the Catholics are now cared for by native clergy. Missiographists point out that, while in many regions the episcopacy is as yet strongly Western, a first generation of native clergy has now taken charge of the majority of the faithful under the tutelage of the foreign clergy.

In India this indigenous clergy number 2,000, while foreign priests are 1,500. Of the 3,500,000 Catholics, 30%, or over a million, are under Indian bishops, while approximately another million faithful are cared for by Indian priests in territories with clergy of mixed nationality.

In Indo-china, native priests total 1,100 and Western priests 360. Phat-diem, of which Bishop Tong will be coadjutor, counts but 8% of the 1,300,000 Catholics of the country, but it is estimated that 800,000 of these Catholics are cared for by Annamese clergy.

China has 1,420 native priests and 1,980 foreign priests. In the 19 ecclesiastical divisions under Chinese ordinaries the Catholics approach 450,000, while it is calculated that another million of the 2,500,000 faithful of the country are in stations manned by Chinese clergy.

Japan, with 62 native priests and 222 foreign, has a single diocese, Nagasaki, under a Japanese bishop, containing two-thirds of the 100,000 Catholics of the country. Korea has 64 native priests and 81 foreign; it is estimated that 40,000 of the 100,000 faithful are in care of Koreans.—Fides.

VICTIMS.

Father D'Elia writes in the China Year Book: "From an exhaustive inquiry which we have personally conducted among all the heads of the Catholic Missions in China, it results that, during the years 1912-1932, outside of the large number of Chinese Catholics who had often so much to suffer, there were as many as 47 Catholic Missionaries who were slain (to them should be added Father Stimpfl, O.F.M., Tyrolese, killed on March 25th, 1933, in Yungchow, Hunan Province) by Communists, brigands and other outlaws, and at least 320 who were captured by the same, the duration of their captivity varying from a few hours to three years. Most of the victims are priests (204 captured and 39 killed), while others are Vicars or Prefects Apostolic (9 captured and 4 killed), Mission or Religious Superiors (5 captured), Seminarians (28 captured and four killed), Lay Brothers (9 captured), and Sisters (65 captured). As for nationality, the highest percentage of both captured and killed is held by the Chinese (105 captured and 17 killed), while the Italians come next for the captured (52), and Belgians for the killed (10).

The Chinese secular clergy has the highest percentage for both the captured (89) and the killed (16), thus splendidly bespeaking the heroism of the indigenous Church, which is second to none in this martyrology.—Fides.

A LETTER FROM YOU

Let your resolutions for Lent include one to do something for the Missions. We depend on our daily mail for the wherewithal to keep our work going. Join the number of our good friends who write us and help us so much.

Antigonish, N.S.—"I am sure that your priests are in need of some help, so I will send them all I can spare. I cannot do much for anybody; I am a widow all alone and not very well. I am sending you two dollars."

Detroit, Mich. — "Enclosed please find cheque for five dollars. Two dollars for my subscription to 'China', and the balance is stringless. I was wondering how often you looked at this old account and said 'hopeless'."

Monklands, Ont.—"I am sending you a little offering in thanksgiving that my two daughters have been able to find work. I ask your prayers for my family and myself. I wish you every success."

Toronto, Ont.—"I am enclosing one dollar for the Chinese Missions. Sorry I can't spare more just now, but will remember you again. I enjoy reading 'China' and find it most interesting. I am pleased to know our missionaries are doing such wonderful work among our pagan brethren. Wishing them every success, and asking to be remembered in your prayers."

Ottawa, Ont.—"I promised to send two dollars to the China Mission Seminary in return for a favor granted. You may use the money in any way you wish. Please pray for my intention."

Mabou, N.S.—"Enclosed please find money order for two dollars. Please renew my subscription to 'China' for one year, and give $1.50 to the Building Fund."

Regina, Sask.—"In spite of many pressing needs at home you are very welcome to the enclosed little gift. We enjoy 'China' immensely, and wish you every success."

Father Arthur Venadam, Pomquet, N.S., is caught by the camera during a restful period at the mission residence in Lishui, China.

DURING LENT—PRAY AND SACRIFICE FOR THE MISSIONS

Murphy had been careless in handling the blasting powder in the quarry, and Duffy had been deputed to break the news gently to the widow.

"Mrs Murphy," said he, "isn't it to-day the fellow calls for the weekly payment for Murphy's life insurance?"

"It is," answered Mrs. Murphy.

"Well, now, a word in your ear," said Duffy. "Sure ye can snap your finger at the fellow to-day."

"Do you believe in the survival of the fittest?"

"I don't believe in the survival of anybody. I am an undertaker."

A Scotch farmer had agreed to deliver twenty hens to the local market. Only nineteen, however, were sent. and it was almost evening before the twentieth bird was brought in by the farmer.

"Man," said the butcher, "you're late with this one."

"Aye," agreed the other, "but, ye see, she didna' lay until this afternoon."

One bright sunny afternoon Mr. Wood met Mr. Stone and after greeting him, said: "How is Mrs. Stone and all the little pebbles?"

Mr. Stone answered: "Fine, and how is Mrs. Wood and all the little splinters?"

Jack: "Can you tell me why a watchdog is smaller in the morning that at night?"

Bill: "No—why?"

Jack: "Because he is let out at night and taken in in the morning."

First Pickpocket: "Why are you reading a fashion paper, Bill?"

Second Pickpocket: "Well, if we are to do well in our profession, we must know where pockets are worn."

Poetic Wife: "Far below I can see a long white road stretching out like a paper ribbon back to our hotel."

Unpoetic Husband: "That must be the hotel bill overtaking us.

Mrs. Hodge—"What a funny name Alias is to be sure. I read of so many of that name in the paper nowadays."

Mr. Hodge—"Yes, and they all seem to go to the bad, somehow."

Proud Mother (exhibiting baby)—"Don't you see the resemblance? Look at our faces side by side."

Her Friend—"Nothing could be plainer."

"Ah shuah does pity you," said a colored pugilist to his opponent, as they squared off. "Ah was born with boxin' gloves on."

"Maybe you was," retorted the other, "and Ah reckon you's going to die the same way."

Dr. Strongheart gazed into his eyes. "You say you have trouble with the eye?" he said. "But there's something more. On looking at it, I see signs of liver trouble, of anemia and I fear of chronic nervous affection."

"Look at the other eye, doctor" said the patient. "That is my glass eye."

Mary: "I've just received a letter from my brother in America. He's gone into the hold-up business."

Joan: "Good gracious, has he turned gangster?"

Mary: "No, he's selling sock suspenders."

Teacher: "Now, Jimmy, what happened when the cow jumped over the moon?"

Jimmy: "Somebody got an idea for vanishing cream."

Foreman: "You must not smoke at work."

Laborer: "Who's working?"

The farmer met one of his new employes coming toward the house in a dripping condition.

"Say, Bill," he said, "what 'ave you been a-doin' of?"

"Oh," was the reply, "I've just been 'aving a game of cricket wi' the old bull by the pond. I won the toss and went in first."

Wife: "But I enclosed a small file in that last pie I sent you, Bert."

Convict: "That's your blinkin' pastry again, Liz. I didn't notice it!"—Humorist.

Teacher: "Yes, Johnny, Lapland is rather thinly populated."

Johnny: "How many Lapps to the mile, teacher?"—Boston Transcript.

Two Irish women were discussing a railroad accident. One asked the other if any were killed in the terrible crash. She replied, "Shure, twinty-sivin Oitalians and wan Irishman," whereupon Mrs. Dooley, with a long sigh, came back with, "Oh, the pore feller."

"And you say she's forty-five. How well she carries her years."

"M'm. She drops a few now and again."

HAVE YOU TRIED THIS RECIPE?

A June bride asked her husband to copy the radio cooking recipe one morning. The husband did his best but got two stations at once — one broadcasting the morning exercises and the other the recipes. THIS IS WHAT HE GOT:

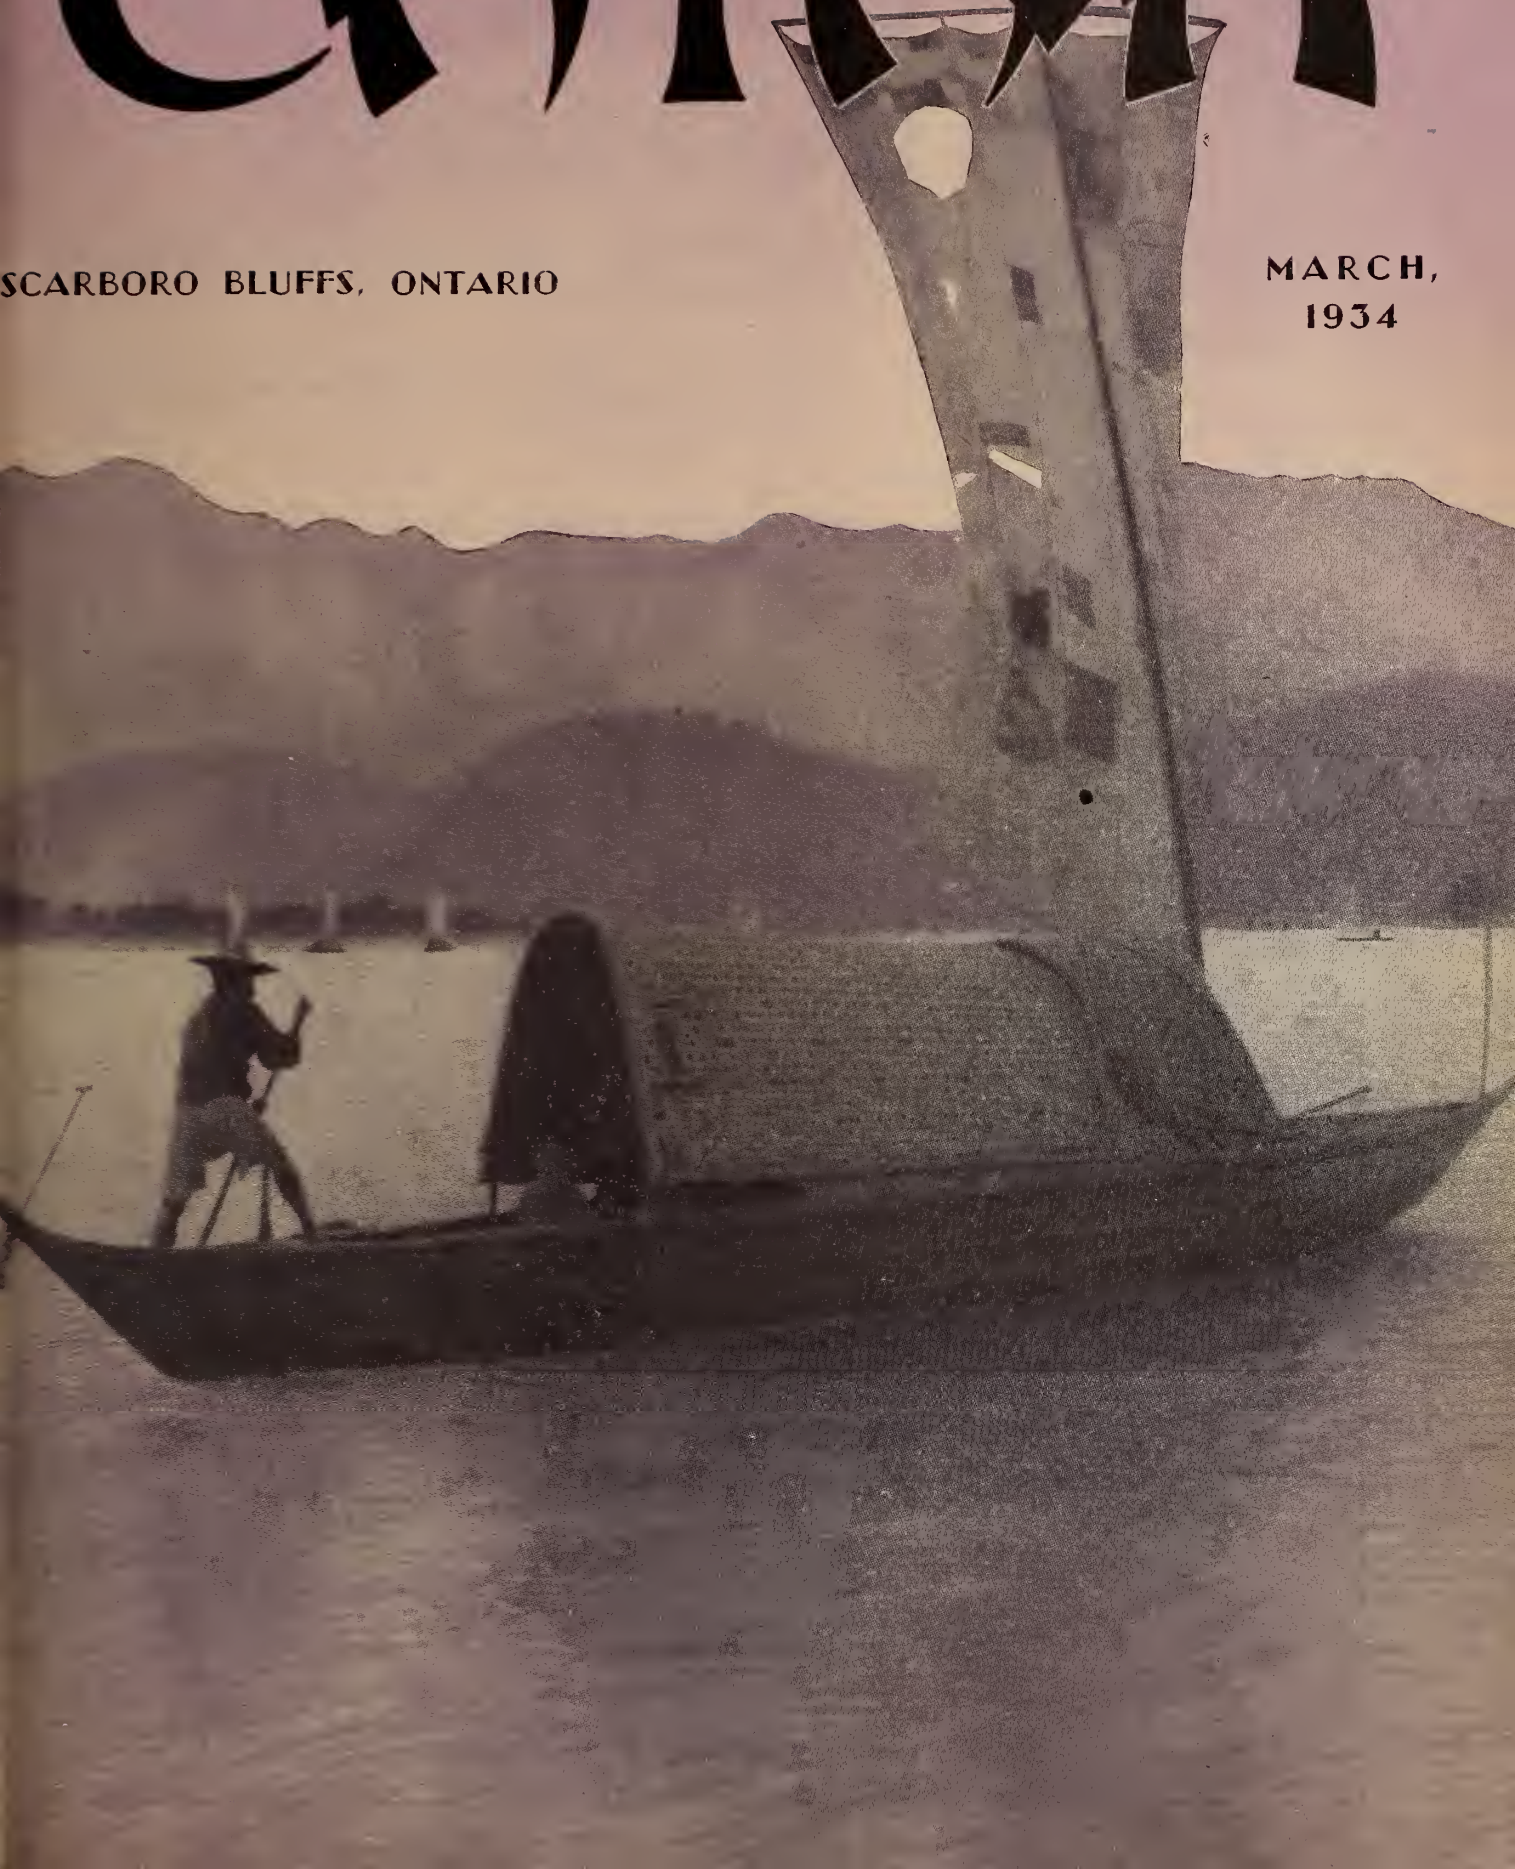
Hands on hips, place one cup of flour on the shoulder, raise knees and depress toes and wash thoroughly in one-half can of milk. In four counts raise and lower the legs and mash two hard-boiled eggs in a sieve. Repeat six times. Inhale one-half teaspoonful of baking powder and one cup of flour. Breathe naturally. Exhale and sift. Attention. Jump to a squatting position and bend the whites of three eggs backward and forward over the head and in four counts make a stiff dough that will stretch at the waist. Lie flat on the floor and roll into a marble the size of a walnut. Hop to a standstill and boil in water to a gallop afterwards. In ten minutes remove from the fire and dry with a towel. Breathe naturally and dress in warm flannels and serve with fish soup.

"Lost, an umbrella, belonging to a gentleman with a curiously carved ivory head"; "House wanted, suitable for small family that has been recently papered and painted"; "Tenders invited for the erection of a school large enough to accommodate 2,000 scholars four storeys high"; "Young man wanted to take charge of horses with a religious turn of mind"; "Nurse wanted in a small gentleman's family"; "For sale, a pony suitable for a lady without vicious habits and quiet in harness"; "Wanted, a mahogany child's chair"; "Overlooker wanted for 5,000 sheep that can speak Spanish."

Young Man: "Why do you keep a parrot?"

Very Old Man: "Because I like to hear it talk. The parrot is the only creature gifted with the power of speech that is content to repeat just what it hears without trying to make a long story of it."

Problems Can be Solved by



CATHOLIC WILLS

For Mission Needs

The instinct is strong to "keep what we have". Yet when death summons we must go to the grave "clutching in our dead hands only that which we have given away". If you feel you cannot share your earthly possessions now with God, perhaps you will be mindful of Him and His Missions when drawing up your last will. You can be sure that what you leave to carry on Catholic Mission work will merit a blessing on your soul, and cause your name to be held in benediction long after you are dead. In China, our priests need funds for new chapels, for new schools, for new homes, and for payment of salaries to catechists. In Canada, our Seminary needs support for the training of young apostles and for the maintenance of their home. Donations to our Burse Fund and our Building Fund are our greatest present needs. Think of our Mission work when making, or changing, your last will. Here's how you can do it; insert this clause in your will:

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO, THE SUM OF .....

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

MARCH,
1934

CHINA

Subscribers are Requested to Read the Following Very Carefully

The subscription price to CHINA is fifty cents a year. Subscribers who do not receive the magazine regularly will confer a favor by notifying us.

EXPIRY DATE

The date to which your subscription is paid up is marked on your address label.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Do not fail to inform us promptly if at any time you change your address. In doing so, please send us your old as well as your new address.

DUPLICATE COPIES

If you are receiving two copies of CHINA, and have subscribed for only one, kindly let us know.

SENDING SUBSCRIPTIONS

In sending your subscription to CHINA, be sure to state WHETHER IT IS A RENEWAL OR A NEW SUBSCRIPTION.

MRS. OR MISS

Very often we do not know which to put on our stencil, as there is nothing to indicate which it should be. Will our lady friends kindly make this clear.

ATTENTION TO THE ABOVE DETAILS WILL BE GREATLY APPRECIATED.

REMITTANCES

Money should be sent by Post Office or Express Money Orders, Drafts or Registered Letters to ensure safe delivery. All such orders may be made payable to:

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

---------- You can use the following coupon ----------

"CHINA"
St. F. X. Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Dear Fathers:—

Enclosed find $..... as a subscription to "China" for ..... years.

Name ..... Name .....

Address ..... Address .....

....

(If you have changed your address, please give us the OLD address as well as the NEW one)

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McNeil, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, P.A.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 27,000

Entered as second class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XV. MARCH, 1934 No. 3

THE SISTERS IN CHINA

In almost every well-established parish in this country a familiar sight is the religious habit of the Sisters who teach in the parochial school. Nuns have become so much a part of well-regulated parish life that our Catholic people can scarcely imagine their absence. Certainly, pastors will readily admit that the most influential agency in assisting the spiritual uplift of their parishes is the presence of Sisters in the schools. The influence of the Sisters goes out beyond the schoolroom; it reaches the homes from which come the young boys and girls who are being solidly prepared for life by the teachings and example of virgins consecrated to a life of service for God.

* * *

In the distant future there may come the time when, please God, parishes in pagan countries such as China will become familiar with the work of Sisters even as many of our Canadian parishes. So far as the missions in China are concerned this blessing has been up to now more or less restricted to the larger centres of population in cities and towns. For quite a number of years the big cities of China have profited by the ministrations of Sisters engaged in school, dispensary and hospital work, but in these later times the work of the Sisters has providentially been extended to the smaller mission centres.

* * *

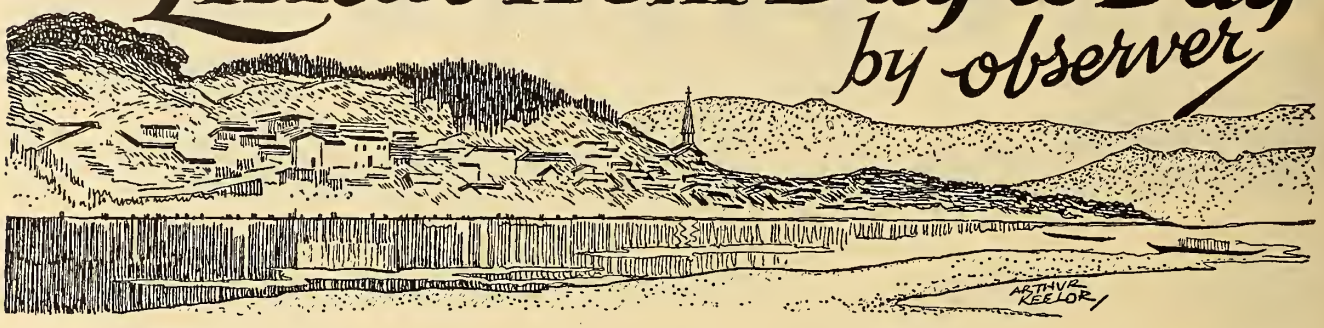
There is a reason for the apparent restriction of Sisters to the larger centres. At no time has China been a safe place for Nuns to carry on their work without fear of disturbance. The constant state of turmoil in that unhappy country rendered it unwise for Mission Superiors to invite Religious Communities of Women to take up residence in places far removed from the Treaty Ports, and consequently exposed to many dangers in case of military or civil uprisings. The solution of the problem is the development of a Native Sisterhood, and this oft-expressed idea of the Church is being put into execution nowadays with wonderful results. China is being slowly but surely converted, and thousands of native Sisters are being trained as members of foreign and of native Communities.

* * *

It is the dream of every missionary that his field of labor may one day be blessed by the ministrations of Sisters. They are so necessary to consolidate the gains made through his own ministerial work. The establishment of schools, the giving of religious instructions in these schools, the opening of small hospitals or dispensaries, the conducting of catechumenates for women—all of these features of mission life could be maintained so much more easily and effectively if only there were Sisters to aid. Progress in every direction is more definitely assured when the gentle hand of some Sister is there to continue to guide and guard the fruits of the missionary's labors.

* * *

Our own Canadian missionaries in Chuchow have been most fortunate indeed in having the assistance of Sisters. Although only a young mission field, as missions are reckoned, for more than four years Chuchow has witnessed the marvelous effects of the presence of the Grey Nuns of the Immaculate Conception from Pembroke, Ontario. Time and time again the pages of "CHINA" have recounted incidents redounding to the glory and credit of their heroic lives, and bearing testimony to their worth as missionaries in the truest sense of the word. For the first time, we are privileged this month to publish an account of their activities as related by the Sisters themselves. Only after much persuasion were they prevailed on to give to our readers a first hand account of some of their experiences, and as a result we have on pages 40-42 of this issue an unforgettable record of just what life in China means to our missionary Sisters. And we are happy to state that the April "CHINA" will continue the story of their experiences.



* * *

As you read of these "Angels of Mercy in Pagan China", try to imagine yourself in their places. Transport yourself from your comfortable home surroundings and visit the hovels of the wretched people to whom these valiant women minister; go with them to the bedsides of pagans dying with meningitis, cholera, or malaria; stay with them as they dress nauseating sores on the bodies of poverty-stricken human beings; watch them as they sometimes furtively administer baptism

(Continued on page 45)

Lishui from Day to Day

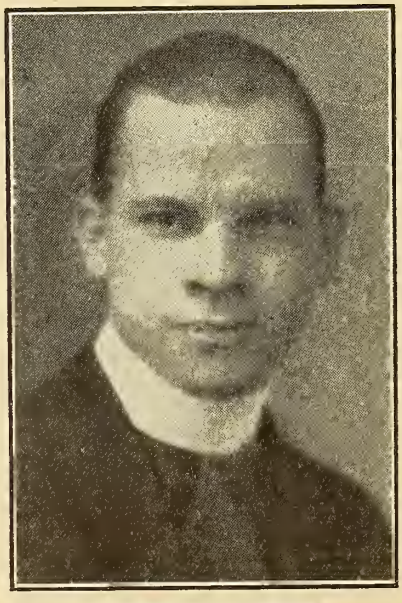
by observer

WE are in Shanghai. And today there is a 2,000 ft. ceiling with visibility of two miles, and the weather report from Zikawei Observatory says all clear over Chekiang. Yes, today a plane might be able to get from Shanghai to Lishui and back. Capt. Bond, of the Lunghua airdrome, tells us that they might be able to get by on a 2,000 ft. ceiling, but that some of our mountains down there hit 3,000 ft.

* * * *

What's it all about, you ask, this talk about aeroplanes and "ceilings" and visibility? What's all that got to do with the prosaic existence of missionaaries among the mountains of Chekiang. A great deal, we answer. And had you been here during the past few hectic days you would have agreed. For back in Lishui Fr. McNabb was lying at death's door with pneumonia, and it seemed that the only hope of saving his life was to get a plane and doctor through and have him brought to hospital in Shanghai.

* * * *



That's all over now. A specially chartered plane did make the attempt, only to be forced back by impossible weather. And a Lishui message informs us that the patient is now improving and out of danger. He was anointed last week. Toxemia had set in, almost on the stage of coma, and you know what that means.

* * * *

But suppose we begin at the beginning and tell you our little story of a grim battle for life with a dread disease, far away from hospitals and modern equipment, a story of the heroism and devotion of the Grey Sisters in Chuchow. It was on Christmas Eve that Fr. McNab contracted pneumonia, and he was doing well until toxemia developed. Happily, two of the little Community of Grey Sisters are thoroughly trained nurses, and all through his serious illness they remained at his bedside night and day.

* * * *

The first intimation we had of his serious condition was the arrival of a wire from Lishui: "McNabb very sick, flu. One hundred and three for six days." And, the same evening, another: "McNabb dangerous; pneumonia. Seminary not notified. If doctor could help, send him via Kinhwa." We immediately consulted several medical men in Shanghai, but they found it hard to leave their practice for the time required to attend the case. Besides, they told us, if it is a question of pneumonia and you have two trained nurses, they can do about as much as any doctor. Still not satisfied, we telegraphed Hangchow and Wenchow, but from both places came the answer that no doctor could go.

FATHER WM. McNABB

Then came the message telling of complications and another urgent appeal for a doctor. What was to be done? "Have you tried Dr. O'Hara?" a friend asked. "I'm sure he will go." We did try Dr. O'Hara and asked him if he would make the trip by aeroplane. He cheerfully consented, and from the contents of the last message advised that Fr. McNabb be removed to hospital immediately. We phoned Capt. Bond at Lunghua, and he told us that a plane was available, but that, owing to the Fukien hostilities, it would be absolutely necessary to get permission of the military authorities to land in Lishui. He hoped to be able to take off next morning at 8.30.

* * * *

As events turned out, it was well that we had sent that message to Wenchow. For while we were still negotiating for the plane, the good Sisters of Charity there, knowing only of our failure to obtain a doctor, immediately despatched a special courier over the mountain road, carrying with him some of the precious dienol serum. Our own Sisters now tell us that it was this serum that saved Fr. McNabb's life after they had all despaired of his recovery.

* * * *

Next morning, at 8 o'clock, we were at the air field. The pilots were somewhat sceptical about their chances of getting through. Chekiang weather report showed poor visibility and a 750-foot ceiling, and a few weeks before, in just such weather, a huge W. Sikorsky amphibian, on its trial run to Canton, had crashed on the rocks of Chusan island.

* * * *

But they would try, for it was a matter of life and death. The plane had been specially prepared. Two seats had been removed to make place for a bed. Dr. O'Hara was taking an oxygen cylinder, and the flying job was in the hands of their two best American pilots, one an ex-war aviator who had been twice decorated for conspicuous bravery in the air. "It's a tough assignment," said Captain Bond, as he glanced at the last-minute weather report over our district. "But rest assured that if anybody can get through, those two boys will." It was with mingled feelings that we watched Dr. O'Hara climb aboard. And as the plane gathered speed down the runway and finally rose gracefully into the air we could but mutter a silent prayer that they would arrive, and that it wouldn't be too late.

* * * *

Two hundred and fifty miles to Lishnui. About three hours! We headed back to Shanghai, realizing that we should very soon know. As we passed the main streets a special heading caught our eye at the various newsstands. The aeroplane venture had been singled out as the most interesting news item of the day, and almost at every corner we were greeted by the sign in huge green block letters, "AIR TRIP TO SAVE PRIEST". The story was spread across the front page of the North China Daily News, and it gripped the imagination of Shanghai.

* * * *

"Plane left 8.30," we wired Lishui; "arrival uncertain owing hopeless weather." The Mayor there had provided a guard of thirty soldiers and twenty policemen, fully armed. Preparations had been made to have Fr. McNabb placed on board at once, and if all went well, he would be in Shanghai hospital by 2.30 p.m. The trip, by our ordinary means of travel, requires from five to seven days.

* * * *

Three hours passed; three hours and a half, and then a phone call. It was from Dr. O'Hara. He told us that they had landed at Hangchow en route; had been advised there by the air pilots to give up the trip, but they had still pushed on to within about 50 miles of Lishui, only to have further progress barred by impenetrable ranges of mountains reaching high above the cloudy "ceiling". It would have been suicidal to go on, so there was nothing for it but to return to Shanghai. They would try again, as soon as the weather lifted.

* * * *

There was nothing for it but to wait—and pray. A cable had already been sent to the Seminary. Special prayers were being offered, we knew, by friends at home as well as many friends in Shanghai, and, plane or no plane, Providence would save our youthful missionary if it were for the best. We could but do our little human best and leave the rest in His hands. Meanwhile, step by step, over long miles of cobblestone mountain road and along the winding banks of the Wenchow River a poor Chinese coolie was plodding his weary way to distant Chuchow. He carried that precious little package of serum, and he arrived at our mission residence when all had given up hope.

* * * *

The patient was almost in coma when the Sisters, as a last desperate measure, feverishly opened that little packet and gave the first injection. The results were almost miraculous. While we were still bemoaning our failure from Shanghai a message of hope came over the wires: "Dienol injections wonderful. Patient improving." Since then message has followed message, all telling of gradual improvement. Fr. McNabb is now well on the road to recovery, and the Sisters give all credit to that little packet of serum. They say nothing, of course, of their own heroic efforts lasting over two anxious weeks, during which a nurse was always at his bedside.

* * * *

We avail of this occasion to express our deep and lasting gratitude to Dr. O'Hara and Capt. Bond, who did everything humanly possible to reach Lishui; to our good friends, the Sisters of Charity at Wenchow, whose prompt and thoughtful action brought that precious serum in the nick of time. And, need we add, that now more than ever we have reason to thank God for the little Community of Grey Sisters in Chuchow.

Some who Love Missions and who know their great need of financial assistance have had the idea of making

Their Last Will

a proof of life-long interest in the work of saving pagan souls in China.

MAY WE SUGGEST THIS AS A TITLE to be included in a Catholic Will?

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.
for the education of young men for the Chinese missions.

TRY IT!

As Lent occupies our attention, we probably welcome the opportunity of getting in closer touch with Heaven. The question is, "How shall we do it?" "What are we doing this Lent?" Abstinence from sweets, from entertainments, from movies? Well and good, but let us have something new, something different and vitally consequential to ourselves and to others; something that will grow and reach millions of our fellow-beings, specially those who have never heard of God, who have never knelt down to ask His blessings, to praise Him, or to ask His love and forgiveness.

Let our Lent be a concentrated effort to keep in touch with God by frequent acts of self-denial and by the frequent use of ejaculatory prayer. These require but a moment, and yet they will reach millions of people. Interrupting other thoughts to say, "My Jesus, mercy!" will help the dying; saying, "Thy kingdom come!" during a moment's visit to the Blessed Sacrament will reach the distant missioner and his people; waiting a minute before beginning our meals or the taking of a less comfortable position will cause "Mary, our Hope" to pity some poor pagan or infidel; and "O Sacred Heart of Jesus. I trust in Thee" will bring the grace of conversion to some sinner. And so on down the list of countless needy souls. We shall touch the Heart of Christ by our aspirations and by our acts of self-denial; we shall cancel our debt of sin, heap up treasures of grace, and come forth from Lent holier, and happier. Try it!

—"The Bugle Call."

A LETTER from FATHER JOHN McDONALD

OUR PARISH of Tsingtien is the first in Chuchow Prefecture. Father Gignac and myself like to think it is first in many ways, but certainly it is so geographically. Whether entering our district from Wenchow or from Shanghai, Tsingtien is "first" port of call. And we are glad of that, for it gives us an opportunity of being hosts to our brother priests from time to time as they have occasion to go through to or from Wenchow or Shanghai. Being but a day's journey downstream from Lishui, our priests must either pass the night under our roof or else sleep in the river boat on which they make their journey.

* * * *

Thus it happens that since we returned from Retreat last September our humble home here has been made cheerful by visits from many of our priests from other mission stations. Although usually one of us is away on mission trips of some sort or other, our visitors have been made as comfortable as possible, considering what comforts are ours to offer them. In the past few months it has been my good fortune to be "at home" when Monsignor McGrath, Fathers Serra, Amyot, Stringer and Beal were passing through on various occasions. Need I say how welcome they were, and what a pleasant few hours we passed in "swapping news" of events big and little. In China, one appreciates these "calls" by fellow-missionaries; it means such a pleasant interruption of the monotonous daily round.

* * * *

At Tsingtien we cannot boast of the pleasing sight of a shining cross atop a comfortable church. No such "luxury" graces the landscape here to serve as a guiding sign to the thousands of poor people who shuffle along their weary way from day to day emersed in the darkness of paganism. But there are times when we are mightily consoled by the proofs of devotion on the part of our Christians. The Christmas season just passed was such an occasion. It was without doubt the happiest of my three Christmas seasons spent in China. Absent, of course, were those outward signs which we naturally associate with that great Feast at home, but there was a touch of them in the mail at Christmas, and in the several parcels which helped to make the time enjoyable here.

To a missionary, Christmas accentuates the problems that face him. Think as one may of the churches in Christian lands filled to overflowing for the Midnight Masses, still there persists the reality of conditions in his own surroundings. There remains the thought of the many thousands of souls for whom the Christmas season has no meaning whatsoever. In other words, while we are kneeling in adoration before the Infant Jesus we know of others not a hundred yards distant who are bowing in adoration before mere idols of clay, seeking from their powerless gods the favours which their poor pagan souls so ardently crave.

* * * *

But there is a consoling side to the problem. Thanks be to God there are some, though relatively few in number, who have accepted the grace to renounce their idols and embrace the Truth which gives light and comfort to their souls. We were blessed and extremely happy this year to have 180 Christians present at Tsingtien for the Midnight Mass and the services on Christmas Day. It was a problem to find room for many of them. Our little upstairs chapel wasn't equal to the task. As I feared, some of the congregation succeeded in "breaking through" the floor, which was also the ceiling of my room beneath.

A goodly number of these Christians had walked six or seven miles over the mountains in order to be present for Christmas Mass. Not having relatives or friends with whom they might stay for the night, they brought their own beds (a straw mat and home-made blanket) and were glad of the shelter provided in the mission compound. Truly a striking similarity to the Evangelist's description of that first Holy Night in Bethlehem, in memory of which these good people had come so far to receive Holy Communion.

Father McDonald tells us that Skippy, his dog, is the pride of Tsingtien.

* * * *

Incidentally I might also mention in passing the all too evident fact of the great and urgent need we have for a church here in Tsingtien, to accommodate our Christians, who, we are very glad to say, are increasing year by year. At present, besides the mission house, which includes the chapel, we have only a flimsy wooden structure for a kitchen and servants' quarters, and now this year, since our fondest hopes of having a little school have taken form, this building also includes a small school room for twelve little Chinese fellows who come every day to learn the three R's and the prayers and truths of the good God Who created them. Of these twelve only two are baptized, as they are the only ones having at least one Christian parent, but we hope to baptize the others before many years.

As the present mission property is sufficiently large enough, and considering the real need we have for a church, it is needless to say our constant hope and prayer is that some of our good and charitable friends at home will receive the holy inspiration to come to our assistance in building a small church and school for the glory of God and the education of the Chinese children.

WORSHIPPING CHINA'S GODS

By

REV. J. L. BEAL

THERE WAS considerable excitement a few days ago outside the north gate of Sungyang when work began on the new motor road which will connect us with Lishui. My boy and I strolled out that way to see how things were shaping up. The scene of action was in front of the famous Ta Ba Temple. The Director of Roads was talking and gesticulating in an excited manner, proclaiming to all and sundry that he was empowered to put the road where he thought best, and intimating that the Si Da, or open-air stage adjoining the temple, had to be demolished. One of the generous donors to the project (who also liked his theatricals) asked to have the discussion postponed for a few days till other surveyors could be consulted. His wish was granted, and the workmen departed.

* * * *

The picture on this page shows the entrance to one of the noted temples of Sungyang, the Temple Ta Ba Miao, palatial residence of the gods. On the right and left respectively of the temple entrance prominent places are given to Chien Li Yen (literally, one thousand mile eyes or telescope) and Shuing Fang Erl (hears everything). These "gods" are constructed to live up to their high-sounding names. Chien Li Yen is a dark graven figure with eyes centered in the palm of the hands. This location of the optical organs is, of course, to help him see all things in the city. Shuing Fang Erl is more interested in hearing all things—good and bad—so he has his ears located in the palms of his hands.

* * * *

While we were in front of the temple we noticed two worshippers approach bearing the usual basket of food to be offered to the gods. In that basket there would be chicken, bean-curd, macaroni, rice, and candles and josh-sticks of incense. More than likely these people were come to ask the help of their favourite idols to obtain a son in their family, and to make the usual offering to Buddha. The food is prepared at home, and the sticks of incense, candles, brown paper, and fire-crackers are secured en route to the temple. And now let's have a look at these worshippers and see what use they make of their offerings.

Father Morrison, Pastor of Sungyang, standing at the entrance to the famous Ta Ba Miao Temple.

Entering the temple, they place their things on a long narrow table in front of Buddha. Candles are lighted and placed before chosen idols. Those reputed to have great authority in granting favours receive two candles; other less powerful deities get only one. Each idol is honoured by placing before them three lighted josh-sticks and giving the usual kow-tow, or profound bow. Several sheets of brown paper are burned in front of each set of images. These things are in the nature of preliminaries to stir up the favour and goodwill of Buddha.

On the sedilla in front of Buddha rests a bamboo case containing chientz, or scrolls, with writing upon them; some bear numbers, others carry written instructions. The bamboo case with the scrolls in it is passed three times to the right, then to the left around the burning josh-sticks in front of Buddha. Then the supplicant, using a Tien Tz (kneeling mat), bows down and begins to shake the case till a scroll falls out. This is then taken immediately to the manager of the temple to be read. If it contains a number only, the master of the temple consults a book under a corresponding number. The "translation" of the number is then torn from the book and handed over to the worshipper on the payment of a small fee. The key to the number is an "instruction" to purchase, perhaps, five pounds of candles or ten measures of oil and present them as a gift to the temple. On this particular occasion the lady we were watching seemed to be very pleased with her "instructions", and lost no time in settling things with the temple manager, certain that her expected favours would be granted. She then started to make the rounds once more on her knees before the idols, thanking them for hearing her request. A long string of fire-crackers was then set off in honor of all the gods—a polite way of bidding a friendly goodbye.

* * * *

The master of the temple usually beats the temple drum as soon as the food-offering is laid on the long narrow table. Then he rings a large bell with a battering ram affair to call the gods to the temple to take possession of the images which represent them.

The temple treasury is sure of a generous gift if a son is born to a supplicant within a year. An acceptable gift is a pig's head. More wealthy worshippers make an offering of a whole hog. Often have I seen coolies bearing a pig trussed upon a long pole; flute and drums announced the bearing of the offering. And, incidentally, the temple assistants live well while the pork lasts. It seems useless to try to persuade some of these old people that it is all a fake. "We must honor our gods; we do not know your foreign God"—these are the responses we often hear.

* * * *

Some time ago I tried to make contact with one of the temple priests through the medium of a middleman, but without success. The philosophical remark of my middleman was: "Why do you try to persuade this priest, who has spent over thirty years in this profession, to give it up and become a beggar? He earns his rice by interpreting the mind of the gods for the people. He knows it is all false and a huge deception, but he is sure of his livelihood while he stays on the job."

Angels of Mer

EXPERIENCES

MONOTONY is a word not found in the vocabulary of a Mission Sister; there is no place for it. The daily round of duties never wears the garb of routine because every day brings something new. One precious occupation confided to nearly all Sisters in foreign lands is the care of the sick—young and old—at home, in dispensaries, temples and streets. This work is one which calls for the tenderest charity, sympathy and patience—yet leaves no entrance for weariness or routine.

PRACTICALLY all our time is devoted to the sick, and, of late, sick-calls have become quite numerous. It is while out amongst the people that we get an insight into life—I mean, life, as the Chinese see it. During any hour of the day you may find us in rickshaws, rumbling over cobblestone streets to the homes of those who need us. Owing to the small number of Christian families, it is not surprising that most of our calls are to the home of pagans. And it is here especially that we find how much has yet to be done before the Reign of Christ begins in China.

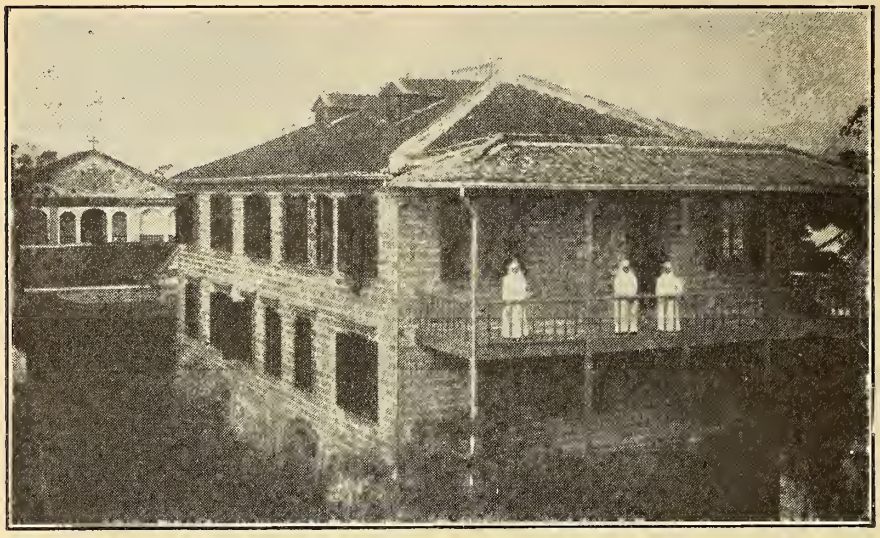
A SHORT time ago we received an urgent request to visit a home nearby, and we immediately set out to the stricken patient. As we neared the house, weird sounds of human voices and brass or tin pans reached our ears. On entering, we found a young boy in a very serious condition. All Chinese medicine had been applied, but to no avail. As the child grew worse, the distracted parents had recourse (as all pagans do) to the spirits to cure their son. It was in the midst of this pagan ceremony that we arrived. Placed before the gods was a table on which fourteen small bowls had been set. Each contained some fond delicacy—a gift to appease the anger of the gods. It was around this table that the elders of the family grouped to try, I presume, by their wailing and petitioning, to coax the spirits to dine. The boy, who was afflicted with spinal meningitis, was also subject to the pagan customs. Resting comfortably on his chest was a living white cock, painted pink for the occasion. The presence of this object was to entice the spirit of evil which was supposed to be in the boy, into the cock and, in return, the spirit of life in the fowl would take up its abode in the patient. This superstitious ceremony had been going on for three days without any result. Then a little bit of white powder hidden away in our medicine kit was brought to the front, and, strange to say, it succeeded where all the spirits had failed. That afternoon he took a turn for the better, and with each visit his chances for complete recovery increased. Now he is back to work with his father. He always has a smile of gratitude for us, as he firmly believes that we enticed the spirits of evil out of him. We heard later that he had swallowed a paper picture of a god, and that the god, in rage at such debasement, had taken his revenge by upsetting the spirit of the boy. This is one case—but there are hundreds of similar ones.

A VICTIM of the same dreaded disease was another boy of twelve years, and we were called to him, too. Here again, superstitious practices were well in force. The sick child was lying on a bamboo mat in a small, dark room. The parents, and relatives to the sixth or tenth degree, surrounded him, each calling, in his or her own weird fashion, the spirits of their ancestors to intercede for the afflicted descendant. A pagan monk was on the scene, too. What his gestures were all about, I am sure I could not tell you, but I suppose they were part of the ceremony. He was certainly not giving much consolation. The little fellow was in a very low condition, and it took time and care to tide him over the crisis, and even then, constant attention for several weeks before the danger had been entirely warded off. Twice daily we visited him where he lay in a room full of earthenware crocks and baskets of dead fish. Perhaps his surroundings account for the length of time he was recuperating.

As the years go by, the labors of our Canadian priests in Chuchow are bearing fruit. The hearts of Fathers Gignac and McDonald last Christmas at Tsingtien. Writing in this issue have of a church building in order that their work may progress unhampered.

n Pagan China

E GREY NUNS
JI



However, he did recover completely, and, in gratitude, his father presented us with gifts—two chickens, four dozen eggs, three dozen oranges, and Chinese nuts. Since then, the once sick boy is seen in Church frequently. Who knows—maybe in time he will join the ranks of the catechumens and later on be admitted to the Church.

MENINGITIS gave us many similar calls, but in all cases, as you would expect, we were not successful. Death claimed many as its victims. When the news of the recovery of the above-mentioned patients spread around, our calls increased daily. Late one afternoon we made our way through the narrow city streets, while a distracted father kept urging the coolies to move faster. When we were only a few doors from the house to which we were hurrying, a strange feeling came over us—why—we were soon to find out. On arriving at the door, we had only to look. There in front of us was a huge camphor wood coffin (and it was not empty—so one of our senses told us). Paper flowers were in profusion, paper hangings, lanterns and josh sticks paid silent tribute to the dead master. Such an array—yet the dust and faded flowers could tell a tale of having hung there some few months at least. The lanterns gave little light, only a dusty sunbeam, which stole in from I don't know where, showed us the door leading to the patient. In feeling our way in the darkness we, unawares, rested our hands on one end of the coffin. It, in itself, was nothing, but inside, as we knew, was the lifeless body of a pagan, a man who knew not God, a man whose life was lived in the impenetrable shadow of darkest paganism, a man who met his God for the first time as his Judge. But, here our thoughts must return, for who are we to be judging, or trying to conceive what happens in the world beyond! It was not a coffin we came to see, but a sick child. A little boy of some six or seven years lay in a critical condition, another victim of spinal meningitis. We did what we could, but the little half-starved frame had not the strength to fight its battle for life, and death found it a ready prey.

dually increasing, and in the picture above we see the faithful converts who brought joy to the tor of Tsingtien (Fr. Gignac) and his assistant (Fr. McDonald), mention the great need they for some charitably disposed reader to become the donor of a church for Tsingtien.

HARDLY had meningitis closed the door which was trapping so many victims, when cholera raised the screen and was there before us, ready to follow suit. We tried to keep ahead of it with the serum, but in many cases it got a pace ahead of us. One case in particular was that of a little girl of four years. She had been sick a week before we were called to see her, and by this time the plague had run its course. The little one was surely nearer to heaven than earth; this fact was evident enough at first sight. What else could one expect? Where were the little cot, the soft mattress or downy baby clothes, necessities of a little tot at home, but not even dreamed of here? Where were the dainties to tempt baby's appetite—where were all the little things a sick child craves for? Wherever all these are hidden, it is certainly not in China. In a small, dark house of mud structure, where sunlight never entered, our patient lay dying. Her bed was only a bare board set on two benches; her coverlet, an old blue padded coat. We knew well that she would not live through the night, so we gave the serum and promised to return later in the day. Returning from the other calls scheduled for the day, we again visited her. This time the child was lying on the floor in an outside room. She was dying, and the parents were aware of the fact. Rather than have her die in the house, she was taken to their outside hut, as death is considered a terrible evil which must be kept as far away as possible. There was only one thing left for us to do, yet how much it was going to mean to the little soul so soon to wing its flight heavenward. We secretly baptized her and then had to leave her in the hands of pagan parents, who would soon call on the spirits. Little they knew that not the powers of earth or hell combined could tear their little one from God.

A rear view of the Convent of the Grey Nuns of the Immaculate Conception at Lishui. In the background is the priests' residence. A street runs between the two buildings.

NOT far from this home another baby lay struggling between earth and heaven. On the previous day, one of the Sisters had baptized it, but as it still clung to life, we went to see it. There was not the slightest hope, yet to pacify the parents, we gave it some medicine. When lifting the child, its coat loosened, and there in a pool of blood on its chest was a dead frog. The father noticed our surprise and immediately removed it. So far as we can make out, the frog, in dying on the little one, would give its spirit to the child and his health and life return. The frog must have bled to death on the little patient, as a small hole had been cut on the child's chest to receive the supposed life-giving blood. Early next day, this little soul sped away to begin life in Heaven. Nor were these two the only ones to steal away in the glory of baptismal innocence. Many, under similar pagan customs and surrounded by the severest poverty, slumbered starward and beyond; a rich reward for their short life of pain and want here awaited them there.

NOT only children, but grown-ups, too, fell victims of this disease which they fear so much. Usually, after a good fight and constant care, there is some chance of recovery. In fact, we record only three deaths among the adults as a result of cholera this year.

SOMETIMES we have real rush calls, and when a Chinese gets a-hurrying—well—there must be a reason. This day it was serious. A woman had taken poison and was, when we arrived, in an agonizing position. A Chinese doctor had preceded us, but being sure of death, he would not treat the patient, as there might be loss of face. We spent three hours trying to remove the poison from her system, and it was no easy task. She was frantic with pain, yet we remarked that at intervals she stared at a young girl and at the same time screamed furiously. The girl in turn answered with a hysterical cry and rushed from the room. Outside, all was in confusion. A crowd had gathered for a "look see", and, as usual, each had a "hear say". Above the drumming voices of the crowd, that of the girl rose and fell alternately in high pitched tones with that of the gruff voice of a seemingly angry man. Several times the girl came crying and stood close to us, only to be recalled by a young man. Then the noise outside increased. From some of the women present we learned that the patient and the young girl were mother and daughter. Both had been quarreling, and as the daughter triumphed, the distracted mother took poison—nothing less than nitric acid. Indeed, the mother was suffering physical pain, but it did not exceed the mental anguish of her repentant daughter. Incessantly she kept asking if her mother would live, and as we could not reassure her, she would plead with us to increase our efforts. Well she knew that, in the eyes of her country people, she was the object of derision and subject to the dictates of an angry father. The mother lived until evening; we were not there to witness her death, nor did we care to be present. What happened to the daughter we never heard, but no doubt she paid dearly for her ill-chosen words. Quite frequently we are called to similar cases, but the poison consumed is seldom as deadly as the above mentioned.

SEEING the conditions in which these poor people eke out their meagre existence, we often wonder what keeps them living at all. Pulled up to shore, quite close to our Convent, is a small bamboo covered sampan—there are many, in fact, but this one is of special interest to us. Small as it is, it is the home of a family of three. At present it harbours a sick mother and child. On our first visit the woman huddled on a bed of straw at one end of the boat, while her husband, in an awkward but tender manner, did his best to keep her comfortable. At his mother's feet, a small boy slept. The mother is quite sick, yet there is no danger so far. In her present state, however, it is hard to say what the result may be. Her life on a sampan is not so pleasant, no indeed; like that of all other women in China, it is one of strenuous labour. She must help her husband in rowing and handling the little craft, up and down the river—walking several times in a day's journey through water two or three feet deep, pulling or pushing the boat as they go. Their only means of earning a livelihood is to transfer baggage from one village to another, and there is not much money in it, either. If she gets over this, her husband promises that he will give her a long rest before commencing again, and when she does begin it will be with less vigour. The little lad was not seriously ill; a few capsules of quinine helped to ward off for the time being the fits of chills and fever, symptoms of the too common disease, malaria.

AT THE SEMINARY

Early in February, following several weeks of class work after return from the Christmas vacation, the mid-year examinations occupied the attention of the Seminarians. As we go to press the results are not yet announced, but "anxiety" as to results does not seem to interfere with the recreation periods of the students. They are making the most of the winter weather in getting some strenuous exercise at their hockey games.

News Items from the Missions

(Supplied by Fides News Service in Rome)

His Excellency Bishop Andrew Defebvre, C.M., of Ningpo, calls attention to the interesting fact that almost everywhere in the mission world the seed of faith takes root very unevenly. In a given region, there are usually spots where Church members quickly become very numerous, and then other areas with graduating proportions of converts down to those points which remain thoroughly sterile.

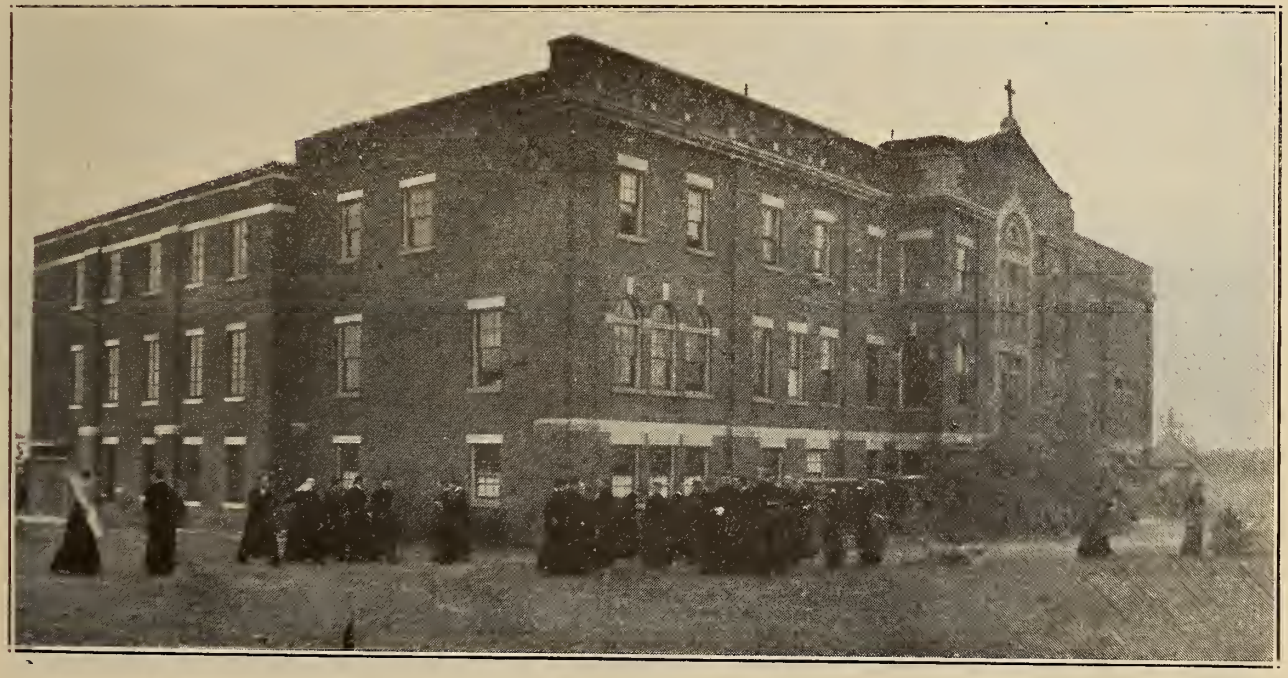
His Excellency gives his Vicariate of Ningpo as an example. The population is 9,206,824 and Catholics are 43,051, a proportion of one to 213. The prefecture of Wenchow, however, within the Vicariate, has a proportion of one Catholic for every 101 non-Catholics. The sub-prefecture of Yungkia, in the prefecture of Wenchow, has an average of one Catholic for every 45 non-Catholics.

Then, three villages of Yungkia have a proportion of one Catholic for every 19 non-Catholics. Finally, in one village of Yungkia, Catholics are one in three of the population.

"When shall we have a general proportion for all China of at least one to 19?" asks His Excellency. The present proportion is approximately one to 160, since Catholics number two and a half millions in a population of 400,000,000.

—Fides.

Father Ernest Jasmin, of the Canadian Missionaries of Pont Viau, has published a book in Chinese which sets forth a system for the writing of the Chinese language from Latin letters. At present an educated Chinese must master 7,000 characters, and while a rich tradition makes the Chinese people proud of their language, nevertheless many today recognize its inconveniences for practical purposes. Father Jasmin awaits with interest the reception which his proposal will receive.



—Fides.

The Catholic community of Tantseshan has hit upon the happy idea of interpreting Catholic Action in terms of coffins. It provides the elderly poor with coffins, the sight of which is consolation for their last hours, and insures fitting funeral rites. A delegation of men and women participate at each funeral, chanting prayers.—Fides.

Some 200 pilgrims of Ichang have commemorated the Centenary of the Redemption by climbing the mountain of Sise, near the mission of Si-sha-ho, to the Calvary on its summit. Many of the women of this region still have the "lily feet" of the days when binding was in vogue, but in the ascent kept pace valiantly with the men. The party sang hymns as they climbed. The Sise Calvary, erected some years ago, appears prominently throughout the surrounding valleys.—Fides.

A pagan iron worker has forged two artistic crosses for the summits of the twin towers of the new cathedral of Idu, which rise 100 feet over this new mission centre, confided to the French Franciscans.—Fides.

A rich pagan of Hengchow has expended $10,000 gold (over $30,000 Mex) on the funeral of his mother. There were over 8,000 persons in the funeral procession, including the city authorities, the school children, over 200 bonzes sounding instruments and chanting prayers, and men carrying enormous banners, dragons, and idols. The highly ornamented coffin was carried by 64 bearers. The Italian Franciscans, missionaries of the territory, speak of the event as a striking demonstration of filial piety.—Fides.

A view of St. Francis Xavier Seminary, showing, at left, the part added last summer. On the ground floor of this new addition is the lecture hall. Students' rooms occupy the second and third storeys. Extending to the rear in similar manner at the western end of the Seminary another new part provides increased space for dining-room and chapel, and, on the third storey, a new library. A donation to our Building Fund would be very welcome.

A VISIT to the MISSIONS of TSINGTIEN

with Father Gignac

Bright and early on the morning of November 23rd I set out from Tsingtien to make the Fall visitation of five of our ten mission stations. I chose the five on the near side of the river in the hope that I would have the visitation completed and be back "at home" when some of our priests were due to be with us on their return from Shanghai. My "baggage" consisted of a folding chapel and bed, and I was assisted by a young man who later proved to be too good a walker for me.

Our first stop was at Lei Zhih, a village thirty li (ten miles) from Tsingtien. Here we passed three days, receiving a hearty welcome from the thirty Christians. The time was well occupied in visiting our converts and giving them instructions. In the evenings, after "rice time", they would come to the chapel to hear a sermon. As many as could do so got in to the chapel, the others having to stand outside the door and look in. Confessions followed the sermon and night prayers. On the second day I prepared a few women for baptism, and the next day administered the Sacrament to those who passed the tests. A few were deferred to a later date, much against their will. On the last morning of our stay (Saturday) a fine group received Holy Communion.

Just as I was about to leave Lei Zhih a Christian from Banga rushed in with the news that some man was making plans to build on the mission property in that town. What was I going to do to stop him? What could I do? Finally I wrote to the curate and catechist, and sent the messenger back to Tsingtien.

Five miles further on we stopped at Do Lu. Some years ago this town of Do Lu had but a few Christians, and these were ill-instructed in the Faith. A great change resulted when we sent there as catechist a man who claimed to be nothing more than an honest farmer, but he was a catechist of sterling qualities. Now the little chapel is nearly always crowded, and some of the people say that happenings closely akin to miracles have occurred there.

In order to accommodate the increased number of converts in Do Lu, converts who are very loyal in the practice of their religion, we bought last year a piece of land large enough on which to build a church, a priest's house, and a school. It is our fond hope to be able to go ahead with this project in the near future, and for this we depend on some benefactor to give us the means necessary. With two thousand dollars we could establish a substantial mission property in Do Lu, as the Christians there have volunteered to supply us with stones and with much of the labour required for building.

During the best part of three days at Do Lu I surveyed the newly acquired mission property, visited our Christians, and preached several sermons besides hearing confessions. We had to supply extra seating accommodation in the chapel to take care of the numbers who came. During Mass I could hear a woman telling her neighbour some gossip, and she was promptly brought to order by a man, evidently her husband, who reminded her that Mass was being celebrated. It was in Do Lu on this occasion that I performed my first marriage ceremony in China. The bride came from a good Catholic family, but the young man was a pagan.

A journey of eight more miles brought us to another mission, Shiao Nyueh, which means "Little Fountain". Arriving there shortly after midday on Monday, after a hasty lunch we set out at once to visit two towns in the neighbourhood. The Christian population of one of these towns is merely twelve souls, and I found them suffering much want. Three years before, this place was visited by bandits, who burned it completely and left not a log upon a log. Now the poor people are living in hastily-constructed shacks, open to every wind that blows. I got into conversation with a very sick man and discovered that he was baptised. The catechist urged him to make use of the visit of the priest to prepare for death. The sick man protested that, as he had nothing to offer the priest to eat, he could not ask him to administer the sacraments. It took a little persuasion to convince him that the priest could look after himself without the necessity of being fed by this family, and we left the sick man in a happy frame of mind after he had received the sacraments of Penance and Extreme Unction.

The mission property at Tsingtien. The building shown here serves as chapel, school and residence for two priests and catechists. Father Gignac appeals to the readers of "China" for funds to build a church large enough to accommodate his Chinese converts. (See picture on centre page).

Early on Wednesday morning we left Shiao Nyueh for the last of our mission stations on this trip, a place almost fifty miles distant from Tsingtien. At noon, after walking four and a half hours, we reached a little village situated near the river. I had reason to remember this place, for it was the same in which I spent a night four years ago on my first entry to our mission district in China. On that occasion I found lodging in an inn with Monsignor Fraser and Father Sharkey, while the others of the party slept in the river boat. I also remembered the little bridge over which Father Stringer and myself had promenaded, reciting the rosary together. Little did I dream then that four years later I should be revisiting these scenes as Pastor of the district.

Regaled by a dinner of rice, preserved eggs, sweet potatoes and peanuts, we continued our journey and reached Hai Keo just at dusk. But it wasn't all over yet; we still had ten li to make, and it meant over the mountains, too. As we stopped to rest our weary limbs at Hai Keo, many people came to have a look at us. When they found out who we were and what was our business, they invited us to remain, but we couldn't accept their invitation. We pushed on to Yih Tuh San and reached there just after seven o'clock. Everybody in the place was in bed, and not a light softened the darkness. Barking dogs roused some householder, who, with native politeness, directed us to the chapel. We managed to get a bowlful of rice before we went to bed, completely tired out.

On Thursday I attended to the wants, both spiritual and temporal, of the few Christians hid away in these mountains. Returning to Hai Keo, I boarded a boat with my catechist for Tsingtien, and was glad to get back home again late in the afternoon.

MASS INTENTIONS

are always a practical help to priests in mission lands. The missionaries often have no other means of support than their Mass stipends. Our priests will be glad to offer the Holy Sacrifice for your intentions if you send your Mass offerings to the Seminary.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

We very gratefully acknowledge the following donations received between January 15th and February 15th, 1934.

A friend, St. John's, Nfld., in gratitude to St. Theresa, $5; Mrs. N. B. Langmuir, $3; Miss J. A. Kenny, $1; Rev. Gordon Carroll, $15; Misses A. C. and M. T. Musgrave, $3; Miss C. H. Gillespie, $1; Form 1D, St. Joseph's High School, Toronto, $1; Rev. David MacDonald, $15; Mrs. John Lyons, $1; Mrs. Lowe, $1; Children of Mary, Presentation Convent, Renews, Nfld., $1.50; Friend, Ottawa, $10; Rev. J. M. Castex, $1; Well-wisher, Cornwall, $2.50; T. F. Kelly, $25; Mrs. John C. Ryan, $2; Mary J. Cameron, in thanksgiving, $1; Friend, Barrie, $1; Christian Mothers, St. Vincent de Paul Parish, Toronto, $10; Friends, Barrie, $5; Rev. Friend, Toronto, $5; Pupils, St. Bon's College, St. John's, Nfld., $5; Crusaders, St. Vincent de Paul School, Toronto, $5; Mrs. G. Weber, $1; Alice Conway, $9; Ella Delaney, $1; Mrs. James F. Morris, $3; St. Joseph's Convent, Sudbury, $2; Pupils, Sacred Heart School, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., $5; Pupils, St. Mary's Girls' School, Halifax, $4; Rev. G. A. Thibault, $5; Mrs. S. E. Sheehan, $5; Mrs. Elizabeth Dowling, $20; Miss K. Bird, $2; M. J. S., Toronto, $2; Rev. J. Dantzer, $5; J. C. De Kruyf, 50c; J. J. Carolan, $1; Crusaders, St. Monica's School, Toronto, $8; Mrs. L. Joyce, $1; Mrs. W. P. Hourigan, $2; J. F. Moynihan, $4; His Excellency, Bishop MacDonald, $10; Pupils, Grade 4, Sacred Heart School, Sault Ste. Marie, $1; Mrs. James Parker, $5; Classes 13 and 14, St. Francis Rotary School, Toronto, $2; Jos. Battistuzzi, $1; Miss Mary Findley, $3; Rev. T. Ash, $1; Mrs. P. H. McGrath, $1; Catholic Women's League, Alberton, P.E.I., $10; A Friend, Fournier, Ont., $5; Margaret Bain, in thanksgiving, $1; Sacred Heart Parish, Ingersoll, Ont., $54; Little Flower Club, St. Mary's Girls' School, Halifax, $1; St. Mary's Convent, Newcastle, N.B., $1; Rev. J. Dantzer, $20; Estate, Johanna Tracey, $207.66; Mrs. Mary A. Hogan, $5; Estate, M. J. Kerwin, $437.

Burses

Friends, Barrie, Ont., St. Anthony's Burse, $6; Mr. Don Beaton, MacPherson Burse, $2; Rev. Fr. Feurth, Rev. Dr. Foley Burse, $5; Nicholas I. Battista, Holy Souls' Burse, $5; J. E. Maloney Estate, Maloney Burse, $500; Miss Nellie Cavanagh, Holy Soul's Burse $1; Miss Evelyn Donegan, Little Flower Burse, 50c; Miss Ella T. Leavey, St. F. X. Burse, $10; J. H. D., Halifax, St. Joseph's Burse, $2; Loretto Martin, Holy Soul's Burse, $27.

EDITORIAL

(Continued from page 35)

to a dying infant, and then, after all that, ask yourself if you can remain indifferent to the cause for which these heroines of Charity are spending their noble lives.

* * *

That the Fathers appreciate most highly the work done by these Sisters, their character and their courage, goes without saying. Nobody realizes more clearly the immense amount of good that is being done by these valorous women than the Fathers who direct them in their work for souls. It is this realization that has prompted this editorial, so that our readers, too, may know of the work, the self-sacrifice, and the tremendous power for good that is too often taken for granted.

* * *

The case of Father McNabb (as related on page 36) serves but to emphasize the debt that our missions owe to the Sisters. Very happy are we to offer this tribute to the work of the Grey Nuns in Lishui. And we shall be most happy if from this short appreciation our readers will feel themselves bound to sympathize with the hidden life of these Sisters and will show their sympathy in a practical way, by helping them in their various works, by prayer and by contributions, so that their work may not be curtailed because of a lack of means to support themselves and their endeavors. Thank God for the Sisters in China.

NEW APOSTOLIC DELEGATE TO CHINA.

Some months ago the first Apostolic Delegate to China, His Excellency Archbishop Costantini, resigned owing to ill health. On January 7th his successor, Most Rev. Mario Zanin, was consecrated in Rome by His Eminence Cardinal Sincero. The new Apostolic Delegate to China has held many responsible positions in connection with Missions. In 1919, he was one of the charter members and associate founders of the Missionary Union of the Clergy; in 1926 he became director of the Press Department of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith in Italy. Since 1930 he has occupied the office of Secretary-General of the Society of St. Peter the Apostle for the Native Clergy.

NONSENSE

"What is heredity?"
"Something every man firmly believes in until his son begins to act like a fool."

Customer (suspiciously): "How is this hash made, waiter?"
Waiter: "Made, sir? Why, hash accumulates."

"Dear Madam—Please excuse Willie from school this morning. He fell in the mud, and by doing same, you will greatly oblige.—Yours truly, Mrs. Hughes."

Child: "Oh, papa, what is your birthstone?"
Father: "My dear, I'm not sure, but I think it's a grindstone."

"What is the difference between electricity and lightning?" the teacher asked.
"You don't have to pay for lightning!" came the prompt reply from a bright boy.

Shipping clerk (reading report of Cabinet Minister's speech): "I hope this is true. He says that the battle against depression is won."
Colleagues: "Let's show that to the boss and perhaps he will cease firing."

Mrs. Brooks: "I often wonder why some folks go to church.
Mrs. Rivers: "So do I. Now, there's Mrs. Short, why she hasn't had a new hat for twelve months."

A dealer in South Germany has been arrested for selling cheese which was considered not fit for human consumption because—
(a) Rats had gnawed in it;
(b) Some of the holes had been filled with cement; and
(c) It was rotten.
"Otherwise," says Reuter's Munich correspondent, "the cheese was all right."

Mother (reading inscription on tombstone): "Here lies a lawyer and an honest man."
Child: "But, mummy, why did they bury two men in the same grave?"

May: "I'm terribly worried. I told Jack in my last letter to forget that I had told him I didn't mean to reconsider my decision not to change my mind, and he seems to have misunderstood me."

A notice in a restaurant runs like this: "The spoons in the establishment must not be treated like medicine, and taken after meals."

Tragedian: "I think it within my right to ask for real wine in the banqueting scene."
Stage Manager: "Right, old man. And perhaps you'd like real poison in the death scene."

"Would you mind walking the other w'y and not passing the 'orse?" said a London cabman with exaggerated politeness to the fat lady who had just paid a minimum fare.
"Why?" she inquired.
"Because, if 'e sees wot 'e's been carryin' for a shilling 'e'll have a fit."

The hotel guest was thoroughly annoyed. People were running backward and forward along the corridor outside his room, making a terrible noise. So he took the telephone and spoke to the manager's office.
"I can't get to sleep with all this noise going on," he complained angrily.
"I'm sorry, sir," replied the clerk, "but I'm afraid we can't control the movements of the fire brigade."

Simpson: "How much are they asking for your rent now?"
Timpson: "About twice a day."

Judge: "Too old! Why, I could give you ten years."
Friend (hastily): "Now, now, judge, don't start talking shop."

The only thing to be said for the people who keep on predicting the end of the world is that they get a bit closer every time.

Political Speaker: "I'm pleased to see such a dense crowd here tonight."
Voice from the crowd: "Don't be too pleased. We ain't all dense."

"Waiter, my bill!"
"What did you have, sir?"
"I don't know."
"You don't know?"
"No. I ordered a tender steak."

Wife: "I can read you like a book, John."
Husband: "Why don't you, then? You skip what you don't like in a book, and linger over it in me."

"I suppose," said the lady to a tram car conductor, "if I pay the fare for my dog he will be treated the same as other passengers and be allowed to occupy a seat?"
"Of course, madame," the conductor replied politely, "he will be treated the same as other passengers and can occupy a seat, provided he does not put his feet on it!"

"This is the third time you have asked for an advance on your salary."
"My wife needs the money badly, sir."
"May I ask what for?"
"You may, sir, but I may not."

Clerk: (making an excuse for error): "But, sir, a man isn't a machine. He can't go for ever."
Boss: "Oh, yes, he can. You're going for ever at the end of the week."

Mrs. High: "How did you come to propose to me, John?"
Mr. High: "I suppose I just wanted to be different from other men."

"Well, well, I never knew that the firemen were so childish. It says here that, after the flames were extinguished, the fireman played on the ruins for some time."

"Flag of truce, Excellency."
"What do they want?"
"They would like to exchange a couple of generals for a tin of condensed milk."

The burglar effected an entrance into the bank. He found the way to the strong room. When the light from his lantern fell on the door he saw the sign:
"Save your Dynamite. This Safe is not Locked. Turn the Knob and Open."
For a moment he ruminated. "Anyway, there's no harm in trying it, if it really is unlocked."
He grasped the knob and turned. Instantly the office was flooded with light, an alarm bell rang loudly, an electric shock rendered him helpless, while a door in the wall opened and a bulldog rushed out and seized him.
"I know what's wrong with me," he sighed an hour later, when the cell door closed upon him. "I've too much faith in human nature. I'm too trusting."

Jaywalker: "So many people are struck by motor cars while alighting from trams."
Tramway Official: "Well, yes, but those people have paid their fares. It's this running over people who are waiting to get on that makes me mad."

Gruff Father to Son: "Why don't you get out and find a job? When I was your age I was working for $5.00 a week in a store, and, at the end of five years I owned the store."
Son: "You can't do that nowadays. They have cash registers."

INTERNATIONAL VARNISH CO. LIMITED

TORONTO

PRODUCERS OF

TRADE ELASTICA MARK.

Varnishes

Paints, Lacqueret and Kwickwork Auto Enamels

Special Seat Finish for Church Pews

Our Decorative Department is at your service at all times and enquiries promptly replied to.

Gerrard and Carlaw Phone HA. 2178

Safety and Good Interest Return

5%

We allow 5% interest on sums of $100.00 or over placed with us for five years; 4¾% for one to four years. 3½% on Savings which are subject to withdrawal by cheque. $1.00 Opens an Account.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST GUARANTEED

Capital Trust Corporation

Limited

TORONTO OTTAWA MONTREAL

Under Dominion Government Inspection

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.

OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-2-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West
Toronto

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

CHINA MISSION BURSES

TO EDUCATE PRIESTS FOR CHINA

A BURSE is a sum of $5,000 (FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS) which, being securely invested, produces sufficient revenue to educate a student for the missionary priesthood. The capital is not touched, but remains intact. The Seminary would have the use of the ANNUAL INTEREST from each FIVE THOUSAND DOLLAR FUND to educate young men for the priesthood in PERPETUITY.

\+ +

SEVERAL of the Burses already completed have been outright gifts from individuals, but the others have been built up over a period of years by the large and small offerings of our faithful friends. We invite contributions to any of the Incomplete Burses listed on this page. Even the smallest offering will move some Burse nearer to completion, and we certainly have need of such help now. We could never finance the education of all our students on the interest of our Burses as they now stand.

\+ +

THOSE blessed with an abundance of this world's goods could spend to no better advantage than by becoming the Founder of a Burse for China Mission Seminary. It would be absolutely the most worthwhile monument to leave behind to your memory.

\+ +

YOUR DONATION for our BURSE FUND may be sent either to the Seminary or in care of the "Catholic Record", London, Ont.

Following are totals as on February 10th, 1934, including receipts by "Catholic Record" and China Mission Seminary combined:

St. Anthony	$3,711.85
St. Andrew	5,000.00
Blessed Sacrament	1,254.00
Comforter of the Afflicted	745.50
St. Francis Xavier	1,720.40
Rev. Doctor Foley	27.52
Holy Name of Jesus	794.50
Holy Souls	4,042.50
Immaculate Conception No. 1	5,000.00
Immaculate Conception No. 2	167.76
St. Joseph No. 1	5,000.00
St. Joseph No. 2	383.60
St. Jude	752.50
Little Flower No. 1	5,000.00
Little Flower No. 2	2,323.90
MacPherson	1,268.88
St. Madeleine Sophie Barat	1,547.00
J. E. Maloney	500.00
Elizabeth Murphy	4,912.38
McCarthy	5,000.00
McNeil	6,000.00
Our Lady of Perpetual Help	29.00
St. Patrick	1,522.00
Papineau Memorial	1,000.00
Precious Blood	2,115.00
Queen of Apostles	5,534.05
Queen of Martyrs	31.00
Sacred Heart No. 1	5,000.00
Sacred Heart League	5,000.00
Sacred Heart No. 2	1,398.40
Sacred Wounds	4,675.00
Students'	1,327.39
Children's	116.00
St. Anne	27.00
Holy Ghost	53.00
Holy Family	7.50
St. Joan of Arc	5.00
St. Rita	10.00

Remember CHINA in making your WILL

\+ +

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.
VERY REV. JOHN E. McRAE, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

APRIL,
1934

LESS THAN 15c A DAY BUYS THIS Personal UNDERWOOD

Not a used or rebuilt machine. A brand new Personal Underwood. So simple to operate. Carrying case included. Use it 10 days free. You get all this for less than 15c a day. Write today. Say: Tell me how I can get a Personal Underwood on a ten-day free trial offer for less than 15c a day. Underwood Elliott Fisher Limited, Dept. C, 135 Victoria St., Toronto 2.

Safety and Good Interest Return

5%

We allow 5% interest on sums of $100.00 or over placed with us for five years; 4¾% for one to four years. 3½% on Savings which are subject to withdrawal by cheque. $1.00 Opens an Account.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST GUARANTEED

Capital Trust Corporation
Limited
TORONTO OTTAWA MONTREAL
Under Dominion Government Inspection

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.
OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-2-4-5

The Garden City Press
263 Adelaide St. West
Toronto

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

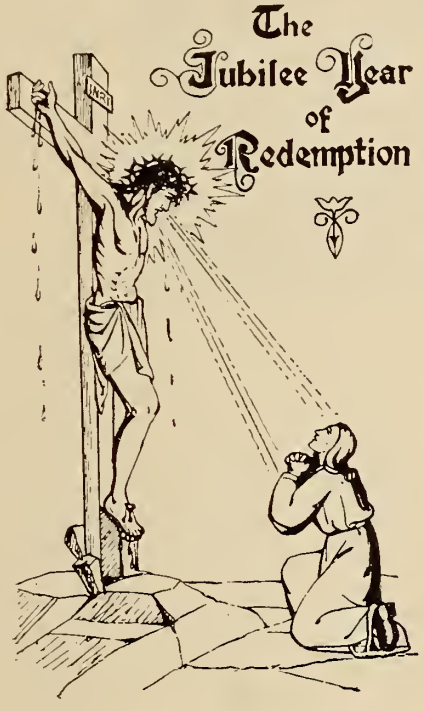
Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McNeil, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, P.A.



Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 27,000
Entered as second class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XV. APRIL, 1934 No. 4

"GOD so loved the world as to give His only begotten Son . . . that the world might be saved by Him" (John iii, 16-17). Jesus Christ gave up His life on that first Good Friday in order that all his human creatures might be freed from the bondage of sin and attain life everlasting. Nineteen centuries have come and gone since the world was redeemed. The second day of this month will mark the closing of an extraordinary Holy Year which was proclaimed by our Holy Father, Pius XI, to worthily commemorate the nineteenth centenary of our Divine Lord's Death and Resurrection. Since April 2nd of last year, Rome, the Eternal City, has welcomed hundreds of thousands of pilgrims from all over the world who journeyed thither in response to the Sovereign Pontiff's appeal to fittingly observe the most important act in the world's history. Now as the commemoration officially approaches its close, the voice of God's Vicar on earth sounds a plea for prayer that the blessings of the Holy Year may have lasting effects.

* * *

It was nothing short of a Divine inspiration that prompted the Pope to commemorate in a most solemn manner the event of our Redemption. It was his intention, and his hope, that Christian hearts and minds would cease to fix themselves on things temporal and turn to those of high spirituality; that they would "not only recall with renewed faith and reverence the sacred mysteries of our Redemption, but by fervent prayer and serious thought come to a clearer and deeper understanding of their all-important consequences, and so be moved more and more to conform their thoughts, their judgments, their conduct with those teachings of Eternal Truth which God has revealed to them through His Divine Son for their temporal and eternal happiness."

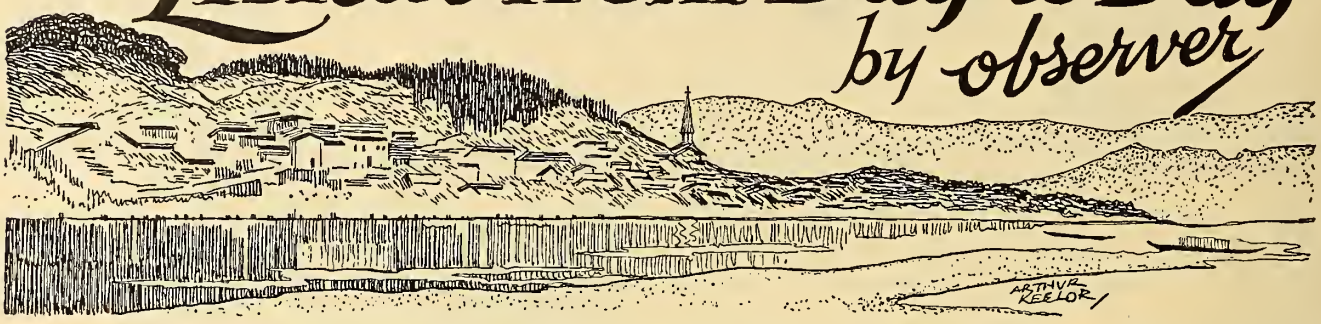
* * *



As Catholics, members of the One True Church, the Mystical Body of Christ, we all share in the great gifts of the Redemption. It is our bounden duty not only to put into practise in our private lives the teachings of our Divine Redeemer, but also, in equal measure, to strive for their fulfilment in the lives of others. Christ left us His Church as the agency through which all might come to know Him and partake in His Redemption. Through nineteen centuries that Church has never lost sight of her teaching Mission. Today, more than ever before, is she exerting every effort to bring within her fold the souls for whom Christ died. We cannot, even if we would, escape our responsibility to support and second her organized efforts for this purpose.

* * *

The fact that after nineteen hundred years two-thirds of the human race does not yet acknowledge the True God certainly is worth reflection. It is terribly sad to think that in all these years millions and millions of souls have been deprived of the benefits of Redemption. In God's designs everyone who knows Him is commissioned to be the instrument of making Him known to others. We are living in an age when it would seem that individual Catholics are recognizing their duty in this regard more than ever before. The work being done by missionaries in pagan lands is a sure index of the consideration being given to the spreading of the Gospel. More than one hundred and seventy-five thousand apostles (including priests, sisters, brothers, catechists, etc.), are at the present time engaged in foreign mission labors. They are reaping an encouraging harvest of souls. There are about five hundred thousand conversions to Catholicity every year, and in recent years the number of souls won to Christ is on the increase. Every new Christian is a new apostle who carries the name of Christ further, and in the efforts that are being made by missionaries to bring more souls to God we are required to be co-operators.

Lishui from Day to Day

by observer

AT present our Sisters in Lishui are in the midst of a smallpox epidemic. Many children are dying, and while the efforts of the Sisters are often unavailing to stem the ravages of this dread disease, yet they have the happiness of baptising a great number of children. It is this feature of their heroic work that affords them such consolation and makes all their sacrifices seem more than worthwhile.

* * *

At last we have a motor road completed from Lishui to Kinhwa, a distance of 90 miles and the last "lap" linking up Lishui with Shanghai by motor bus and train. Up to the present the return trip from Shanghai has always been a matter of about a week because from Wenchow it is upstream by sampan. With this section of motor road completed and public buses operating daily, it will now be possible to make the trip either to or from Shanghai in less than three days.

* * *

The other day a Chinese river steamer, the "Fu Yen", capsized in the Yangtse near Hankow with a loss of 450 lives. It was the third such disaster to occur in the vicinity in the short space of a few months, and was due, as usual, to hopeless overcrowding.

* * *

As the boat was sinking and hundreds of helpless passengers were struggling in the muddy waters, a fleet of sampans put out from the nearby shore. "To rescue the drowning", did you say? No, but to snatch from their hands the pitiful little New Year presents they were carrying to relatives and friends in the little villages along the river, and, of course, to loot the steamer, if possible.

* * *

Such instances are quite ordinary in China. Some years ago in our own district during flood time crowds of people lined the river banks to salvage whatever of value might be floating downstream. There were women and children clinging to wreckage and floating to their doom, but nobody bothered about them.

* * *

All of which leads to the old platitude that human life is cheap in China. It is. Such things simply couldn't happen in Christian countries. Possibly the only difference is that worse things happen in Christian countries simply because Christian countries are no longer Christian. What we mean is that China simply carries on a little retail business when it comes to the matter of death and slaughter. The big wholesalers are to be found only in the enlightened West.

* * *

Within your memory and mine some ten millions of lives were offered to glut the maw of the insatiable god of war. Within your lifetime and mine and possibly in the not-distant future there may be still greater slaughter, on a grander and more scientific scale than ever in the history of merciless mankind.

* * *

It is rather a baffling sort of business to compare the relative value of human life in China and in the West. Governments and societies at home will spare no expense today to rescue a lone flier marooned in the wilderness or a ship in distress at sea. They will despatch aerial expeditions, if necessary, over vast stretches of territory, at a cost of thousands of dollars, to save one life. Hence you may conclude that one human life in the enlightened West is worth thousands of dollars. What a pity it isn't that easy!

* * *

The trouble is that that same Government tomorrow may be draining its treasury and exhausting its every resource in a frenzied effort to destroy human life. And, as a rule, it is not things that we value that we attempt to destroy.

* * *

Only where you find real Christianity will you find real regard for the sacredness of human life. Where will you find real Christianity? Need we answer. We know one place, and that is the little Convent at Chuchow where the Grey Sisters are giving their young lives to relieve the distress and misery of a long-suffering people with the hope of leading them to a happiness that will be without end. We know that there are thousands of such communities in China and tens of thousands throughout the world, generous, noble, self-effacing souls whose beauty is known to God alone, and whose prayers ascend daily to stay the Hand of an avenging God lest it again repent Him that He made man.

* * *

And, if we may say so, there is possibly less of the spirit of Christianity in the councils of the Christian nations than in the hearts of those seemingly ruthless sampan men who snatched the little New Year gifts from the hands of drowning children. It is one thing to refuse to rescue a drowning man. It is quite another to plan the slaughter of a million.

CHINA'S CATHOLIC UNIVERSITIES ADVANCING

The increase in the entrance figures for the three Catholic Universities of China, those of Peiping, Tientsin and Shanghai, promise a satisfactory year.

Fujen University at Peiping will undoubtedly see prosperous days under the Society of the Divine Word, which has just assumed control. The Society has inherited from the Benedictines an establishment which from many points of view is remarkable. The Chemistry Department, as an instance, cedes place to that of no educational institution in North China. During the recent political disturbances the student body at Fujen has shown an esprit de corps which does honour to the teaching staff.

At Tientsin the Institute of Industry and Commerce of the Jesuits is in full prosperity. Recognizing the wisdom of the statement of the Commission of Inquiry of the League of Nations that the best university in China will be that which possesses the best preparatory schools, great attention is given at Tientsin to the annexed secondary college. Last year, almost 50 baptisms were recorded at the Institute. without doubt a fact unique in Catholic higher school annals throughout the mission field.

Aurora University at Shanghai has made important steps ahead. Proof of the prestige of its Medical School is found in the enrollments from abroad this year. Applications were received from the Philippine Islands, Korea, Japan and Russia. Thirty Catholic hospitals in China now employ doctors from Aurora. The Science Faculty likewise reports gains, especially in the Department of Electricity, where the students are particularly numerous.

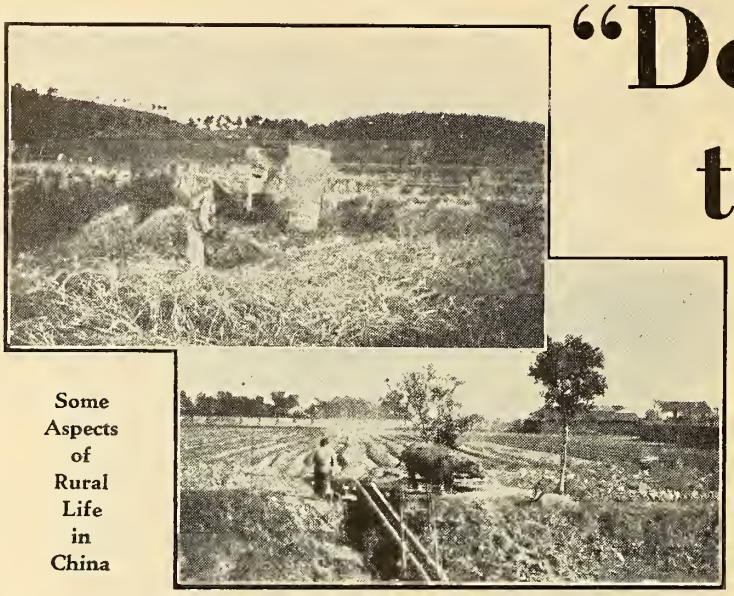
In short, the three Catholic Universities in China hold an honourable place among the 59 universities of the country. Of importance is the spirit of cooperation between the Catholic institutions. For instance, Shanghai applicants to Fujen now take their entrance examinations at Aurora. It is to be hoped that before too long every large centre of China will have its Catholic university.—Fides.

TO THE POPE

Full in the panting heart of Rome,
Beneath the Apostle's crowning dome,
From pilgrim's lips that kiss the ground,
Breathes in all tongues one only sound:
"God bless our Pope, the great, the good."

The golden roof, the marble walls,
The Vatican's majestic halls,
The note redouble, till it fills
With echoes sweet the seven hills:
"God bless our Pope, the great, the good."

Then surging through each hallowed gate,
Where martyrs glory, in peace, await,
It sweeps beyond the solemn plain,
Peals over Alps, across the main:
"God bless our Pope, the great, the good."



From torrid south to frozen north,
That wave harmonious stretches forth,
Yet strikes no chord more true to Rome's,
Than rings within our hearts and homes:
"God bless our Pope, the great, the good."

For like the sparks of unseen fire,
That speaks along the magic wire,
From home to home, from heart to heart,
These words of countless children dart:
"God bless our Pope, the great, the good."

CARDINAL WISEMAN

"Down on the Farm"

By
REV. JOSEPH VENINI
Kankou, Che.

Some Aspects of Rural Life in China

"HOMEWARD the ploughman plods his weary way." So, I believe, mused the poet as he sat in the village church-yard. Had the musing taken place in a Chinese village, the result would probably have been: "Homeward the ploughman plods his wearier way," because in China the ploughman has to carry his plough as well as his weary self on his homeward journey. The plough, of course, is not such a terribly heavy thing in itself, nothing to be likened to those iron monsters that tear up the Canadian prairies. The plough here consists merely of a naturally bent tree branch, with the ploughshare attached to one end, and an upright piece of wood to the other end to serve as a handle. The harness for the buffalo is equally simple, a boomerang-shaped wooden yoke to fit over the hump on the buffalo's neck, and to this yoke are fastened ropes, these being the traces. A third length of rope fastened to a ring in the buffalo's nose serves as reins. With this outfit the mire in the rice paddies is prepared for the rice planting. Man, beast, and plough literally wallow in the muck, and, with many a lusty Chinese equivalent for "gee-haw", "whoa", and "giddap", the work gets done, much too quickly, perhaps, for the liking of the crows, magpies, and cow birds, who follow the plough up and down the field, feasting on the fat, juicy slugs turned up in the mud.

SURELY the Chinese farmer earns his bread, i.e., his rice, in the "sweat of his brow". Many a drop must roll down his sun-bronzed face ere his toils will be rewarded by the boiling rice-pot. The rice is first sown in a carefully prepared seedling bed. When the young plants are some five or so inches high, they are transplanted bunch by bunch into the fields. Here they are carefully nursed along, with the roots always well covered with water. At definite periods the muck is well turned up with a long-handled hoe to keep down the weeds, and the young plants are given individual attention, a handful of well-prepared fertilizer being placed at the foot of each cluft of plants. Comes harvest time and everyone is busy from dawn to dusk. The men-folks are off to the fields with the first streaks of light, carrying along with them their mower, binder, and thresher. The mower is simply a small curved knife with which the rice stalks are cut. The binder is of the simplest also, being the two hands of the harvester. Nor does the budget call for any binder twine, as the rice stalks are quite suitable for binding the sheaves. The thresher, then, consists of a large wooden tub, a bamboo mat and a small ladder-like affair or grate. This grate is placed in the tub, and on it the sheaves are beaten. The bamboo mat is also inserted into the tub, enclosing it with the exception of the front, thus leaving free space for the farmer to swing his sheaves freely. The purpose of the mat is to prevent any grains of rice from falling outside the tub. In Chicago 'tis said that the squeal is the only part of the pig that is not utilized by the meat packers. The Chinese have nothing to learn from them, be it in the slaughering of pigs, or farming. The choicest of the rice straw will be made into very comfortable mattresses; some will be made into ropes and sandals; it will be used for bedding for the animals: coverings for the seedling beds in the vegetable garden; kneeling mats for the women when they work their clothes by the creek or canal, and also when they make their kow-tows before the idols in the temple. Any surplus straw there may be is burnt in the fields to serve as fertilizer.

AT noon, and in the evening, when the men return for their meals, they carry home the rice in bamboo baskets, and the women and children enter the scene. Their task is to spread the rice out on huge bamboo mats to dry in the sun. Several times during the day the rice must be turned over and evenly spread out, a long-handled, wooden instrument, T-shaped, being used for this purpose. As ploughing time was the feasting season for the crows and magpies, harvesting time brings the turn of the domestic animals and fowls, and whilst the rice is drying a continuous battle of vigilance is waged between the inhabitants of the barnyard and the custodians of the rice. The youngsters of the village, too, get great sport out of the whole business, especially in the evenings, those wonderful sunny fall evenings, the best time of the year here from the weather viewpoint. The laughter, joking, and bantering that goes on as they gather up the rice for the night, is pleasant to hear. Pleasant also to the eye are these simple rustic scenes, scenes worthy of the brush of a Millet. Alas! how much more pleasant to the ear would all this bantering and joking be, if such a great part of it were not so offensive to Christian ears. What a sad thing to hear the innocent mouths of babes of four and five years repeating the foul ejaculations and imprecations that have fallen on their pagan ears since the day of their entry into this vale of tears.

THE rice, then, when thoroughly dried, is passed through a winnow mill to separate the grain from the chaff, and the cleaned grain is stored in the rice tubs, safe from the ever-hungry rats that infest every Chinese house, the mission houses not excepted, as my well gnawed books will testify. When the rice is to be used it must first be pounded in a mortar to free the grain of its husk, or, as in some places, a machine made of bamboo sections embedded in clay is used for this purpose. The more the rice is pounded the whiter it becomes, the increased pounding wearing away the red covering of the grains. The pounded rice must be passed through a fanning mill to separate the rice from the bran, and the rice has finally reached its journey's end. That is not quite all. A washing, a boiling, a few flourishes of the chop-sticks, and with amazing rapidity several bowls of the Chinese staff of life are reduced to calories, vitamins and ergs. Seneca, I believe it was, said that man does not die, but kills himself with fork, knife and spoon. Seneca's knowledge of China and the Chinese was sadly lacking. I do not think any Chinese doctor ever grew rich in China treating gout patients. I read recently that the Chinese do not like meat. The Chinese don't like meat!! (This last sentence is to be read with all possible scorn.) Certainly the Chinese like meat, but the Chinese (about three hundred and ninety-nine million out of the four hundred million) cannot afford to buy meat except on rare occasions. Meat here ordinarily costs about three to four pounds per dollar. The usual day's wages is fifty cents. The Chinese don't like meat! Truly has it been said one-half the world doesn't know how the other half lives. Like most wise cracks, this epigram might be very ambiguous. The obvious meaning, I believe, is that one-half of the world is ignorant of the customs and living habits of the other half of the world. But it might also mean that one-half the world doesn't know how the other half (especially the half of which China comprises such a large part) manages to exist. And that is all a very great part of the people hereabouts do. They eke out a mere existence. And would that they were at least sure of being always able to do that. Yes, the Chinese don't like meat!

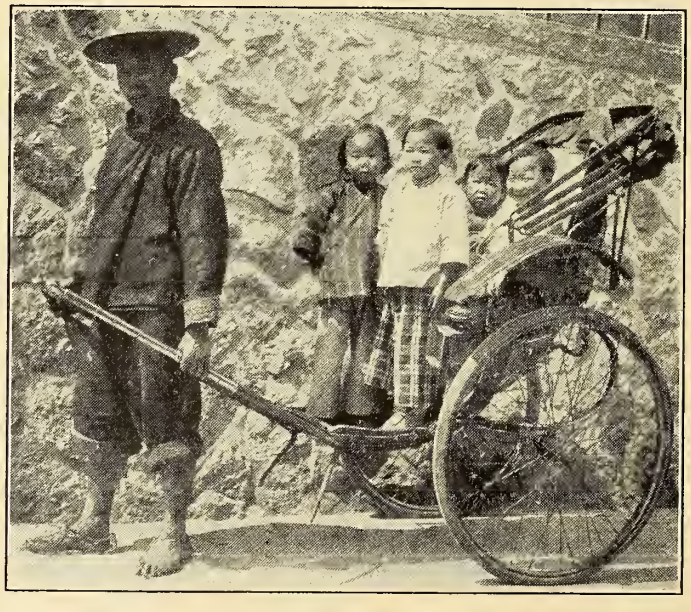
CHINESE farming instruments may be primitive, crude, if you will, but it cannot be successfully denied that they get the work done, and very well, too. And they don't tend to complicate the unemployment situation. For example, with a modern thresher all the beans that are grown in this locality could probably be threshed and cleaned in a single day. But what would the men do when the day was over? As it is now, each family brings in its tiny crop of beans, grown, by the way, on the ridges of ground separating the rice paddies. The whole plant is uprooted, the plants are tied into bundles, and carried home. Here they are strung up in the trees or any available place beyond the reach of the roving hens. By and by they are well dried and are taken down and placed in a pile in the barn yard. The flail then comes into action, a flail without doubt similar to those used in the time of our Lord, and perhaps of Adam, but effective nevertheless. When the plants have been flailed till the last pod has spilled its beans, the plants are gathered up, to be cast, like the cockle of the parable, into the fire and burned, the beans are swept up, sent on a trip through a fanning mill, and are ready for the evening's supper of pork and——.



AMONGST the other implements seen hereabouts, the harrows are of interest. They have a straight-tooth harrow much similar to our drag-tooth harrow. Then they have a harrow which is really a glorified fork. About twenty prongs, some six inches in length, fitted on a crossbar, to the ends of which an upright handle is attached. There is also a roller harrow, a log of hardwood along the length of which are gouged grooves. The log is fitted into a frame, rectangular in shape, on which the driver balances himself—a feat of no mean skill—while the whole business is dragged hither and yon about the field, by the patient, slow-moving, water buffalo. But by far the most curious of the harrow family is what, for lack of a better name, might be termed the snowshoe harrow. Two rectangular frames, about four feet long by two feet wide, are fitted

(Continued on page 58)

WE are learning more about sampan life, as of late calls have come from a village a few li upstream. The afternoon's outing up the river would be a very pleasant one except for this. While we and our guide rest comfortably under the bamboo covering, a little girl of ten is engaged in the burdensome task of rowing. She is not alone, of course; her father is there, too. At times he rests, and then the child must exert all her strength to take his place. Nor does she hesitate to wade through water knee deep, pushing the little craft over the small rapids encountered several times in a few hours. We pity her, and would help her if we could. She is only one of the thousands of child labourers in China, and I suppose she thinks that she was born just to work. The extent of her knowledge is limited to her own childish experiences on her father's sampan. She is, however, a happy little sailor, and would rather help to navigate a small fishing boat than study a few complicated characters in a noisy classroom. Work and no play or pay seems to be the motto of her river boat career.

YET, in our rounds about the city what else do we see but child slavery? The numerous canals scattered about are constantly banked with little girls doing the household washing. With a rough stone as washboard they scrub away, utilizing their own strength to supply the lack of soap which cannot be afforded. Others troop off to a day's toil, the match or cotton factory, where hours are long, labour monotonous, and wages scant—hardly more than one cent a day. In rain or shine, little ragged barefooted peddlers tramp street after street in an attempt to sell their wares before dark They may eat their rice, but it is earned first. Small wonder, then, that so many children, when once stricken with sickness, never recover. If they do, it is only to continue to carry and to increase with the years the yoke placed on them years ago. And does this not account for the fact that at present over seventy-five per cent. of our home patients are young men and women, worn and wasted after a few years of physical strain.

"Four little maids from school are we." And life in Lishui is not hard so far as we are concerned, because the Sisters are caring for us as we have never been cared for before. Of course, a lot depends on our "taxi-man."

Angels of Mer

FURTHER EXP
NU

LYING in the ruins of an old temple at the outskirts of the city is one example of over-taxed youth. A young man of twenty-three, he has been confined to bed for over a year, and is now in the last stages of tuberculosis. For over eight years he had been earning a poor living as a water carrier. The heavy weight of those large wooden buckets began long ago to tax the strength of their immature bearer. His rice depended on the amount of water he carried daily, and so he drudged until one day his weak frame resisted. It was too late, however; he is doomed to die in a very short time. In their extreme poverty, his young wife had him removed to this falling temple. It was her last resource to keep a covering over him at all. With the aid of mud and bamboo mats she built up the walls, but so poorly constructed were they, we feared to lean against them lest they should tumble. The cold, damp mud flooring slopes here and there into ruts, and when the rainy season comes, I daresay there is no scarcity of mud puddles. The room is empty except for the bed of straw on which the sick man lies, a small table and a little pot fire, on which an old kettle sings its boiling tune. A perfect setting for a dying man! Such poverty, we hear you say; yes, and add misery and all that pertains to it and perhaps you will have a slight conception of what hardship is endured by our poor people here. This young man has great confidence in our medicine, but his condition is without doubt beyond any medical aid. In this dark, dreary hovel, the few remaining days of life must wearily pass, and his short life will end as it began, in complete indigence. Perhaps some of us are inclined to wonder

n Pagan China

S OF THE GREY SHUI

why he could not be removed somewhere else. Yes, if he was the only one, it would be a small matter, but as it is, he is one of the thousands in this city alone whose state and fate is similar. What little is in our power to do we willingly do, regretting the fact that it is not a hundredfold more.

"IT is all we can do"; how many times we repeat this phrase to patients in similar home conditions and struggling with the same disease. Would that it were in our power to restore to her little ones the young mother who died recently in a dejected mud shelter a few blocks away. It was not until all Chinese medicine had failed that they called for ours, and when we arrived, there was not much chance for doing anything. Her wasted body betrayed it, and a symptomatic cough spoke for itself — another victim of tuberculosis. Wavering as she was between life and death, her mother-heart was not insensible to the weeping little tots at her bedside. Now and again her heavy eyelids were raised and tired eyes rested lovingly on this pair of tear-stained baby faces. Brief, yet pitiful glances were cast toward a figure bent over a stove in a corner of the room. It was her husband, who had, since her illness, charged himself with the household cares; not many to be sure, but there were two hungry little girls looking for heaping bowls of rice three times a day. Whatever flavouring used this evening I do not know, but it sufficed to draw the two children from their mother's side. Relieved of their presence, the sick woman, with much effort and in broken accents, begged of us to spare her life for the children's sake; her case, however, was far beyond our power to help. Never had she been spared in the past, and those overtasked, wearisome years were taking their toll. To her husband, who related the source and duration of her illness, we could repeat nothing but "It is all we can do". And so it was; next morning a message came that she had died one hour after our departure.

THE sad picture of that sick-room has many a duplicate. In fact, it is only one, and ninety-five per cent. of the homes in this and hundreds of other cities in China are mere counterparts of it. Let us glance into it and see it as it appeared when we left. It is small, dark and untidy. Through the mist of suffocating smoke from the smouldering fire the contents of the room may be detected. A bundle of brush stands loosely against the side of the grease-covered stove in one corner. A table, once carried through the streets in bridal array, now hides its soot-covered surface in the opposite corner. Beneath it, a huge black pig and her family of six rest for the night, while three hens nestle close by. (No, they are not astray; just another of the common occupants of every Chinese house.) From behind the door faint sounds of irregular breathing can be heard. It is the dying mother. The hard board on which she lies rests on two trustles and is scantily covered with coarse straw. Spread on the floor nearby is a bamboo mat, and the small cotton garments thrown about it are tell-tales enough of the children's sleeping quarters. Overhead, three fish, long since dead and dried, hang suspended from black dust-covered beams. The walls are partly covered with well-worn newspapers, and boast of no windows. The floor is mud, and its present condition is in keeping with the general atmosphere. Seated on it, the two children prattle away as they consume numberless grains of rice. They are heartily enjoying their frugal meal, innocent of the fact that "Daddy" is not the surest cook for baby constitutions. They are too much taken up with the speed of chopsticks to notice our departure, and so we leave them—we will not speak of the fast-approaching disturber of

(Continued on page 59)

What Shall I Be?

Shall I
A typist be,
And play upon the keys so daintily?
A journalist be,
And write about the people in society?
A chemist be,
And devote my life to Chemistry?
A lawyer be,
And help the innocent and the guilty?
A doctor be,
And concoct medicines for every nationality?
A teacher be,
And test the child's ability?
A nun be,
And carry Religion into lands of savagery?

Please, Lord, enlighten me,
And help me to decide honestly
What I shall be,
In order to merit a joyous Eternity.

From "The Quill"

NEWS from the MISSIONS

The Holy Father has received in audience Father Sands of the Missionaries of St. Columban, who for seven months during 1932 was a prisoner of the Chinese bandits. After his release, Father Sands insisted on returning to his mission, but his bishop has now ordered him home for a brief rest.

The plucky priest, small and wiry of build and an excellent missionary, refused to speak of himself, but explained that the Vicariate of Hanyang, to which he belongs, is reaping a great harvest from the misfortunes which have visited it.—Fides.

At the end of its first year of life as an independent territory, the Prefecture Apostolic of Hungtung, under the Chinese clergy, reports converts to the number of 352. The 15 priests of the territory now have 10,207 faithful under their care. The Prefect Apostolic is Monsignor Peter Tcheng.

The Ministry of Education is considering the drafting of a set of regulations governing the examination of all Chinese returned students from Europe and America and those graduated from domestic universities and colleges. The purpose of the regulations is to test the real ability of foreign-educated Chinese youths by holding an official examination annually. It is said that many Chinese students are incompetent to hold the degrees they have obtained.

Economic marriage is one of the latest legislative acts in progressive Kwangsi. In a fight to abolish expensive superstitions, the law now says that not more than $100 may be spent on a marriage, though government permission may be had to go beyond this figure. The burning of joss, the offering of food to departed spirits, worshipping idols, consulting monks is forbidden.

Kwangsi has reorganized its army, built hundreds of miles of roads, and, withal, greatly reduced the taxes. It is now claimant to the title of model province of China.—Fides.

The Chinese Government has enforced yet another ban against foreign photographers. The present ban bars foreigners from taking pictures of Chinese women with bound feet.

The action was taken by General Chiang Kai-shek, chairman of the Military Affairs Commission, responding to a plea filed by military authorities in Kalgan, where two foreigners are said to have taken pictures of the "ugly custom" without permission of the authorities.

An excellent example of the power of the lay apostolate is provided in an achievement of a local Ichang woman, Agnes Fou. A Tartar, descendant of the former Manchu garrison at Ichang, Agnes knew of three other Tartar women who had been Catholic and who after pagan marriages had given up their faith. Following prodigious efforts over a long period, made, Agnes said, to prove that Catholic Action could succeed, both the three women and their husbands and children were led to baptism by this zealous Christian.—Fides.

Father Pius Chang, S.V.D., Chinese priest of Lanchow Vicariate, flew by plane from the far western province of Kansu to Peking, where he will be prefect at the Catholic University. Thus he covered in less than a week the many hundreds of miles of journey which by land and river route require from 60 to 90 days. In China, as elsewhere, the aeroplane is conquering distance.

DOWN ON THE FARM

(Continued from page 55)

on wooden slats, running lengthwise, and spread three inches or so apart. Ropes are attached to the four corners of each frame. The harrow man grasps the free ends of the ropes in his hands and, placing a foot on each frame, commences his harrowing. Unlike the wearer of snowshoes, however, he does not proceed in a forward direction, but moves sideways back and forth across the rice paddy, and this, mind you, in the thick gluey muck. At best it must be a harrowing experience. However, these contraptions are used only on the smaller paddies, almost too small to hold a water buffalo. Farms are not reckoned in sections here, or at least they are powerful small ones. It would be interesting to have an American wheat king see the scale on which farming is done here. "These people are crazy," I suppose he would say; "why don't they go in for modern machinery on a big scale?" Perhaps they are crazy, perhaps not. It has been also said that one-half the people believe the other half is crazy. Perhaps both halves are right.

Even their best friends will scarcely recognize the bearded missionaries in this picture. Charlie (centre), the cook at Tsingtien, seems to be enjoying the conversation going on between Father John Macdonald (left) and Father Bernard Boudreau (right).

THE SILK SHOP IN CHINA

Here is a silk shop that it will be interesting to visit. It is one of the best in the whole town, and it is said to contain specimens from all the famous silk-producing districts. It does not seem to have anything in it, beyond what one sees lying on the shelves, carefully wrapped up in paper as though the great purpose was to conceal everything from the gaze of the public. We find our progress impeded by a large counter, within which the clerks lounge about. The appearance of a foreigner causes a commotion, and a responsible-looking man steps forward with a hesitating manner, evidently questioning with himself how he is to address you, since he knows nothing but his own mother-tongue. You inform him, however, in Chinese, that you have come to look at his silks, and at once his countenance clears, and a look of pleasure flashes into his eyes.

The clerks, too, without any apparent restraint from their master's presence, crowd around and make remarks about your personal appearance, and criticize your dress, and give their opinion about the way in which you pronounce Chinese. In the meanwhile two or three have been dispatched to an inner room, where the precious silks are kept, and they soon appear with a dozen rolls or so carefully wrapped in paper and tied with a string to keep the dust and the sunlight from getting to them.

As each one is unrolled, you gaze with absolute delight upon the exquisite colours that flash upon your sight. Here you have one piece of a delicate creamy white, that seems too pure to be touched without being defiled. Next to it is another of a beautiful rose pink, a colour that the designers must have caught from some rose that had just opened its petals to the sun, and so as the men deftly unwind the various rolls you have displayed before you the whole array of colours that the Chinese weavers have woven into their fabrics, and for the moment the unaesthetic-looking Chinaman becomes sublimed in your imagination.

You ask to see some of their more expensive articles, and soon the clerks return with specimens from the looms of Canton, Hangchow and Soochow, each with its own distinctive characteristics, and so exquisitely beautiful that you stand gazing upon them all with admiring looks, and with words inadequate to express your high sense of the workmanship displayed. The amazing thing is to understand how the weavers, in their poor, tumble-down cottages, and with looms so cumbersome and antiquated that they seem to have come out of the Ark, could have produced such exquisite specimens of art.—"Sidelights on Chinese Life."

MGR. McGRATH'S FATHER DEAD

A cable to the Seminary brought the sad news that Mr. Richard T. McGrath had died at the General Hospital in St. John's, Nfld., on March 15th. A heart attack, following an illness of less than a week, proved fatal. The late Mr. McGrath was 65 years of age, and was a well-known citizen of St. John's. For several years he was a member of the Newfoundland House of Assembly.

"China" asks the prayers of its readers for the repose of his soul. To his family, Msgr. W. C. McGrath, our mission superior in China; Richard, theological student at St. Augustine's Seminary; Sister M. Bernardine and two other daughters we extend sincerest sympathy.

ANGELS OF MERCY

(Continued from page 57)

their childish joys—another hour and they will be quite conscious of it.

WE leave them, and through narrow mud-walled streets we walk home silently, quite deep in thought. When we see ourselves, as we are, surrounded by darkest paganism, living with people encumbered by ancient customs and living only to eke out a bare existence, one thought is always present: "Thank God we were not born in China, but thank God we have been called to China."

BISHOP MACDONALD

"China" offers most sincere felicitations to Right Reverend Alexander MacDonald, Titular Bishop of Hebron, who celebrated on March 8th the Golden Anniversary of his ordination to the Holy Priesthood, and on January 3rd the Silver Jubilee of his episcopal consecration.

Fifty golden years of indefatigable priestly labours find Bishop MacDonald hale and hearty. His saintly and simple manner has endeared him to all who know him. His contributions to Catholic theology rank him amongst the foremost theologians in the Church today, and his writings on the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass have done much to make this great Dogma familiar to all.

In a quiet but very practical way His Excellency has manifested a deep interest in China Mission Seminary ever since its inception. In extending congratulations on his double anniversary, "China" expresses the hope that Bishop MacDonald will be spared many years and be blessed in all his undertakings.

Statistics of the Municipal Bureau of Social Welfare have revealed that there are over 2,000 persons in Canton dependent on cigarette ends for their livelihood.

According to a recent survey, 2,500 men and women, including many beggars, are earning their living by gathering cigarette ends from the streets.

They have organized themselves into five unions, each operating in one assigned area.

LITTLE FLOWER'S ROSE GARDEN

Edited by FATHER JIM

CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP

The only conditions of membership in the Rose Garden are: (1) To say every day the Prayer for the Conversion of China; (2) To go to Holy Communion once a month for the Intention of Missionary Vocations. Certificates and pins will be sent to all members.

"We have been very interested in the 'Rose Garden' and now want to become members. We are sending three dollars to help the Chinese Missions. Is there anything more to do besides the conditions mentioned in 'China'? Is it necessary to send our pictures?"—Irene and Beatrice Struthers, 118 Baldwin Ave., Cornwall, Ont.

The gift for the Missions sent by our young Cornwall friends was very welcome. As soon as members receive their certificates and badges they are fully-fledged members of our Missionary Club. All that is necessary then is to fulfil the conditions printed at the top of this page. Whilst there is no necessity to send pictures, Father Jim is always delighted to see his young missionaries. I shall try to have a few "cuts" appear in every edition of our "Rose Garden" pages. Send me your snapshot, boys and girls, and some day you'll see your picture in our Columns.

From the Sister Directress of the Sodality of the Infant Jesus at St. Ann's Academy, Victoria, B.C., came the following letter. "Dear Father: Enclosed please find money order for five dollars which the members of the Child Jesus Sodality have collected and are sending you for the purchase of a Chinese baby. May this modest donation prove their good will, and merit for the little ones the blessing of the dear Christ Child! How gladly would we contribute more generously to your noble work, had we the means. We were privileged to witness the ordination and first Mass of Father Roland Roberts and also to get his priestly blessing. He gave a lantern slide lecture on China, which much impressed all our pupils. May it sow the seed for many religious vocations among our Western children, where the dearth is so greatly felt!"

If all fathers were like this, and all pupils as interested in the Missions as Catherine Lewis is, how nice it would be! Here's the story: "Enclosed please find two dollars towards the Building Fund. One dollar is from myself. This is how I became possessor of it. In the beginning of the school term my father offered a prize of ten dollars to the one who had the highest marks for the first term. I promised two dollars to the China Missions if I got the ten. Through various causes our report cards were not ready early, and as my father did not know who was leading he gave my younger sister $5 and me $5; when we do get our report cards if I am first perhaps Daddy's heart will be moved to give me another dollar. If so, you'll get that later on. The second dollar enclosed is from my classmate of 6A, St. Willibrord's Academy, Verdun, Que." You may be sure that Catherine got a letter from Father Jim after her letter came along. And she certainly is second to none in my estimation.

Once again I was pleased to hear from Theresa Ardito, who wrote on behalf of Classes 13 and 14 at St. Francis Rotary School, 250 Manning Ave., Toronto: "We have again collected two dollars, and hope it will help a little with your wonderful work. We have not forgotten the prayers you asked us to say, and we are very grateful to you for so kindly remembering us in your masses. We saw our letter which you published in 'China', and both classes were quite delighted. The following 94 members wish to join the 'Rose Garden'."

The fact that large groups from schools join our Club will explain how it is that Father Jim is sometimes slow in sending along certificates, etc. It would really be a "full-time job" to keep up to date in attending to our Club, but even with "part-time gardening" I hope to satisfy everybody who has written me. Our motto is still "the more the merrier", because I know that the more "Buds" we have the more our missionaries are going to benefit by prayers and Holy Communions.

And here's St. Willibrord's Academy, Verdun, Que., again. Grade 6A, too. "Just a few lines to say that when our copies of 'China' arrive, each girl takes turns in having it at home for two nights so that their families can read it and enjoy its contents. Sorry we haven't much to send you this time, but we have recently sent our pennies to Father Stringer in China. Our next offering will be directed to the Seminary."

That's a good idea of the girls to make "China" known to their people at home. I rather think that when the Editor reads this, he will want to suggest that the "Buds" try to secure subscriptions for "China" among their friends who are not receiving it. Now he won't have to suggest it. (This is just a stunt to make the Editor feel more than ever "on our side"—and if it does result in more new subscriptions coming in, why, we have a chance to mention our desire for more space for our Club doings in future.)

Here's a real little missionary for you. Twelve-year-old Alphonse Marentette, Paincourt, Ont. Father Jim regards you as a real pal, Alphonse, and is very much delighted with your efforts to interest others in the "Rose Garden". Writing on March 14th, his letter says: "Just about a year ago I sent you the names of 60 of my

A Prayer for the Conversion of China

(To be said daily by the members of the "Rose Garden")

O LORD JESUS CHRIST, who didst come on earth to save the souls of men, open now Thy most Sacred Heart in mercy to the people of China, who still sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, and shower Thy graces on them, that they may come to the knowledge of Thy Gospel. Bless also and protect Thy missionaries, and make their work fruitful for Thee of countless souls. —Amen.

(300 days' Indulgence)

With Ecclesiastical Approbation

Playing us a tune on his violin is Denis O'Sullivan. Leo Hoyt made his first Holy Communion on June 5, 1932, and had his picture taken. Both are pupils at Sacred Heart School, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont.

school mates to be enrolled in the 'Little Flower's Rose Garden'. I am to-day sending you 36 more, and I know they will all be faithful little missionaries and pray every day for the poor pagans of China. Also that God will protect the heroic priests who are working to save souls and lead them to God. I have a little brother named Romeo who will be old enough to become a 'bud' next year."

Irene Roche, Secretary Crusade Unit, Room 7, St. Clare's Girls' School, Toronto, writes: "On Feb. 13th, eve of Ash Wednesday, we held a sale of homemade candy. Having a 'flare' for business we decided it would be a good day to catch the pennies spent by the pupils for a last feed of candy before giving it up for Lent. We were right. It was a success, so we are sending you five dollars to use in your noble mission work. The 'Crusader' and 'China' are always eagerly awaited by our Crusaders here. Our officers are Camilla Oswin, Pres.; Irene Roche, Sec'y., and Marie Cartan, Treasurer."

A Mission Club has been formed in the School of St. Ann's Parish, Guysboro, N.S., and 8 boys and 14 girls have been added to the membership of our Club as a result. They are all boosters for "China".

Dorothy White, 124 Oak St., London, Ont., in renewing her subscription for "China", tells me of her continued interest in our Club. Thanks for all the prayers you say for us, Dorothy—and you'll soon have another badge to replace the one you lost.

Fourteen-year-old James Dwyer, Erinsville, Ont., is an altar boy, and would like to hear from a pen-pal in Quebec. His sister, Mary, 15 years old, wants a pen-pal from Newfoundland.

If Margaret Gerrier's pen-pals (and she has quite a few) get nice letters from her as I did they have no reason to complain. And Margaret wants to add to her list some new friends from Sask. and Alberta. Her address is Box 465, Summerside, P.E.I., June 6th will be her 16th birthday.

Three hundred and sixty-one pupils of St. Clare's School, Windsor, Ont., are going to be enrolled as new members soon. I am awaiting their names now.

Teresa S. Marshall, on behalf of 46 pupils of the Convent School, Burin N., Nfld., wrote a nice letter "because we have heard through our teacher of your wonderful missionary club, and want to become members to help the missions better."

Writing from 192 Klock Ave., North Bay, Ont., Anita Labreche, aged 12, told me of her pet, a white Spitz dog. Anita has three brothers but no sisters, is fond of reading and outdoor sports, and promises always to be a friend of the missions.

Twenty boys and girls have sent their names as new members from Meyronne, Sask. Their teacher, Sister St. Aloysius, speaks highly of their enthusiasm for the Missions.

Anniversaries in the life of the Little Flower occurring this month: her decision, at the age of 15, to enter Carmel, April 9th, 1888; her beatification, which took place on April 29th, 1923.

Dorothy Grady, 225 Lake St., Peterboro, Ont., has continued to be a very faithful missionary since she joined our Club a long time ago. Now she wants her brother Clare, aged 13, and her sister Eleanor, to share her missionary spirit. Dot. is now a pupil at St. Peter's High School. In her most recent letter to me she writes: "Judging from the names in print and those on your 'waiting list' it seems that our 'Rose Garden' has scattered its petals far and wide all over Canada and elsewhere. I wish it and its editor every blessing, and I pray that our sweet little Patroness, St. Theresa, will continue to smile upon its members and bless all their undertakings and the missions in which they are so deeply interested." Dot, your letter did me a world of good, and I hope you'll write me soon again.

Living far apart, yet all united in helping the missions by their prayers, among recent new members we count Florence MacInnis, Box 535, Summerside, P.E.I.; Bob and Phyllis White, 228 First Ave., North Bay, Ont.; and Margherita Bourgeois, 1033 Cardero St., Vancouver, B.C.

Many boys' Sanctuary Clubs could imitate the example of the Sanctuary Club of St. Brigid's Parish, Toronto, 29 members of which have become members of our Rose Garden. It is from such boys that future missionaries are to come, and they cannot begin too soon to take an active interest in praying for Catholic Missions. At a meeting of St. Brigid's Sanctuary Boys, Jim Caley, the Secretary, enlisted 29 recruits for us. Thanks, Jim, and best of luck to your Sanctuary Boys.

When Anna Hill, 273 Renfrew St., Pembroke, was in first book class, her teacher was Sister Angela, now in Lishui, China, and as Anna wants to keep interested in Sister Angela's work she has joined the "Rose Garden".

The "Ave Maria Club" was organized among the school children of Canso, N.S., by the Sisters of St. Martha, and Father Jim has received many fine letters from members asking to join the "Rose Garden". All are very welcome, and I thank them for their fine letters.

Alice Putz, Box 462, Penetang, Ont., subscribed to "China" when she became interested in the "Rose Garden" through Eva Lalumiere, a classmate. Alice wanted to know if Chinese boys and girls could become priests and nuns. Certainly; there are thousands of Chinese priests and nuns, and more than 20 Chinese priests have been made bishops during the past 8 years. It is the policy of the Church in every mission country to have native priests and sisters carry on the work of conversion among their own people. There was a time when priests and sisters in Canada were foreign missionaries who came from other lands, but after many years Canada was able to supply priests and sisters from among her own people, and now Canada is in a position to send missionaries to countries not yet converted to the Faith. It is for their success that our "buds" are praying every day.

At Sacred Heart School, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., we have many members of the Rose Garden. Here we have Joyce Tichy with her dog, and Marion Hinsperger as she looked three years ago. Marion is eight now.

NONSENSE

Both the photographer and the mother had failed to make the restless little four-year-old sit still long enough to have his picture taken. Finally the photographer suggested that "the little darling" might be quiet if his mother would leave the room a few minutes. During her absence the picture was successfully taken. On the way home the mother asked, "What did the nice man say to make mother's little darling sit still?"

"He thed, 'You sit still, you little brat, or I'll knock your block off,' so I sat still."

"Whom does your little son look like?"

"His eyes are mine, the nose is my wife's and the voice, I think he got from our motor horn."

"What a big family you have, Mrs. Jones," said the visitor.

"Yes'm. And the funny thing is that all the names begin with a haitch. There's 'Orace, 'Erbert, 'Enry, 'Ugh, 'Ubert, 'Arold, 'Arriet and 'Etty—all except the last one, and we 'ad 'er named Hallace."

It is stated that 1934 motors are being made to appeal to women. Strong, silent cars.

The pencil has made a number of pointed remarks about the sponge being soaked all day and the waste-basket's being full. The scissors are cutting up and the paper-weight is trying to hold them down, while the mucilage is sticking around to see that the stamps get a good licking. The ink's well but appears to be blue, while Bill is stuck in the file and the calendar expects to get a month off. The blotter has been taking it all in.

"The cane will not make a boy learn quicker." "But it makes him smart."

In an effort to bolster the saving habit, an economist has estimated that if you deposit $1,000 in the bank, and leave it there for 150 years at 3 per cent interest compounded semi-annually, your great-great grandchildren will have a swell time.

The teacher was giving the class a lecture on "gravity".

"Now, children," she said, "it is the law of gravity that keeps us on this earth."

"But, please, teacher," inquired one small child, "how did we stick on before the law was passed?"

A road contractor who professed a great love for children flew into a temper when a little fellow trod on the new pavement before it was dry.

"I thought you loved children," commented a friend.

"So I do, in the abstract, but not in the concrete."

A young actor had been entrusted with the lines: "The King is dead. Long live the king!" When the supreme moment came, however, nervousness caused him to lose his head. He paraphrased his words: "Long live the king! He's dead."

Gossips have a keen sense of rumor.

When we ask a friend for his candid opinion, what we really want is his candied opinion.

We know a Scotsman who uses only one spur. He figures that the other side will go anyway.

The examiner wished to get the children to express moral reprobation of lazy people, and he led upto it by asking them who were the persons who got all they could and did nothing in return.

For some time there was silence, but at last a little girl, who had obviously reasoned out the answer inductively from her own home experiences, exclaimed, with a good deal of confidence: "Please, sir, it's the baby!"

"That young lady over there seems very popular; who is she?" "She's the daughter of a banker." "Ah, no wonder she draws so much interest."

"Miss Wrighter, do you know your work of late has been most perfunctory?"

"Thank you, sir; that's the first bit of praise I've had about it."

A Scotsman stood in line waiting to buy seats for a film, "The Miracle". Behind him stood a Jew.

"Have you any two-shilling seats for this show?" inquired the Scot when he reached the window.

"I'm sorry, but we have sold all the two-shilling ones," was the answer.

"Then give me two three-shilling seats," said the Highlander.

When the Hebrew heard this he immediately left the line.

"I vill keep my money—I have seen de Miracle," he said.

At a horse fair in a country town, all sorts and conditions of horses were being offered for sale. Every old crock in the county seemed to be there. The auctioneer stood ready to begin business, which looked like being pretty bad.

An old farmer came up with an aged steed gone in at the knees and walking on three legs.

"How much?" asked the auctioneer.

"Fifteen pounds" came the stolid reply.

The auctioneer looked pained and surprised.

"I want to know your price—not the weight of the animal!" he remarked.

Tommy—"You are the most wonderful girl in the world. You are the object of my dreams, the light of my life, the hope of my hopes, my inspiration and my ambition. I would fight dragons, conquer the world for you. I would give my life for you! Will you be mine?"

Bernice—"Do you love me, Tommy?"

"I do hope you keep your cows in a pasture," said Mrs. Newlywed as she paid the milkman.

"Yes, madam," replied the milkman, "of course we keep them in a pasture."

"I'm so glad! I've been told that pasteurized milk is much the best."

"Your methods of cultivation are hopelessly out of date," said the youthful agriculture college graduate to the old farmer. "Why, I'd be astonished if you get even ten pounds of apples from that tree."

"So would I," said the farmer. "It's a pear tree."

At a recent literary gathering in London, Mr. Ernest Milton told a story of two flies. "A fly," he said, "was walking on a bald man's head. She had her daughter with her, and as she looked round she was heard to say, 'Ah! my dear, when I was your age this was only a footpath'."

Mother—"You were very naughty to disobey me, and I have punished you to impress it on your mind."

Son: "Mummie, but my mind's not down there."

Rider: "Why didn't you sound your horn when you saw the man in the road?"

Driver: "I thought it would be more humane if he never knew what hit him."

CHINA

Subscribers are Requested to Read the Following Very Carefully

The subscription price to CHINA is fifty cents a year. Subscribers who do not receive the magazine regularly will confer a favor by notifying us.

EXPIRY DATE

The date to which your subscription is paid up is marked on your address label.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Do not fail to inform us promptly if at any time you change your address. In doing so, please send us your old as well as your new address.

DUPLICATE COPIES

If you are receiving two copies of CHINA, and have subscribed for only one, kindly let us know.

SENDING SUBSCRIPTIONS

In sending your subscription to CHINA, be sure to state WHETHER IT IS A RENEWAL OR A NEW SUBSCRIPTION.

MRS. OR MISS

Very often we do not know which to put on our stencil, as there is nothing to indicate which it should be. Will our lady friends kindly make this clear.

ATTENTION TO THE ABOVE DETAILS WILL BE GREATLY APPRECIATED.

REMITTANCES

Money should be sent by Post Office or Express Money Orders, Drafts or Registered Letters to ensure safe delivery. All such orders may be made payable to:

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

---------- You can use the following coupon ----------

"CHINA"
St. F. X. Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Dear Fathers:—

Enclosed find $..... as a subscription to "China" for ..... years.

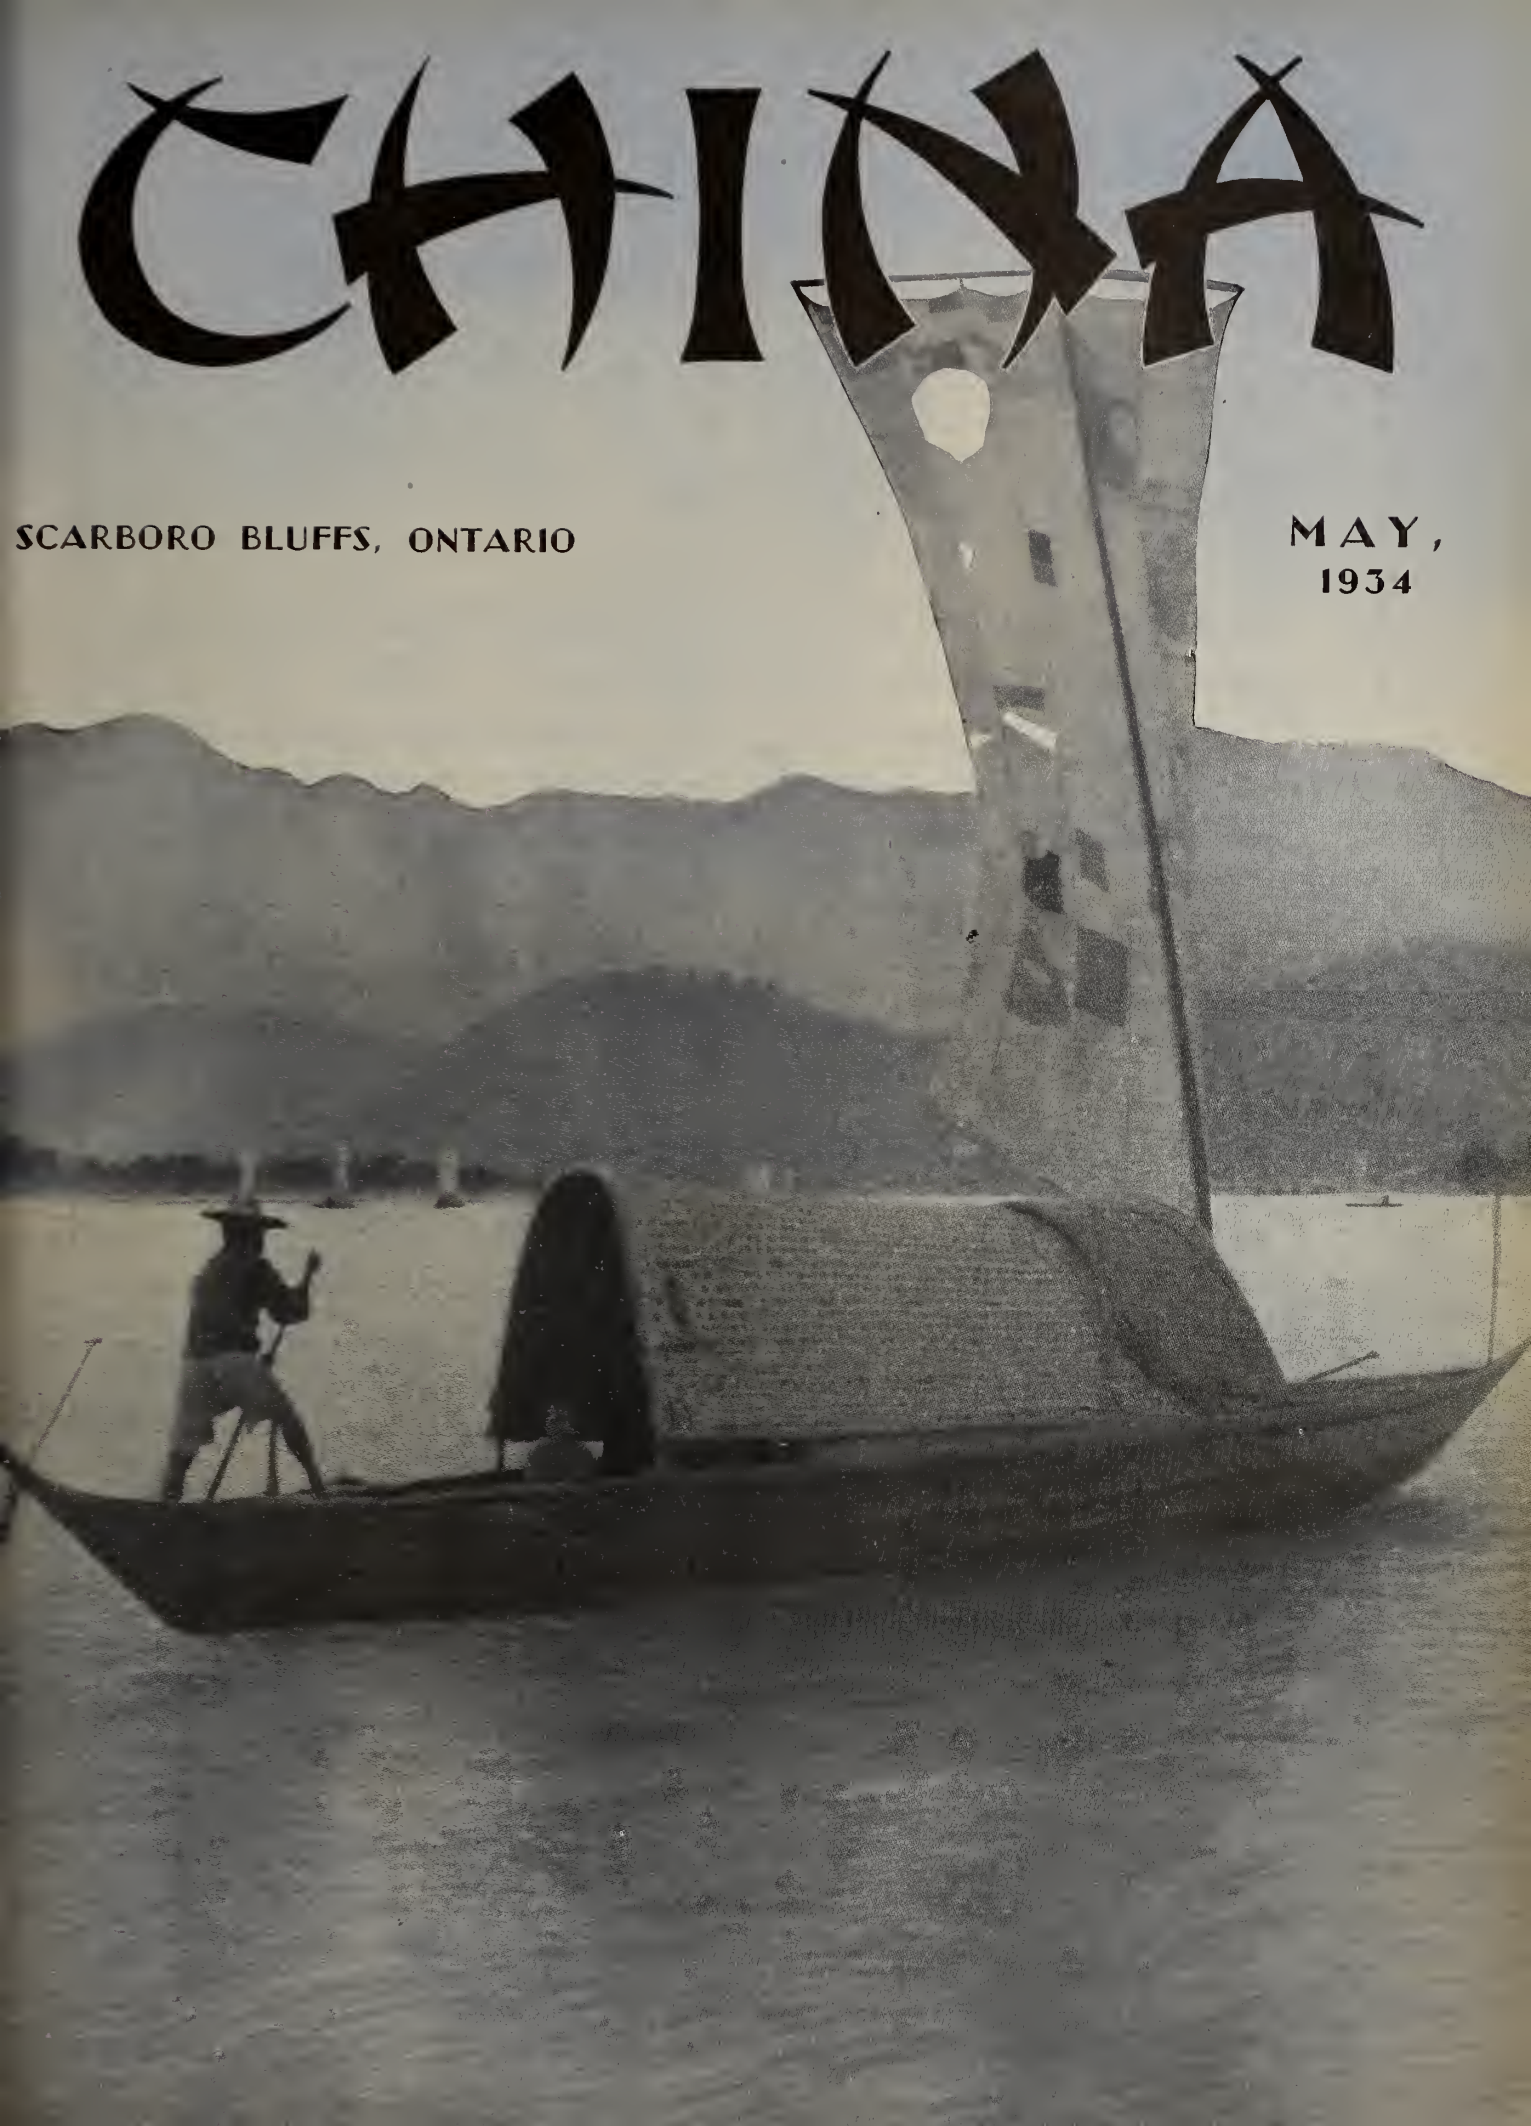
Name ..... Name .....

Address ..... Address .....

....

(If you have changed your address, please give us the OLD address as well as the NEW one)

Problems Can be Solved by



CATHOLIC WILLS

For Mission Needs

The instinct is strong to "keep what we have". Yet when death summons we must go to the grave "clutching in our dead hands only that which we have given away". If you feel you cannot share your earthly possessions now with God, perhaps you will be mindful of Him and His Missions when drawing up your last will. You can be sure that what you leave to carry on Catholic Mission work will merit a blessing on your soul, and cause your name to be held in benediction long after you are dead. In China, our priests need funds for new chapels, for new schools, for new homes, and for payment of salaries to catechists. In Canada, our Seminary needs support for the training of young apostles and for the maintenance of their home. Donations to our Burse Fund and our Building Fund are our greatest present needs. Think of our Mission work when making, or changing, your last will. Here's how you can do it; insert this clause in your will:

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO, THE SUM OF .....

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

MAY,
1934

INTERNATIONAL VARNISH CO. LIMITED
TORONTO

PRODUCERS OF

TRADE ELASTICA MARK

Varnishes

Paints, Lacqueret and Kwickwork Auto Enamels

Special Seat Finish for Church Pews

Our Decorative Department is at your service at all times and enquiries promptly replied to.

Gerrard and Carlaw Phone HA. 2178

Safety and Good Interest Return

5%

We allow 5% interest on sums of $100.00 or over placed with us for five years; 4¾% for one to four years. 3½% on Savings which are subject to withdrawal by cheque. $1.00 Opens an Account.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST GUARANTEED

Capital Trust Corporation
Limited

TORONTO OTTAWA MONTREAL

Under Dominion Government Inspection

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.
OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-2-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West
Toronto

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McNeil, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, P.A.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 26,700
Entered as second class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XV. MAY, 1934 No. 5

Priests! Priests! and More Priests!

Being engaged in a work that has for its object the spreading of the Catholic Faith in China, we feel it incumbent on us to keep on reminding our Catholic people of the greatest need of the Church in her missionary enterprises. It is the need of priests. Instead of speaking in vague phrases and urging Catholics in a general way to help spread the Faith in pagan lands, let us give a practical turn to the exhortation, and tell you that the best way you can translate into action your desire to aid the missions is by helping to educate young men who have dedicated their lives to the missionary priesthood.

* * *

For the extension of God's Kingdom on earth it is essential that priests be supplied in numbers sufficient to care for the spiritual needs of all who become members of God's Church. In the Divine ordering of things the priest is the necessary instrument conveying spiritual gifts from the Creator to the creature. The offering of Sacrifice and the administration of the Sacraments are alone the prerogatives of duly ordained ministers of Religion, and whenever we speak of people being brought to a knowledge of God we mean that they are partakers in Divine Sacrifice and in a position to receive the Sacraments. "Bringing the Faith to pagan lands" means nothing more nor less than this: that people who did not know God are taught the truths of religion, instructed as to how to lead a good life, and then are made children of God through the reception of baptism, and are given the aid of the other Sacraments as the various necessities of life demand. That all these benefits may be brought to those who "still sit in darkness and the shadow of death" it is necessary that priests go to pagan lands. To help send priests there is the practical way open to you to help the propagation of the Faith which you value so much.

* * *

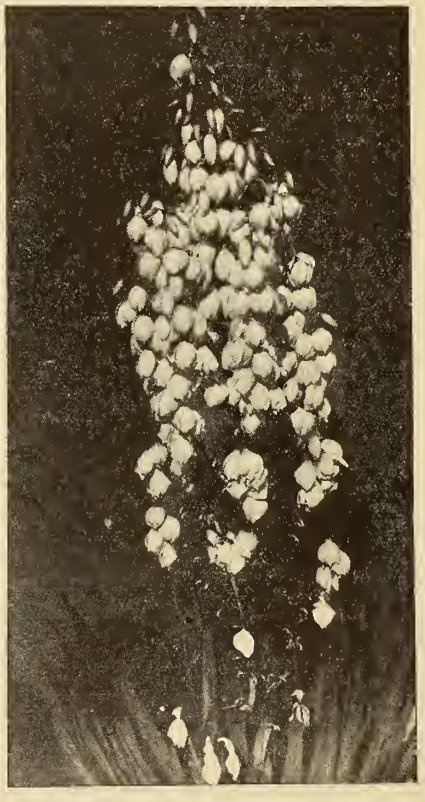
Priests! Priests! and more priests! is the continual cry coming to us from the pagan world today. To supply priests for the evangelization of China is the purpose of St. Francis Xavier Seminary. "China" is the mouthpiece of the Seminary in making appeals to the Catholics of Canada and Newfoundland for support in this most necessary work. We are providing the requisite facilities for the education of students for the priesthood, and in order that we may be enabled to carry on such work unhampered by lack of means we invite the co-operation of all our readers. Without the generous help of interested friends our task would be well nigh impossible. We have all along been encouraged by the dealings of Divine Providence in giving us friends when we needed them most. With thirty-six students now at the Seminary, and prospects of having at least fifty with us next September, our need today is greater than ever before for contributions to our Burse Fund.

* * *

The education of a priest takes time and costs a lot of money, but if we could secure many friends who would build up our Burses then we would have no misgivings about the upkeep of fifty students. Since the last issue of "China" went in the mails we have had the good fortune to secure a fully completed Burse. A lady called at the Seminary and left with us a cheque for five thousand dollars to establish a Burse in honor of St. Agnes. From Nova Scotia came a gift of one thousand dollars to help the completion of another Burse, and this represented the life savings of an elderly gentleman who has done a great deal on former occasions to help in the same splendid work. From a little town in Ontario there comes to us as regularly as clockwork every month a generous donation to the Burse in honor of St. Francis Xavier. The gentleman who remembers us so frequently is doing more than anyone else to bring this Burse in honor of our patron to completion. A welcome aid, five hundred dollars, recently came to us from Newfoundland, bringing to two thousand dollars the amount contributed by the same person for St. Patrick's Burse.

* * *

Need we say that we are exceedingly grateful to the many friends who have remembered our needs in the past, and especially so to those good friends whose generous gifts we have told you about. We would like you, too, who are reading this, to assist in supporting priests who are so necessary to bring salvation to innumerable souls in China. God's blessing will surely be with those who bring other Christs into the vast mission field of the Orient.



Looking Things Over in Sung-Yang

By
REV. L. J. BEAL

AT SIX O'CLOCK this morning a heavy fog covered the city and reduced visibility to a minimum; a cold stillness permeated the place. The sun had made one unsuccessful effort to shine through before 7.30 a.m. as the Christians were coming in for Mass. As I left the church I could not help thinking of the analogy between the physical and spiritual condition of our city of Sungyang at the moment, an analogy that seemed to fit all parts. The fog enveloping the city was shutting out the light of the sun, which was endeavouring to break through and make things more cheerful; the fog of paganism was likewise overshadowing the city, making difficult the appearance of that Light which would waken the poor pagans to a better life in the warmth of Catholic Faith.

As I write these lines the city is roused from its slumber and the sound of superstitious rites and pagan worship comes to me from the many Temples devoted to the gods. These same sounds have been echoing for centuries, lulling the people into a state of false security. The working out of man's salvation has been entrusted to human agencies, and the process will be slow. There is not a missionary in this vast country but would like to see the immediate conversion of the masses; the missionaries are doing everything humanly possible, and God in His own good time will grant the increase. With a continual influx of missionary priests and sisters, the scene is bound to be changed sooner or later, and this Republic of China will be netted together in stronger bonds of union than ever before.

It is often the human element interfering with the work which sets things awry and retards the efforts of the missionary. An element that militates against the more rapid conversion of pagans is the conduct of Christians themselves; the example they give to their pagan neighbours is often far from edifying. It was my own experience not so long ago to have my Christians in open rebellion against a simple executive order for the betterment of the parish. Such conduct has not a beneficial influence on the onlookers, who are often pagans or catechumens; they are amazed and scandalized at the manner in which some Christians conduct themselves before the priest. Obedience and discipline seem to be entirely lacking in their makeup, and these characteristics are indispensable for order and progress in parish affairs. Thank God there are some who really make an effort to exhort their pagan friends and neighbours to become faithful members of the Church and observe the rules of proper living. It is the same the wide world over, I know. Some there are who are a glory to the Church, while others are a scandal and a stumbling block. It requires untiring patience and prayer to overcome our difficulties; by keeping the old truths prominently before our people we hope to achieve results in the changing of their attitude slowly but nevertheless surely.

April showers brought forth these May flowers in the convent garden at Lishui.

Some time ago I was called to the bedside of an old man who had worked in the mission as a painter. He had more than his share of family troubles and worries with his wife, a woman who gave almost inhuman treatment to a newly-acquired daughter-in-law, a minor. The poor worried man often came to me for consolation and advice. He complained of the hounding given the defenceless young girl in his home by the wife to whom Christian principles did not mean a thing. I went to the house to persuade the woman to show at least ordinary kindness to the girl, but she was a stubborn customer and bent on running things her own mad way. Finally, the girl's family was obliged to remove her from the care of her inhuman mother-in-law lest death in some sinister form should be her portion. To our painter friend I gave daily instructions, and for an old man he made wonderful progress in learning Catholic doctrine. One Sunday morning after Mass his little boy rushed to the Mission and begged me to go see his father before he died. After questioning him on the chief points of doctrine, I administered Baptism, and within half an hour the man was dead. He had given explicit orders that no superstitious rites were to take place at his funeral. His wife refused point blank to obey his directions, but I did not worry, as the man's soul was safe from harm now. The wife is an ardent votary of the gods and carries on the most extravagant form of worship at the temples. Christianity is like poison to her, and her conversion would be nothing short of a miracle of grace. The good example of her kind-hearted husband has never made an impression on her, and for the priest and his religion she has nothing but contempt and abusive words.

Outside Sungyang city we have four chapels, two in reputedly wealthy centres of commerce and two in quite poorly-off rural dis-

(Continued on page 77)

In the Hill Country of Chuchow

* * *

By
REV. BERNARD BOUDREAU

IT was quite a walk to Blue Mountain Head. We had never been there. Since Mr. King and myself were out for the getting, we struck for there. The climb was not a steep and hard one, though sixty-four-year-old Mr. King thought it was. Blue Mountain Head is not much of a place. There are no Christians there—just a few lax Catechumens. It is a small place, only forty families or so. The top and sides of the mount is bareness. At the foot on all sides are many small villages, and beyond these, to the next ridge, are just rice fields and water holes.

"Where is the town we are going to, Mr. King?"

"Blue Mountain Head Town."

"And which may that be of all those we see spread out before us?"

"Over to the left of you, near to the grove. See that large white building with a wall around it? That is the place."

"Queer that town should inherit the name of this mountain, when all these other towns seem nearer."

"Let us sit down, Spiritual Father."

"No. We must go down now. It will soon be noon."

* * *

"Father Bou! Ah! Father Bou! Most extraordinary, most extraordinary. I am most unworthy of your call to my very miserable abode."

"Do not be so polite. I see you have a fine lot of pigs this year. And that is your farm land over there? What a large farm you have. Surely your crops must be quite a revenue to you."

"Yes; but this year the taxes are very high. I do not see how I can clear my debts. It is a tax for this and a tax for that, a new tax here and a new tax there. Really they are going to kill us. By the way, the Spiritual Father would not have a place for me at the mission? I could be gatekeeper, gardener—in fact anything. I do not want any salary, just my food. It would also be so easy for me to observe the Sundays, and learn doctrine. I coud adore God with my whole heart then."

"Can you not adore God with your whole heart now?"

"But I am busy."

"Christ was not too busy to save you. The Priest was not too busy to teach you doctrine. You speak much like a child. I will make a plan for you. Listen to me. . . ."

"But, Spiritual Father . . ."

"Yes, listen to me . . ."

"But, Father, I have pigs to . . ."

"Please listen . . ."

"And I have cows to tend to, and much land, and I am alone and . . ."

"And you have a soul to work for. How is the catechism coming on?"

"We farmers have no time at all from sunrise to sunset."

"You know your catechism well. All memorized? Yes?

"No-o-o. I am a tiller of the soil."

"What has that got to do with your soul?"

"But the Spiritual Father does not understand. I am busy, real busy. Furthermore, I do not know characters, and I have no memory at all."

"By the way, when is the next market day?"

"Let me see. Yesterday was the 15th—the 13th—last market day was the 9th, that is the big market day. The next big market day will be four days less one day, the 19th."

"You have a very good memory."

"Ha! Ha! The Spiritual Father is very foxy. Really you know, Mr. King, tillers of the soil have all they can do to keep themselves alive, and every cent earned has to go a long way, and there is a great distance between every cent."

"How far is it to Earthenpot-Kiln-Hill?"

"Just eight miles the other side of High Creek, which is five miles to the west of the other side of this mountain. And what may the Spiritual Father be going there for?"

"Just scatter a few steps. Well, do not forget, three days hence will be Sunday—the day preceding market-day. Good-bye."

* * *

"A good old fellow he is, eh, Mr. King? I think he will make a good Christian."

"Yes, I suppose so."

We had been walking for some time. We approached a resting place and decided to sit down. Mr. King kept up a conversation on how some old people manage to keep young. "Take myself for example," he says, "I am not afraid to go up and down the hills. My age has nothing to do with my legs. Age, you know, Spiritual Father, is just a worry. Each morning you get up to find that your crop of grey hairs has increased, and so you lament to yourself you are getting old. Old Mr. Forest who keeps a drug store, every time I go there to see him, he laments he is getting older and older and no sons. 'Ai-ya,' he says, 'Elder Brother, what a calamity! What am I going to do?' Take again Mr. Tang, every day it costs him as much as three dollars taking medicine to keep young. And Mr. Liu is the same way."

* * *

"Sit down. Sit down."

"Your honorable name?"

"Chu."

"Going where?"

"To the city."

"What is your business there?"

"Nothing."

"Oh-ha!"

"Where do you come from?"

"Twenty miles up the valley."

"Oh."

"You have many sons?"

"Three."

"All in the same business?"

"No."

"You must come and adore God. He will make you happy."

"Has the Foreign Gentleman been many years in my humble country?"

"Almost three complete years have I been a resident in your honorable country. Does my esteemed friend believe in God?"

"No."

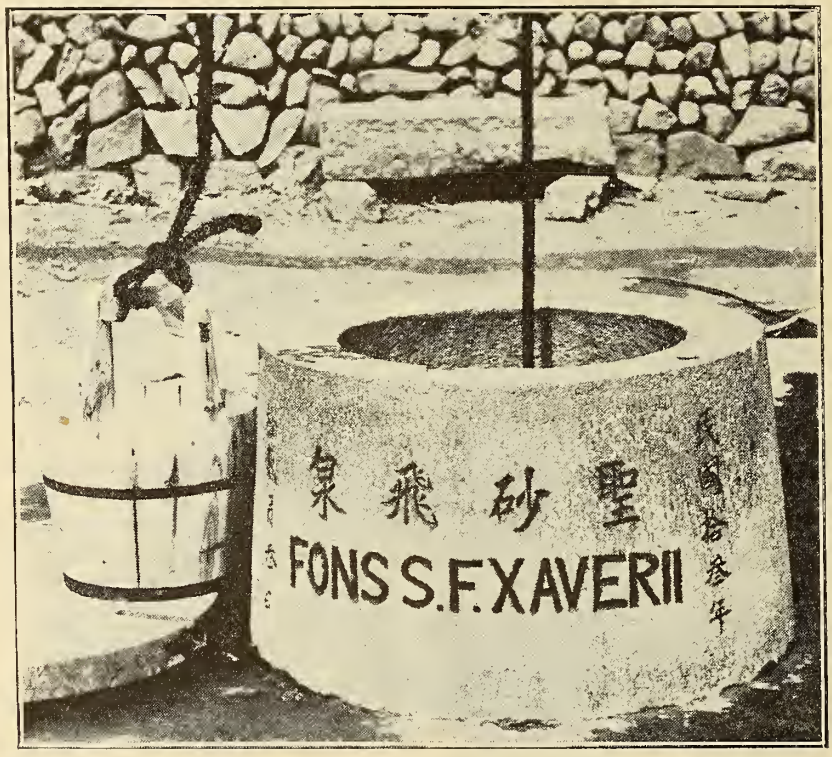
"My honorable Elder Brother believes in an after life?"

"Yes."

"You have a soul and a body—will not your body and soul die together?"

"Yes, I have a soul; it will not die as my body. When my body is buried my soul will go to another place for a while and come back again."

"Where is this temporal resting place for the soul? And when will it come back again? How do you know it will come back?"



"When I was small my mother used to tell me. So did my grandmother tell me so. I have forgotten most of what they used to tell me. As one gets on in age he soon forgets the things of childhood."

"You become an old man when the young years go—but surely your grandmother impressed you more than that. She was wise; you should be, too. The soul has faculties as the body has senses. That cow over yonder eating away at the newly dug potatoes has eyes, ears, nose, mouth, legs, just as you have. Suppose the owner of the potatoes comes along, will the cow know enough to beg his pardon or make good for the potatoes she ate. Supposing that that cow is yours; it will be you and the owner of the potatoes who will have to fight it out. Does my Honorable Elder Brother see my point?"

"Certainly I am different from a cow!"

"But how are you so different?"

"Oh, it is just the make-up of man. A cow is just bones and

AT Monsignor Fraser's headquarters in Kinhwa there is a well inscribed in Latin and Chinese: "Fons S. F. Xaverii, December 3, 1924." Father Ouang, former director of this Mission, related its history to Msgr. Fraser, and why he called it St. Francis Xavier's Spring with the date of our Patron's Feast Day.

He hired a squad of workmen to sink a well in the priests' yard. A few feet below the surface they struck rock, and all the way down had to chisel with their crude instruments. It was dangerous work, too, for the broken rock had to be drawn up over their heads by pulley; but no one was hurt. After digging very deep, and not finding water, they became discouraged and wished to give up. Father Ouang asked them to continue. Next day was Dec. 3, Feast of St. Francis Xavier; perhaps he would come to the rescue. Mass was said in his honour; noon arrived; the priests were seated at dinner when the workmen came rushing in with the good news; all of a sudden sparkling pure water had gushed up through the rock in great quantity, and the men had lost no time in coming to the surface.

From that day to this, though all the other wells in the vicinity run dry at certain seasons, this well always yields a plenteous supply of delicious water.

By a pretty coincidence, in the same year as this happened, 1924, Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, was blessed by the Archbishop of Toronto.

flesh made to help man till the soil and sometime secretly killed for man to eat and that is the end of her. Whereas man he has to bring up a family, earn enough for all to eat, run a business, run a farm, become a teacher, and ever so many other things he has to do."

"Man is the noblest of all the things you are able to think of, and all because he has a soul made to the image and likeness of his Creator. It is his very life. He cannot separate himself from it. Every action demands the power of his soul. You are able to think, to remember, and to love. Surely your eyes, your hands, or your feet, cannot do the same. Your parents gave you a body and God gave you a soul. Your body is not worth two coppers because it is subject to all kinds of sicknesses, and finally it dies and stinks and becomes eaten up by worms, and then what has become of that nice little loved and much petted body of yours? Yours? It never dies; it belongs to God. It is made to His image and likeness. He is everlasting. You must give your soul back to God. You must believe in an after life. If you do not, then why should God give you a soul that lasts for ever and ever? I invite both you gentlemen, when you are around Jade Lake, to come to the Mission."

"We will; we will. Goodbye."

* * *

"He did not like it when I compared him to a cow, did he, Mr. King? I felt like telling him the story of the Priest standing in a railroad station waiting for his train. You remember it, Mr. King?"

"No, I do not."

"It goes like this: A wise fellow approached the Priest, leading a little dog; he says to the Priest: 'You preachers are just doers of nothing. You know as well as I do that this soul business is emptiness. My happiness is what I make it here. I die. I stay dead. What is inside and outside of me goes the same road.' The Priest looks around, looks at the little dog, then his owner, and very politely asks the owner why should he be leading his younger brother about with a strap around his neck. The people standing around all laughed heartily. The man and the dog both went to the far end of the station."

"Good enough for him."

* * *

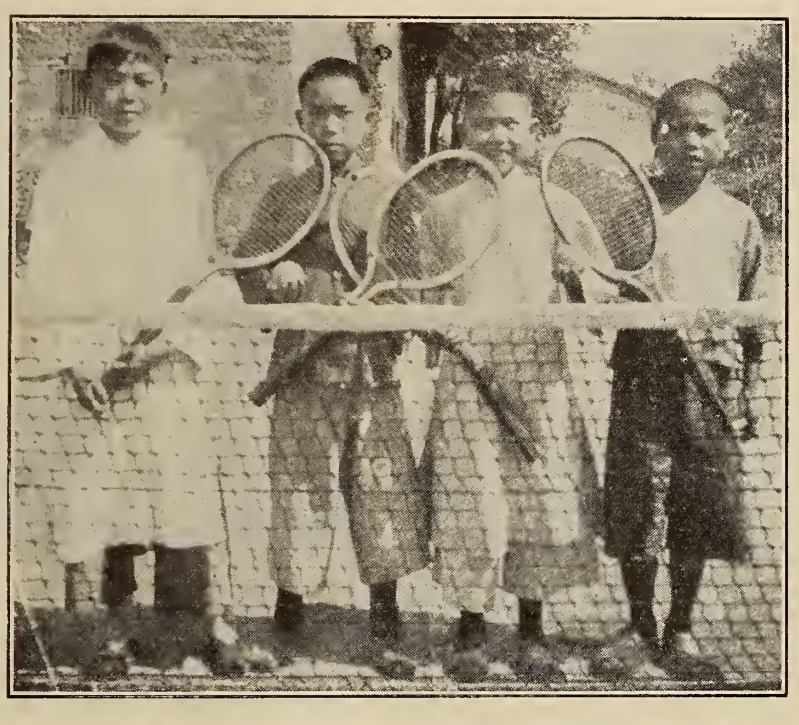
"We are nearing High Creek. I see the schoolhouse in the distance where our friend, Mr. Leaf, teaches. I suppose he is at home?"

"Yes, he is."

Our friend here is a young Catechumen, very zealous, and studies doctrine all the time. He is a rich young fellow. Reminds one very much of the kind of Christians you meet way back home. Rain or shine, he comes to listen to doctrine every Sunday. When he doesn't come he sends me a letter of apology and assures me he is not getting remiss, but because of things at home he was unable to attend services.

* * *

"Chuh-p'ei, we have come to disturb you."



"No guest-airs. You are always so polite."

"Do you think, Chuh-p'ei, they will ever get rid of those awful rice-field paths. A slip and you are in for a bath."

"You foreigners are used to good things. We have nothing good in China."

"Is that so! What about the Catholic Church?"

(Continued on page 74)

FOOTBALL and tennis are the big games with the Lishui schoolboys. The lad on the right, whose name is Ho Tay, was our champion all-round athlete till he left us last year. In another environment he might easily have had his name in the sport pages later on, but if there should be any mute, inglorious Morenzs or Tildens among our Chekiang lads the world will never know.

Ho Tay is fourteen, and his athletic career is at an end. He is even now embarked upon the drab life work of driving a lazy water buffalo through muddy rice-paddies. For he is to be a farmer in China, and, believe us, that's something these days.

But he seems nowise daunted by the fact that he's probably licked before he starts. His "father before him" is one of the happiest and most cheerful men we ever met. When Ho Tay returns to the school to visit his former chums they give him a great razzing because he's going to be a farmer. "Gee haw," "Gee haw" (or its Chinese equivalent) they yell at him. You see they are going to be tinsmiths and tailors and barbers later on. When they have served three or four years' apprenticeship they will receive one Chinese dollar and a set of tools and then they will be able to earn their ten cents a day with the best of them. And some of them will enter the Seminary in China.

LITTLE FLOWER'S ROSE GARDEN

Edited by FATHER JIM

CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP

The only conditions of membership in the Rose Garden are: (1) To say every day the Prayer for the Conversion of China; (2) To go to Holy Communion once a month for the Intention of Missionary Vocations. Certificates and pins will be sent to all members.

Dear Boys and Girls:

It surely is nice to be able to enjoy again the fine warm sunshine which comes to us with the month of May. It is Mary's month, a period always welcome to those who have particular devotion to our Blessed Mother. Of course, that means all our "Buds", for never was there a true missionary helper who did not have a very tender affection for the Queen of the Missions. I know many and fervent will be the acts of sacrifice made this month in honor of Mary, God's Mother and ours.

It is a big month, too, for devotees of the "Little Flower". On May 8th this year will be celebrated the 50th anniversary of the First Holy Communion of our sainted Patroness. Father Jim is going to offer his Mass on the morning of May 8th for all the members of the "Rose Garden" to beg God's blessing on them and their work and to ask God to always keep them as good and as pure as they were on the day when they made their First Holy Communion. It may interest you to know that the dress which St. Therese wore on the day of her First Communion in 1884 is one of the most highly prized relics in the Theresian Museum at Lisieux. On May 17th, 1925, occurred the canonization of St. Therese. I recommend to the boys and girls of our Club that they make a special effort to go to Holy Communion on May 8th and May 17th and offer these Communions for the Missions.

If there be such a thing as "overpopularity" it is the one fault we have to find with our "Rose Garden". We had never imagined our Club would reach the proportions it has now attained. So many boys and girls have written to become members that I have now decided it is impossible, for various reasons, to send individual cards of membership to those whose names come in large school groups. Henceforth, I will send a membership card to the class as a whole. Teachers will kindly note this new arrangement and let me know the proper designation of their classroom groups.

Yours for the Missions,

FATHER JIM.

FROM SUNNY FLORIDA

To several members who have already written us from Florida, we now add the name of Roland Smith, a pupil at St. Joseph's Academy, Jacksonville. Roland is a weekly communicant, and an altar boy. He has a garden of his own, and ten pet animals. Here's a chance for some other buds to get a letter from "way down South".

A Prayer for the Conversion of China

(To be said daily by the members of the "Rose Garden")

O Lord Jesus Christ, who didst come on earth to save the souls of men, open now Thy most Sacred Heart in mercy to the people of China, who still sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, and shower Thy graces on them, that they may come to the knowledge of Thy Gospel. Bless also and protect Thy missionaries and make their work fruitful for Thee of countless souls. —Amen.

(300 days' Indulgence)
With Ecclesiastical Approbation

No one has been more faithful in corresponding with Father Jim than Mary Kerr, of Perth, Ont. Mary has been helping the Missions for years, and now she writes "the game is up; I'm not going to call you 'Father Jim' any longer, for that's not your real name." Mary said she got "all the news" about me from a priest who knows me well, but "no matter how hard I tried to get him mixed up when he was talking he never mentioned your name even once". And if you do get that picture, Mary, we'll have to do something about it.

Apologies are offered to the Boys of St. John's School, Ardley, B.C. Writing for them, Edward McMahon was very nice in telling Father Jim that they feared I "had forgotten all about them". Not on your life, Edward—even though I have kept you waiting so long for your badges. And just when Father Jim was having his ears frozen in below-zero weather, Edward reminded him that "out here in Ardley the weather is very nice, with dandelions and crocuses and rose bushes flourishing". Well, we always did think that the far West wasn't a bad place to live in (or did we?). And that request for a mite box for the school shows that Edward and his chums have no hard feelings. You'll hear from me soon, boys!

James Lafontaine, writing from St. Joseph's School, North Bay, Ont., tells me: "Today we completed our five dollars for our Chinese baby and we were pleased to have it for Easter. It was quite slow for a while but we finally succeeded in getting it. The girls had $2.68, the boys had $2.66, but after some excitement the boys increased their amount to $2.71, and the girls to $2.70. The girls worked hard, but since we won the contest we are naming the baby Francis Xavier." I think, "Buds," that goes to prove how important even one little cent can be when sacrificed for the cause of the Missions. I imagine, though, that when the new "Francis Xavier" gets to Heaven he will not be unmindful of the girls who helped him get there.

The Modern Crusade

A Letter to our Junior Readers from Rev. J. Venini, Kankou, China

"Pou pa man ts pa tsan." That, my dear children, is supposed to be a Chinese proverb, and it might be translated into the King's English as reading, "Do not be afraid of going slowly, but of standing still." I am glad I came across that proverb, as it gives me a goat on which to hang the blame for not having answered sooner your welcome letters.

I am so glad to learn that you have such an active Crusade Unit in your school. That's the spirit. Keep it up and the Holy Land will soon be retaken. Judging from your letters, I am sure there are many Geoffreys and Richards the Lion Heart among you. And the girls are much more fortunate now than in the days of old, because now they can follow the Crusades right onto the battlefield, whilst their sisters of the days gone by were forced to wave a weeping farewell from the moat wall. All that sounds very romantic and adventurous, doesn't it? No doubt the whole business of the Crusades was very romantic and adventurous. Perhaps too much so, because we know the results that attended the Crusades. With the exception of the first Crusade, it is rather a sad and disappointing tale.

It may be that some of you imagine the missionary of today, in China, going about as St. Francis Xavier has been pictured by various artists. St. Francis went fishing with a net, as they say. As for us, we have to be content to go fishing "a la ligne", and even then sometimes we get our line all tangled up or lose the hook, and are forced to return with only stories of the big fish that got away. No doubt even in the missions of today there is a certain element of adventure, of the romantic. It is well, perhaps necessary, that such is the case, because after all we are earthly, of the earth, and we needs must have an ideal that is above the earth, to lead us on to greater things. But at the same time the serious, the real work of the mission must not be too thickly gilded over. The Crusades had for their objective the wresting of the Holy Places from infidel hands. When that objective was attained the work of the Crusades was finished. The missions have a much more difficult task. The citadel being attacked is not one of stones and bricks. The war is against the powers of darkness. No truce is ever declared, and the battle will go on until the Church militant will have ceased to be. And so, my dear children, try to get the spirit of the first Crusade into your work. The first Crusade was prepared and undertaken in a spirit of religion, in a spirit of love for the greater glory of God. You will remember how Pope Urban, during Lent of the year 1095, whilst he was preaching to the people, and exhorting them to engage in the holy Cause of the Crusades, was interrupted by the people shouting, "God wills it, God wills it." Let that cry be also the moving spirit of your meetings and work: "God wills it." God wills that we should love Him, that we should show our love of Him by bringing others to know and love Him. Be convinced of this and all will be well with your work.

And now a little something about the missions here. You tell me you have been studying China in your geography classes. If that is so, you will all be well posted along those lines, and will get 100 at the exams. But what you did not learn in your geography lessons was, how lucky for all you who read these lines that you were not born in this land of the idols. For the boys it would not have been too bad. Life would be a hard one for them, plenty of work and not much else besides. But for the girls it would be much worse. For the greater part of them, their portion would be to be bundled off, long before they had given up sucking their thumbs, to the homes of their future husbands. There life would not be very pleasant for them. Drudgery, and in capital letters, would be their lot. And such drudges will they be as to far outclass anything Dickens has pictured for us. Gathering firewood, toting about a baby tied to their backs, gathering weeds for the pigs, washing the clothes, these will be a few of the tasks of your little Chinese sisters from almost the time they are able to toddle about. And woe betide them when they are caught in fault. Only here the other day, the little drudge in one of the houses facing the mission was tied up by her hair, her hands also tied high above her head, and her toes just reaching the ground, and whilst strung up in this position she was beaten on the shins with bamboo switches. Not a very nice treatment, was it?

Of course you must not think that all the people in China are so cruel or that such is the hard lot of all the children, but it is so with very many, at least in this part of China. And if the lot of

(Continued on page 78)

St. Mary's School,
Barrie, Ontario.

Dear Father Jim:

We received a letter from Father Venini in China, and thought you would like to read it. The Crusaders of St. Mary's have been active all year. We divided the year into three parts. From September to Christmas our prayers and offerings were directed to the good missionaries labouring in the vast field of China; from Christmas to Easter for missionaries in India, and from Easter to June they will be for Western Canada. We sent beautiful spiritual offerings and cheques for ten dollars to China and India, and hope to do the same in June for Western Canada.

Our Crusade meetings are indeed interesting. We all take a very great interest in this work, and at every meeting we have papers read on the work being done in the Missions. Dean Sweeney, our Pastor, and Father McHenry encourage us in this work, and are always present at our meetings. Sincerely yours,

KATHLEEN FIRTH,
Sec., C.C.S.M.C. Unit.

In the Hill Country of Chuchow

(Continued from page 71)

"Oh, I do not mean it that way."

"These are all your pupils?"

"Yes."

"You are alone to teach them?"

"Yes. Country schools are all small, and the people cannot afford many teachers. This is a small town."

"Are there any more who, like yourself, adore God?"

"Just now I have met several young fellows who intend to come. I think the Catholic Church will do well here, because the people are simple, and love the Catholic doctrine."

"Fine; maybe . . ."

"Drink tea, Spiritual Father; it is cool now and it will warm you. You will stay and have dinner with me?"

"Really we cannot. We want to return this evening, and we still must go on to Earthenpot-Kiln-Hill. There is an old, old Christian there I have never met."

"It is all politeness. You must stay."

"We have to go."

"No. I will make you stay. Here now (he grabs me by the arm and sits me down), sit down. Such politeness!"

* * *

In spite of the edict to convert all temples into schools, it so happens, as in most cases, the former temple is now school and temple. There is the nation's flag hanging on a flimsy wall, and directly behind sit the big fat idols. The front door takes you to the school; the back door takes you to smiling Buddhas. New principles are easily set in order; but to engrave them into the hearts of the people willy-nilly is more than a man's work.

* * *

"Very peculiar, Chuh-p'ei, here you are teaching the youngsters what they are to live for, and how to live, and what to do to become great, how to help the nation on, the ways and means of success, and just behind you the parents and grand-parents are still in the same ruts; is not your task a thankless and fruitless one? Is not your work useless?"

"What can you do? Children must obey their parents. What they learn at the school is left at the threshold, for they are back in the old school."

"Yes, I see it that way, too; but the old will die, and I guess the rest remains in what the children remember and will remember; 'once learnt, never forgotten' is a sure motto."

"This world is an awful dungeon. Thanks be to our God, we are not in it forever. You know, Spiritual Father, I was quite discouraged with everything; now that I am in communication with the Church, I have become very hopeful. As things are now, I do not worry any more. All I long for is that blissful after-life you are preaching about all the time. The things in this world are so marvelously made, everything so regular. How beautiful the flowers in summer. You look at the wintry sky at eventide. How grand it is. If God made the world so beautiful, what must He have made heaven like? You say that this world is a place of ups and downs, yet there are many people who are happy all the time. How is that?"

"Many people seem happy all the time. They are not enjoying true happiness. Their happiness is in the world and for the world. The real happy people are those who seem miserable to you, for their happiness is in their peace of heart. Their hope is their well of happiness. The deeper the well the more earnest is their desire for the end. After all, the song of the man of the world who lives for the world is Complaining my Complaints. He has never enough of this or of that. His appetite is insatiable. He must have more than he needs. When he has more than he needs he wants to change some things. When he has changed some things he is sorrowful for something else. Whereas the man of the world who lives in the world for a nobler end . . . for God, he meets all with satisfaction and has plenty. His heart is too full of spiritual aspirations to be longing for temporal things. He knows that what he will gather in now will only be dispersed by somebody else after he dies."

"Have some tea."

"Thank you."

"We must go now, Mr. King. We will see you again, Mr. Leaf."

* * *

Leaving this spot, we went through a dingy little place. The dogs barked heavily. They detest the smell of foreigners fiercely. The pigs did their best to make us walk in the gutter. One old cow gave a look at me and fled for dear life. The little boys were much amused at my "underbrush." They remarked it would make a good writing pen (Chinese). Out of one house they came to see what all the noise is about. "Oh, it is a foreign devil." Another, "Oh, it is the Spiritual Father." Another, "Oh, it is the Foreign Gentleman from Jade Lake." And ever so many appellations. On the whole, none are so offensive. For want of reflection, and through ignorance, you are called by the first thought coming to their mind. There is no man so simple, I think, as the farmers around here. The only real fault they have is that they are gluttons for lawsuits.

The teacher and his pupils in Father Amyot's mission of Huang d'An. Even this number of boys makes "overcrowded" conditions in the little school room.

Earthenpot Kiln Mountain

A very pleasant climb to the top. We sat down to get refreshed. A little breeze graciously dried the beads of perspiration. Mr. King sounded like an organ. I asked him if he had three lungs, he made such queer noises.

* * *

"Just where does Mr. Lang live, do you recall, Mr. King?"

"It is ten years since I have been out here. I think it is that place over there. I see a man. I will ask."

"H-m-m! Ten years . . ."

"Old friend, is that where Mr. Yang lives, over there, next to that house with the green paint on the door, next to the one with the red letters over here?"

"Yes."

* * *

"Oh! Ah! O-o-oh! Extraordinary! Truly extraordinary! The Spiritual Father! Mr. King, what made you come this awful distance? This is such a miserable place. What is the Spiritual Father's precious name?"

"My cheap name is Bou, one step, two steps, Bou."

"The Spiritual Father speaks like a Chinese."

"Unworthy, unworthy."

"Mr. Yang, how old are you this year?"

"Eighty."

"You have been baptized a long time?"

"Over forty years."

"You have always kept the Faith. How grand!"

"Up until eleven years ago. I am on in age. I find it difficult to go over the mountains now. But I always did say some prayers. You see, my wife is dead. I have several sons, but none of them are baptized. Here there are a few other Christians. I do not believe they have been going to church much since I have been unable to go myself. You see, I used to call them and they would come."

"Your early days as a Christian then. Mr. Yang . . . you had to attend the services at Nine Dragons. You had a long walk."

"I had longer after that when I had to go away to Chuchow. Then the Priest there told me I could attend at Piwu since it was nearer and there was a chapel and Catechist there."

Father Serra (at left) with the Christians of Huang d'An after Sunday mass. Father Amyot and Father King are stationed at Huang d'An, and their combined "chapel" and residence forms the background of this picture.

* * *

This old man certainly had a wonderful faith . At one time he used to walk every Sunday a distance of twenty-five miles. At another time he had to walk a distance of thirty miles. Finally to Piwu he had but eighteen miles with a little hill to climb.

* * *

"Even though I have been able to attend every Sunday, for the past ten years or so I have not forgotten God and neither has God forgotten me. You see, I do not smoke opium, I do not gamble, don't go to plays, have no lawsuits. I only sleep and eat much."

"God certainly has blessed you. He has preserved you, and rewarded you with a nice long white beard, and you have splendid sons, and they take care of you."

"God has blessed me."

"What about the other Christians here. Are they at home now?"

"No, some are away."

"You will come with me to see those who are at home?"

"Yes."

* * *

"This here is the place of one with the same name. He is an old Christian. He sold his wife and bought another. He is now totally paralyzed on one side. I do not think he knows much about God. The poor unfortunate, he is suffering for his sins now. You know, Spiritual Father, God is very good; but He punishes very severely."

"But would God punish you if you were always good?"

* * *

"Ah, you are outside sunning yourself?"

"Yes. Who is that with you? My eyes are getting bad also, I cannot see well."

"It is the Spiritual Father, he has . . ."

"Ah, the Spiritual Father. What can I do? I cannot get up. I cannot serve him tea. I cannot take him around. I am poor, I cannot give him anything to eat. Please pardon me, ten thousand pardons. Ah! My lot! My lot!"

"You are better to-day?"

"I am worse."

"You will prepare your past with me?"

"I cannot."

"Why?"

"H-m-m."

"You remember your prayers . . . your catechism . . .confession . . . know how to make it? You know the way you are now, your end can come very fast."

* * *

This poor individual, I made three efforts to try to bring back, but all to no avail. He remained

(Continued on page 76)

JUST OUT FOR A STROLL

By Rev. D. E. Stringer

It was a great relief to get away from the noisy bustle and heavy smells of the city. The path we took ran along the river's edge. At first we had to walk through a short and narrow street and through the city gate, Big-Water Gate, they call it. Carriers of every description trudged along, humming, grunting, yelling, manipulating their poles with marvelous dexterity, avoiding collisions with great agility, while little tots in gaudy apparel that rivalled Joseph's coat darted here and there in their quest for fun. Many were the evidences of pagan worship for it was the Chinese feast of All Souls, a day when all thoughts turn towards the dead. Every street vendor had two red candles on either side of his wares. The dim interior of many rude abodes was lighted up by the faint glimmer of candles placed before the tablet of some departed one.

We passed through the gate, picking our way over slippery cobblestones and keeping a wary eye open to avoid knocking a tray from the head of a bun-boy or to escape a splashing from the pails of a water-carrier. The freshness of the air outside the city, the bright green of the grass, the sight of the mountains decked out in their Spring attire, all combined to fill us with a most happy feeling that after all life was very good. The clouds above us were threatening to give us a ducking at a moment's notice, but this was much more preferable than the heat.

Soon we were wending our way through farmlands. Wheat, beans, and vegetables, fruit trees in bloom, wild flowers of many hues—all a riot of color to gladden the eye. A farmer coming towards us was hungrily devouring every little detail about us, but it was with something of awe that he gazed upon our beards—such an appendage is supposedly a sign of wisdom. At times the path we trod narrowed to a foot or so in width as it wound its way through a maze of little artificial ponds, miniature reservoirs in which is hoarded the precious life of the rice plants—water. A mountain stream, and we called to the ferry-man, who poled us across in his leisurely manner. A great stretch of sand and stone gave mute testimony to the terrific power of waters in flood time. Bordering upon it were many beautiful farms, the produce of which is raised in constant danger of a torrent which might at any time wipe them out completely.

Rounding a turn we entered a shady spot where tall bamboo trees sheltered us from a few drops of rain that warned us anew of an impending squall. At last we reached the mountain crowned by an immense pagoda almost as aged and worn as the rock on which it rested. Tiny red blooms made the scene a riot of color. Here and there the black shaggy rock jutted out defying nature's ruddiest growths to hide its bareness. The rock upon which the pagoda stood was naked and wrinkled, bearing the scars of almost timeless onslaughts of rain and wind, of heat and cold. A grotto has been excavated beneath the pagoda and it houses some great deity and many lesser ones. A steep descent led to another shrine. A haphazard step would plunge one down upon the jagged rocks below. Far to the right the river wriggled and wormed its way, losing itself to view around a distant hill. The sail of a boat fluttered in a passing breeze and then hung limp. The faint murmur of voices was wafted to us—river men pulling their boats over a shallow rapids. To the left numerous little hamlets were scattered amid well-cared-for fields. A sudden shower, then a blaze of glory from the setting sun and we turned our steps homeward.

IN THE HILL COUNTRY

(Continued from page 75)

stubborn until the end. During his illness he was carried outside, and was set like a log until late in the evening. He was sometimes forgotten and left out in the open all night. His food was poor. If he wanted anything he would yell for as much as an hour, then some neighbor would help him. His own knew him at times only. Even the pagans around attributed his lot to unfaithfulness to God. One old pagan said he would be much afraid to offend the Master of Heaven, for he might revenge on him and let the Heavens fall on top and crush him. "How foolish," he said, "was this Adore-God man." It is very noticeable here how all those who have turned their back on God are now in either dire poverty or are afflicted with some physical or family misfortune.

YOU CAN USE THIS COUPON IN RENEWING YOUR SUBSCRIPTION.

"CHINA"
St. F. X. Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Dear Fathers:—

Enclosed find $..... as a subscription to "China" for ..... years.

Name ..... Name .....

Address ..... Address .....

(If you have changed your address, please give us the OLD address as well as the NEW one)

MASS INTENTIONS

are always a practical help to priests in mission lands. The missionaries often have no other means of support than their Mass stipends. Our priests will be glad to offer the Holy Sacrifice for your intentions if you send your Mass offerings to the Seminary.

ON BAD WILLS.

Some pretty hard things have been said on bad wills. A will in which the name of God is not to be found, in which God is not named among the heirs, is a bad will.

Is it not true that quite a few of our rich Catholics make such bad wills? They write their last will as if they were the absolute owners of the wealth they were permitted to accumulate by Providential circumstances and the talents they had received from Divine Providence. It is a lack of gratitude not to recognize by a last act of generosity what they had received from God.

The last will is the last chance to help a good work. How many do not avail themselves of the opportunity!

A bequest to St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary will be a way to show your gratitude to God and at the same time assure you of a prayerful remembrance long after you are dead.

CHINESE EX-PREMIER TO BECOME PRIEST

Bruges, Belgium.—A Chinese diplomat who became a monk in the Abbey of St. Andre, near here, is to be ordained as a priest in the Catholic Church. He is Dom Pierre Celestin Lu Tseng-tsiang, sixty-four-year-old native of Shanghai, who entered the abbey in 1927.

As diplomat, he served as Chinese minister to Holland from 1905-11, was a delegate to the second Hague Peace Conference, and in 1911 served as minister to Russia. Returning to China, he became premier and minister for foreign affairs in 1912. Again in 1915 he was acting premier and minister for foreign affairs.

WHAT PRICE DIVORCE?

General Han Fu-chu, Governor of Shantung, will pass into the annals of Chinese history as one of the most daring and interesting of China's officials. His method of cleaning out prisons, holding open court and dealing with bandits is unique. He is a rival of Solomon in making decisions and executing them with a sword.

A recent episode in southern Shantung has just been brought before the public.

After emptying the prisons, he sat officially in front of the yamen and promised to receive any complaints free of charge, as is his custom. A woman knelt before him and asked to be given a divorce from her husband. He said he would consider it, and requested that her husband be called. The husband came and also knelt.

Father John MacDonald of Windsor, N.S., turns his back on a Chinese pagoda.

After a few questions, the Governor took in the situation and asked her if it would be possible for her to collect $400, as money would be necessary in proceedings of such moment, as divorces were most difficult to obtain in China.

She replied that was a matter of small consideration, and soon returned with the amount.

He said there was one other request—would she be willing to wear a placard on her back stating she was divorced and march up and down some of the prominent streets. This she did with alacrity, and when she reached the West Gate as she passed through the soldier stationed there shot her dead.

It did not take a Solomon to see what a character the wife was when she could secure $400 so easily and her husband was dressed in the poor clothes he wore.

The money was handed over to the husband, and thus ended the episode—the Governor calling for the "next".—N.C. Herald.

LOOKING THINGS OVER

(Continued from page 68)

tricts. At the two latter chapels we have larger congregations than at the better-off places. In one place our "chapel" consists of the parlor of a Christian's home. In this centre the people are very enthusiastic about prospects of having regular visits from the priest, with the opportunity of going to Mass and attending the Sacraments more frequently. They consider Sungyang very fortunate in having two priests and the people there able to attend Mass daily. I like to visit this outlying "chapel"; it is a regular tonic for me whenever I feel that things are not going well. After all, it is a consolation to be among God's poor who appreciate what is being done for them. I have no doubt whatever that in a very few years the Light will penetrate the darkness of paganism in our district, and it will be, with God's help, one of the shining spots in our Province whose influence will be felt in the larger towns that have so far spurned our efforts.

HELP THE MISSIONS

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.
2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.
3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year—a life subscription costs ten dollars.
4. By making a Catholic Will—our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

+ THE LITTLE FLOWER'S ROSE GARDEN +

THE MODERN CRUSADE

(Continued from page 73)

these poor people is so hard, materially speaking, what of their life spiritually? In the lives of the Saints we have examples of individuals whose lot was every bit as hard as the lot of the Chinese, and by their very sufferings and hardships these people became Saints. Would that these poor Chinese had also the gift of Faith to help and comfort them. Certain it is, that short indeed would be their stay in Purgatory if only they knew the means held out to them by our holy Faith to sanctify and render meritorious their lives of labor and suffering. And right there you have the hardest part of the missionary life. The missionary has to live daily in the midst of conditions which he is able to better, and only too ready to do so, but his help is refused. Oh, the mystery of the Faith!

But do not for one moment think the Chinese, even the little drudge girls, are a sad and gloomy outfit. I doubt if it would be possible to find anywhere a more cheerful people. It may be snowing, the rice bin empty, no work, no money, and still they come up smiling. It may be fatalism, I don't know, but it is a daily wonder to me how the great mass of the folks here carry on from day to day. They certainly put us to shame when our trust in divine Providence begins to weaken, and like Peter and the Apostles we hasten to arouse our Lord from his sleep.

Pray for these people, dear children. Pray for them every day that divine Grace may touch their hearts, that the work of the Canadian missionaries here may be crowned with success. As I said before, the work we have in hand is hard; it is a long, hard grind, and we look to your prayers to help us. Your prayers and sacrifices in our behalf will certainly not go unheeded. We have our Lord's own word for that. So on with the Crusade, a Crusade above all of prayers.

Many thanks then for your letters, and the generous offering, the result of your sacrifices in favor of the missions. God will bless you for it. To Him alone must you look for your real thanks. Some of you expressed the desire in your letters that you also may one day be called to the missions. May it be so. There is lots of work left for everyone. Do not get impatient and think that all the pagans will be converted before you are old enough to enter the lists. Unfortunately, there is not much hope of such a thing happening.

May God bless you all.

Yours gratefully in Christ,

FATHER VENINI.

THE MISSIONARY LIFE

Let us pray for those who follow
In His footsteps, leaving all—
Land and home and friends and kindred—
Going gladly, at His call,
Far amongst the Pagan peoples
Where His Name is yet unknown—
Far amongst the quaint pagodas
And the futile gods of stone.

In the Master's distant vineyard
There is work for all to do
Where the harvest fields are whitest
And the laborers are few;
We who cannot make the journey
In their noble work may share—
Think of them before the Altar,
Help them with an earnest prayer.

From a Missionary Parish in Newfoundland came a letter from Blanche Murphy. Blanche is going to interest her companions at Port Royal Academy, P.B., in the "Rose Garden." She tells me of the great work done by her revered Pastor, Father Cacciola, who attends 24 Mission Stations in his parish of Bar Haven. Blanche is quite positive that the Church at Bar Haven in the finest one in Newfoundland and is one of 15 Churches built during 29 years pastorate of Father Cacciola. We are not surprised that the young people in the charge of such a zealous Missionary should themselves become very interested in foreign Missions. Long Hr., P.B., in the same parish, has already received many mentions in our Columns.

Our "Ursuline Buds" at Quebec have also been helping us, and their work for the Missions never ceases.

Toronto Schools have been generous to the Missions on innumerable occasions. One of our best regular contributors is St. John's School, our neighbour on Kingston Road. At the end of Lent we received from the pupils there the handsome gift of $27. Many thanks to the zealous teachers and pupils of the Toronto Separate Schools.

St. Brigid's School, Toronto, and St. Brigid's School, Hamilton, sent welcome letters recently; the former enclosed a beautiful spiritual bouquet, and the latter a gift of five dollars for the Missions. Many thanks to those ardent Crusaders.

From St. Alphonsus School, Windsor, Ont., the Vice-president of the Crusade Unit there writes: "The children of St. Alphonsus Separate School have saved their pennies for the Missions. Also we are enclosing a list of prayers and spiritual good works offered by the various Classes. The field assigned to our Unit is your Seminary for the training of Priests for Chuchow, China. Please send us nine miteboxes. I think the little Chinese on the cover will make a stronger appeal for sacrifices than any words of ours. Enclosed is five dollars donation, and fifty cents for a subscription to 'China' for our school."

Such letters as the above, and the one following from Mount St. Bernard College, Antigonish, N.S., will give our readers an idea of the splendid manner in which our "Rose Garden" members are doing all in their power to assist in our work, and we certainly are very grateful to our young friends for all they have done, and are doing. Our only regret is that we cannot find space to mention individually the Schools who are giving us such fine encouragement in our efforts to spread the Faith in Chuchow.

"Enclosed you will find $12 in aid of the China Missions. Please allow me to tell you on behalf of Grades 5, 6, 7, and 8, at Mount St. Bernard's, what pleasure it gives us to make this contribution. In order to raise this fund we sold tickets on a Luncheon Set, and during Lent sacrificed our pennies and put them in your mitebox. We say daily the Prayer for the Conversion of China, and we want to assure you that we do not intend this to be our last effort to try and help you out in your great Missionary work. Sincerely, Ruth Haley, Secretary."

Again, Irene and Beatrice Struthers, 118 Baldwin Ave., Cornwall, Ont., have sent a generous gift for the Missions. Fellow-members will have a chance to see these two "Buds" soon, as I have their pictures.

"Our Catechism Class formed a 'Little Flower Club' and would like to become 'Buds' in your 'Rose Garden'. There are 12 members, all under 10 years of age. We are saving our pennies for the Missions, and would like a mitebox, please." This from a letter written by Bertie Lannon, president of the newly-formed Mission Club at Montague, P.E.I. Best of luck to you and your companions, Bertie.

NONSENSE

Mistress—"Mary, what a kitchen! Every pot, pan, and dish is soiled; the table looks like the day after a cyclone. What have you been doing?"

Mary—"Well, ma'am, blessed if it be my fault. The young ladies has just been showing me how they bile a pertater at their cooking school."

Teacher—"Robert, explain what are the functions of the skin."

Bobby—"The chief function of the skin is to keep us from looking raw."

Prisoner—"There goes my hat. Shall I run after it?"

P.C. Casey—"And not come back! No. You stay here and I'll run after the hat."

Customs Inspector—"What have you to declare?"

Returning Passenger—"I declare that I am glad to get back."

Robinson—"Good men are becoming very scarce."

Hayes—"Yes; and bad ones are apt to make themselves so when they are wanted."

New Maid—"In my last place I took things fairly easy."

Cook—"Well, it's different here. They keep things locked up."

Miss Neverstop, seating herself between two much engrossed elderly men, exclaimed: "A rose between two thorns."

"No," retorted one, "a tongue sandwich."

"Betty, dear," protested mother, "you mustn't eat your jelly with a spoon. Put it on your bread."

"I did put it on, mother," replied Betty, "but it won't stay. It's too excited."

"I'm sorry I married you," she sobbed bitterly.

"Oh!" he flung back. "You were no young bird when I married you."

"No," she retorted, "but, considering what I got, you must admit I was an early bird."

"Anything new in the newspaper today, George?"

"No, my dear—just the same old things, only happening to different people."

"Madam," said the leader of the brigands, "we shall hold you until your husband ransoms you."

"Alas!" murmured the victim. "I wish now I'd treated John a little better."

Teacher—"Correct this sentence: 'It was me that spilt the ink.'"

Pupil—"It wasn't me that spilt the ink."

First Workman (very angry)—"Did you tell Bill I was three-parts daft?"

Second Workman—"No, I thought he knew."

"Archimedes," read the schoolboy, aloud, "leaped from his bath shouting 'Eureka, Eureka!'"

"One moment," said the teacher. "What is the meaning of 'Eureka'?"

"'Eureka means 'I have found it.'"

"Very well. What had Archimedes found?"

The boy hesitated, then ventured, hopefully: "The soap, sir."

"Marjorie is very clever."

"She only makes people think she is."

"Well, isn't that clever?"

The manager came to the visitor's breakfast table.

"Everything satisfactory?" he asked.

"Well, I only wish I had come to this hotel a month ago," replied the guest.

"Ah, sir," smiled the manager, "you flatter my hotel."

"Not at all. What I mean is that I'd rather have eaten these eggs then than now."

"So you use three pairs of glasses, Professor?"

"Yes, one pair for long sight, one pair for short sight, and the third to look for the other two."

"Girls were harder to kiss in your day, weren't they, grandpa?"

"Mebbe, mebbe," ventured the old gentleman, "but it wasn't so blame dangerous. The old parlor sofa wouldn't smash into a tree about that time."

"He—"If you don't accept me I shall throw myself under the 6 o'clock train."

She—"Give me time to think—there is another train at 6.15."

Clown—"Look here, I object to going right on after that monkey act."

Circus Master—"You're right. They may think it's an encore."

Phyllis—"Jack has placed his heart in my keeping."

Doris—"Well, you had better be careful with it. He told me last week that I had broken it."

Casey—"All I want is a dollar!"

Kelly—"Oh, if that's all you want I wouldn't trust you—you lack ambition."

The prisoner was on trial for stealing ducks. His counsel addressed the jury at great length, pointing out firstly, that it had not been proved conclusively that the prosecutor had lost any ducks; secondly, that the ducks found in the prisoner's cottage were not those of the prosecutor; thirdly, that the prisoner had established an absolute alibi.

Just as the judge began to sum up the prisoner interposed and asked if he might say something, and, as an indulgence, this was permitted.

"All I want to say, gentlemen," he remarked, "is that I wish I'd never seen the darned ducks."

Mose—"Honest, Pete, I hab no idea where mah next dollar am coming from!"

Pete—"I'm glad to heah yo' say dat. I thought perhaps yo' was figurin' on me for it!"

"I'm a little stiff from bowling," said the salesman as he settled himself into the easy office chair.

"I don't care where you are from or whether you are a little stiff or a big stiff," yelled the busy buyer. "What I want to know is, what are you selling?"

A short-sighted man lost his hat in a strong wind. He gave chase, but every time he thought he was catching up with it, it was whisked away from under his hand.

A farmer's wife who had been watching him for some time rushed down to the yard gate. "What are you doing there?" she screamed.

"I'm trying to retrieve my hat, madam," he answered politely.

"Your hat," she exclaimed. "Why, there it is over by that wall. That's one of my black hens you've been chasing."

Hotel Manager (to new guest)—"I shall have to ask you to pay in advance. Your luggage is too—er—emotional."

Guest—"Emotional?"

"Yes—easily moved."

Young Thing (after the third singing lesson)—"Do you think I might make use of my voice in public now!"

Musician—"Yes, certainly. I see no reason why you shouldn't, say, join in the National Anthem."

Dear Reader of "CHINA":

Perhaps you have been following the history of China Mission Seminary since its opening nearly ten years ago. Or it may be that you are a recent friend of ours. However, whether it be for many years, or only one, that you have been reading our magazine, we are counting on you now to make a little sacrifice to help us.

Our missionaries have a District in China to evangelize. Seventeen priests are now working there. The Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs is training young men to go to China. This Fall we are sending several more missionaries to Chuchow. They cannot go unless we have the money to pay their passage. We haven't the money now. We are asking you, please, help us to pay our missionaries' way to China. You'll never miss the dollar or two that you may send us for this purpose.

To save you the trouble of writing a letter, the coupon below is printed for your convenience. May we ask you to cut it out now and send it along with what you can spare. Dear Reader, we depend on your response. Please do not disappoint us.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY,
Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario,
Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President.

Dear Fathers:

Enclosed please find $....., my contribution to help pay for the journey of your priests who are leaving for China in the Fall.

My Name .....

Address .....

.....

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

JUNE,
1934

St. Joseph's College

Cor. Queen's Park and St. Alban's St., Toronto, Can.

WOMEN'S DEPARTMENT OF ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE

Federated with the University of Toronto for all courses leading to a Degree in Arts. Excellent residence accommodation and ideal facilities for study.

St. Joseph's College School

Cor. St. Alban's and Bay Streets, Toronto.

RESIDENTIAL AND DAY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

PREPARATORY SCHOOL

HIGH SCHOOL

COMMERCIAL, MUSIC, AND ART DEPARTMENTS

For Terms:—Apply to Sister Superior

Safety and Good Interest Return

5%

We allow 5% interest on sums of $100.00 or over placed with us for five years; 4¾% for one to four years. 3½% on Savings which are subject to withdrawal by cheque. $1.00 Opens an Account.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST GUARANTEED

Capital Trust Corporation

Limited

TORONTO OTTAWA MONTREAL

Under Dominion Government Inspection

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.

OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-2-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West
Toronto

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

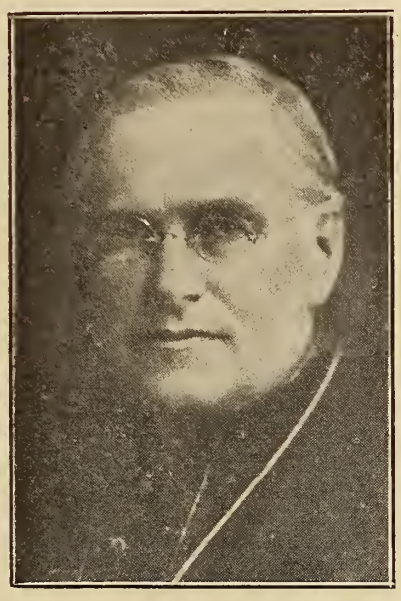
The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.



Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 26,700
Entered as second class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XV. JUNE, 1934 No. 6

ARCHBISHOP McNEIL PASSES

A TELEPHONE inquiry from the Seminary to St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto, just before midnight of Friday, May 25th, brought the sad response: "Archbishop McNeil passed away just a few minutes ago." Following a brief illness of two weeks, the Chief Pastor of the Toronto Archdiocese has gone to his eternal reward. A great city celebrating its centennial year mourns the death of a much beloved Archbishop; the whole Dominion of Canada sorrows at the passing of its outstanding Churchman; the Catholic Church suffers the loss of a saintly member of her Hierarchy.

Neil McNeil was born in Hillsboro, Cape Breton, nearly eighty-three years ago, and as a boy laboured with his father in the trade of a blacksmith. Talented beyond the ordinary, he was sent to St. Francis Xavier College, Antigonish, and at the age of twenty-three began his studies for the Holy Priesthood at the Urban College of Propaganda in Rome, being ordained in the summer of 1879 after obtaining a doctorate in theology. Returning to his native diocese in Nova Scotia, Dr. McNeil taught at St. F. X. University, and four years later became its Rector, a position which he held from 1884 till 1891. For a short while he was engaged in parish work, and then was appointed as Vicar-Apostolic of St. George's, Newfoundland, being consecrated Bishop at the Cathedral in Antigonish, October 20th, 1895. For fifteen years, from 1895 to 1910, the West Coast of Newfoundland was the scene of Bishop McNeil's apostolic labours and journeyings by land and sea. In this period the Bishop learned by personal experience the trials and hardships of missionary life, but they could not dampen the ardor of a man of his calibre. From Newfoundland he was chosen to be the Bishop of Victoria in the extreme West of Canada, and after two years of quiet but effective work in this distant See, he was called by the Holy Father to direct the destinies of the Archdiocese of Toronto.

For twenty-two years Neil McNeil has graced the Episcopal Throne of this Archdiocese, and his death has brought forth sincere tributes of affection from every quarter. His life work and his character were such as to endear him to people of every creed and every racial origin. His gentleness and his humble manner of life and action made him everybody's friend. He had the blessed distinction of combining admirably the highest qualities of heart and mind, which made him such a successful prelate and remarkably wise administrator. To his priests he was always the kind father, and by his prests he will be genuinely missed. A few days before his death, when informed that the clergy throughout his Archdiocese were offering Holy Mass for him, he answered: "God bless them."

It would be impossible even to summarize the achievements of the venerated deceased prelate in such a very small space as we have at our disposal, but mention must be made of the work that was dearest to the heart of Archbishop McNeil. It was the formation of his students for the priesthood in Saint Augustine's Seminary. One really marvels how, in such an extremely busy life, His Excellency found so much time to devote to this one favourite institution. His dominant care was for the welfare and progress of his Seminary, and he was noted for the personal interest he displayed in everything that concerned its all-important activities. Our missionaries in China are graduates of St. Augustine's, and our present-day students attend all the classes there, and so they

(Continued on page 91)

Lishui from Day to Day

by observer

"They do it in the West,
So of course it must be best,
But just try and introduce it into China."

* * *

YOU may be sure they never tuned in on Amos an' Andy! The four hundred million, we mean. For the most of them once a year is just once too often to "see their dentist", and as for FIL—M—well, the more sophisticated know that it is just something that goes in cameras. They simply don't know their tooth paste, these simple Celestials, and the modern ballyhoo artist would be moved to tears over an ignorance in this regard that is "simply appalling".

Something, no doubt, should be done about it. The only fly in the ointment, however, is the fact that the Chinese as a whole have far sounder and more beautiful teeth than their American cousins Ignorance of tooth paste notwithstanding, they have, as a matter of fact, the most perfect teeth we have ever seen.

* * *

Here you have millions of people using water for a dentifrice and who literally pass round the old family tooth brush that hangs on the wall. They are not hounded and harried (as yet, anyway) by ubiquitous and inescapable forced-draught American advertising. Pity the poor unenlightened Chinese, as blissfully and serenely unaware of "pink tooth brush" and "that danger line" as of the fact that "three out of every five" have something or other or that there are in life those "unspeakably" sad occasions when even the best of friends won't tell. Of course, three out of five had it ten years ago, and, if we are to believe the ads., three out of five (the same three, we wonder!) have it still, so the consumption of tooth paste by the ton doesn't seem to have changed the situation.

* * *

In China you find those even, pearly, perfect teeth in the most unlooked for settings imaginable. A poor tantan carrier deposits your baggage, and you give him a satisfactory tip. You are greeted by that million-dollar smile, revealing a set of teeth that would be the envy of Hollywood.

"Full many a humble coolie man
Is born to grin unseen
Whose smile would panic the tooth paste fan
In the 'come on' magazine."

* * *

This fact—that Chinese HAVE such perfect teeth—prompted two missionary dentists to make a special study of the question, and you have probably seen their "findings". Artificial dentifrices, we are told, have little or nothing to do with the process of arresting decay. It's diet, they say, that is responsible for it all, and they add that there is in the natural Chinese food some element lacking in the artificial modern foods in America. I know the last time we visited our "foreign" dentist he advised oranges. Would it be that the modern dental profession is "discovering" a secret that has been in practice, if not set down in actual theory, in China for the past few thousand years. Certainly the patriarchs of old were one with the Chinese in this respect.

* * *

What if all this ballyhoo about scientific dental preparations were but the delusions of one more ignoble experiment, doomed to succumb to the march of science, as its predecessor succumbed to reawakening sanity! We can imagine a footnote in some future history of America covering the period of the twentieth century. "In this era (1900-1950) large scale manufacturers, chiefly Jews, amassed untold wealth by panicking an over-credulous and gullible public into constant dread of disease, and inducing them to part with hard-earned dollars to avert purely imaginary disasters. It was the age of slogans. The utter collapse of the tooth paste 'industry' followed upon the discovery in China that dental decay could be entirely prevented by proper food."

* * *

Meanwhile the great American public has its tooth paste, but the Chinese have the teeth.

CATHOLIC WILLS

For Mission Needs

In China, our priests need funds for new chapels, for new schools, for new homes, and for payment of salaries to catechists. In Canada, our Seminary needs support for the training of young apostles and for the maintenance of their home. Donations to our Burse Fund and our Building Fund are our greatest present needs. Think of our Mission work when making, or changing, your last will. Here's how you can do it; insert this clause in your will:

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO, THE SUM OF....."

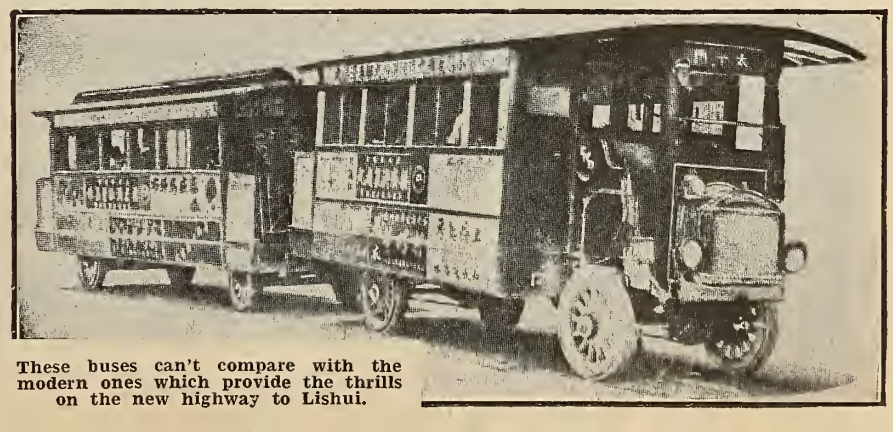
BEING TAKEN for a RIDE

Which Isn't Just so Enjoyable, Says FATHER STRINGER

WHAT'S THE USE! What is the use! And I allowed myself to think it was all over. And now the question raises itself. Maybe some debating society is casting about for a topic. Here's one. "Whether it is better to drown in the China sea or to fall off the new road into the river below."

I was in Shanghai when I read in the paper that the new road to Lishui had been completed. At last, I thought, we have overcome at least the perils of the sea, mal de mer, and such things. The trip back to Headquarters took on a rosy look. But—hereafter things with "rosy looks" are going to be examined with minute carefulness.

We left Shanghai, three of us. The sun was shining gloriously. The train took us to Hangchow, where we enjoyed the hospitality of the Catholic Mission. Next morning we arose, shivered, dressed, said Mass, breakfasted, and hurried down to the ferry which was to take us across the river to the train. Being our first experience with such, we allowed ourselves plenty of time.



When we arrived at the station it was a pleasant surprise to note how clean and tidy everything was. The train itself, though not very heavy, was well suited for its run. We walked up and down the platform, commenting on this and that. I noticed two coal cars just behind the tender, so I strolled up to have a look. Peering over the top, I met the first surprise—a few soldiers, guards they were. It appears that bandits have a fond liking for interfering with the schedule, not to mention their penchant for collecting souvenirs from passengers. Of course, it wasn't exactly exhilarating to bump into the knowledge of such things, but that's what comes of looking into coal-cars. The engine next claimed my attention, and I was immensely pleased to see that with all this new efficiency a time-honoured custom of China had not been forgotten. There in the cab was the engineer's pot of tea. This tended to allay my fears of bandits, because as long as the pot of tea was there the engine would run. Came a crashing din, and hurriedly looking around, I saw a station attendant lustily hammering a large iron gong—"All aboard!"

The run to Kinhua was made on time. No bandits appeared in front, though if they had started chasing after us I would have had great difficulty in keeping myself from jumping off and fleeing ahead of them. We stayed in Kinhua for two days, and there I remembered to jot down an item of news previously forgotten. While in Shanghai something happened to convince me that the East and West are really meeting. One day a funeral came along. It was much the same as any other. But when the hearse passed by, there inside was the coffin all right, but on top of it was a victrola playing "Abide With Me". It might have been wise to follow along to see if they would play "He's Dead, But He Won't Lie Down".

Next morning we rose at four o'clock because the bus was to start at six-thirty. Maybe we will learn! We procured our tickets and fought gallantly for our seats. Just to make the journey pleasant I struck up a conversation with a fellow passenger. "How are roads, sir?" "Oh, not too bad, foreign sir," quoth he, "and as a rule everything runs off smoothly. However, just a few days ago the bus swerved to miss a pedestrian and as a result toppled over, killed a passenger and hurt others. Of course they paid one hundred and fifty dollars for killing the man." Just about this time we took a curve and I thought for a minute someone of mine was going to collect another one fifty.

About an hour's distance from our destination we were treated to another surprise. I had noticed three men on board who seemed rather important. One chap was carrying a brief-case with a peculiar bulge in it. Remembering the coal-car and the previous conversation, I had no desire to ascertain what it contained. This gentleman was sitting at the front. His two pals sat at the back. Without any warning at all the chap with the case turns around and calls for his suit-case. One of the big fellows at the back leans over and drags it out and opens it. Well, of all the hardware you ever saw! The big Mauser type! Somehow I found myself wishing I was back on the old boat, slow as it was. At least you had a chance to swim! All three began to load. We occupied the back seat, and immediately beside Monsignor McGrath sat one of these gun-packers. This particular chap had some trouble loading his gun. The way he hammered at it was enough to give anyone nervous condition. Finally all three were set. The Jesse at our end opened a window. Well, if they were bandits there would be nothing to do except hand over the jewellery. Still nothing happened. These lads kept looking ahead. It became apparent that they were not interested in any of the passengers. They were expecting to meet with trouble. At every turn in the road I was expecting to see the fireworks break out, and I had no diffi-

(Continued on page 92)

These buses can't compare with the modern ones which provide the thrills on the new highway to Lishui.

. . . KONG KA . . .

"KONG KA," if you say it with the proper tones, means in Cantonese to "talk price", and a man who can talk price successfully possesses one of the greatest assets which a man can desire. He will make the price of his keep in the savings which he can make on the daily purchases. The secret seems to be this. You make up your mind what the thing is worth, then offer half that price with an air which implies that you have no idea of giving a cent more. The other party to the game asks for twice as much as he hopes to get, and asks with the same air of finality. You then tussle with one another for half an hour or so, and in the end you both agree on what is more or less a fair price for the article in question.

The other day my Chinese teacher came to see me. He brought with him a pair of boots which I had given him to get repaired. He would get a friend to do them—so he told me—very cheaply. I took the boots and asked the price.

Teacher: "You give what price you like."

Writer: "I don't know what to give. I will pay him what he asks, but if this man wants to do business with me, he must name a price."

Teacher: "You see, this is the Chinese custom. The Chinese man, he no like to ask. He tell you what each thing cost and then you give what you like."

Writer: "Well, what is the right price, I ask you."

Teacher: "Well, the rubber soles, very dear. These heels not so dear as last time. This he no do well." (All this while he handled the boots calling attention to various points.)

Writer (getting exasperated): "But how much?"

Teacher: "Well, this sole, he pay fifty cents."

Writer: "Good. That's a dollar for the soles."

Teacher: "Yes. A dollar for the soles. You see, last time he charge you $1.50. Not so good as this rubber. This rubber very dear. I last night gave him one dollar to buy these."

Writer (getting exhausted): "Good. Well, soles cost him one dollar. What about the heels?"

Teacher: "Heels, they not so good as last time. He could not get good as last time." Then, examining the work, "He no did this heel good."

Writer: "Right. Well, we've got to a dollar for the soles. What did the heels cost?"

Teacher: "He say he pay 15 cents each. You see,—"

Writer: "Good. That's $1.30 for the material. Now how much must I add on?"

Teacher: "It took him half a day to do. You give him some cents for that."

Writer: "Yes, but how much?"

Teacher: "What you like. You see, he no like to ask. He poor man and glad to work for you."

Writer: "But how much does such a man earn in a day?"

Teacher: "Well, if he work in a shop he get $20 a month. Of course, he is a poor man and has no work—"

Writer: "Good. $20 a month. That is per day—"

Teacher: "Of course, the owner of shop, he also give him his food. That is the Chinese custom."

Writer: "How much is that?"

Teacher: "Well, he pay about seven dollars a month for food."

Writer: "Good. That's $27 a month. That is per day—"

Teacher: "Then he also give him place to sleep."

Writer: "How much does that come to?"

Teacher: "Well, about three dollars a month."

Writer: "Good. That's $30 a month. That makes one dollar a day. That is fifty cents for half a day."

Teacher (rather pleased to find I had discovered what he intended to convey from the beginning, beams on me): "Yes. Fifty cents a half day. You see—"

Writer (exhausted): "Then I'll give him $2 for his job."

Teacher: "Oh, no. That's too much."

Writer: "Here is $2."

Teacher: "Oh, yes, 20 cents too much."

Writer (wishing teacher and cobbler a million miles away): "No. There's $2."

Teacher: "Oh no—well—ah yes, he is poor man."

Teacher pockets the $2 and we go on with our Chinese lesson.—"The Rock."

Rt. Rev. Msgr. McGrath, Prefect-Apostolic of Chuchow, with a group of converts to whom he administered the Sacrament of Confirmation recently.

THE OUTCASTS

To the volunteer outcasts who with free hand and soldier heart have given up their earthly home and native land in order that scores of others, in the field ripe for the reapers, may not be eternal outcasts from their home in heaven and their never-ending fatherland above.

'Neath the soggy heats of the tropics,
In the casing colds of the north,
The Outcast Lovers are enduring
The pangs that cast them forth.

Wide-read these masterlovers
In the volume of deaths and laughs
Flecks of gold; pits of gloom;
Heaven and hell touching graphs.

Malingering fevers and miscreants;
Bugs and fire-eyed snakes;
Muddy miles; soul-soreness
And heavy old heartaches.

They know them all.
They have slept with danger,
They too have met
The welcome of the manger,
Shouldering the debt
Of a distrusting stranger.

Outcast Lovers midst loved ones,
They have given their hearts, and regret
Never mounts their stairs, though their agape
Is the ash of a cigarette.

Lonely as a cricket song
Thin, on a rain-crowded night
Their heart cries for companionship
With all its human might.

But Lord! They have given all that up.
They have flung their homes away;
For love they have sold their loved ones. . . .
They have taken the Calvary way.

To the world they walk a mystery;
Fools espoused to pain,
Like that fathomless Man upon the Cross
To die they think is gain.

O missioner, missioner of forlorn men!
O shepherd of the scattered sheep!
Seeking, ever seeking the uncared one
While sodden souls are asleep.

Oh, drear enough and dank your ways
Blackness on your work like a glove,
But ever there is dawn for the night of your heart
In the bursting beams of His love.

Oh, bitter it is to drift like a weed,
A tramp on the sea . . . . for love;
But a voice in your heart, soft as angel wings,
Promises never-lost-lands above.

—Rev. Edw. J. Edwards, S.V.D., in "Catholic Missions".

MR. YANG

LEARNS ABOUT MISSIONS

from

FATHER BOUDREAU,

Pastor of Pi-Wu-Ka

"SPIRITUAL Father is building a new church this year. It must take a lot of money to run a mission."

"Yes, it indeed does, Mr. Yang. For example, take my own little place. To do what should be done if the needed money was available, I would use up three hundred dollars a month. There is the food to buy for yourself, the help of the mission. Then there are the salaries to pay. It takes at least sixteen dollars for a catechist. If you have many chapels, many Christians, many catechumens, you need many catechists. If you have not the money to have as many catechists as are needed, then Christianity must suffer. To say that Christianity must suffer for want of proper attention is a tremendous cross to the poor missionary. Chapels have to be repaired, kept up. As Christianity increases a chapel has to be either enlarged or built. If you have to repair chapels and you keep postponing it on account of lack of funds, you soon will have no chapels. And you know, Mr. Yang, presently we cannot depend on our own Christians here because they can hardly feed themselves, let alone having to help for building and so forth. After all, what good are a whole lot of chapels, and catechumens, and Christians, if you have not catechists to tend to them? The missionary himself has only two hands and feet. He cannot be everywhere at once. He needs assistants. These must be trained well, and must be paid, and even if the men are working for God they demand enough salary to live on. Then there are the travellings here and there. Again you need money. You walk, you have carriers to pay for. You ride, you have both chair and carrier to pay for. And you know, Mr. Yang, foreigners are looked on as having much gold in their pockets. Why even my poor mass kit was the subject of a discussion one time as to how many thousand dollars I had in it. Then I put a price and a good prize to the man who guessed the correct amount I was carrying in my mass kit. They guessed as high as eighty thousand dollars. Then I said, 'You are all wrong, there is over one hundred thousand dollars. I will show you.' So I opened the mass kit to them. 'Oh! No money! Queer!' The poor fools. They just do not think that the missionary is more of a beggar than themselves. If you build a church, formerly you could build cheap. Now prices of things are higher, and foreigners being all 'very' rich, must pay a little more than the ordinary price for materials. It is an almost necessary evil. When you are figuring on building and you jot down the quantity and prices and quality of materials, you also consider the gyping a part of the building expenses. Labor you know, now, is much higher, and it does seem that education in any form is more detrimental than advantageous for some people.

"A generous benefactor has just donated a good sum for a new church. So my Christians will now be a very happy lot; but I will need their co-operation; i.e., they must help me. I do not want what they haven't got . . . money . . . all I want is some of their time and goodwill, which is not so easy. A church should not be something half-baked. It must be made to stand for some years. It must not be too cheap, for after all it is the House of God, and you cannot be too extravagant with Him. It must be a monument, if not extra-lasting, it must be at least some-years-lasting. Our aim on the missions, from the earliest days of the Church in China, has been the formation of a native clergy. It is not a day's work. If you are working for the formation of a native clergy, it must be equipped with working material. If a native clergy is to inherit the churches you have built, and all you have is a shell, a mud-wall church, and all because you were saving, or trying to be cheap, instead of leaving something behind to recall the work of the Christians, the beauty of Christianity, you are leaving a wholesome nothing. That is one reason why building temple-like is imprudent. The foreign way or style is nicer and stronger, and warmer. So you see, Mr. Yang, you need catechists, chapels, churches, Christians, and money. Money cannot make Christians. It is prayer and good-will. We have to depend

(Continued on page 92)

FEAST of the DRAGON BOAT

A June Festival in China

THIS great festival is held in honor of an ancient statesman who committed suicide in the River Milo. The story is that one of the feudal states into which China was then divided, named Tua, was prospering under the wise guidance of Kuyuan, who was the Prime Minister of its Prince. The people were happy, and peace and plenty made the state a good one to live in. Suddenly, through the machinations of a rival, the ruler was tempted into evil courses, Kuyuan was dismissed, and adversity loomed in the distance for the country.

Unwilling to be a spectator of the sorrows that were coming on the people, Kuyuan threw himself into the river and perished. As soon as the news of his death was known, boats were sent out to search for his body, but it was never recovered. So grieved was the nation at his loss, that it was determined that the anniversary of his death should be commemorated by boat races, in which the fiction should be kept up that the boats were not simply racing, but were in search of the long-lost body. The death happened about B.C. 314, but though ages have elapsed, and revolution after revolution has torn and convulsed the country to its very foundations, the custom is as keenly kept today as though it had only lately been established.

It is, indeed, one of the most popular festivals, and is looked forward to for weeks before it takes place, and during the three days on which it is being kept the whole place is full of excitement. This happens at the beginning of the Chinese fifth moon, which corresponds with about the middle of our June. The weather then is hot and the sun is bright.

Nearly every one of the population who can possible get away from their duties deserts the town and hastens to the seashore to witness the moving scene on the water. Wherever one looks one sees signs that the Dragon Boat Races are the great thought that is in every heart.

The peddlers are going to have a royal time of it. Here is a man with two great baskets balanced on a bamboo pole that rests on his shoulder. They are full of all kinds of cakes, just fresh from the oven. Following hard upon his heels comes the "Sweet and Sour" man, with his two loads heaped up with all kinds of goodies. He has sugared orange lobes, and pineapple cut into dainty succulent little mouthfuls. He has crab apples from the far North, crushed and flattened, but just as sweet as sugar can make them. Then for the "sours", he has pickled olives, and rich luxurious-looking arbutus berries, that in the distance look like strawberries, and delicate little plums, and sliced peaches, and limes with the green of the trees still upon them.

All at once the hum of voices is hushed and all eyes are turned in the direction of the sea, for there the Dragon Boats have suddenly made their appearance, each one madly striving to beat the other as they both race on towards a junk anchored in the stream, from which flags and many-colored streamers float in the breeze. The Dragon Boats are long and narrow, and only just wide enough to allow two men to sit side by side and use their paddles to propel the boat. The number that is commonly employed in one of them is sixty, not including the coxswain, who stands in the stern holding a long oar with which he steers his way through the crowds of boats that have come with their passengers to get a good look at the races.

The effect of these sixty men paddling with all their might is very striking, and puts one in mind of a huge centipede, though the Chinese, with more imagination and more poetry, have likened it to the fabulous dragon that plays so large a part in the mythology and superstition of the nation.—"Sidelights on Chinese Life."

A view which gives a good idea of the surroundings of the mission compound at Huang d'An, where Father Amyot, of Ottawa, is pastor, and Father King, of Newburg, Ont., is assistant. The arrow indicates the walled mission property.

JEEVES

Altogether, a very fine young man is Jeeves; in very truth, a pillar of the Church. It is Jeeves and his ilk who make tolerable, indeed, even possible, the life of a missionary in lonely mission-stations. Not every priests' boy is as fine a type as this, it is true; none the less, to these splendid, loyal servants the Church in China owes more than history will ever recall.

IT was at Shiuhing, the central mission station of the Shiuhing mission, that I first met Jeeves. We were at the time three Irish Jesuit Fathers in Shiuhing, engaged in the rather prosaic task of studying Chinese. Now, it happened that a certain Father, in charge of a large district an hour or two down the river, had occasion to pass through Shiuhing at frequent intervals on his way to or from Hong Kong; and each time he appeared, he was accompanied by his Chinese servant. Possibly it was something about the lad's face which suggested to one of us the nickname; the boy certainly had the languid eyes and quiet, efficient manner which one connects instinctively with P. G. Wodehouse's famous character. At all events, whatever the reason, the name was given; and "Jeeves" became part of our regular vocabulary!

I had been studying Chinese for a few months, and had just reached the stage of being able to hear Confessions in Chinese, when one day Jeeve's master approached me with a novel and very welcome proposal. He was obliged, he said, to be absent from his district for about ten days; and as two or three important feast-days happened to fall within the period of his absence, he was unwilling to leave his Christians without Mass and the Sacraments. Would I think of supplying for him during his absence? He would be very grateful. I should find the Confessions very easy, as there were no dialectic difficulties in his district, and he could promise that his servant would make me quite comfortable.

I need hardly say that my answer to this suggestion began with an emphatic "Y" and ended with an equally emphatic "s"; and so I found myself appointed parish-priest of Shui Haang for ten days, under the tutelage of Jeeves, the Indispensable.

We left Shiuhing early one Thursday morning by one of the bluebottles which ply up and down the West River. I was feeling exceedingly Wooster-like, for I was sadly conscious of the deficiencies of my Chinese. Jeeves' good offices began early, for, though the launch was very crowded, I found myself, I hardly know how, in an excellent seat near the door. I amused myself by observing my fellow-passengers, for the most part young men dressed, unexpectedly, in European style. Of course, there were the inevitable melon-seeds and the everlasting tea; equally, of course, there was a collection for some purpose which I entirely failed to comprehend, but which Jeeves told me afterwards was charitable. Then came the ticket-collector.

I should perhaps explain that all our funds were in Jeeves's possession; for though I had a little money in my pocket, Jeeves had been given the entire commission of getting me to Shui Haang, of keeping me alive while there, and of getting me back safely after ten days to Shiuhing. Now, Jeeves was not in the compartment with me and was nowhere to be seen. The ticket-collector began working his way round the saloon in such a course that I was the last person whom he reached. I was just debating interiorly whether I should mutely pay my own fare, or endeavour desperately to tell him go and look for Jeeves, when I heard a soft voice over my shoulder: "Leung koh" ("Two please"). Jeeves was there in the nick of time. I felt more Wooster-like than ever.

After about an hour and a half in the bluebottle, I was summoned by Jeeves to disembark. This process consisted in taking a precarious leap from the side of the moving launch into a heavy barge, which was neatly grappled for a few moments on to the bluebottle.

"Would you mind taking this for a moment, Father, please?" Jeeves murmured quietly, looking at my handbag. I seized the bag and leaped; and turned round to find that Jeeves had come aboard the barge behind me, carrying two huge baskets laden with provisions.

The barge was unhitched, and as it was sculled leisurely towards the shore, Jeeves explained to me that he had arranged with a coolie to meet us and carry my bag and his baskets out to Shiu Haang, an hour's walk through the rice-fields. But he feared that the coolie might not turn up, and in that case, would I mind waiting a moment for him? When, by dint of much repetition, all this had percolated into my Woosterian brain, I grunted my assent. Jeeves seemed satisfied, and when the barge reached the shore, a shore graced by no waiting coolie, Jeeves promptly disappeared.

I sat down near my bag and Jeeves' baskets, and whiled away the time by watching a man making one of the large baskets in which everything in China is carried. Such skilful and such patient labour, and all for a few cents! After a very short time Jeeves returned with a coolie-woman to carry our possessions, and we set off for Shui Haang.

On arriving there, after a tramp of over an hour, I saw Jeeves at his very best. Off came the smart blue shaam and the European shoes. A new Jeeves, clad in old clothes and the usual heel-less Chinese slippers, had the fire lit in a twinkling, and in an hour's time I was sitting down to a repast which would have graced any table. To compare my Indispensible to a French chef would be the poorest of compliments, for no chef could have done what he did with the same materials and the same appliances. No chef could possibly have provided me with such an excellent cup of coffee on coffee-beans and Klim (powdered milk). And no chef would have had either the humility or the skill required to "taam" (i.e., carry on a pole across the shoulder) as Jeeves did, all the water required for the household from the nearest well. Jeeves' weakness as a cook, I discovered later, was bread. He made three loaves for me during my stay in Shui Haang, and—well, like the famous advertisement for Pear's Soap, "since then I have used no other"! However, bread is such an unimportant item in the diet of a missionary in the interior that the weakness was easily forgiven.

Next morning I saw my Jeeves under still another light. He was not sacristan, that office being filled by the school-teacher, one of the Chinese virgins who are the mainstay of the Church in China. But he was chief acolyte and a very efficient Mass-server; and I could not but contrast him favourably with other priests' boys, both in China and elsewhere, when I saw him turn into the chapel devoutly for morning and evening prayers. He was also, I soon discovered, a frequent communicant.

That day brought with it the agonizing problem of my Sunday sermon. Jeeves, indeed, ventured to suggest soothingly, "m shái" ("it is not necessary"). But even Woosters have their pride; and I had determined that the "old bean", to use the words of my great prototype, would produce a Sunday sermon or burst in the attempt. I wrestled with dictionaries, looked up characters feverishly, and finally, towards evening, the great work was done. Then, prudently, I "left it to Jeeves". I suggested as tactfully as my broken Chinese would allow that if he came up after supper to look over my sermon, he would earn the undying gratitude of the congregation and of their pastor.

Jeeves came, and, to my no small pride, found very little to correct. When he was satisfied, I hinted tentatively that I was thinking of learning the sermon by heart. "Chì hó hâi tûk" ("Better read it!") was Jeeves's grave comment. " 'I should not recommend it, sir'," I translated mentally and obeyed. I was very glad that I did so, for by obeying I learned afterwards that my three sermons in Shui Haang were understood very well. Jeeves's reason for his advice, by the way, was both interesting and illuminating: "Western man say he know sermon, Chinese man say he not know, because his tones wrong."

It was Jeeves, too, who arranged walks for me with the school-children, delicious, chubby, grubby, weep-nosed, smiling youngsters, who surrounded me like a happy swarm of bees. Our conversation was limited by the fact that, though they understood perfectly, apparently, all that I said to them, I understood extremely little of what they said to me. However, the animosity of our intercourse gave the lie direct to the theory that mutual comprehension is in any way necessary to affection. It was Jeeves, also, who arranged a couple of excursions for me under the aegis of one of the parishioners: and it was, of course, Jeeves himself, who guided me to the outlying mission station and served my Mass there. "You have learned a great deal of Chinese in Sui Haang, Father," were Jeeves's words to me at parting, and one could see that, in his quiet, Jeeves-like way, he felt that much of the credit was his own.

There was something of the apostle, too, I discovered, in my excellent Jeeves. "So few enter the Church here," he confided to me one day in a burst of fervour. There are, as a matter of fact, six excellent stations in this one district, and the Church here is known and well-established. But Jeeves would like to sweep all pagans willy-nilly into the net of the Fisherman.

Altogether, a very fine young man is Jeeves; in very truth, a pillar of the Church. It is Jeeves and his ilk who make tolerable, indeed, even possible, the life of a missionary in these lonely mission-stations. Not every priest's boy is as fine a type as this, it is true; none the less, to these splendid, loyal servants the Church in China owes more than history will ever recall.—D. Donnelly, S.J., in "The Rock".

ARCHBISHOP McNEIL PASSES

(Continued from page 83)

are sharers in the benefits of the magnificent seminary course of studies for which Saint Augustine's is rightly famed.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary, too, has lost its best friend. We feel Archbishop McNeil's death with a sense of personal loss. Great churchman that he was, it is not to be wondered at that his interests included the work for Foreign Missions begun by a Toronto priest, Father Fraser. It was at Archbishop McNeil's request that the location of China Mission Seminary was changed from Almonte to Scarboro in 1922. To his efforts we owed the procuring of a property on the Kingston Road just outside Toronto, and when that became too small to accommodate our students, and there was question of the erection of a new Seminary, once more His Excellency's suggestion decided that the ideal location for our work was in close proximity to the Diocesan Seminary, St. Augustine's, where our students could attend the classes and thus relieve us of the burden of providing a complete and competent faculty of our own. That has made it possible for us to have more men on "active service" in the Prefecture of Chuchow, and at the same time our students are being prepared in their studies by the highly-efficient staff of professors at our neighbouring St. Augustine's. When, in 1924, our present Seminary was opened, and it came under the government of the Bishops of Ontario, Archbishop McNeil became the Chairman of the Board of Administration. One of the last documents signed by him was in his capacity as Chairman of this Board.

"CHINA" begs the prayers of its readers for the dead Archbishop of Toronto. We sincerely mourn him; our Mission Institute will keep his memory hallowed. Requiescat in Pace.

MR. YANG

(Continued from page 88)

on God and prayer; yet in all there is another sort of prayer, very necessary, and practical, somewhat more worldly. It is money.

"God showers the missions with graces. He makes the heavens give us rain. He makes the sun give us sunshine; but He leaves the showering of bricks and mortar and trees to you. It is your job . . . the job of the older and better disposed Christians, members of the Church, all over the world. The Church is Catholic, so should be its members. Fancy homes and recreations are not the general bill-of-fare of the missionary, rather is it a good church, a school, and a good pair of legs for your hunt in the hills . . . strayed sheep, newborn sheep, introducing a new game . . . training and taming a wild hare like to a meek and humble little lamb . . . a son of God . . . a Christian."

"Ah, missionaries are wonderful men. So many sacrifices . . . the labors and trials they have to undergo for us!"

"And mind you, old faithful Christian, the missionary has what is called stipends . . . for his support and little needs; but a whole mission or a part cannot be run just with these. It takes funds and lots of worry. The weight is mostly on the latter. Divine Providence guides, directs, and protects, still in all there are more Christians now than in the time of the Apostles and so much is left to be done by them. What were luxuries then are, through man's natural disposition and growing weakness, now actual necessities. The present generation is doing away with things that the future generation will not. For instance, in your young days you never bought already prepared ground fattening for your fields. Old farmers never knew of such a thing here. Now your sons, unless they have such fattening, they claim they cannot raise a decent crop. Is it not so? Is that not then a luxury become a necessity? Were not your crops as healthy and good as that of your sons to-day? I ask you, Mr. Yang?"

"The ground has dried up with age and use. It needs it."

HELP THE MISSIONS

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.
2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.
3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year—a life subscription costs ten dollars.
4. By making a Catholic Will—our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

"Good, you see my point. Customs may change, vary; men may differ; ways may change; but the Catholic Church, its doctrine is the same now as in the days of the Apostles. The time, though, has weakened its members to a certain extent, due to human frailties, and so other means then must be used to strengthen the weak, draw in outsiders. God showed mercy and love to His chosen people by showering from heaven manna in a time of need to satiate hunger, and stop murmurings—justified ones? The missions are daily crying for manna—catechists, churches, chapels, schools, teachers, money."

"Ah, I am much clearer. I always said the missionaries are well off and always happy. No worries. A nice life, and three good meals daily. . . ."

"And consolations galore. Jesus bore and carried a Cross, and had to suffer death to open Heaven to us. He indicated the right and one road to Heaven. It was His key to open Heaven; it is also our key to Heaven. Trials are our comforts, and comforts our trials. We will go now, Mr. Yang. I will send a chair to take you down to Jade Lake for Pentecost Sunday. Goodbye. God bless you."

TAKEN FOR A RIDE

(Continued from page 85)

culty in imagining a hundred better places I could be. After a while the leader gave them a sign to hide the guns. The chap beside Monsignor started fumbling his. Well, sir, the way he handled that revolver broke all the rules of safety first I ever read. Not being in direct line of bullet myself, I gave all my thoughts to consoling Monsignor, who was sure to pick up any stray pieces of lead that might leave said gun. I think that for a moment he rather wished he was sailing, too. Finally we arrived at the first stop, and here we changed buses.

After a short wait, away we whirled. Our gun-toting friends were in front, so we could relax to breathe. But do wonders ever cease? We came to a stop at a wayside station. Looking out, we saw about ten soldiers all bound together. Run-aways! The bus was overloaded as it was, and now they were going to jam these fellows in. We were now rather pleased to think that among us there were at least three revolvers, not to mention the rifles carried by the police. It was just like getting a ride in the "Black Maria". Well, if we went around a curve too fast now, there would be more than one "one-fifty" to pay out. And thus we finished the second lap.

It makes me feel weak even to think of this last lap. It lay along the mountain side, and even a goat would think twice about traversing it. To the left of us was a wall of sheer rock. To the right was sudden death. The road was wide enough for the bus, but with no room to skid. From my position, if I looked to the right, I could see the river way down below, so immediately I looked left. Up in front the driver looked straight ahead, keeping to a speed of five miles to the hour as we crawled and wormed our way along. One place was so narrow that rock jutting out from the cliff side nearly smashed the windows, so close did he have to drive to stay clear of the brink. And curves!! If he ever forgot to turn at any of them, well . . . . . As it was we thought we were gone once. We couldn't see the driver, and thus mistook a fellow sitting beside him as the chauffeur. Coming to a curve, we saw him turn his head to speak to someone. But the bus turned—in the right direction. It took us two hours and a half to make thirty miles. We finally arrived at Lishui and were able to walk to the Mission. Since then Fr. Venadam has made the trip. He came back yesterday, and we asked him how he liked it. "Oh, fine," says he; "no danger on that road!" Of course, he should know! But I did think it rather funny when he was telling us this morning that during the night he got up in his sleep and put his alarm clock on the floor. Maybe there's no connection—maybe.

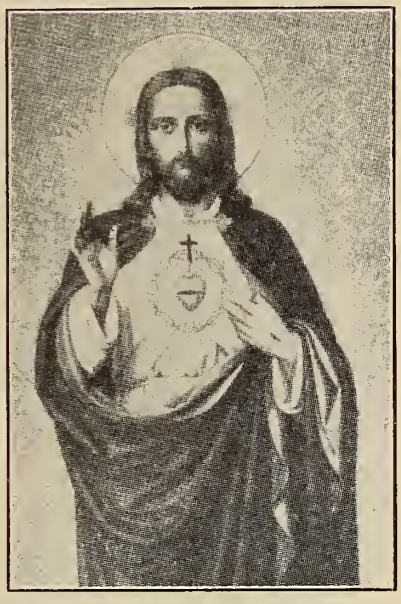
LITTLE FLOWER'S ROSE GARDEN

Edited by FATHER JIM

CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP

The only conditions of membership in the Rose Garden are: (1) To say every day the Prayer for the Conversion of China; (2) To go to Holy Communion once a month for the Intention of Missionary Vocations. Certificates and pins will be sent to all members.

Dear Little Missionaries:



As we are so very near the close of another year in school, I must make use of this issue of our "Rose Garden" to express my deep thanks to all who have helped make the school days so fruitful in works done for the missions. A mighty treasure of spiritual help has been given by the members of our Club, and I know that God will bless them all. I pray that all our "Buds" will be successful in their exams., enjoy a most pleasant vacation, and continue their good deeds for the missions throughout the Summer.

FATHER JIM.

THE CHILD AND HELL'S GATES

The fame of General Newton is linked with a great engineering feat which won the admiration of the scientific world—the removal of the rocky obstructions at the entrance to the harbour of New York. With vast expenditure of time and labor and money, directed by unerring skill, the river was mined according to a scientific plan carried out on so large a scale that, though the first explosion took place on the 24th September, 1876, the second did not take place until the 10th October, 1886. Both were perfectly successful.

When all the preparations were completed at last, and all that remained to be done was to ignite the train of dynamite that undermined the fatal rocks far out in the sea, what instrument did he use to put in motion the powerful engines to accomplish the work? The hand of a child! He made his innocent little daughter press the button that completed the electric chain, and in an instant the explosion took place almost noiselessly. The masses of rock were heaved for a moment into the air, and Hell's Gates (that was the ominous name given to the obstructing reef) crumbled away. What terrific powers were brought into play by the gentle pressure of a tiny hand! A symbol, is it not, of our tiny efforts in prayer? We lisp, as children, poorly and feebly the words. The Omnipotent has endowed them with His own Omnipotence. At the whisper of a child of earth Hell's Gates crumble away.

May the dear Sacred Heart of Jesus bless and protect the thousands of young boys and girls who have helped His Missions so much through their faithful keeping of the promises made when they became members of the "Little Flower's Rose Garden".

A Prayer for the Conversion of China

(To be said daily by the members of the "Rose Garden")

O Lord Jesus Christ, who didst come on earth to save the souls of men, open now Thy most Sacred Heart in mercy to the people of China, who still sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, and shower Thy graces on them, that they may come to the knowledge of Thy Gospel. Bless also and protect Thy missionaries, and make their work fruitful for Thee of countless souls. —Amen.

(300 days' Indulgence)

With Ecclesiastical Approbation

A WELCOME "REPEATER"

Dear Father Jim:

"As we wanted to continue the good work of last year, we had another play this year in aid of the Missions. The name of the play was 'Marilda's Dream'. We had only eight Juniors, but we managed to get enough characters by giving some of the girls two parts. We made up most of the play ourselves. It was better than the play we had last year, and everybody enjoyed it. We charged both the Sisters and the pupils, as you suggested last year, and we received ten dollars. We expected to get only five dollars, but since we received double the amount, we are buying two Chinese babies. We would like a boy and a girl if it is possible. Please name the little girl Mary Teresa and the little boy Joseph Xavier.

"Dear Father, we hope you will get many more dollars to save the little Chinese babies. We have read many stories of the unfortunate condition of the pagan babies, and it fills our hearts with a great longing to save them.

"Please pray for your little friends, the Juniors of Mount St. Vincent's Academy, Halifax, N.S."

Our "Buds" will admit that it must be nice to be "Father Jim" and get such letters as that. It is typical of many that come to me every month, telling me of efforts being made by our boys and girls to be really earnest in doing things for the Missions. Naturally, I should like to give publicity to other letters, but the few I have chosen at random for this month's issue will show what a great spirit exists amongst the members of our ever-growing "Rose Garden".

"We are enclosing three dollars, which we hope will be useful to you in your mission work." Ellen O'Leary, Form II-B, Loretto College School, Toronto. Faithful friends, these, who have helped the Missions very often.

"We are the Grade 6 Boys of Mount Carmel School, New Waterford, C.B., sending you a dollar for the Chinese Missions. We read the articles in the 'China' and find it very interesting. There are 30 boys in this class who want to join the 'Rose Garden', promising to say the prayer for the conversion of China every day." Charles Chiasson, Class Secretary.

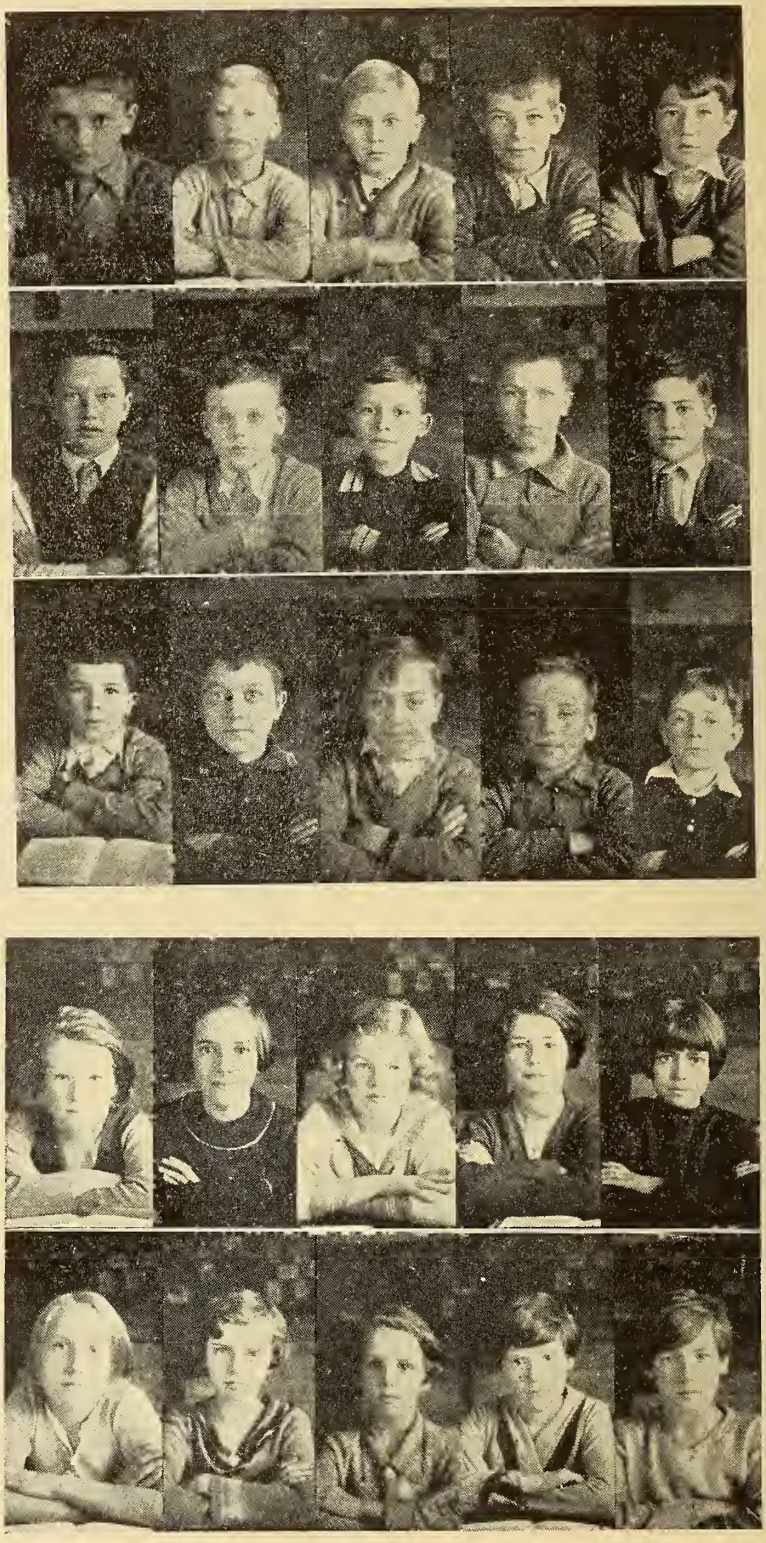
"The children of our school wish to join your 'Rose Garden'. So far we have secured 301 names. . . . We have organized a Crusade Unit, and the pupils are enthusiasticaly interested. Our officers are: Colleen Roach, Pres.; Roy Smith, Vice-Pres.; Loretta Mitchell, Sec'y; Francis McCormick, Treas. We have chosen Chuchow as our special field of mission labour. Please accept our donation of two dollars, also a subscription for 'China', and a spiritual bouquet in aid of the Chuchow missionaries. Loretta Mitchell, Sec'y, C.C.S.M.C., St. Clare School, Windsor, Ont."

From Sister Luchertia, St. Peter's School, Peterboro, Ont., came a letter and a gift of $21.20, "which represents the little sacrifices of their pennies cheerfully made by the pupils instead of spending them on shows, candy, etc." Such generous remembrance by our young friends in Peterboro is much appreciated, and I shall be only too glad to grant their request for a "memento" in Holy Mass for their success in school.

Helen Hogan, writing from St. John's School, Perth, says: "The enclosed two dollars is the contents of our mitebox. We are sorry we have not more to send, but trust our little offering will help carry on your wonderful work. Seven girls of our class have formed a little society in aid of the Chinese Missions, and you will hear from them shortly." Many thanks, girls; you have the right idea.



Dorothy White, 124 Oak St., London, in sending a gift for the missions, tells me she is a member of several juvenile clubs, but is prouder of her "Little Flower" badge than of any other.

Kathleen and Clara Hollohan, Black Head, Nfld., wrote a lovely letter of sympathy to Msgr. McGrath in Lishui when his father died, and I forwarded it to China as soon as it reached here. They have secured two new members, George Cooke and Betty Healey.

Certificate of Membership in our Club has been sent to Junior IV Class, St. Antoine School, Tecumseh, Ont., and thanks are due Rita Poupard, the secretary, for her lovely letter and gift from the pupils.

Writing on May 8th, the 50th Anniversary of the First Holy Communion of the "Little Flower", William Shelleau, of Sacred Heart School, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: "We thank you for putting our pictures in 'China'. Our Little Flower Club held two meetings and collected a dollar for the Missions. The girls in our class had a play entitled "From Morn to Eve with the Little Flower'. It was very pretty. We read your letter to the 'buds', and this morning most of our class went to Mass and Holy Communion in honor of our Patroness of the Missions. We are trying to be good members of the 'Rose Garden'. First and Second Classes will be glad to get their certificates now."

The certificates have been sent, and let me remind our members that even with "overtime" work I am still behind in keeping up with correspondence. However, before holidays begin for the schools I hope to have all the mail on hand attended to. Sorry to have kept some waiting so long.

YOUNG MISSION HELPERS IN THE JUNIOR THIRD CLASS, ST. THOMAS SCHOOL, SUDBURY, ONTARIO.

Reading from top, left to right, their names are: Peter Lazarovich, Harold Carroll, Oryst Andruchew, Bernard McHughen, Joseph Lavigne, Joseph Androsky, Sammy Legree, Sylvester Massicotte, Norman Teddy, Alfred Ricciuto, Jack Terrell, Bennedetto Porcelli, Paul Taillon, Billy Maloney, Gregory Mulvihill, Peggy McHughen, Alunda Riccuto, Evelyn Burke, Leah Giroux, Irene Dubroy, Helen Nazar, Carmel Donegan, Ellen Whalen, Doris Hubert, and Jeanne Hubert.

NONSENSE

The village doctor was taking a friend for a run in his car.

"I say, look out!" cautioned the passenger; "you're doing over 60 miles an hour!"

"Don't worry," chuckled the doctor, "I've just ordered the village policeman to bed with rheumatism."

Lucy (single)—"Do you think it is wicked to smoke, dear?"

Fanny (married)—"No, dear, I'm sure it isn't."

Lucy—"Why are you so sure?"

Fanny—"Because my husband doesn't smoke; and if it was wicked I'm sure he would do it."

"My advice to you, Colonel, is to go through the movements of driving without using the ball," said the golf instructor.

"My dear fellow," answered the Colonel, "that's precisely the trouble I'm wanting to overcome!"

His host showed him into his bedroom.

"I hope you're not nervous, old chap," he said, "but this room is supposed to be haunted."

"Haunted!" exclaimed the guest. "What by?"

"A wraith—a spectre!" replied the host.

"A w-w-what?" cried the other.

"A wraith—a spectre," repeated his host.

The guest gave a deep sigh of relief, and the color returned to his cheeks.

"Oh, that's all right!" he said at last. "At first I thought you said a rate collector."

Cop—"Say, do you realize you were going 65 miles an hour?"

Sweet Young Thing—"Sixty-five! Don't be silly! I couldn't have been going over 30 at the most. In fact I don't believe I was going more than 25 at the outside."

Cop—"Well, maybe you're right. I'll just tear this ticket up and give you one for parking."

"Some treasured heirlooms are quite valueless," says a writer. In many families, slippers descend from father to son.

"Well," said the cheerful wife, who labored under the delusion that she had an operatic soprano voice, "if worst were to come to worst I could keep the wolf away from the door by singing."

"Undoubtedly!" was the instant response."

Mary—"Bertie seems to have the air of a Man About Town."

May—"Perhaps so, but he's got the bank account of a Man About Down."

"I can't live without your daughter, sir."

"Right; I'll pay for the funeral."

He (during traffic jam)—"That man created quite a sensation thirty years ago by driving a motor car at ten miles an hour."

She—"He could do the same today."

Boss—"Why have you put down ten shillings for overhead expenses?"

Traveller—"That was an umbrella I bought."

A strange St. Bernard dog came into the yard where Florence, three, was playing. The dog was nearly four times the size of the little girl.

Reaching up, she stroked the big dog's head, and called to her mother: "See, Mamma, this doggie's not a bit afraid of me."

Wife—"I took great pains with that cucumber salad I made you."

Hubby—"So did I."

Hating to think of his friends spending money on flowers for him after his death, when the cash would be more welcome to him alive, Mr. A. E. Feltham, who lives in East London, Cape Province, put the following advertisement in the local paper:

To all my friends and foes, business and otherwise: The undersigned kindly requests from those who would be desirous at my demise of contributing expressions of loving sympathy by wreaths, flowers, etc., to forward the equivalent in cash now. It will be far more practical while I am living than withered flowers when dead. All contributions will be gratefully acknowledged.

Burglar—"What are you laughing at?"

Householder—"That you come at night without a light to look for money where I can't find any in broad daylight."

A firm of contractors was engaging men for an excavation job. "Now, you," said the foreman to one of the applicants, "do you really think you are fit for hard labor?"

"Well," replied the man, "some of the best judges in the country have thought so."

"Hallo," said the neighbor, "back from your day's shooting? Have any luck?"

"Rather," said Jones proudly. "I got twelve ducks."

His neighbor nodded approvingly.

"Were they wild?" he asked.

Jones looked thoughtful.

"I can't say they were exactly," he replied. "But the farmer who owned them certainly was."

"Has your husband taken the medicine I prescribed? A tablet before each meal and a small whisky after?"

"Mebbe he's a few tablets behind, but he's a month ahead wi' th' whisky!"

"Don't you know her? Why, she lives in the same square as you."

"Yes, but she's not in the same circle."

Officer (during sham battle)—"Hi. you! Keep your head down. Don't you know you're exposing yourself to an imaginary enemy a hundred yards off?"

Private—"Yes, sir. But I'm also supposed to be hiding behind an imaginary rock fifty feet high."

Agent: "Here's a book, madam, which tells how to keep your husband. It's a wonderful little book."

Housewife: "I've been keeping my husband for the last fifteen years. What I want is a book that will tell me how to make him go to work and keep me."

"Say, doctor," said the brawny scrubwoman, "yer getting' a perty good thing out of tendin' that rich Smith boy, ain't yer?"

"Well," said the doctor, amused, "I get a pretty good fee, yes. Why?"

"Well, Doc, I 'opes yer won't forget that my Willie threw the brick that 'it 'im."

"Do you know that teacher has never seen a horse in her life?" exclaimed Maisie excitedly.

"How do you know that?" asked mother.

"Well," said little Maisie, "teacher told us to draw something, and I drew a picture of a horse—and she didn't know what it was."

Vaudeville Singer: "And for Bonnie Annie Laurie I'd lay me down and die."

Listener (rising): "Is Miss Laurie in the audience?"

The young priests who are leaving for the Prefecture of Chuchow this Fall answered the call of the Master years ago. The Seminary prepared and fitted them to be "other Christs" to bring salvation to souls in China.

THE SEMINARY NOW ASKS YOUR HELP TO DEFRAY THE EXPENSES OF ITS 1934 MISSION BAND TO CHINA.

We ask every family in Canada and Newfoundland in whose home "China" is received to make use of the coupon printed below. A little help from YOU will be much appreciated.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.
VERY REV. J. E. McRAE, President.

Dear Fathers:

Enclosed please find $..... , my contribution to help pay for the journey of your priests who are leaving for China in the Fall.

My Name .....

Address .....

.....

CHINA

ACARBORO BLUFFS

JULY-AUGUST, 1934

St. Joseph's College

Cor. Queen's Park and St. Alban's St., Toronto, Can.

WOMEN'S DEPARTMENT OF ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE

Federated with the University of Toronto for all courses leading to a Degree in Arts. Excellent residence accommodation and ideal facilities for study.

St. Joseph's College School

Cor. St. Alban's and Bay Streets, Toronto.

RESIDENTIAL AND DAY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

PREPARATORY SCHOOL

HIGH SCHOOL

COMMERCIAL, MUSIC, AND ART DEPARTMENTS

For Terms:—Apply to Sister Superior

Safety and Good Interest Return

5%

We allow 5% interest on sums of $100.00 or over placed with us for five years; 4¾% for one to four years. 3½% on Savings which are subject to withdrawal by cheque. $1.00 Opens an Account.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST GUARANTEED

Capital Trust Corporation

Limited

TORONTO OTTAWA MONTREAL

Under Dominion Government Inspection

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.

OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide 2112-2-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West
Toronto

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 26,700
Entered as second class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XV. JULY-AUGUST, 1934 No. 7

Do Foreign Missions Mean Anything to You?

STATISTICS and figures on work being done in pagan lands have a power all their own of impressing us with the magnitude of the task that yet lies ahead of the Church before the pagan world will be converted. The bald statement of fact that more than a billion people are living unbaptized, and that two-thirds of the human race are as yet strangers to the Gospel of Christ, should be incentive enough to every Catholic to take an interest in efforts that are being made to "preach the Gospel to every creature".

* * *

Consideration of the number of pagans in the world, whilst it makes us realize our own good fortune in being members of God's Church, should also have the effect of stirring within us a boundless enthusiasm for the propagation of our Faith. Let us not forget that it has taken nigh two thousand years to gather 646 million souls around the Cross of Christ and to unite 351 million souls in the one true fold. Every new Christian is a new apostle who carries the name of Christ further, and in the efforts that are being made by missionaries to bring more souls to God we are required to be co-operators. It is up to each individual Catholic, in the words of Pope Pius XI, to "esteem the gift of the Faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and, moreover, to manifest his gratitude to God by sharing with the poor pagans this same gift, the most precious of all."

* * *

Now it is the task of missionaries "in the field" to make known to the pagans the saving truths of Christ's Religion. That work they have cheerfully undertaken and zealously endeavor to carry on. It is enough — aye, more than enough — for them. Our sense of pride in our religion, our admiration for the courage and self-sacrifice of our missionaries, ought to suggest to us Catholics "at home" the desirability of seconding the efforts of those engaged in mission labours.

* * *

If we are to believe the signs of the times, and the dictums of financial and political prophets, then the people at large are on the way up and out of their financial difficulties. We are told that there is more work, more money and a spirit of cheerfulness in the land which augur well for the future. Are the Missions to have their due share in this improvement? That is for our Catholic people to say. The foreign missionaries who have given up home and friends to carry the message of Christ to pagan lands may offer all they have of ability and talent to the great work of conversion. They may labor and struggle to the point of exhaustion in their quest for souls. They may even shed their blood and lay down their lives as martyrs of the Christian faith. But they cannot of themselves solve the problem of financial support. That is the bounden duty of those who are already in possession of the Catholic Faith. Frankly, we must confess our belief that there is too much of a laizzer-faire attitude towards foreign missions on the part of our Catholic people. There is not evident in our Catholic parishes that "mission-spirit" which should be so characteristic of every individual Catholic who appreciates the blessings that membership in the One True Church confers on him. We are often shamed to confusion in reading press reports of missionary activity on the part of Protestant congregations. Not content with supporting their churches at home they give a thought to the extension of their influence in foreign lands, and their generosity to their foreign missions oftentimes is a reproach to Catholics who should be more conscious of their obligations when they reflect on the greater gifts that are theirs to bestow.

* * *

It must remain forever a difficult thing to understand why men and women will make such heroic sacrifices to promote causes that at best can endure for only a few short years. We suppose it is due to a wrong sense of values. The sacrifice of human lives and of millions of dollars seems perfectly justifiable if it is a question of promoting some worldly venture, but the same people who willingly make such sacrifices look askance at the mere suggestion that an effort, trifling in comparison, be made to promote interests that are enduring and eternal. When the nations were engaged in the World War billions of dollars were produced, used up and in many instances wasted without question in order that the conflict might be carried on. It is pertinent to ask whether Christ's warfare, the warfare in which seventy-five thousand or more Catholic missionaries are engaged, which has for its object, not the destruction of bodies, but the salvation of souls, is worth as much? The measure of your support of Catholic Missions determines your own answer to the question.

CHILDREN of CHINA

Their Terribly Sad Lot in Life

By
REV. D. E. STRINGER

MOST people have read at one time or other the story entitled "Babes in the Wood". It seems to be an allegory which paints with almost perfect delineation the sad plight of most of China's little ones. Those of us who have been surrounded from earliest years with all the beauties and helps and solaces of Catholicity are apt to take them for granted, never for a moment trying to see ourselves as we very likely would be without them. In helping anyone a real appreciation of that one's difficulties is essential. Of course every time a tramp comes to the back door we are not going to sit down and gather more facts for our book on "Trampology". But in the serious things of life we have no end of thinking to do. And in this most important of all affairs—that of saving the soul—salvation depends on it. So let us try to get a clear and concise picture of the state of childhood in this great country to the end that you and I may be of mutual assistance in providing a remedy.

Confucius draws a rather graphic picture for us. "People," he writes, "try their utmost to please and spoil their children. For their clothes instead of plain blue stuff a medley of colours is chosen so that people may say the children are pretty. Everything the child wishes to eat is bought for him; parents even deprive themselves of food to give it to him; if he swears, far from scolding him, he is praised and extolled for his cleverness in knowing how to swear. When he quarrels with others he is praised for his insolence and fearing nobody and because others dread to meddle with him. If he lies he is praised for his wit. Parents know pretty well that their children are thieves and steal other people's property; instead of checking them they praise them for their cleverness and also for knowing, though so young, the values of things and how to interest themselves for the family good."

A recent picture of the author of the accompanying article, Father Desmond Stringer, of Ottawa, Ontario, now Pastor of the church of the Sacred Heart at Lishui.

I have seen all these accusations borne out in the few years I have been here. Especially the very young get their way in mostly everything and then the parents wonder why when they grow up they are so recalcitrant. During this period of childhood sound beatings are in order and very often that type of punishment which Fr. Venini described in the May edition of "China".

We all know how the child's mind busies itself as it begins to think of things around. It is related of Sun-Yat-Sen that when he was a child one day he asked his mother "Of what is the blue sky made?" "Of an upturned bowl," was her reply. Another time he queried, "Mother, what comes after death?" And her answer, so hopeless, "There is nothing after death; all ends there." Perhaps some of us might think that a child's mind would soon throw off any little restless feeling such an answer would stir up. You would be amazed at the mentality all have regarding the devil, his powers and manners of acting. It was not so long ago that one of the priests was telling me of an old man who chanced in to hear the Catechist preaching. His comment at the finish was illuminating. With a wish-it-could-be-but-surely-it-can't-be expression he told him that he would find a lifetime of toil and worry easy to bear if there was such a heaven as ours, where he would at last find peace and rest and refuge from the devil. Did his mother, too, tell him that death ends all? The natural conclusion or end of such a mentality is amply illustrated in the story of "The Good Thief of Chusan", which was published some time ago in these pages. A pirate fell sick and found his way into the Sisters' hospital. How surprised he was to learn piracy was a wicked thing. "But," he told the Sisters, "I never knew it was wrong. All my people were pirates for generations. My father often took me with him on his expeditions and taught me how to be successful. I never knew any other trade and nobody ever before told me it was wrong." Perhaps his mother too told him that death ends all.

Contrast such a state with that in which we were brought up. The Catholic child right from the start has Heaven before his eyes. He derives from it a feeling of real security which permeates his whole being and from it spring his needful consolations and carefree joys. Down Ching Yuen way there is a little friend of mine, a pagan, who is blind. In the evening you can see him sitting with his little sister at the Mission door. Blindness is a terrible affliction for anyone, most of all for children. These two little ones are poorer than any I've seen in our Canada. He is preparing to be a sorcerer and will earn his living thus. Spiritually starved, and we have such a surfeit. One has to live here to understand the difference; to measure the gap that separates them from us. Volumes upon volumes will only give a faint outline.

Carefree seems a synonym for childhood, but in China and especially among the Chinese poor, there is precious little. The lot of the girls is little better than that of the hireling. Many of them are placed as infants in the homes of their future husbands and are the slaves of the family. The continual fight for the necessaries of life demands that each one shoulder his burden. Once, while making a Mission trip, we came into a small village crowded into a tiny valley. It was miserably poor and wholly pagan. There were many kiddies around and we thought it would be of real benefit if even one of them could be sent to the Mission school. We talked it over, telling them that they need not fear expense. But not one could be spared, the old patriarch told me, for every hand was needed to eke out a living. What little pleasures brighten the childhood of these kiddies? Story books? They cannot read. Toys? They have none. Games? Maybe; but tired little bones would rather rest. In the cities things are rather better. There is a space of time between the day's work done and bedtime when they play and relax as best they can. "Jackstones" find favour with the girls. The boys are more boisterous and find enjoyment playing "soldiers" or "chase". Once or twice I came across them carrying a miniature idol in an empty cigarette carton bedecked with red paper and lighted by two bits of candle. They furnished the requisite noise with a couple of tin cans and a dozen pairs of lusty lungs. Yet how much happier could you and I not make them and how very much more contented and peaceful when they go to rest if their young minds and hearts could turn to God and whisper child-like prayers and fall asleep secure in the loving gaze of their Guardian Angels.

"Suffer little children to come unto Me" is what Christ wants. The foundation of a firm Christianity in these parts lies in the children. The child mind is like soft wax and very easily impressed. Hence among the most effective blows against the Church are those aimed at the children. It was the thought of the little ones being scandalized that drew from Christ the terrible woe He pronounced. We, each one of us, have to exert ourselves at least to the extent that those against us do. Or as a Saint has put it, we must "pray as if everything depended on God, and work as if everything depended on ourselves." Only God is able to gauge the work done through the prayers and pennies of the youthful members of the "Rose Garden". We hope these few lines will urge each one of our readers to renewed effort that the work so well begun will always continue to prosper.

—"The Little Missionary"

A HORRIBLE INCIDENT

By Rev. E. F. Mindorff, O.F.M.

ONE morning I was leaving our residence to go to say Mass at San Dao School. It was 5:30 and still rather dark. Just as I wanted to get into my rickshaw and start out, a woman came running up to me, indicating that she had something urgent to say. She informed me hastily that on the road just outside the Mission there lay a dead child. I should come to see it. I hurried to the spot, and by lighting a few matches I could see what was what. A poor little child was lying there naked in the middle of the road. It had been wrapped up in some rags, but when I found it, the rags were torn into bits and scattered about. Upon closer examination I found that dogs had eaten away a part of the child's head, and left the helpless infant in a horrible condition. One cannot blame the dogs. In this part of China dogs are scavengers and eat anything they can find. More beastly than the dogs was the person who put the child there, and exposed it to such a horrible death.

The woman who was with me said she thought the child had been dead for some time. I felt convinced that she was right, for the body was cold and so injured by the dogs that I could not imagine any life to be in the body. So I told the woman to inform the Chinese Sisters who have a house nearby. I knew they would come and take care of the body. I then went on to my Mission to say Mass.

Upon returning about 8 o'clock, what was my surprise to hear the following story. The Chinese Sisters had come immediately and had taken the child in. After they had it in a warm place for a while it began to show signs of life. What a blessing! Just then our Bishop was coming to the chapel of these Sisters to say Mass, and he himself baptized the child with all the ceremonies of the Church, afterwards administering Confirmation likewise. The child died some hours later.

I was indeed happy to hear that the child was still alive when the Sisters found it, and that it received the grace of baptism. Thus God arranged all the circumstances in His own wise way, and brought to another little soul the happiness of heaven.

For the rest of that day I could not help thinking of that poor infant. I also thought long and deeply about the ignorance and cruelty of the people who put the child there and exposed it to such a death. The surprising part of it is that the child was a baby boy, and apparently healthy. It is very rare that boys are thrown away like that. The reason must have been some strong pagan superstition; perhaps the parents feared bad luck if they kept the child, or it may have been an effort to protect some one's good name. I do not know. But the incident does show how much some of these people need the sweet religion of Christ to teach them true charity and pity for the children whom our Lord loved so dearly.

On the

MISSION TRAIL in SUNG YANG

●

With

REV. J. L. BEAL

I AM writing this at Nan Dong, our baby mission about forty miles from Sung Yang. To reach here meant a walk over the most rugged mountains in the district. As I mentioned in a previous writing, Nan Dong is a favourable retreat to come to when other places seem less receptive to one's efforts. I find that the people here come out very well to attend services. Last year they were very disappointed when, through illness, Monsignor McGrath had to cancel his proposed visit to this part of my mission. Decorations had been made for the visit, and there are still remnants of them in evidence.

* * *

At present (this was written early in April—Ed.) I am rounding up those who are preparing for Baptism, and a good deal of time is spent daily in giving instructions to catechumens and in hearing confessions. The folks here certainly have not been favoured with worldly riches, but they are blessed with simple, kindly hearts, and it is my belief that within the next few years the whole village will have become Catholic.

A group under instruction for Baptism at Nan Dong. The man standing at right was the victim of the accident related here.

* * *

My quarters here are very ill equipped for a prolonged stay, but by the way old man Pluvius is acting I may have to remain here for some days. One-half the house is covered with tiles, and my half has straw for a covering. My bed clothing is damp from a slow leak in the improvised roof, and I'm hoping it gets no worse.

* * *

The above paragraphs were written four days ago. In the meantime I have baptized seven babies. The administration of the Sacrament was witnessed by a large crowd of both Christians and pagans. When I distributed medals to the newly-baptized, the pagans asked to have one also, saying they would like to have some mark which would show they desired to belong to the Christian community. Naturally, I had to refuse their requests.

* * *

It may not be out of place here to say a word about the man who shared with me the other half of my house. He was a victim of a serious accident, for which he has only himself to blame. During the Chinese New Year's celebrations he went to Lang Yu to visit friends and to buy himself some candy. The motor cars there were an object of continual admiration for him. The train was also an object of attraction. The night before his departure from Lang Yu he went down to the station to see the train come in. The train happened to be later than usual, so our friend went for a stroll along the tracks, carrying with him a ho lu (i.e., a hand stove with live coals). The train approached him with glaring headlight and at a point where there was a steep embankment. To avoid the train he rolled to the ditch below and was seriously burned when his ho lu overturned. He received no treatment for his injury, and his hand became gangrenous and now emits a terrible odour. The loss of at least one hand seems inevitable for the poor fellow.

* * *

And now we transfer you to Suichang. This place, some twenty years ago, was a flourishing mission; the chapel was considered too small to accommodate the four hundred Christians and catechumens. What a sad change took place when they were left without the ministrations of the priest! I know of only four faithful Christians here now. Today I had the happiness of baptizing three people. With God's help we will try to restore this section of our mission.

* * *

Yesterday in front of the mission took place an incident not at all uncommon in China. A neighbouring butcher, who has a local reputation for intemperance, broke out after dinner and was determined to proceed to the yamen to kill one of the officers. The cause of the outburst was some money matter in which he felt he had not been given a square deal. He was staggering down the street and pouring forth curses with a vengeance when some friend got the better of him and persuaded him to return. When I appeared at my door he approached and said, "Sir, am I not right?" I pacified him and suggested he retire quietly to his home. He readily took my advice, and with the assistance of his younger brother he went home. Today he came to me, much chagrined over his conduct of yesterday. He gave me credit for being a very intelligent man and apologized for his bad behaviour.

* * *

On Saturday afternoon I went out to the west gate to see my old friend the paralytic, who has remained faithful to his religion despite the fact that he cannot come to church any more, and must live in close proximity to a real virago, of whom I wrote recently in "China". She has a one-month-old grandson now, whose parents are Catholics, but she's firm in her intention not to allow the parents to have the child baptized. As soon as I come to the house this old woman lights the candles and josh sticks before the box of scrolls in order to ward off the evil influence of my presence. I fear that only when old age overcomes her will she be easy to handle, as now she has everybody in the house living in mortal terror of her.

* * *

Sunday morning the weather was a welcome change from the rain of the previous week. While I was reviewing my sermon my catechist introduced two Christians who had been away from the church for many years. One of them had not been to confession for 37 years, and he felt that the half-hour remaining before Mass was not long enough to do justice to his case. He passed the Sunday fittingly, and the next morning I heard his confession. The other fellow had been a renegade for 23 years, and he told me an interesting story of his return to the Faith. I remembered having seen him on several occasions during my journeyings to Nan Dong, but never did he salute the priest or admit he was a Christian. One evening he was passing an abandoned mill and in the murky darkness he was frightened by some supposedly phantom figure. He reached home in an exhausted condition, which developed later into a case of nervous prostration, and he had to remain in bed for several months. His pagan neighbours and some of his family called in the Dao Shih to cure him. Our good friend was utterly oblivious to the noisy ceremonies that were carried on. When he recovered sufficiently to ask what was going on he forbade the continuance of the pagan rites, and expressed his intention of making his peace with God on the first occasion when the priest would visit the place.

Looking down on the Sung Yang River from the Temple of the Three Kings.

CATHOLIC WILLS

For Mission Needs

In China, our priests need funds for new chapels, for new schools, for new homes, and for payment of salaries to catechists. In Canada, our Seminary needs support for the training of young apostles and for the maintenance of their home. Donations to our Burse Fund and our Building Fund are our greatest present needs. Think of our Mission work when making, or changing, your last will. Here's how you can do it; insert this clause in your will:

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO, THE SUM OF....."

* * *

I always attribute the return of some prodigal to the Church as the result of the fervent prayers being offered for the missionaries by our good people back home. Full well I know of the daily rosaries and visits to the Blessed Sacrament that are being offered by readers of "China" on behalf of our work, and any good we have been instrumental in doing has its root in the heart of some Catholic who remembers to say a prayer for us when he reads of our strivings for souls out here in this pagan land. The people here often tell us how much they admire the priest who must surely "eat much bitterness" in tramping over the mountains for their sakes, but we are well rewarded when we can do something to help these poor souls lead a good life and share in the blessings of the Redemption.

* * *

The Sunday after Easter was spent with the Christians at another mission station, Chu Z Ca. One of the incidents on the way here from

(Continued on page 109)

Father Beal examines the road building in his mission territory.

"China" extends very sincere and hearty congratulations to Very Rev. Francis P. Carroll, President of St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto, on his elevation to the dignity of Domestic Prelate by His Holiness the Pope. The Papal Brief containing the appointment made mention of Monsignor Carroll's administrative abilities and the splendid qualities he has manifested as head of the Toronto Diocesan Seminary. Ordained to the Priesthood in 1917, the new prelate was immediately appointed to the Chair of Sacred Scripture in the Seminary of which he became President in 1931. Since the recent death of Archbishop McNeil, Monsignor Carroll has been the Administrator of the Archdiocese of Toronto. Because of the happy relations St. Francis Xavier Seminary has always enjoyed with St. Augustine's, the honor that has come to Monsignor Carroll gives us very special pleasure. "China" begs God's blessing on the new Monsignor that he may be spared many years in the service of the Church which he has already served so notably.

CHINESE CATHOLIC VILLAGE

Changchun.

There is a unique Chinese village a short distance to the northwest of this city called Hsiaopachiatsu.

Its inhabitants are all Roman Catholics who lead a very religious life. All the women wear black clothes resembling the clothes of a Catholic nun. None of the inhabitants work on Sundays, and they observe prayers every morning and evening.

The village has never known a bandit attack, although it is well fortified with trenches and other fortifications. Villagers devote themselves heart and soul to the work of maintaining peace and order in their little community.

Education is highly regarded and the village is known to have sent some of its young men as far as Rome to study.

The Christian influence in the village dates back 123 years, when a French evangelist arrived from Chihli Province. Missionary work has been carried on since then. Since 80 years ago, a Roman Catholic father has always been stationed in the village.—Reuter.

CONFUCIANISM REVIVAL

The movement for the revival of Confucianism in Canton is gaining considerable headway. The Government has adopted a resolution restoring sacrificial ceremonies, abolished some years ago, for the Great Sage. Sacrificial rites for Confucius were held under the joint auspices of the Provincial Department of Education and the Department of Civil Affairs. It has been decided to hold two ceremonies each year, the Spring and Autumn Sacrifices.

CHICAGO PAPERS PLEASE COPY

Chow Kai-ching, a graduate of the Whampoa Military Academy, was executed in Ningpo recently by order of the Kiangsu Provincial Government. According to a message from Ningpo, Chow, who had been unemployed for some time past, committed two daring robberies, one at the Pao Hsin Silversmith Shop and another at the Chun Kong Native Bank. He was arrested almost immediately after the robberies and was sentenced to death by a military tribunal. The death sentence having been confirmed in a telegram by the provincial authorities, Chow was shot.

CHINESE MINISTER PROUD OF NIECE, A NUN

After the consecration of Archbishop Zanin, Apostolic Delegate to China, at the Propaganda College, Rome, the Chinese Minister to Italy, Mr. Liou Won Tao, took great pride in presenting his niece, a Franciscan Missionary of Mary, to the newly consecrated Delegate and to the various personages present.

Though Mr. Liou is a non-Christian, he is deeply attached to his niece and pleased with the new role in life which she has chosen. It is understood that the young woman received her vocation to the sisterhood through the intercession of Our Lady of China, who is venerated at the Shrine of Zose, near Shanghai.—Fides.

FIRST CHINESE ASPIRANT FOR "BESIEGED" SISTERS

Miss Teresa Lung, of Yuanchow, China, who has sailed for America to enter the novitiate of the Sisters of Saint Joseph, at Baden, Pennsylvania, has been active in the Prefecture Apostolic of Shenchow for the past eight years, where she was a fellow sufferer with the Sisters in their flights and many sieges. Yuanchow city has been besieged many times. Last summer the Sisters were locked up for two months while the rebel soldiers holding the city fought off the regular troops. Miss Lung was accompanied as far as Shanghai by Mother Genevieve Ryan, Superioress of the Sisters of Saint Joseph in China, who came to the missions some years ago after several terms as Mother General of her order in America. Mother Genevieve is in her seventies and has celebrated her Golden Jubilee.

CONVICT'S LAST WISH

When the governor of the Tsientsin prison asked a convict about to be executed what was his last request, the man replied that he wanted to hear Mass. By Chinese law those condemned to death have the right to make a request before they die; some ask for a coffin, others for a good meal, and so on. The prison officials got in touch with Bishop de Vienne, C.M., Vicar Apostolic of Tsientsin, who went to console the man by saying Mass in the jail. At Tsientsin there is a small group of Catholics who visit the prisons regularly, while the Sisters of Charity make the rounds to nurse the sick.—Fides.

CARMEL FOUNDED IN HONGKONG

A Carmelite monastery has been founded at Hongkong following the permission granted by the Holy See to Bishop Valtorta, Vicar Apostolic of Hongkong, to establish there the Belgian Carmelites who, residing at Canton since their arrival in 1930, have gathered together a group of Chinese novices.

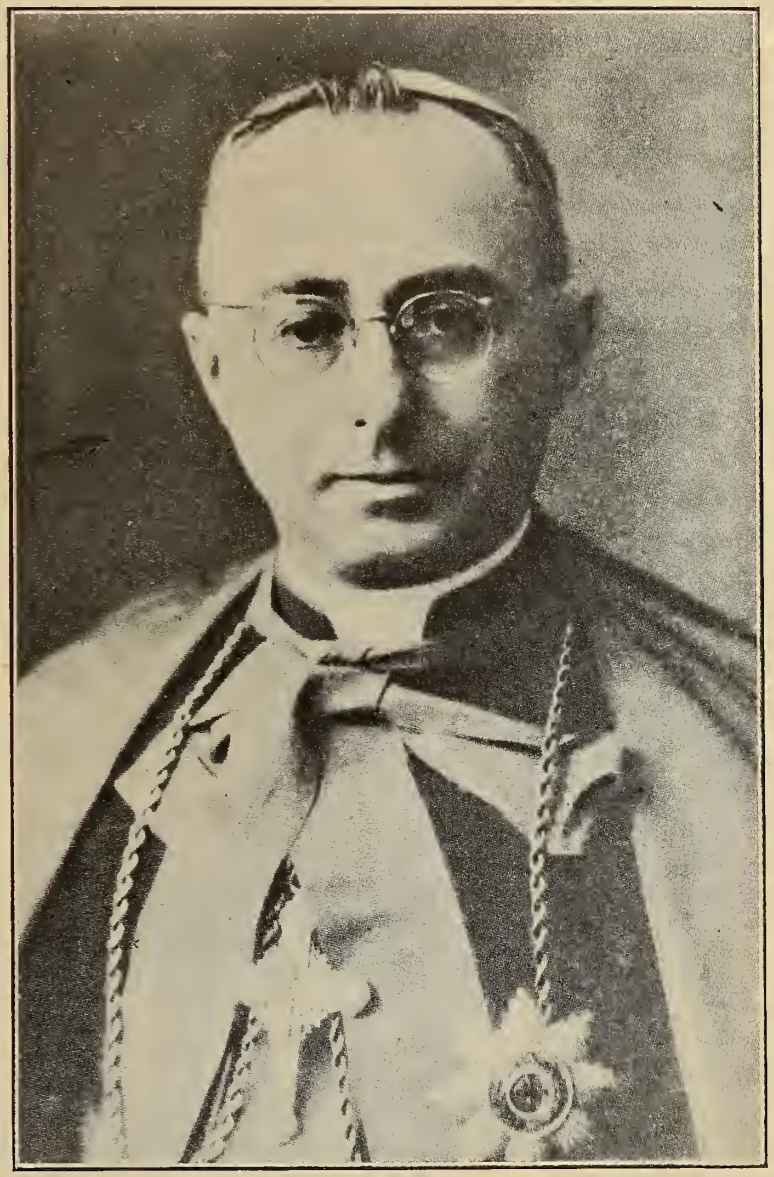
Little doubt is entertained about the success of this Carmel in China since Chinese young women possess qualities which fit them in a special way for the contemplative life, and the Chinese novices and postulants of this foundation have already shown an admirable fervour and a spirit of prayer and sacrifice.

VICE OF USURY IN CHINA

The pawn shop is the most prominent building in most Chinese villages. In the province of Kwangtung alone there are 1,349 such institutions where the unfortunate people obtain loans at exorbitant rates of interest. The usurers are unmolested because they are a rich source of revenue for the Government. The Kwangtung Government levied £130,000 from them last year and expects over £169,000 this year. Usury in China ranks next to opium in its disastrous effects. In accordance with the decrees of the Chinese Synod held in Shanghai in 1924 catechumens must be fully instructed on the Church's attitude towards these two vices before being admitted to Baptism.

CHINESE ORIGIN OF INFLUENZA

The origin of influenza is the infected properties of the mud of the Yellow River, according to an article published in the "British Medical Journal", of which the author is Dr. Howard Wise.



The infection, he says, originally travelled by the trade routes across Asia, but, nowadays, is carried by ships.

Overflowing of the Yellow River in 1899 and 1918 was followed, he claims, by widespread epidemics due to the fact that the mud from the river was deposited over a wide area and, when it dried, scattered as dust.

Dr. Wise predicts that the world will be ravaged again in 1946 unless, in the meantime, the plague spot is recognized and the Yellow River effectively dredged.

Although China has been known as an agricultural country, she now depends on the supply of foreign rice to feed her people, the production of rice and wheat in the country being insufficient to meet the requirements as a result of the continued famines, droughts, and civil wars. According to figures published by the Ministry of Industry, a total of $274,303,434 worth of rice and wheat were imported from different countries during the last year.

"That which reassures me and gives me confidence to face my tasks is the knowledge that here the Christians are numerous," declared the new Mandarin of Sienhsien, China, after witnessing a drama representing a story from the Church of the Catacombs, presented by the students of the Jesuit college. "What our country needs," the Mandarin said, "is people who can see what is right and who have the courage to follow out their convictions."—Fides.

Just before the close of the school year, St. Francis Xavier Seminary was honoured by a visit from His Eminence, Jean Marie Cardinal Villeneuve, Archbishop of Quebec. The Seminary was en fête for the occasion, and our Very Reverend President, Dr. John E. McRae, extended, on behalf of the Staff and Students, a cordial welcome to the first Cardinal ever to honor China Mission Seminary by his presence. Replying, His Eminence assured us of his interest in the work being done by our Institute, and expressed himself as delighted with the splendid body of students who are preparing for missionary work in China. Canada's Cardinal certainly captivated our hearts by his very charming personality, and we shall long cherish the memory of his visit.

The ADDRESS of the Apostolic Delegate to the

PRESIDENT OF CHINA

MOST REVEREND MARIO ZANIN, the new Apostolic Delegate to China, was given a royal welcome to the Orient when he reached Hong Kong on the eve of last Easter Sunday. Consecrated at Rome on January 7th of this year, Archbishop Zanin succeeds Archbishop Celso Costantini, who resigned, owing to ill health.

"I feel highly honoured and experience a particular happiness in coming to-day in my capacity as Apostolic Delegate to China to present to the highest representative of the National Government the heartfelt salutations of my August Sovereign, the Supreme Pontiff of all the Catholics of the world, His Holiness Pope Pius XI.

"In paying my official respects to-day, I also represent the entire Catholic Church of China with its one hundred and twenty ecclesiastical divisions and its far-flung enterprises of charity, of culture, and of spiritual and moral influence.

"In the name of His Holiness, who has always followed and continues to follow with lively interest the course of events in China, I am happy to assure the National Government that the Catholic Missions will continue to make their contribution to the peace, the prosperity, and the progress of this great country, expressing the hope that full recognition will be given the legitimate aspirations and the rights of a people who outnumber every other on the face of the earth; to a people of ancient culture who have had epochs of greatness and splendour; to a people who, if they persevere in the ways of justice and order, hav assuredly before them a great future.

"Indeed, the Catholic Church in China, just as from the very beginning of her relations with the Sovereign Rulers of this noble nation — relations which were founded six centuries ago in the person of His Holiness' first Apostolic Delegate—always professes, teaches, and preaches respect and obedience to legitimately constituted authority in accordance with her fundamental doctrine.

"We express our sincerest appreciation for the favour and the encouragement manifested on many occasions to the Catholic Missions, and we feel sure that the Government will safeguard the liberty and security of our institutions in order to facilitate our work in amicable co-operation with the Chinese authorities.

"In expressing these sentiments I may assure your Excellency that, in union with all the Catholics in China, I shall pray Almighty God daily for the prosperity and peace of this noble nation and for the successful realization of her aspirations".

MR. LIN SEN'S REPLY.

"The mention of the generous sentiments cherished by His Holiness for our Republic and our People, sentiments which, in your quality as the Delegate of His Holiness the Pope, you come to express to me to-day, affords me supreme joy and consolation. As President of the Republic and in the name of our People, I beg Your Excellency to transmit to His Holiness our sincere good wishes for His Holiness' continued good health and the prosperity of the Papal Court.

"Relations between China and the Catholic Church have a long past. Long before China had established official contacts with any of the Powers, Catholic missionaries, as the forerunners of foreigners coming to China, traversed the high seas to make their way to the Orient. Under the Yuan, the first to make our civilization known to the Occident was a Catholic missionary. Under the Ming, the first to endow our Chinese people with a knowledge of Western science and art was again a Catholic missionary. I desire to express here a profound appreciation for the contributions of the Catholic Church towards the peace, progress, and prosperity of China. It is hardly necessary to repeat that Our Government will continue to insure the security of her institutions so as to facilitate their beneficent activity.

"In view of Your Excellency's wide experience in the fields of religion and culture, in view also of Your intimate understanding of the Chinese people and their interests, I profoundly believe that the relations between the Chinese Government, on the one hand, and the Holy See, on the other, will make ever further progress.

"It is with great pleasure I welcome Your Excellency to our shores and I wish You the best of health during your sojourn among us."—Reuter.

THE NEW APOSTOLIC DELEGATE ON CATHOLIC ACTION IN CHINA

A meeting of the Bishops of South China with His Excellency, Msgr. Mario Zanin, Apostolic Delegate to China, which was attended by Mr. Loh Pa-hong, prominent Catholic of Shanghai and President of Catholic Action in China, was held in Hongkong shortly after the arrival of the new Apostolic Delegate.

His Excellency opened the meeting with a short discourse. He had come to the meeting not only to salute and encourage those present, but also officially to convey to them the wishes and encouragement of the Holy Father as regards Catholic Action in China. Catholic Action had been worthily represented by Commander Loh Pa-hong, of whom it had been rightly said that he was not only its president but also its embodiment. The Holy Father appreciated very highly the work done by Commander Loh Pa-hong, and was especially desirous that Catholic Action in China should be developed according to the spirit and mind of its energetic president. Catholic Action in China should be animated by a three-fold spirit: a spirit of faith, of charity, and of zeal. The latter should be developed along the lines already manifested in the work of Commander Loh Pa-hong. An ardent spirit of zeal is necessary to all Chinese Catholics, since only if they possess it can they be sure that their faith is really effective. His Excellency rejoiced in the fact that at the present day Chinese pagans were showing a sincere desire to learn more about the Catholic Faith, which was assuredly due to the spirit of zeal of Chinese Catholics. Nevertheless this spirit needs intensification so that the lay apostolate may become the point of contact between the hierarchy and pagan China. In conclusion, His Excellency said that the work of Commander Loh Pa-hong had the full approval of the Holy Father, and that the work of Catholic Action should go forward according to his spirit of faith, charity and zeal.

THE SYNODAL COMMISSION OF CHINA
This Commission was established ten years ago. It is composed of five members who are appointed for three or more years by the Apostolic Delegate. Its purpose is to regulate Catholic education, to promote Chinese literature, to support the Catholic Press—in a word, it is meant to be a centre of Catholic Action in China.

PROCESSION OF THE CITY GOD

The glories of the imperial court of the past generations were fully restored in a procession of the City God in a limited number of streets in Nantao. Their ardour undampened by the inclement weather, several thousand followers took part in the parade, posing as guards, couriers, wearing varicoloured head-gears and gorgeously embroidered robes, and even as robust executioners with vermilion robes and devils with long hair and black gowns.

The procession, which was banned for the last nine years, was held without the consent of the authorities, the preparations by the sponsors successfully preventing any unpleasantness from attending the event. Believers hope that the procession will restore the prosperity of the city, which has apparently been falling from God's favour with the encroachment of modern influences.

For more than two hours streets in the area in which the procession was held were crowded with spectators, which necessitated the suspension of traffic. The City Temple, home of the City God, was thronged throughout the day with worshippers offering sacrifices. Incense and paper money were burned in large quantities. No fire-crackers were, however, used.—N.C. Herald.

CATHOLIC ACTION IN PRACTICE.
Here we see Mr. Lo Pa Hong, the National President of Catholic Action in China, baptizing before their execution, criminals condemned to death at Shanghai. He has himself personally baptized hundreds of such prison inmates.

The number of Chinese students studying in America has dropped from 2,000 to 954 in the last five years. Change in handling the American Boxer Indemnity Fund partly explains this, while further reasons are found in the improvement of Chinese schools and colleges, the high adverse rate of money exchange which makes it costly to live abroad, and the fact that Belgium, France, Germany and England have either remitted their Boxer funds in recent years or in other ways extended facilities to Chinese students, with the result that those who seek education abroad are choosing Europe in preference to America.—Fides.

The "New Life" Movement in China

Wuhan, China.

THE "New Life Movement" which was first inaugurated in Nanchang under the sponsorship of General Chiang Kaishek for the encouragement of simple and better mode of living among the Chinese people and which has since spread to all parts of the country, has been given great impetus here with the inauguration of the movement and the subsequent organization of the Hupeh New Life Movement Association at the Hankow Chinese Chamber of Commerce.

The first meeting of the Executive and Supervisory Committee of the Association was held at the Commander-in-Chief's Headquarters at Wuchang and members of a Standing Committee were nominated to take charge of all affairs. The committee consists of military, Kuomintang, educational, commercial and civic leaders. Well-printed posters have been much in evidence throughout the three cities bearing slogans exhorting the public to follow certain principles for better living.

The rules for the movement are: Concerning eating: 1. Good manners and table etiquette must be observed during meals. 2. Sit straight. 3. Don't cast food particles on or under the table. 4. Restrain from creating any sound while drinking or chewing. 5. Don't smoke. 6. Don't drink. 7. Don't eat anything between meals. 8. Drink several bowls of boiled water on rising from bed every morning. 9. Eat nothing unclean. 10. Drink no water unboiled. 11. Brush the teeth every morning and wash the mouth with fresh water after every meal. 12. No violent exercises before and after meals. 13. Keep the kitchen and kitchen utensils constantly clean.

Concerning clothing: 1. Clothes should be kept clean and in good order. 2. Well buttoned. 3. Shoes and socks should be worn properly. 4. Hats or caps must be worn properly. 5. Doff the hat when bowing. 6. Doff the hat at public meeting places. 7. Doff the hat when entering the room. 8. All worn out parts of clothing should be well sewed. 9. All clothes should be made with native material. 10. Everybody should carry handkerchiefs when away from home.

Concerning lodging: 1. The house should be kept clean and in good order. 2. Early to bed and early to rise. 3. Keep the room constantly ventilated. 4. Frequently wash the mouth and the hair and the hands. 5. Take a suitable form of exercise every day. 6. Cut the finger nails frequently. 7. Take regular baths. 8. Blankets must be frequently washed and dried under the sun. 9. Keep the lavatory clean. 10. Mosquitoes must be killed. 11. Flies must be killed. 12. Rats must be killed. 13. No spitting in the house. 14. Dump the garbage into the garbage can. 15. Every family sweep before their own door every day.

LED by General Chiang Kai-shek and started in Nanchang about a month ago, the movement here detailed has since been taken up with gusto in various parts of China. It is aimed at a national revival through rigorous regulation of the life of the individual.

Posters displayed emphasized the necessity of a well-ordered life and the importance of the virtues of propriety, honesty and justice. The "New Life" movement, says one of the posters, is a foundation upon which to build up a new nation richer and more complete in its moral and cultural attainments. Another interesting poster reads, "Support the Leaders of the Movement!"

Dr. Chu Chia-hua, in his opening speech, drew attention to the significance of the movement as a means of resuscitating the life of the nation. He called upon the people to discard their bad habits and to revive what is good and sound in the ancient morals. Speeches along similar lines were also delivered by other government leaders.

Concerning travel: 1. Walk along the left side. 2. Don't attempt to overtake those in front while walking on the street. 3. Don't walk too slowly and loaf along. 4. Don't eat while walking. 5. Apologize when you collide with somebody on the road. 6. Walk by order when you go to buy a train ticket from the booking office. 7. Say "good morning" when you meet somebody in the morning. 8. Say "goodbye" when you leave the person whom you visit. 9. Return to the owner when you pick up something left by others. 10. Preserve with care public property. 11. Lend a hand to the old, young and women when boarding or disembarking at trains or steamers. 12. Refrain from making big noises while on a train or steamer. 13. Don't commit a nuisance at unauthorized places.

Concerning working: 1. Concentrate while working. 2. Persevere and don't make any complaint. 3. Never wait for to-morrow. 4. Observe office hours. 5. Obey orders and the instructions of your superiors. 6. Have a plan before working. 7. Don't be afraid of difficulty. 8. Don't be offensive and don't be weakened. 9. Don't be discouraged when unjustly attacked or criticized. 10. Don't take a bribe. 11. Be always optimistic while working. 12. Have no contempt for labourers. 13. Fair play in all business dealings.

Concerning teaching and learning: 1. At least be able to read 1,000 Chinese characters. 2. Read the newspapers every day. 3. Keep yourself up-to-date with the happenings in the country and abroad. 4. Frequently participate in instructive meetings. 5. Learn and participate in new enterprises. 6. Observe the principles of "First Step in People's Rights" during mass meetings.

Concerning recreation: 1 Control your emotions under stimulating circumstances. 2. Be interested in your daily pursuits of life. 3. Control your temper. 4. Eradicate prostitution. 5. Don't gamble. 6. Don't read indecent books and don't look at indecent pictures. 7. Choose one of the most wholesome amusements.

Concerning social contact: 1. Be punctual in meeting appointments with friends. 2. Don't speak before others have finished their speech. 3. Don't gossip on idle subjects over an interval of 15 minutes. 4. Don't laugh when others are in distress. 5. Mediate others' quarrels. 6. Refrain from uttering bad words or using violence. 7. Prevail upon others with right instead of might. 8. Reason with those who attempt to assault you with words or action. 9. Be polite when speaking. 10. Apologize when you offend others. 11. Respect elders. 12. Be chivalrous and humble to the women. 13. Treat your friends with faith and righteousness. 14. Keep confidential what others say to you. 15. Don't borrow unless in dire need.

A BOOST FOR PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Writing to a fellow-Islander at the Seminary, Father Vincent Morrison, pastor of Sung Yang, had some favourable comments to make on various happenings in the "home country", and with the knowledge of vacation days ahead for the seminarians he had some "suggestions" to offer which took into account some of the attractions of "the Garden of the Gulf". According to this ardent "down Easterner", P.E.I. is the best place in Canada in which to spend a holiday. We found ourselves going through the motions as we read of the deep sea mackerel fishing, clam digging on the bay shores, lobster fishing, etc. Father Morrison was writing from experience when he commended the generosity of the Island people, for on many occasions he has been helped considerably by them in his mission work in China.

"After the Island," writes Father Vincent, "the next place is Sung Yang and its environs, with its lofty mountains and fertile plains where the Chinese peasants work energetically in the planting and harvesting of their rice crops. A walk in the country around Sung Yang does one good. It is most interesting to visit some of the ancient temples and monuments that now dot the countryside stripped of their former splendour. In the country, one always meets with many Chinese who stop to talk and ask questions as to who you are and where do you come from. I always tell them from P.E.I., so the island has now acquired some fame in these parts."

Our P.E.I. priest has a flourishing mission at Sung Yang, where he, with Father "Larry" Beal, has been doing valuable work for the past several years. We feel that both of them will often wish this Summer for "a breath of the cool North Atlantic breeze", for latest press reports from China tell us that the weather is unusually hot there this year, the thermometer registering 105 degrees around the middle of July.

With a "Tsay Hui" and "Ma Ma Kio" (Good-Bye and Walk Slowly, as the Chinese say), Father Morrison closed a letter, which was very welcome and much enjoyed by us all. The Seminarians during the year (and while on vacation, too, we hope) keep in frequent touch with our missionaries through the mutual exchange of correspondence.

Father Vincent Morrison standing beside a tablet erected at the entrance to the Public Library at Sung Yang.

WHERE CANADIAN MISSIONARIES ARE LOCATED

There are 1,622 Canadians working in the mission fields of the world—431 priests, 218 brothers and 973 sisters.

Where are they located? The following list gives the latest figures:

	Priests and Brothers	Sisters
North America	292	557
Asia	173	287
Africa	158	86
Pacific Islands	26	43

Three hundred and seventy-four are working among Indians and Orientals in Western Canada.

THE MISSION TRAIL

(Continued from page 103)

Sui Chang made it easy for me to realize why the Sisters at Lishui had so many dynamite cases to treat last year whilst the road was under construction in that vicinity. We noticed several groups of workmen busily engaged in drilling holes in the rocks preparatory to dynamiting them. Coming up to Chu Z Ca we had just rounded a curve on our raft when it suddenly swayed near the bank. As luck would have it, we were almost on top of a rock in which the dynamite fuse had already been ignited. Our oarsman dropped the oar from sheer fright. Later he confessed to me that he recalled on the instant a previous experience when he had seen his partner in trade go up in the air and come down a corpse. My catechist, who is naturally dark-skinned, actually turned white with fear. Perhaps it was because I did not realize what was going on that I sat on the raft nonchalantly smoking a cigarette (and it wasn't a "Camel", either). Providentially, something went wrong with the dynamite charge and there was only a minor explosion. The workmen cursed their luck in not having moved the rock, but incidentally our lives had been saved by their failure, for we were not more than fifteen feet away from the spot of the expected eruption. Our pagan boatman told the catechist I must have been the saviour of the day because I adored a God who had power over these explosives which so easily caused death in a moment.

* * *

During my stay at Chu Z Ca there was plenty of excitement. The workmen from the North, around Peiping, had finished their allotted tasks, and as the old saying goes, "an idle mind is the devil's workshop". About thirty of these robust idlers had the place thoroughly mapped out. They made an assault on the police station and began also to loot the stores. The chief of police managed to get to the telephone office and phone to Sung Yang for assistance, and was given orders to fire on all who spoke the northern dialect. These fellows who caused the trouble represent the lowest class of people in China, being ex-bandits and unpaid soldiers who had been dismissed for bad conduct. At the moment a small war is going on between these rowdies and the local police and soldiery. It will probably end up with a few executions after a matter-of-form hearing before the Mandarin. So far, thank God, our Mission has been very peaceful, and will continue to be so as long as bands of these good-for-nothing strangers are kept in check and prevented from exploiting the honest, hard-working people of the district. Say what you may about China and its customs, it has a well-recognized and most effective way of putting an end to outlawry. Even outlaws don't like to be shot.

HELP THE MISSIONS

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.
2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.
3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year—a life subscription costs ten dollars.
4. By making a Catholic Will—our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

NONSENSE

He had arrived home late, and his wife was giving him a piece of her mind. "I don't care, my dear," he said, getting really worked up. "I mean exactly what I say. I'm a man who calls a spade a spade." His wife nodded. "Maybe, Henry," she said with biting sarcasm, "but you don't call a club a club; you call that working late at the office."

Suitor—"I love your daughter devotedly, sir. I would suffer if I should cause her a moment's sorrow."

Father—"You said it, sonny. I know that girl."

Johnny: "I didn't bring an excuse for being absent yesterday because ma was too busy to write one."

Teacher: "Then why didn't your father write one?"

Johnny: "He's no good at making excuses. Ma catches him every time, an' you're smarter than she is."

Recruiting Sergeant (to weedy-looking specimen who wishes to join the army): "Sorry, but you don't look the type that could do much fighting."

Weedy Specimen: "What d'you mean, fightin'? What's the League of Nations for?"

"Sir, your car is at the door."

"Yes, I hear it knocking."

A South African farmer who had been away from home was met at the station by his native servant, who greeted him very miserably.

"Bad news, Joe?" inquired his master.

"Yes, baas. The baboon's dead."

"What did he die of?"

"I think too much horseflesh, baas."

"Where did he get the horseflesh, then?"

"From the cart horses, baas."

"What! Are they dead, too?"

"Yes, baas; they died after carrying water the night of the fire."

"The fire? What fire?"

"Your house, baas."

"My house? When was it burnt?"

"The night of the funeral, baas."

"Whose funeral?"

"Your mother's, baas. She died from the shock when your father died."

"My father dead, too?"

"Yes, baas. The shock of losing his business killed him."

"Good heavens!"

"Yes, baas. And the baboon's dead, too."

"My deah boy," effused the elegant lady of aristocratic demeanour to the schoolboy at the gates of the high school, "will you—ha—inform Hector Reginald Cornelius Mannington-Mannington that his mother has arrived?"

"Sure, mam," returned the boy. Then, facing the playing fields, he yelled:

"Snifty, the old girl's blown in."

"If I were trying to match politeness," exclaimed the woman, irritated and tired with shopping, "I should have a difficult job here."

"Let me see your sample, madam," said the assistant calmly.

A northern farm-hand went to work for a Texas rancher. There had been an unusually long drought in the region, and everyone on the ranch was hoping for rain. One day it did start to sprinkle, and the farm-hand, to show his delight, proceeded to dance in the rain.

"Come in out of that rain!" the rancher shouted.

"Oh, I don't mind these few drops," replied the man.

"Who cares about that?" bellowed the rancher. "We want every bit of that rain to fall on Texas!"

A party at the Zoological Gardens stood, puzzled, before a bird.

"It's a heagle," said one.

"It's not," said another; "it's a howl."

They appealed to a bystander.

"Both wrong," he said shortly; "it's an 'awk."

And That Is That

Longfellow, remarks a contemporary, could take a worthless piece of paper, write a poem on it, and make it worth $65,000. That's Genius! There are some men who can write a few words on a piece of paper and make it worth a million. That's Capital! The United States can take an ounce and a quarter of gold and make it worth twenty dollars. That's money! A mechanic can take material worth five dollars and make it into watch springs worth one thousand dollars. That's skill! There is a man in Paris who can take a fifty-cent piece of canvas, paint a picture on it, and make it worth one thousand dollars. That's Art! A man can take an article costing seventy-five cents and sell it for a dollar. That's Business! The quoter of this could write a cheque for ten thousand dollars, but it wouldn't be worth a cent. That's Tough!—Catholic Transcript.

Chemist: "You want about a shilling's-worth?"

Customer: "About that. What do you charge for a shilling's-worth?"

"Do you understand the nature of an oath?"

"Do I? Ain't I your caddie, your worship?"

She had tried on pair after pair and found some fault with them all. With a pair of conservative black calfskin oxfords on, she viewed her trim feet in the mirror and sighed with disappointment.

"It's the heels," she said; "they're so flat and low. They make me look so sensible."

"But why should you mind, if you're really not?" comforted the perspiring salesman.

"But that's just it," complained the harassed lady. "You see, I am."

"I said your ship would come in this week. Was I correct?"

"Well, partly. My salary was docked."

A teacher, instructing a class in composition, said: "Do not attempt any flights of fancy; be yourselves and write what is in you."

The following day a bright pupil handed in the following: "We should not attempt any flight of fancy; write what is in us. In me there is my stomach, lungs, heart, liver, two apples, one piece of mincepie, three sticks of candy, a hull lot of peanuts, and my dinner."

In a raffle a Scotsman took a sixpenny ticket for a pony and trap, which he was lucky to win. All his friends thought that he would be overjoyed by this good fortune, but when the pony and trap were taken to him, all he did was to walk round surveying them with a gloomy face. At last he turned to one of his friends and said:

"I told ye the whole thing was a swindle."

"Why, what's the matter?"

"Well," demanded the Scotsman, "where's the whip?"

"Bruises hurt erased afford erected analysis hurt too infectious dead."

This is a Scotchman's attempt to report an accident within the limitations of a ten-word telegram.

Translation—Bruce is hurt he raced a Ford he wrecked it and Alice is hurt too, in fact she is dead.

CHINA

Subscribers are Requested to Read the Following Very Carefully

The subscription price to CHINA is fifty cents a year. Subscribers who do not receive the magazine regularly will confer a favor by notifying us.

EXPIRY DATE

The date to which your subscription is paid up is marked on your address label.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Do not fail to inform us promptly if at any time you change your address. In doing so, please send us your old as well as your new address.

DUPLICATE COPIES

If you are receiving two copies of CHINA, and have subscribed for only one, kindly let us know.

SENDING SUBSCRIPTIONS

In sending your subscription to CHINA, be sure to state WHETHER IT IS A RENEWAL OR A NEW SUBSCRIPTION.

MRS. OR MISS

Very often we do not know which to put on our stencil, as there is nothing to indicate which it should be. Will our lady friends kindly make this clear.

ATTENTION TO THE ABOVE DETAILS WILL BE GREATLY APPRECIATED.

REMITTANCES

Money should be sent by Post Office or Express Money Orders, Drafts or Registered Letters to ensure safe delivery. All such orders may be made payable to:

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

---------- You can use the following coupon ----------

"CHINA"
St. F. X. Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Dear Fathers:—

Enclosed find $..... as a subscription to "China" for ..... years.

Name ..... Name .....

Address ..... Address .....

....

(If you have changed your address, please give us the OLD address as well as the NEW one)

The young priests who are leaving for the Prefecture of Chuchow this Fall answered the call of the Master years ago. The Seminary prepared and fitted them to be "other Christs" to bring salvation to souls in China.

THE SEMINARY NOW ASKS YOUR HELP TO DEFRAY THE EXPENSES OF ITS 1934 MISSION BAND TO CHINA.

We ask every family in Canada and Newfoundland in whose home "China" is received to make use of the coupon printed below. A little help from YOU will be much appreciated.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.
VERY REV. J. E. McRAE, President.

Dear Fathers:

Enclosed please find $..... ..., my contribution to help pay for the journey of your priests who are leaving for China in the Fall.

My Name .....

Address .....

.....

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

SEPTEMBER, 1934

St. Joseph's College

Cor. Queen's Park and St. Alban's St., Toronto, Can.

WOMEN'S DEPARTMENT OF ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE

Federated with the University of Toronto for all courses leading to a Degree in Arts. Excellent residence accommodation and ideal facilities for study.

St. Joseph's College School

Cor. St. Alban's and Bay Streets, Toronto.

RESIDENTIAL AND DAY SCHOOL FOR GIRLS

PREPARATORY SCHOOL

HIGH SCHOOL

COMMERCIAL, MUSIC, AND ART DEPARTMENTS

For Terms:—Apply to Sister Superior

Safety and Good Interest Return

5%

We allow 5% interest on sums of $100.00 or over placed with us for five years; 4¾% for one to four years. 3½% on Savings which are subject to withdrawal by cheque. $1.00 Opens an Account.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST GUARANTEED

Capital Trust Corporation

Limited

TORONTO OTTAWA MONTREAL

Under Dominion Government Inspection

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.

OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-2-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West
Toronto

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 26,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XV. SEPTEMBER, 1934 No. 8

ANOTHER PRIEST FOR CHINA

THE Seminary is very pleased to announce to its many friends that our missionary forces have been augmented by the addition of an ordained priest to our Institute. In July, Reverend Father M. Leo Curtin resigned his pastorate of Mayo, Que., in the Archdiocese of Ottawa, to devote himself to missionary work with the Canadian priests in the Prefecture Apostolic of Chuchow, China. Ordained on July 25th, 1922, Father Curtin has since done zealous work at Osgoode, Ont., and in St. Mary's, St. Bridget's, and Blessed Sacrament Parishes in Ottawa City. In September, 1932, he was appointed parish priest at Mayo, Que. Father Curtin is the third Ottawa priest now associated with our work. He will remain at China Mission Seminary this year and later go to Chuchow.

VOCATIONS NUMEROUS

AT the re-opening of the Seminary on September 17th we will have a record enrolment of students numbering about 53. Despite the fact that we made an addition to our building last year we received more student applications for 1934 than we could possibly accommodate here, and regretfully we had to refuse some well-qualified prospective students. It serves to bring home to us—and we hope to you, too, dear readers of "CHINA"—the disturbing truth that an important work for God and for the salvation of immortal souls is being allowed to suffer because of lack of material means.

The Holy See has given to St. Francis Xavier Seminary a District in China to be evangelized. The Seminary has done, and continues to do, all within its power to educate priests for that great purpose. Vocations have not been wanting on the part of young men eager to spend their lives in bringing salvation to the poor pagans of China; yet the sad fact remains that the adverse economic conditions prevailing in the world today have taken their lamentable toll in the disheartening reduction of contributions to works such as ours. There is simply no course open to us except to curtail even necessary expenses if the Catholic people at large fail to contribute even the minimum amount required to carry on our missionary enterprise without a terrific up-hill effort. There are many Catholics in Canada and Newfoundland who, deeply interested in our progress, have made sacrifices to help us, and to these good friends we shall be forever grateful, but at the same time we feel that there are other Catholics, readers of "China", who could do something for us, and to these we make an urgent appeal not to permit the Missions to suffer any longer from lack of financial support.

DEPARTURE CEREMONY

ON Sunday night, September 30th, Catholics of Toronto will again have the opportunity of attending a Departure Ceremony of missionaries leaving for China, when St. Michael's Cathedral will be the scene of this solemn event bidding an official "Godspeed" to three priests from China Mission Seminary. Friends at a distance will have an opportunity of "listening in" to the ceremonies which will be broadcast over CRCT, the station of Canada's Catholic Hour-and-a-Half Radio Programme. The four priests going to Chuchow this year are Rev. Gerald Doyle, Toronto; Rev. Hugh McGettigan, and Rev. Craig Strang, both of Saint John's, Newfoundland; and Rev. Roland Roberts, Victoria, B.C. Father Roberts is now in Victoria, where he will be joined by the three priests leaving Toronto on September 30th. The Sermon at the Departure Ceremony will be preached by Rev. Basil Doyle, C.S.P., Rector of St. Peter's Church, Toronto, and brother of Father Gerald Doyle of this year's Mission Band. "CHINA" invites friends of the Missions to attend St. Michael's Cathedral on Sunday night, September 30th.

The Sungyang REVIEW

By
REV. J. L. BEAL

IT is always quite in order to talk about the weather, especially the kind we are being treated to this Summer. Old Sol put on a big heat drive June 23rd, and is still going strong. The Shanghai papers tell us that every liner returning to America is carrying a full passenger list of heat "refugees". The Observatory at Zi-Ka-Wei and the one at Peiping agree on this point, that the present Summer has been the hottest in 61 years in China. The report on how much beverage was consumed during the heat wave is not yet available. Yesterday (July 3rd) our thermometer registered 104 degrees F., the mean average for the week preceding was 101.5—and that's no mean average to live up to.

* * *

Our Sungyang financial report has been sent in to headquarters, and if from that we can draw little consolation it is offset by the spiritual report from our section of Chuchow. This past year we had one thousand Holy Communions more than the previous year, we visited more missions, and administered quite a number of Baptisms. Altogether, we can record it as a successful year in matters spiritual.

* * *

During May we had an encouraging attendance in our little chapel at Yuing Hwo where we gave a special mission. Although the road is completed for 30 li up-country from Yuing Hwo, we had to "hoof it" to Lungchuang because the busses were laid up for repairs. Repairs were being effected to the road, too, but it is hoped that by Christmas at the latest we will have highway connections with Fukien on the West and Shanghai. And that will be great.

* * *

On this trip to Lungchuang we put up for a night at a little mountain village which was off the route usually taken by the priest. The name of the place was Wei Ning. The first person we encountered on entering the village was the wife of the Tao Shih (pagan Taoist priest). She voluntered to find us sleeping quarters. After traversing many courtyards and back alleyways we reached the home of her distinguished husband, the Taoist priest. He was evidently disturbed at my presence in his house, and I could see that he would like to give his spouse a good "telling off" for bringing a "foreign" priest under his roof. Arrangements were made for us to sleep in a neighboring shed, but meals would be provided in the house. There was much shouting and arguing between the Tao Shih and his wife. "Where will I put the pigs, the chicken, and the ox?" "It is only for one night, and the foreign gentleman will pay us well for any inconvenience we suffer." My boy was scouting the "down town hotels", but after checking them over he reported that our present quarters were better than any he could secure. We made the most of it, although there was a faint "piggy" smell to the place.

Readers of "China" will be glad to know that Father McNabb, of St. Thomas, Ont., has recovered from his long illness which almost proved fatal in January of this year. He is seen here (at right) with Father Beal at Sungyang. Tobacco leaves in the foreground indicate the chief industry of Sungyang. The rice and wine industries are next in importance.

* * *

A foreigner is a rare visitor to Wei Ning, hence many of the people came along to look me over and to have "interviews". I had long looked forward to the opportunity to meet a Taoist priest and talk to him as man to man without the necessity of using an interpreter. The visitors, my host and myself, engaged in a lively conversation, and gradually the subject of Religion was introduced. The Catholic doctrine on the Fall and Redemption was explained to them, and then the arguments started, encouraged chiefly by the guests. The poor Taoist was visibly disturbed and suggested that we all retire for the night. Ordinary politeness demanded immediate acquiescence to the suggestion. I felt that a little seed had been sown. It may possibly lead to further enquiries on the part of well-disposed pagans in Wei Ning.

* * *

When my boy and I arrived at Lungchuang the following evening we found Fathers Venini and Wong there, both in good spirits. Father Joe had just returned from his mountain chapel at Kan Kou. Things were clicking in my favor at every turn. Within a few days Father had all local business matters, etc., in hand, and I accepted his invitation to go along with him to Sciao Mei and Ching Yuan, about 60 miles from Lungchuang. Along the small road to Sciao Mei we had the real treat of picking raspberries—the first for me in five years. They tasted fine, too.

* * *

One afternoon at Ching Yuan there was an "election" for the position of school director. Two brothers were candidates, and the younger polled 8 of the 12 votes cast. That evening he invited us to his home for a banquet, and incidentally to celebrate his victory at the polls. It was a banquet of the first order with all the trimmings. Fortunately, Father Venini speaks Mandarin quite well and has all the rules of banquet formalities and etiquette at his finger tips. I was in the unfortunate rôle of Guest of Honor. There were 22 courses, including stewed salamander—I prefer roast turtle. Now, according to the rules, the Guest of Honor gets the pièce de resistance when the duck is served. Mr. Liu, a special guest and wealthy resident of the city, sat on my left. He offered to bat for the host in making the proper selection from the bowl. He chop-sticked around until the head

(Continued on page 126)

"NEW LIFE" IN KWANG-TUNG

General Chen Chi-tang, inspired by the "New Life Movement" in China, has decided to take a more parental view of the lives of the people living within his jurisdiction, according to reports in the Chinese newspapers.

Marriage limits, the clothes to be worn, birthdays and the distribution of gifts are all included in his new set of regulations issued to the people in Kwangtung province. The object of the new ruling is to encourage the people to lead a thrifty life instead of the luxurious one to which they have been used. According to the regulations, those who disobey the stipulations are liable to receive punishment from their superior officials or from their teachers in case of students.

The most important points of the regulations are as follows:—

That no boys and girls be engaged before they reach the years of 17 and 15 respectively and then the engagement ceremony to be conducted by the parents of the young people concerned. The cost of the ceremony should not exceed $50.

The clothes of bridegrooms and brides should be made of Chinese products.

Nobody is allowed to hold a birthday celebration unless they exceed the age of sixty.

In case of marriages, child births, funerals and birthday celebrations the gifts should never exceed $2 in value.

OUR COVER

We are indebted to Father Serra, parish priest at Tsingtien, for the picture which adorns "China's" cover this month. It is an actual photograph of a scene within the parish of Huang d'An in the Prefecture of Chuchow. Fathers Amyot and King are at Huang d'An. In 1926, less than a year after our first missionaries went to Chuchow, Monsignor Fraser wrote for "China" an account of his first Mission trip in the then newly-acquired territory, and in that story occurred the following paragraph: " . . . my follower took me a mile off the path to see a wonder of Nature. I had no idea that such a marvel existed in our district—a falls a thousand feet high! A good-sized river tumbles over a precipice and as it falls perpendicularly from that tremendous height, forms the most pleasing sight imaginable—a great, snow-white veil of flowing, ever-changing folds! We had an excellent view from the opposite brink of the awful gorge, to gaze into the depths of which made us tremble with fear. A former emperor, so the story goes, having heard of this wonderful waterfall, promised to build a beautiful pavilion near-by, if its height as stated was a thousand feet. The promise was never fulfilled as the courtier sent to investigate found that it measured only 980 feet!"

The second tallest man in the world has arrived in Peking on a sight-seeing trip. His name is Chine Fu-kuei. Born in Korea 29 years ago, Chine is the youngest of a family of seven sons. He stands nine feet high and weighs over 300 pounds.

BISHOP CHIEF TAX-PAYER

A Chinese Bishop of Szechwan Province, China, has been notified to pay the tax levied on all residents of the Province who fail to plant poppy seed. For some time past there has been a heavy tax paid by all cultivators of opium; this new tax is calculated to reach the rest of the population, the non-cultivators, and since the Catholic Church forbids under severe penalty the traffic and use of the drug, the Bishop holds first place among this group of tax-payers.—Fides.

Aurora University, Shanghai, a Jesuit institution, is ranked as one of the five best among the 27 medical schools of China. The Aurora has a hospital of 360 beds attached to the institution, and though it does not admit women students, it has an enrolment of 103. There are 3,528 medical students in the various colleges and universities of China, of whom 605 are women.

PRIEST VINDICATED

A Nanking school law was upheld by the Canton supervisor of Education last month when Father George Bauer, M.M., of Chiklung, appealed to Canton after he was told by the Chiklung authorities to close his doctrinal schools. The missionary showed a copy of the law issued by the Nanking Government in April, 1929, approving Catholic doctrinal schools. A reprimand was sent to the Chiklung local authorities, and the six doctrinal schools which had been closed were reopened.—Fides.

The above picture shows only the centre section of a six feet long panoramic photograph taken on the occasion of a Reception given the new Apostolic Delegate to China, Archbishop Zanin, by the Alumni of St. Ignatius College of Zi-Ka-Wei. The central figure is the Apostolic Delegate; seated at his left are Bishop Hou of Taichow; Monsignor McGrath, Prefect-Apostolic of Chuchow; Msgr. Antonuitti, former Secretary of Ap. Del. at Peking; Msgr. Commissio, the present Secretary; the man at extreme right is Mr. Lo-Pa-Hong, Pres. of Catholic Action in China. Seated at the Delegate's right are Bishop Ahouissi of Shanghai; Bishop Tsu, S.J., of Haimen; Bishop Defebvre of Ningpo; third figure from left is Monsignor J. M. Fraser.

The House of Charity

An Island Haven for Abandoned Children

OFF the coast of China is a small island called Chusan. There the good missionary Sisters have established what the Chinese call "The Home of Charity for Children." Little outcast children are brought there; and a place is always found for them.

Sometimes the big bell rings in the night and a steamer man hands in a basket sent by the catechist of a neighboring island. Inside, two or three tiny black heads show themselves under a bundle of rags. Or it may be from an island village that a kind-hearted neighbor brings an unwanted third or fourth girl in a poor family. Probably he picked up the bundle on the mountainside, thrown out to die; and he offers it to the Sisters saying apologetically: "I know the Sisters do good works."

Sometimes quite a rich mother brings her babe in terror because the bonzes (pagan priests) have told her it was born on an unlucky day; so the little one must be destroyed or hidden. Again, a party of starving children from a famine island are put off the boat at the port, from whence friendly rickshaw men bring them to the "House of Mercy".

The Road to Paradise

The Guardian Angels are busy day after day bringing in these little souls, who have been specially chosen by Our Blessed Lord for Heaven. Sometimes a quick glance at a new arrival shows that there is no time to be lost. The baby is baptized by the Sister, who knows it could not live through the night. Perhaps before half an hour the little one flies away, having just looked in for a "ticket to Heaven".

But a large number, after being comforted and fed, receive baptism with all ceremony in the big church, and then establish themselves as members of this happy house of Catholic children.

Good foster mothers in the country are sought for, to bring up the tiny babies. Every first of the month they come in to be paid and to have their little charges inspected. As a rule they are very devoted and love the babies. A good nurse nearly breaks her heart when the little ones leave her and come into the house nursery.

At six or seven, the little one moves up into the school house. Here she has the joy of making her First Communion. It is the happiest day of her life. And the child grows up having the happy privilege of receiving Our Lord every day, if she wishes.

One day the priest said rather reprovingly to one of these little communicants: "You are always laughing when I give you Holy Communion." "But I am so happy and pleased," replied the little one with surprise.

The chanted prayers of these little ones are joyful and confident, too. They are perfectly sure they will be heard and answered; and results prove that their confidence is rewarded.—The "Crusader".

This lady takes the place of mother for the baby who was abandoned by its parents and left to be rescued by the Sisters at Lishui.

MURDER WILL OUT

The Story of a Rickshaw Coolie's Surprise

THE following story is told as being true.

A merchant engaged a rickshaw to take him from a station in Shantung to a town some li away.

As he rode he called out that he had a terrible pain in the region of his heart, but as there was nothing to do about it, the rickshaw man pulled on and did nothing.

As he was passing through a town later on some one asked—"Why are you pulling a dead man?"

On looking around he saw to his consternation that the man to all appearances was dead. The head of police appeared and said he could but inquire into it, though he recognized neither the rickshaw man nor the passenger.

The rickshaw coolie had a straight story to tell, but was taken into custody and the dead man put under a mat at the police station.

* * *

Later on in the evening the passenger, who had merely swooned, came to himself and wondered why he was under a mat. He crawled out and sought a more comfortable spot some distance away. After that a police came to see about the corpse under the mat, and behold no body was there. He was responsible, so what was he to do?

He appealed to his wife for advice, and she told him—a certain man had just been buried in a certain grave—to get his body and so replace the one that had disappeared. This he did, and had it in readiness the next morning when the official arrived to investigate.

The rickshaw coolie was called and the questioning began when the coolie called out—

"That is not the body I brought—he was a young man and this is an old man."

* * *

Just at this juncture the passenger of the day before recovered enough to walk about and appeared on the scene.

The coolie pointed to him and said—

"Behold!—here is the man I brought in my rickshaw," and the man confirmed his story. The magistrate then asked whence the dead man? The police who had stolen him from the grave had to

(Continued on page 126)

The CHANGED WOMAN of CHANGING CHINA

THE new status of woman in China and the notable achievements of the sex in commerce and the professions were described by Dr. Wu Yi-fang, president of Ginling College for Women at Nanking, in an address delivered before the International Friendship Committee at the Community Church, Shanghai.

Speaking on "The Changed Woman of Changing China," Dr. Wu traced the transition of Chinese women from subordinate places in the homes to divers fields of enterprise, where they now served side by side with men. She described this emancipation as symptomatic of the general passing of China from the old to the new and predicted an ever-widening horizon for Chinese women.

"But while women have changed because the country has changed, they are still preserving their rich heritage of Chinese tradition, and the old is cherished side by side with the new," Dr. Wu said. "This situation has a physical parallel in the aspect of the Yangtze River to-day, where the old-time junks and sailboats are seen side by side with modern steamships, and near railways and bus lines, while aeroplanes fly overhead."

Literary Education

The speaker emphasized that Chinese women since time immemorial had received education in literary subjects and pointed out that history tells of a woman who lectured before men at the Chinese Court 200 years before Christ. A woman also completed the annals of the Han Dynasty and many of the sex flourished as poets.

"The revolution of 1911 brought decided changes," she continued. "But the emancipation of the Chinese woman was a national and political phenomenon rather than a change wrought for woman's own sake.

"We have to thank the early missionaries for starting our women on the path towards modern education. The early missionary schools, however, were few and it was not until the Dowager Empress issued an edict in 1907 for opening girls' schools that the education of the sex became nationwide. Girls' middle schools started after the Revolution, and in 1919 women's colleges became a reality.

"And now for the professions. Chinese women first went into teaching and to-day they are on the staffs of all educational institutions, from the kindergarten to the university. Of Ginling College graduates, sixty per cent. are engaged in teaching, many serving as principals and deans.

Many Women Doctors

"Medicine and nursing is another field for Chinese women, thanks to the missions. I believe there are 406 women on record as practising medicine at present. Public health and midwifery also have attracted many.

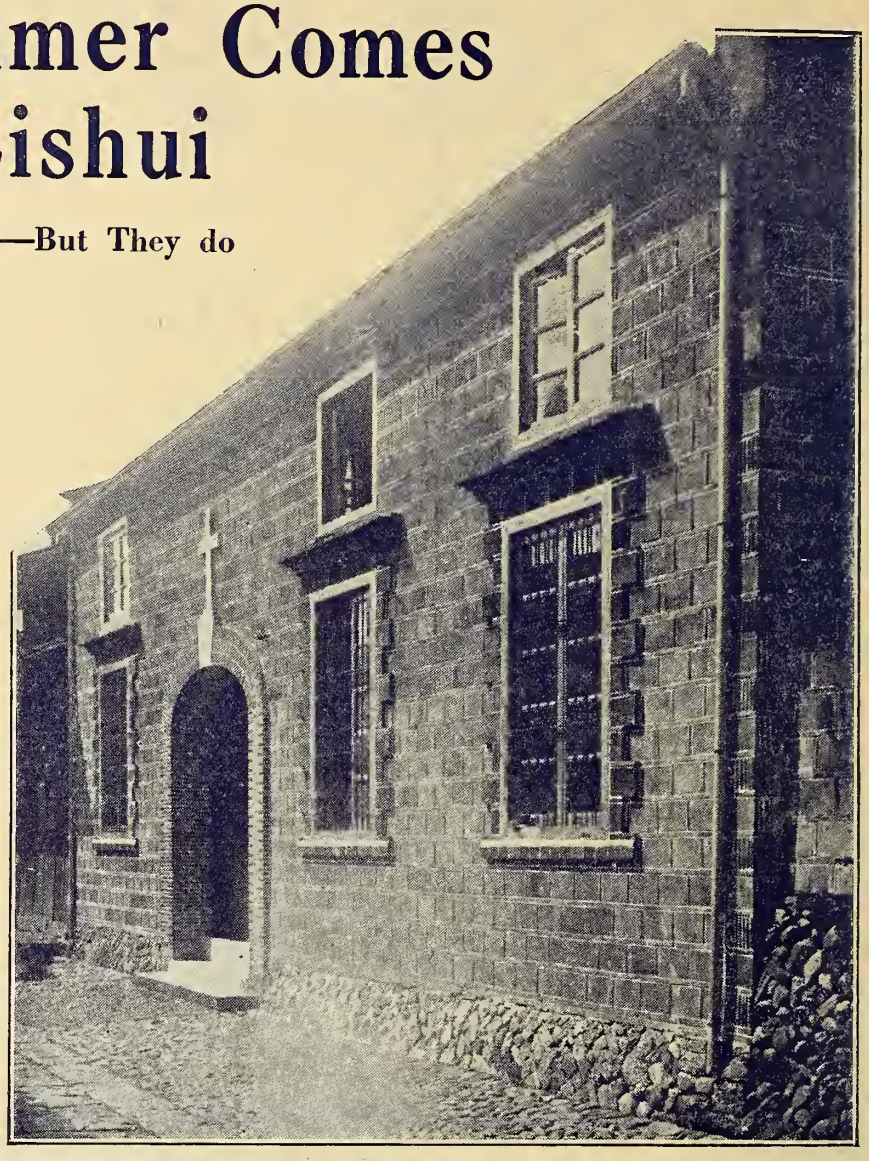
"In social and religious work we find many women workers, notably in activities among women beggars and among children. Another field is literature and journalism. Women lawyers still are comparatively few, although Shanghai has twenty-two practising the legal profession.

"Then we find many in business and industry, as managers and factory executives, and as bankers. And there are women in every Government department. A graduate of Ginling, for instance, is assistant director of research for the Bank of China, a Government institution.

"And as for married women: they either continue their own careers, or become home-builders, or help their husbands' careers."

Dr. Wu recently returned from America, where she addressed sessions of the International Congress of Women at Chicago.

—N. C. Herald.



Happy young girls under the care of the Grey Sisters of the Immaculate Conception at our mission headquarters in Lishui.

When Summer Comes to Lishui

Schoolgirls Want No Holidays—But They do Enjoy a Picnic

By
THE GREY SISTERS

Side Entrance to Convent of the Grey Sisters at Lishui.

SUMMER days are here again and with them come long-anticipated holidays. June with its ancient, yet ever new horrors, its long hours of tedious study, its cramming and worst of all its examinations, has slipped into the past and the world's vast crowd of school children is marching into the glorious field of well-earned vacation. Vacation! What childish heart does not leap at the thought of it! What schemes, what plans, what castles in the air are not materialized during it, and what treasures for Memory's Chest are not found during these two happy months —treasures which only the kodak of the mind and heart can in later years produce. With joyous, study-free, laughing hearts, students go in quest of the joys of summer-time, and the song on their lips is something to the effect that "Every cloud has a silver lining".

* * *

Such is the chorus; such are the schemes and sentiments of lesson-free school children in Canada, but in China things take on a different aspect during the summer season. You know the sun sets here while it is only rising for you, and the dawn which heralds two months of happiness and pleasure for little folks in Canada also forecasts the gathering of dark clouds in China. This is precisely the present state of affairs for little people in our Mission district. Strange it may seem, but nevertheless it is a fact, that vacation, long or short, is not at all a looked-for event amongst the girls and boys in Lishui. Did you ever hear of a boy or even a girl begging to remain at school and sorrowing over having to leave? Of a rule which forbids a pupil to return before the full holiday time has expired? Well, such rules are in full force in China. No one wishes to leave school and all clamour to return. You marvel at this, but you would not if it were possible to see and understand why. Child life is not so pleasant here. Indeed it cannot compare with yours. While you revel in the joys of long, free, sunny days, your little Chinese brothers and sisters are labouring from dawn until dark, accomplishing arduous tasks which are often more than they are fit for. Very early in life they begin to earn their rice, and it surely is by the sweat of their brow. No wonder then that they hate to go home. For them, it is far more pleasant to study all day in noisy classrooms.

Let me tell you how a Chinese pupil spends school time. On the daily program, there is time set apart for sewing, and of this they do a great deal, as every Chinese girl must learn to make her own clothes and shoes. There is time for cleaning classrooms and dormitories and washing rice bowls as well as some time between for fun. Little Chinese maidens thus grow into women, as they must prepare for the future, and there is no time like the present.

* * *

We have time for picnics, too—glorious picnics, in a manner and to places which our little Canadian friends only read about. During the past school year we had several outings, the last being at the end of the school term. Of course we have not all the frills that go with a school picnic at home, but the thrills are not missing. Laden with boxes and baskets of good things, the girls set out for the place, chosen by themselves, for the day. It was to a temple on top of a mountain a few li outside the city. The first step necessitated a row across the river. Our boats might not be all that is desired, but they get us across. When you have two of them filled with happy school girls paddling their way in a race to reach the other side, they are, I must say, most useful. Step number two was a long walk through a veritable sea of rice fields. Here is where old Man Sunshine's smile of approval was most keenly sensed, and the warmth of his approbation only increased with the minutes, so much so that we could not do justice to the beautiful picture before us of China's rice in its infant stage. The mountains is where we are heading for. The ascent is made pleasant by steps, hewn in the rock centuries ago.

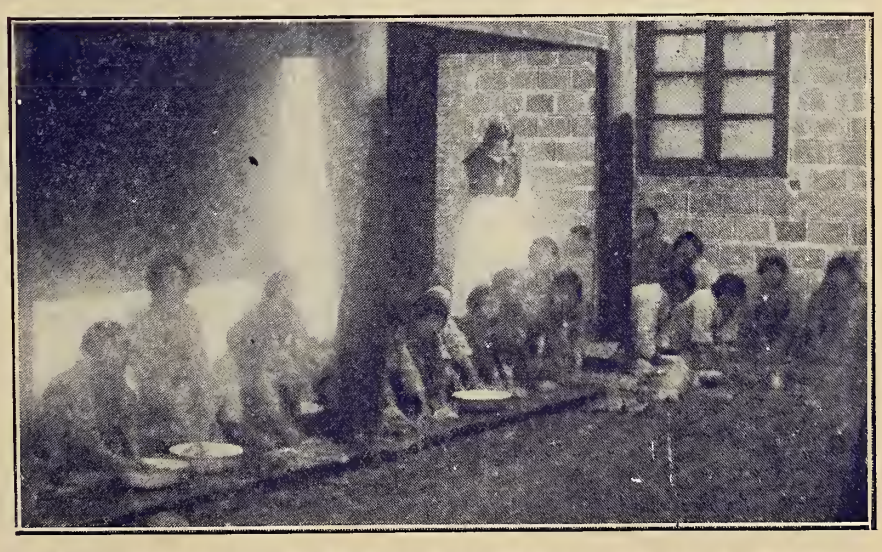
* * *

In this particular mountain these rocky stairs lead to the entrance of a large temple, the home of several Pagan monks. On our arrival two of these monks received us at the door and graciously informed us that we were their guests for the day. The prelude of their hospitality was the famous custom of offering steaming towels, bowls of tea, and fans, refreshments after the pleasant but rather warm walk. Thrice welcome were they, too. The preliminaries over, we were permitted to wander at will. A temple with hideous gods is too common a sight, as the city is full of them, and when you have seen one you have seen all that is to be seen—rows and shelves of idols. In this temple, however, there is a large fishpond. There is nothing out of the ordinary about it except that it is a concrete example of putting theory into practice. The monk explained. Their religion forbids the taking of life of any living creature, no matter how insignificant. They are bound by vow to prevent the taking of a life whenever it is at all possible. Thus the origin of the pond. The fish in it are ones which the monks have seen on the market or elsewhere, and rather than have them sold to would-be consumers they kept their vow and redeemed them. Thanks to a Pagan religion, some fish returned to the "ole swimming hole". The aquarium did not attract all, and before the old monk finished his explanations, many little and big girls, too, were scaling the surrounding mountains working up an appetite.



* * *

They were surely going to be in sore need of an appetite. At noon hour a Chinese banquet was served, the monks themselves acting as caterers. What all those bowls in front of us contained I am sure none of us could say, as there is no name for them in the English vocabulary. But, whatever about the unnamed (and thus unhonoured) courses, there is one that stands out—macaroni. Well, when I think of it! It took the place of rice, which is too common for banquets. One bowl at a time would have been discouraging enough, but two!—and before the first was half eaten, in comes a third!!! What could we do? To tell the generous host that you had sufficient would just cause a smile with the words, "You are too polite", and another bowl of macaroni. To ask him to stop bringing in macaroni would insult him. Where, oh where, is the happy medium in Chinese etiquette? Some enjoyed the dinner, but the bigger girls realized that the supply of macaroni was a little too generous. However, they did not say one word to the supply man, as they did not want to "lose face" either. If there ever was a time when we wished for the big bad wolf it was then—a wolf—a mad dog—anything to rush in to give us a chance to break away from that table. What came to replace the desperate animal longed for at that moment, was a camera. Someone suggested putting the kodak into motion. It was our only resort and the only possible means of giving "Lord Bountiful" another scene of action. It worked fine. The first group was taken at the tables, but gradually the children moved farther and farther away until the tables were deserted. Once away, we stayed away, and after some time breathed freely, when the monk gave orders to a servant to clear away the bowls. Now we must not let anyone even conceive the idea that our hosts were anything but the essence of Oriental hospitality—so much so that some of our Sisters remarked when the day was over "that they had never enjoyed a picnic more than this one". Let me add, too, that they were mindful of some twenty-fourths of May and Dominion Days. Now if loyal Canadians could speak so highly of, and enjoy, a Chinese picnic, how much more so our school girls. It was a great affair for them.

* * *

Some of the girls are quite small, so after dinner tired little heads and weary feet settled down to a visit to the Land of Nod. They did not have to count sheep to get there either, and the peals of laughter which rent the air from their adventurous big sisters did not disturb them in the least. Only when a servant announced the arrival of the photographer did our babies come to. The head monk wished us to have a souvenir of the day, so he

(Continued on page 126)

Big wash tubs are scarce, but Sister Angela's young charges each does her share of the work.

I'm Forever Asking Questions

By REV. ALEXIUS WECKER, O.F.M.

WHAT do we do in China when we have nothing to do? No shows, except free shows, no football or baseball games, no museums (strictly speaking), no tires to change, no books to read, except for the third time. How then spend the leisure moments, or is there no such thing? What other missionaries do I do not know. But it would be a safe bet that they do the same thing that I do. And my favorite pastime is answering questions, or, and rather, listening to them.

Do chickens lay eggs in America? Are American eggs round or egg shaped? Have you any wheat in America? Do you love us? Have American dogs long tails? Are there any poor people in America? Are automobile roads a good thing? American cats, do they eat mice? Is the sun very far away? When you came to China did you have to cross water? Is Japan a very strong nation? Why does America not fight Japan? Do Americans worship idols? Is it wrong to gamble? Is American cotton better than ours? How many cows does your father own? How can you keep forty cows, five horses, ten pigs and a thousand chickens in your house? Where do the people sleep? Are there any bad people in America? Are American rats just like our rats? How old is your father? How old were your sisters when they got married? In America do they sell girls? And how much is a girl worth there? Are there any Chinese in America? Where do they get their rice? Do you like rice? Have all foreigners red beards? Are you considered a big or a small man? Has your father big face? Is there a devil? When you go back to your country can I go with you? And a thousand more.

Baby questions, you say. But no, they are asked by grown people in all seriousness. And one cannot yield to the temptation to give dumb answers to the dumb questions, because when they ask questions they show that they like you. To ridicule them would not only be rude, but would effectually stop all further questions, and so many a chance of giving instruction concerning God, Creation and religion would be lost.

One day I was travelling by steamer from Kotien to Hankow. I had completed my Office for the day, and having nothing else to read, I began talking with several influential men who were also going to Hankow. They soon started asking questions. One wanted to know whether it was the same sun that shone in China that also gave light to America. So I explained to them how the world was round, how it turned on its axis, and how it was possible that America, which is down below, could have the same sun that is above us.

"But does not the sun also move?"

So an explanation of the movement of the sun, moon and stars was in order.

"But how does it happen that when the world is turned upside down all the water does not fall down into space?"

My answer was: "Now you tell me: What makes it rain? Where does light come from? How can a small seed grow into a large tree? Why

THE MISSIONARY

A little image of another Christ,
By roadside, hearth and over hills and vales,
Armed with a branched sword, you preach and teach
The perfect laws unto a pagan race,
Who hoard, and sleep and feed and know not Him.
You cannot rest from travel: 'I will drink
The chalice to the lees'. You have suffered Greatly, have known what pain to part from those
That loved you, and alone have quailed beneath
The stinging curses heaped at you by those
You came to love. At times you have enjoyed
Greatly, when souls, who know not God, returned
To know and love Him; when with dying lips
They thanked and blessed your bringing Christ to them
To see them Home. You are become a name
For always roaming with a thirsty soul.
Much have you worked and done; cities of men
Have heard the words of grace from off your lips;
The hellish foe is staggered 'neath your blows;
Not few the battles won, and captives led
Into the sheltered pale of Mother Church.
And yet you cannot rest on laurels past.
Each section won is as an arch wherethrough
Shines that unconquered world whose margin spreading
Farther still and farther, beckons you to come.
You cannot bear to pause; a day of rest
To ease the burning, heal the bruises sore,
Then back into the strife. Life piled on life
Were all too short a time to do the work
That still remains: but every hour that's saved
To do His work will nearer bring the Kingdom
Of His Love on earth; and vile 'twould seem
To you one day to spare and hoard yourself,
While souls redeemed by Christ's own precious Blood
Are dying burdened still with mortal sin,
Because no one has preached the Word to them.

—Rev. Alexius Wecker, O.F.M.

does sap in a tree run up instead of down? Where does life come from? Why does not our earth fall into chaos? What is it that holds every thing in order, regulates day and night and the seasons? How does it come that the world produces just the things that a man needs to live? What if there were no air, or no water, or no wood, or no rice, or no fire, or no light? Where did all these things come from in the first place? And what keeps them in perfect order? Could your idol do that? Your idols were made by man, not man by the idols. First there was man, and this man had food to eat, and clothes to wear, and tools to use, and then he made an idol. Look at my watch. Did it make itself? No, first there was a man and then there was a watch. But you can see that any man who could make such a fine watch had a lot of skill. But if a man made the watch then the man is greater than the watch. So man, also such a perfect machine, could not come from himself, and if someone made man he must be greater than man. And look how great and perfect the world is, and the sun and stars, and all working perfectly. The one who made all that must be indeed great, and wonderful and have infinite skill. And this someone we Catholics call the Lord of Heaven. You talk of worshipping heaven and earth. We worship the Lord and Creator of heaven and earth. You ask me: Why does not water fall off of the earth if it is a ball? Why is there order on earth and in the heavens? What maintains that order? We Catholics answer: 'God. God who is from all eternity, without beginning and without end, who is almighty, all wise, and who is everywhere.' And what answer can you give? Is there another reasonable answer that one can give?"

This conversation lasted for a good two hours. These men ignorant of all these truths of science and philosophy, listened to me as to a prophet. I said no word about joining the church, not even of saving their souls. And yet at the end of the talk we were discussing ways and means of joining the Church. Whether the fruit of this talk will ever be harvested remains to be seen. At least a few more pagans learned of the true God.

Another time, while building the new church at Kotien, an old man was talking to me. He asked this question: "You here are putting up such a big building for what reason?" I answered in order to preach doctrine and spread religion.

"And what flavor is there in that?"

"We spread religion in order to save souls."

"Save the souls of men for what?"

"For heaven."

"And what flavor is there in saving souls for heaven?"

"Well, for example, if when you were a child you left your father's home. For years and years you wandered always wishing to go back home, always longing for home. But you had no one to tell you the way, no one to pay the expenses of the way. At last some acquaintance would come along, tell you all about your home and your good father, tell you the way to go home and give you the necessary money. Would you not quickly get ready to go home? And how glad you would be to meet your father and friends. Would there not be joy and flavor in that? Well, we are all like children. We have wandered far away from our Father's home. God is our great Father and Mother. We come from Him and belong to Him. When we committed sin we offended Him and strayed far away from Him. We, however, can not be happy unless we return to Him. We are always longing for happiness. In only working, making money, and worldly joys, we can never gain perfect happiness. No, true happiness is only above, in the life to come, in our true home with our loving Father. Saving our souls means goining back to our true and happy home, returning to God. We Catholic priests are God's messengers. We are sent by God, your loving Father, to tell you to come home. We know the way and have the means at our disposal to help you get there. You are so old now, what about converting and joining God's Church?"

The man was thoroughly impresed. But whether or not he will join the Church and save his soul, that is up to your prayers and God's grace.

Another time, a man who wanted to act smart approached me and remarked: "You foolish people, you spend all that money and what do you hope to get out of it? You put up buildings here in China and gain nothing. You might as well throw that money away. What flavor is in it anyhow?"

My reply rather startled him: "What is the price of a soul?"

He stuttered around for a while and did not know what to say. So I explained to him the nature of the human soul, where it came from and whither it must return. I talked to him of heaven and hell, and what it meant to save a soul. Then I asked him what it would profit a man to gain a million dollars or the whole world if his soul was eternally in hell. The value of the whole world could not redeem a soul from hell. Then I answered his question. "If only one more soul is saved for heaven because this church is built, one more soul that would otherwise have been lost, then it is immensely worthwhile to build this church. The Catholic Church does not estimate values in dollars and cents but in souls. Your own soul is also beyond price, it is worth more than all the money put into this church, why do you not think of saving it?"

There are thousands of questions that can start interesting conversations going. What do you think is wrong with China?

(Continued on page 126)

CATHOLIC WILLS

For Mission Needs

In China, our priests need funds for new chapels, for new schools, for new homes, and for payment of salaries to catechists. In Canada, our Seminary needs support for the training of young apostles and for the maintenance of their home. Donations to our Burse Fund and our Building Fund are our greatest present needs. Think of our Mission work when making, or changing, your last will. Here's how you can do it; insert this clause in your will:

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO, THE SUM OF....."

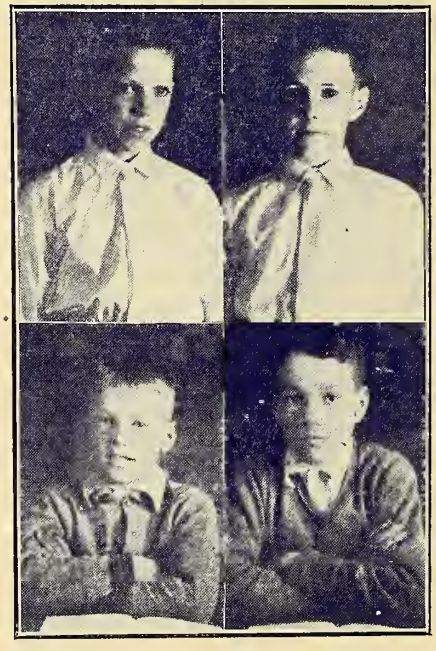
LITTLE FLOWER'S ROSE GARDEN

Edited by FATHER JIM

CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP

The only conditions of membership in the Rose Garden are: (1) To say every day the Prayer for the Conversion of China; (2) To go to Holy Communion once a month for the Intention of Missionary Vocations. Certificates will be sent to all members.

Dear Boys and Girls:



A short time before her death Saint Thérèse wrote these words: "I am like a spring flower which the Master of the Garden can pluck at will. We are all flowers growing on this earth, flowers which God will pluck in his own good time, some earlier, some later. I, a little passing flower, shall go first. One day we will meet again in Heaven where we shall enjoy true happiness."

I recalled these words of our Sainted Patroness about the end of July when I heard of the almost sudden passing of one of our most enthusiastic Rose Garden members, Jeanne O'Malley, of Eastview, Ont. Jeanne, with her sister Frances, was one of our very first "Buds", and always kept in close touch with the doings of our Club. Only a short while before her death I received from her a long letter in which she discussed her missionary interests as a "veteran of the Rose Garden".

Jeanne was only 17 years of age, and was making an exceptionally brilliant scholastic course at Notre Dame Convent, Ottawa, when God, the Master of the Garden, saw fit to call her early to her reward. I personally have reason to know that she influenced many to become interested in the work of the Missions; she enjoyed correspondence with a large number of Rose Garden "penpals". In paying her this tribute I sympathize with her good parents and sister and ask the prayers of all our members for Jeanne's soul.

May her example of active interest in Mission work be an inspiration to the thousands of boys and girls of our Club who are just now about to begin another school year. My dear "Buds", only after you have passed from the Garden of this earth—some earlier, some later—will you realize how pleasing to God are the efforts you have made, and are making, to advance His dearest interest, the salvation of souls, by your faithful keeping of the promises implied by your membership in this Missionary Club.

I wish all our members a most successful school year marked by missionary efforts greater than ever before. FATHER JIM.

At top, we have Alex. and Bobby Watson of 614 Curry Avenue, Windsor, Ont., two enthusiastic "Buds" who have written Fr. Jim frequently and sent donations for the missions. Below, Harold Bellmore and Drennan Kennedy, members of the Jr. III Class, St. Thomas School, Sudbury, Ont.—and that Jr. III Class has a great record for missionary activity.

On behalf of the Holy Name Mission Unit at St. Joseph's School, St. John's, Nfld., James Maher, the President, forwarded a fine donation to the missions. We have had first class evidence on many occasions of the mission spirit that pervades St. Joseph's.

If other schools are wondering what to do to help the Missions, let them cast their eyes on this letter from College Street School, Halifax. "Where there's a will there's always a way"—and these Halifax missionaries seem never to be at a loss when it is a question of ways and means for a worthy cause. Read this letter, "Buds", and then start planning your own school mission activities. Here it is:

"I am enclosing $75 for the St. Madeleine Sophie Burse. $35 of this money was made on a candy sale held by the children of Grades 5, 6, 7, and 8. The remaining $40 was collected in the mite boxes. The children show great enthusiasm and initiative in filling their class mite boxes. Grade 6 Boys, for example, held a housie-housie game and made $8. The girls of Grade 4, 5, 6, and 8 held recess candy sales; Grade 5 Boys gave a picture séance and proudly banked $10; while the boys of 8th Grade, not to be outdone, launched a yacht, partly built by one of their number, and took first place with $70 to fill their box. It is nice to see the children so anxious to help out missionary work, both by educating a priest and by ransoming Holy Childhood babies."

I feel that the Principal and the teachers at College St. School are no less proud of this record than the pupils themselves. The gift to which this letter refers was preceded by another one of $50 a few months earlier. Congratulations to the Mission Unit at College St. School, Halifax!

Penpals of Mary Malloy, 11 Water St., Glace Bay, N.S., will be pleased to learn that she has become a Sister of Charity at Halifax. Mary let me in on her "secret" some time ago, and now that she has entered the Convent I want to publish the good news to the "Buds". Quite a few "graduates" of our Rose Garden are now devoting their lives to God as members of Religious Communities, and Father Jim knows two who are now studying for the Priesthood.

From Angel's Cove, P.B., Nfld., came a letter from 8-year-old Leonard Coffey asking the buds to pray for him. Leonard says: "I cannot run around and play like other boys as last Winter I injured my knee. I have to use two crutches now when I want to go anywhere, so please, Father Jim, won't you ask your buds to pray that I may get well again and be able to run around and play as I used to." Besides praying for Leonard,

A Prayer for the Conversion of China

(To be said daily by the members of the "Rose Garden")

O Lord Jesus Christ, who didst come on earth to save the souls of men, open now Thy most Sacred Heart in mercy to the people of China, who still sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, and shower Thy graces on them, that they may come to the knowledge of Thy Gospel. Bless also and protect Thy missionaries, and make their work fruitful for Thee of countless souls. —Amen.

(300 days' Indulgence)
With Ecclesiastical Approbation

perhaps some buds will be kind enough to write to him.

From Foleyet, Ont., comes a new bud, Ida Dasti, and Ida starts off well by asking for some back numbers of "CHINA" with which she may gain some subscriptions among her friends. I take good care that the Editor sees such letters—we must keep him "on our side", you know.

Margaret Walsh, sending a donation from Fourth Class, St. Joseph's School, Sarnia, says: "We all thoroughly enjoy 'CHINA', and are glad to help the missions as much as we can." Thanks, Margaret.

Writing from her school at Orillia, Ont., Merle Hinds, the Secretary, has this to say: "Although the depression is here and many of the children's fathers are out of work, yet we responded as generously as possible by giving every cent we could to help the Chinese by putting our money into the miteboxes distributed in our classrooms. Enclosed is five dollars."

"We are all very small as yet, but we want to show our good will and do 'our little bit'. With this five dollars we send most fervent prayers to our little Infant King that He may bless your work and make us fervent members of His Sodality." This was part of a nice letter from Grace Haley, Secretary of the Infant Jesus Sodality at Mt. St. Bernard's, Antigonish, N.S.

At the closing of schools in June a large number of Spiritual Bouquets offered for our Missions were forwarded to the Seminary. We would like to mention individually the Schools who thus remembered our work so generously, but the list is too considerable for individual mention. The grand total of spiritual works offered is a tremendous proof that the boys and girls of Canada and Newfoundland are solidly behind our missionaries in the best way possible.

What Shall I Do With My Penny?

My grandma gave me a penny,
So pretty and bright and new
And she said, "Go, spend it darling,
Just as you wish to do."

You know, it's so strange about grandmas,
They're all so rich and so kind,
They'll give you pennies and pennies,
And never seem to mind.

If you ask ma for a penny,
She will hold her hands this way—
And say, "My dear! I'm not made of pennies,
You had one yesterday!"

But grandma will give you plenty,
And tell you to spend them too.
And this is what puzzles me just now,
I don't know what to do.

Of all you can buy with a penny,
I do not want any at all,
I have a new hat for a dolly,
Some jacks and a bouncing ball.

But I have been thinking and thinking
Since I joined the Mission Band,
Of poor little heathen children,
In that far-off heathen land.

They never have beautiful playthings,
And when their hearts are sad,
They do not know the Saviour,
Whose love can make them glad.

So I'll send you, dear bright treasure,
Through our own little Mission Band,
Far out over the water,
Into the heathen land.

And perhaps in that bright Hereafter,
Some little girl will say,
"I learned of the love of Jesus,
Through the penny you gave me today."

("Catholic Missions")

Four reasons why we know our "Rose Garden" is securing results for the Foreign Missions. At the left is Patricia McDonald of Jr. III Class, St. Thomas School, Sudbury, Ont.; the centre pictures show us Irene and Beatrice Struthers, 118 Baldwin Avenue, Cornwall, Ont., two of our very best "Buds"; and at right is Grace Gentile, a pupil of St. Francis Rotary School, 307 Manning Avenue, Toronto.

WHEN SUMMER COMES

(Continued from page 121)

called the city photographer and arranged the setting. When it was over, he entertained us in dressing up in, and explaining the meaning attached to, the robes which are worn during their prayer hour.

* * *

It was not the monks nor the manner in which they treated us that made the day such a wonderful success. In fact, the over-attention was somewhat disappointing. You know we said that the girls were laden with boxes and baskets of good things, but the unexpected banquet frustrated their plans for opening them at dinner. All through the afternoon these boxes were the magnets that drew sweet tooth. Unlike the comments on the macaroni, these boxes were objects of highest childish praise. Nor was the donor forgotten—Monsignor McGrath. It was he who ordered the big day for the girls, and at his expense the good things materialized.

There were some bewildered "oh's and ah's" when the boxes revealed their contents. For some, never before, and for many, never again, would they see such a feast. Monsignor was not present to witness the scene of this joyful party for which he was responsible, but his praises re-echoed over the mountain vastnesses. We heard the comments and favoured them all. Their hearts were full of girlish pride at the thought that they, after all, only girls, were for once at least preferred to their brothers.

MURDER WILL OUT

(Continued from page 118)

confess what he had done. For some reason the magistrate thought it wise to ask about the corpse and sent for the widow, whom the police knew.

She, on being questioned, said he had died suddenly, that he complained of pain and she needled him. The magistrate investigated and found she had stuck a needle into his heart, which was really the cause of his death.

This resulted in her being killed by strangulation, which illustrates that murder will out.—N.C. Herald.

CHINESE CONTRIBUTION TO THE PROPAGATION OF THE FAITH

During 1933 Chinese Catholics contributed $20,000 Mex. to the Propagation of the Faith, an increase of more than 25 per cent. over last year's figures. The Pontifical Association is now canonically established in 106 of the 118 ecclesiastical territories in China.

The Diocese of Macao, directed by the Portuguese secular clergy, gathered the largest sum, $3,250, and the Vicariate of Nanking, under the Jesuits, was next with $2,464. Eight other territories gave more than $500 each.

The Association of the Propagation of the Faith has been established only three years in China. The marked progress from year to year indicates a truly apostolic spirit in this new Catholic people.

—Fides.

ORDINATIONS

ON Saturday, Sept. 22nd, His Excellency Bishop Kidd will ordain to the Diaconate Rev. Lorne McFarlane, of Toronto, and Rev. Patrick Moore, of Ingersoll, Ont., at St. Peter's Seminary, London. On the following day both young men will be ordained to the Holy Priesthood for the Chinese Missions. This ordination will mark the last one for our Seminarians when the number of Ordinandi will be fewer than half a dozen. God has blessed our work with many vocations in recent years and all the classes for the future have larger numbers than heretofore. Seven theologians will receive Minor Orders after the opening Retreat at the Seminary.

MISSIONARY INJURED

Father Van Dijk, Scheut missionary of Mongolia, was attacked and injured by bandits while returning from Shanghai, whither he had gone to provide for the printing of a new set of picture designs to be used for the instruction of catechumens. Father Van Dijk's picture designs are used with great success in teaching catechism, explaining the Liturgical Year and in following the Life of Christ. Other Scheut missionaries of north China have recently published a Chinese grammar, a dictionary of the Mongol dialect and a dictionary of the language of the Ortos.—Fides.

SUNGYANG REVIEW

(Continued from page 116)

came to the surface, then deposited it on my plate with the bill staring up at me. I was completely speechless—I thought that was the headiest duck or the duckiest head I had yet encountered at any banquet. It's nice being guest of honor, you know! Like ducks it is! I kept staring at the duck, and the duck seemed to keep staring back at me, until finally the waiter came and removed this course. The report in the social column next day made no mention of this incident, but the banquet was regarded as a huge success. If I am ever again in the embarrassing position of guest of honor at a Chinese banquet, I'll try to get in a word beforehand to the cook to omit the head and feet of the pièce de resistance. There was a seventh-innings stretch after the twelfth course just to see how the guests were standing it. Being but a tyro at such functions I thought this stretch meant the end, and was consoling myself that I got off so easily. The duck episode figured in the second half of the banquet, and it proved my downfall. I intend to be better posted for the next major league marathon. I am writing this now back home in Sungyang, where the weather is made less intolerable by the advantages of a well-planned house. I am trusting to the co-operation of readers of "China" to be able to give good spiritual reports of Sungyang during the coming year, and to their material assistance that our financial status may be more encouraging.

FOREVER ASKING QUESTIONS

(Continued from page 123)

What can save China? Does the Catholic Church love China? Why do you pray so much? What good do you get out of praying? Is the Catholic Church the French Church? Are there many Catholics in America? These questions continually come up and give us missionaries a chance to preach, in season and out of season, while we work and while we play. That is why we often preach better when we play than when we preach. When we try to preach they laugh at our faulty Chinese pronunciation, but when we play we laugh at their ignorance and they admire our knowledge.

—"Franciscans in China."

Old Gentleman (entering office)—"There is a boy John Simpson working here. May I see him? I'm his grandfather."

Clerk—"You're just too late, sir. He's gone to your funeral."

Judge—"Do you find the prisoner guilty or not guilty?"

Foreman—"Not guilty, with a recommendation that he should be told not to do it again."

An ambitious lady, about to entertain a Duchess for the first time, gave very careful instructions to the maid who was to open the door, about the fashion in which the great lady was to be received.

"Now, Mary," she said, "remember whenever you address the Duchess you must say 'Your Grace'."

When the great day arrived and the maid opened the door to the Duchess and the latter inquired if Mrs. —— was at home, the maid answered: "Yes, ma'am, she is, and may the Lord make us truly thankful for what we are about to receive."

Husband (in new car)—"Good heaven! The engine is terribly overheated."

Wife (calmly)—"Then why don't you turn off the radiator?"

"You haven't mended my socks," remarked hubby on arriving home from the office.

"Did you buy that coat you promised me?" countered wifey.

"Well, er, no——" he was replying when she broke in with: "Then, Herbert, if you don't give a wrap, I don't give a darn."

"You said before we were married that I need never ask you for money."

"Well, I meant it. Don't."

Mrs. Gayboy had friends to tea, one of them being the wife of a learned professor. "I wish I knew where George was," remarked the hostess, referring to her rather dissipated husband.

The professor's wife drew herself up. "I presume, my dear," she said primly, "you mean you wish you knew where he is."

"Oh, no, I don't," retorted Mrs. Gayboy. "I know where he is. He's upstairs in bed with a bruised eye and a fearful headache. I want to know where he was."

Marathon Runner (coming in an easy last)—"Did you take my time?"

Timekeeper—"I didn't have to. You took it yourself."

Down Aldershot way the heavily clad driver of a charabanc was pumping away at a soft tire when some Highland soldiers passed and chaffed him. "Take some of your clothes off and you'd manage better," they said.

The driver paused and gave answer: "You blokes seem to think that because you 'ave to take yer trousis off to blow the blinkin' bag-pipes, I oughter take mine off to blow up a blinkin' soft tire."

"I'm surprised at a man like you joy-riding on a Sunday," remarked the busybody in the hotel coffee room.

"Joy-riding!" retorted the angry motorist, "I'll have you understand, sir, that I am on a motor tour with my wife."

Wife (during tiff)—"I'm sorry I didn't marry the other fellow who asked me to marry him."

Husband—"We've agreed on something at last."

"Where have I seen your face before?"

"Same place you see it now."

"What do you think of a man who will constantly deceive his wife?"

"I think he's a wonder."

The depression is having a disastrous effect on the once-popular custom of calling a "spade a spade". Workers are not "sacked" nowadays; they are "suspended," "dismissed," and so on as far as the art of synonyms will take us. A firm recently received application for a job from an unemployed man in which the "putting it gently" touch was raised to the "nth" degree when he wrote: "I am temporarily disengaged because of an economic gesture on the part of my previous employer."

Mrs. Snapp—"And why do you think Mrs. De Punk queer?"

Mrs. Rapp—"Well, she has everything on earth to make her happy, and still she's happy!"

Mrs. Smith—"And so your daughter is about to marry. Do you really feel that she is ready for the battle of life?"

Mrs. Jones—"She should be ready. She's been in four engagements already."

"Yes," said the election candidate, "I'm going among the farmers today, to a cattle show, or jackass show, or something of that sort; not that I care for cows or jackasses, but I want to show the people that I'm one of them."

After the young thing at the party had finished her second encore, the old lady leaned towards her and said: "Thank you so much for your songs, my dear. They took me back to childhood days on my father's farm. There were times when you sang that I could shut my eyes and fairly hear the old front gate creaking in the wind."

Englishman: "Why don't you make fun of my countrymen just as you make fun of your own?"

Scot: "Well, mon, it's bad enough being an Englishman without makin' a joke about it."

Mrs. McTavish: "My little boy has just swallowed a two-shilling piece."

Neighbor: "Dear me, is he in any danger?"

"No, thank goodness, his father's out of town."

A man walked into the foreman-builder's office and stated that he had come in reply to the firm's advertisement for a night-watchman.

"What are your qualifications for this job?" asked the foreman.

The man scratched his head. "Well, guvnor," he said, "the least bit of noise wakes me up!"

Master to Office Boy: "What has become of the cigarettes in the box on the mantle-shelf?"

Office Boy: "Haven't touched 'em, sir."

Master: "Haven't you? Why there are only half a dozen there!"

Office Boy: "Yes, sir. Them's them I haven't touched!"

Heavy Stranger (returning to theatre between the acts of the pantomime): "Did I tread on your toes as we went out?"

Seated Man (grimly): "You did, sir."

Stranger (to his wife): "That's right, Matilda; this is our place."

Alfalfa Ike—"What happened to that tenderfoot who was out here last week?"

Badger Pete—"Oh, he was brushin' his teeth with some of that new-fangled toothpaste and one of the boys thought he had hydrophoby and shot him!"

"Can you tell me the name of the dean of this school?"

"Naw, I'm just a football player here."

THE LAST CALL to Readers of "China"!

WHEN the next issue of "China" reaches you, four priests from St. Francis Xavier's Seminary will be on their way to Chuchow in China. For the past few months we have been asking for your financial assistance to provide their passage money. We think many people to whose homes "China" is a regular monthly visitor will want to have a share in sending to the Mission Fields these four new missionaries. This is the last opportunity you will have to aid them on their way. May we ask you once more to make use of the coupon printed below. It will take you only a minute to enclose your donation in an envelope and mail it today to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario
Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President.

Dear Fathers:

Enclosed please find $..... ....., my contribution to help pay for the journey of your priests who are leaving for China on September 30th.

My Name .....

Address .....

.....

CHINA

OCTOBER 21st THIS YEAR IS

MISSION SUNDAY

MORE READERS OF "CHINA"!

MORE FRIENDS FOR THE MISSIONS!

Will you help by securing new subscriptions for us?

You can help also by renewing your own subscription NOW.

YEARLY SUBSCRIPTION: 50 CENTS
LIFE SUBSCRIPTION: $10.00

A Clause for Your Last Will: "I bequeath to St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ont., the sum of ..... dollars."

Where Savings Earn 3%

One dollar is sufficient to open a savings account with the Capital Trust. Regular deposits, however small, with interest at 3%, soon count up to appreciable sums. Deposit, or withdraw by cheque, through the mail or at our nearest office.

CAPITAL TRUST Corporation Limited

100 Adelaide St. West
TORONTO
OTTAWA - MONTREAL

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-2-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West
Toronto

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.

OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 26,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XV. OCTOBER, 1934 No. 9

ANNIVERSARIES

THIS issue of "CHINA" commemorates two Anniversaries which mean much to us and to the work of Foreign Missions in Canada and Newfoundland. To share these anniversaries with our friends we know of no better way than to present a pictorial record of what the years have brought to pass, and to give a summarized account of the more important events that have constituted the history of our particular interests in the Missions of China. This commemorative edition of "CHINA", dear Readers, is meant to be for you a little "keepsake" betokening our appreciation for what you have enabled us to accomplish. We want you to become acquainted with our missionaries and their work, and we want you to know of the Field in China which future missionaries of Canada and Newfoundland are preparing to serve. Fifteen years ago "CHINA" was first published. In the intervening years it has kept before you the idea of Mission Service, and aimed to keep you in touch with the Chinese Missions and Missioners. Its efforts have borne fruit. One of the most important events it has chronicled was the happy opening and blessing of St. Francis Xavier Seminary ten years ago. Ten years is but a brief period, but the decade we commemorate now has been well filled with accomplishment for Christ and immortal souls in China. To all who have been interested in China Mission Seminary its history cannot but be a stimulus to zeal, sympathy and encouragement and a source of satisfaction and confidence, resultant on the logical conviction that the hand of God is here. May we be found worthy in the future to merit a continuance of the Divine favour so evidently with us in the past.

1918

JULY—Father John M. Fraser returns from China after fifteen years missionary service to establish a foreign mission seminary in Canada.

NOVEMBER—Archbishop Gauthier of Ottawa approves the foundation of China Mission College in Almonte, Ont. Many members of the Canadian Hierarchy bless the new mission movement.

1919

JULY—Father Fraser visits Rome, and His Holiness Pope Benedict XV heartily blesses his new College.

SEPTEMBER—The "Catholic Record" of London, Ont., has already raised almost ten thousand dollars for Perpetual Burses for the support of students for the Chinese Missions.

OCTOBER—"CHINA" makes its first appearance; circulation, 200 copies. First editor, Rev. J. M. Fraser.

NOVEMBER—Father Fraser numbers twelve associates with him at Almonte, including Rev. Fathers Sammon and O'Toole.

1920

SEPTEMBER—Rev. J. J. Sammon first priest to leave China Mission College for China; he goes to Kwei Yang.

DECEMBER—Rev. D. Carey, first student of the College to be raised to the Holy Priesthood.

1921

FEBRUARY—Father Carey, the second priest to set sail for China.

NOVEMBER—At suggestion of Archbishop McNeil of Toronto a new property is acquired at Scarboro, Ont. Senior students at Almonte transferred to new home in Scarboro.

1922

JANUARY—Cardinal Van Rossum, Prefect of Propaganda, recommends "CHINA", "sincerely hoping that its diffusion may increase the interest and benevolence of the subscribers towards the Holy Missions."

MARCH—Archbishop Di Maria, Apostolic Delegate to Canada and Newfoundland, encourages China Mission College and urges all "to co-operate in this most noble work of training valiant missionaries".

SEPTEMBER—Rev. W. C. McGrath joins the staff of China Mission College at Scarboro. Appointed Editor of "CHINA".

1923

JULY—First sod turned, and excavations begun for a new Seminary Building at Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.

AUGUST—Rev. J. E. Lachapelle ordained to the Holy Priesthood.

SEPTEMBER—Laying of the Cornerstone of new St. F. X. Seminary by Bishop Alexander MacDonald. Sermon by Rev. C. F. Curran, D.D., of Halifax, N.S.

DECEMBER—Father Lachapelle sets out for China.

1924

JANUARY—Father Carey recalled from China for campaign work in Canada.

JUNE—Rev. V. Morrison ordained priest.

JULY—Bishops of Ontario take China Mission Seminary under their patronage, and select three Bishops to represent the Ontario Hierarchy on the Seminary Board of Directors. The First Board of Directors includes Archbishop McNeil, Bishop Fallon, Bishop O'Brien, Father Fraser, and Father McGrath.

AUGUST—Rev. John E. McRae, D.C.L., Rector of the Cathedral at Alexandria, Ont., and Chancellor of that Diocese, appointed President of China Mission Seminary.

SEPTEMBER—St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ont., formally opened and blessed at 3 p.m. on Sunday, Sept. 21st.

1925

FEBRUARY—Pope Pius XI imparts his Apostolic Blessing to the Directors, Students, and Benefactors of the Seminary.

JUNE—Rev. Paul Kam ordained priest; the first native Chinese ever raised to the dignity of the Priesthood in Canada.

The District of Chuchow, South Chekiang, China, allotted to St. F. X. Seminary for evangelization.

SEPTEMBER—The "J. V. McNeil Burse" first perpetual Burse donated by a single individual.

DECEMBER—First Departure Ceremony for priests leaving Canada for Chuchow took place at St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto, on Dec. 13th. On Dec. 26th, Fathers Fraser, Morrison, and Serra, the pioneer Mission Band from St. F. X. Seminary, sailed from Vancouver.

1926

JANUARY—"CHINA" increased from 8 pages to 16. Circulation almost 15,000.

First Mission Band arrives in China.

MAY—Rev. Joseph Venini ordained priest.

JUNE—Benefactor donates gift for building of church at Sungyang, China.

JULY—Father Fraser celebrates his Sacerdotal Silver Jubilee.

AUGUST—Rev. Wm. Fraser leaves for China.

OCTOBER—Fathers Carey and Venini go to Chuchow.

DECEMBER—Father Kam returns "home" to China.

1927

JANUARY—Due to invasion by "Red" Army our missionaries are forced to vacate their District for ten days.

FEBRUARY—Rev. W. K. Amyot ordained priest.

SEPTEMBER—New nine-room extension added to Seminary Building.

1928

FEBRUARY—Benefactor donates gift for building of new church at Lungchuang, China.

MARCH—Father Paul Wong ordained; our second native priest in Chuchow.

JUNE—Rev. D. Stringer and Rev. L. Beal ordained priests.

OCTOBER—Departure Ceremony for our third Mission Band held in St. Francis Church, Toronto. Rev. W. Amyot and Rev. L. Beal go to Chuchow.

DECEMBER—Very Rev. J. E. McRae, D.C.L., Superior-General of our mission organization, reaches Chuchow on his first official Visitation of our Missions in China.

1929

APRIL—Dr. McRae, on his return journey from China, is granted a private audience with His Holiness the Pope.

MAY—Rev. B. Boudreau, Rev. A. Gignac, and Rev. H. Sharkey ordained priests.

SEPTEMBER — Subscription campaign during Summer months added 10,000 new names to "CHINA'S" mailing list.

OCTOBER—Departure Ceremony for our Fourth Mission Band: Fathers Stringer, Boudreau, Gignac, and Sharkey.

Grey Nuns of the Immaculate Conception, Pembroke, Ont., send first Sisters to Chuchow.

1930

FEBRUARY—First ordination in our Seminary chapel: Bishop Alexander MacDonald ordains Rev. Alex. J. MacDonald to the Holy Priesthood.

JULY—Convent erected at Chuchow.

SEPTEMBER—Father Fraser returns from China for campaign work in Canada.

NOVEMBER—Bishop Defebvre, of Ningpo, China, visits China Mission Seminary and ordains to the Priesthood Rev. A. Venadam, Rev. J. King, and Rev. A. Chafe.

DECEMBER—Grey Nuns reach Chuchow, having spent a year of missionary initiation at Wenchow.

1931

JANUARY—Rev. John J. MacDonald ordained to the Priesthood.

MAY—Rev. A. Chafe appointed new Editor of "CHINA".

JUNE—Mission District of Chuchow erected into Prefecture Apostolic.

SEPTEMBER—Rev. Gerald Doyle ordained priest, and goes to Rome for post-graduate course.

OCTOBER—Fifth Band of Missionaries leaves for Chuchow: Rev. W. C. McGrath, Rev. A. Venadam, Rev. J. King, Rev. J. MacDonald. Two Grey Nuns, Sister M. Daniel and Sister M. Genevieve, also go to Chuchow.

NOVEMBER—Bishop Kidd, of London, Ont., succeeds the late Bishop Fallon on Seminary Board of Directors.

Rev. W. C. McGrath appointed Mission Superior in China.

DECEMBER—Rev. J. McGillivray and Rev. W. McNabb ordained priests.

1932

JANUARY—Rev. J. M. Fraser, Founder of China Mission Seminary, honoured by Holy See with dignity of Protonotary Apostolic.

FEBRUARY—First Religious Profession at Chuchow when Sister Catherine Doyle makes her Final Vows.

MARCH—Right Rev. W. C. McGrath appointed first Prefect-Apostolic of Chuchow.

SEPTEMBER—First Priests' Retreat ever held in Lishui. (Formerly the Retreats were made in Ningpo.)

OCTOBER—Father Sharkey recalled from China to open a Mission for the Chinese in Vancouver, B.C.

Sixth group of missionaries off for Chuchow: Fathers McGillivray and McNabb. Two Grey Nuns also go, Sisters St. Juletta and St. Angela.

NOVEMBER—Monsignor Fraser returns to China, to Kinhwa.

DECEMBER—Rev. Hugh McGettigan ordained priest.

1933

MARCH—Rev. Hugh Sharkey, in charge of Mission for Chinese at Vancouver, receives appointment as Director of Holy Childhood Association for Ontario and Western Canada.

APRIL—Thousands of readers of "CHINA" answer special appeal of our missionaries for Spiritual help for Chuchow Missions.

JULY—Work begun on new addition to Seminary Building.

SEPTEMBER—Rev. R. Roberts and Rev. C. Strang ordained priests.

1934

JANUARY—Father Boudreau completes beautiful new church in Pi-Wu-Ka, the gift of a benefactor.

MAY—Death of Archbishop McNeil, Chairman of St. F. X. Seminary Board of Control.

JUNE—His Eminence, Cardinal Villeneuve, of Quebec, first Cardinal ever to visit China Mission Seminary.

JULY—Rev. M. L. Curtin, of Archdiocese of Ottawa, becomes member of China Mission Institute.

SEPTEMBER—Fifty-two students at reopening of Seminary on Tenth Anniversary Year.

Rev. L. McFarland and Rev. P. Moore ordained to the Holy Priesthood.

Departure Ceremony, St. Michael's Cathedral, for seventh Band of Missionaries going to Chuchow.

OCTOBER — Fathers Doyle, McGettigan, and Strang, and Sisters Mary Angela and St. Martin of the Grey Nuns, sail from Vancouver for Chuchow on October 6th.

15th anniversary of publication of "CHINA", and 10th Anniversary of opening of St. Francis Xavier Seminary commemorated by special pictorial edition of "CHINA", the official organ of the Seminary.

RIGHT REVEREND JOHN M. FRASER, M.Ap., PROTONOTARY APOSTOLIC
Founder of China Mission Seminary

The Prefecture-Apostolic of Chuchow

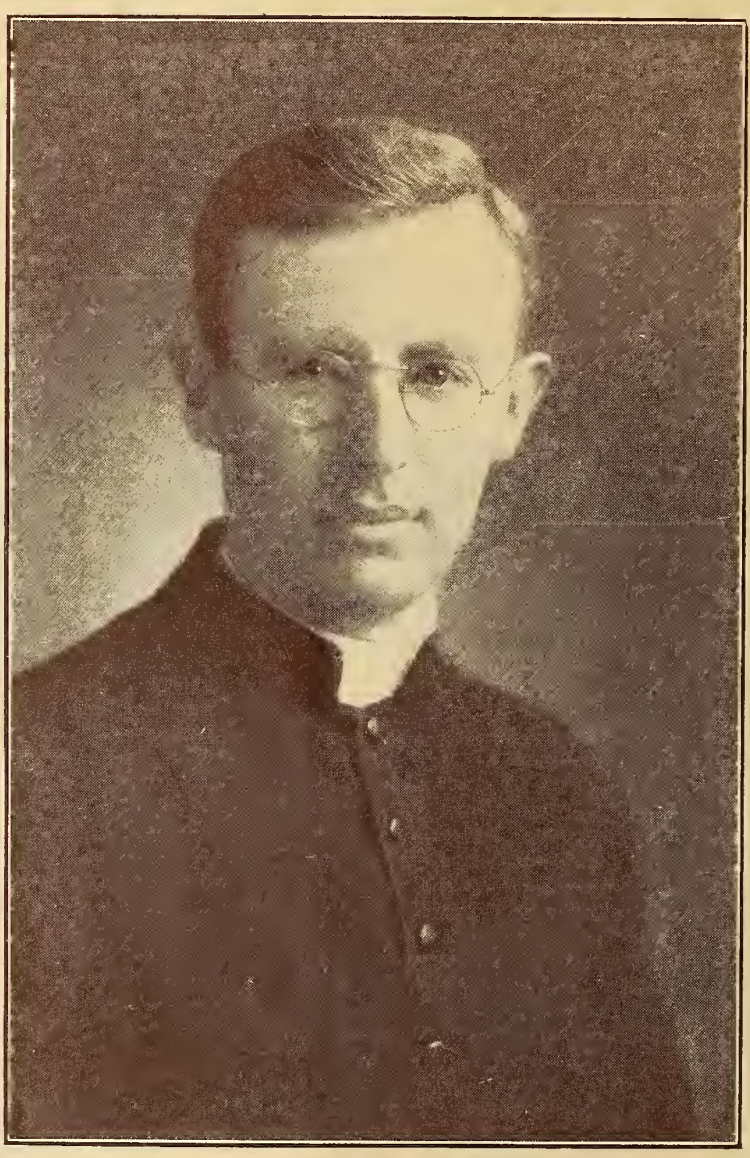
CHEKIANG, CHINA

MISSIONARIES IN CHINA

At LISHUI:

Rt. Rev. W. McGrath, P.A.
Rev. P. Kam
Rev. A. Venadam
Rev. J. McGillivray
Rev. G. Doyle
Rev. H. McGettigan
Rev. C. Strang

At KINHWA:



Rt. Rev. J. M. Fraser, P.A.

At SUNGYANG:

Rev. V. Morrison
Rev. L. Beal
Rev. W. McNabb

At TSINGTIEN:

Rev. R. Serra
Rev. J. MacDonald

At HUANG D'AN:

Rev. W. Amyot
Rev. J. King

At KANKOU:

Rev. J. Venini

At PI-WU-KA:

Rev. B. Boudreau

At LUNG-CHUANG:

Rev. P. Wong

At VANCOUVER MISSION:

Rev. H. Sharkey

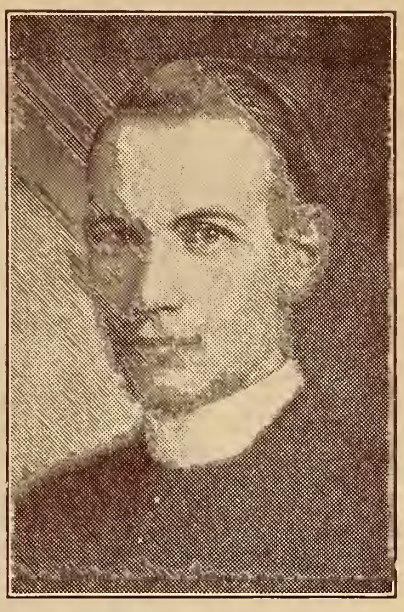
Right Reverend William C. McGrath
Prefect-Apostolic of Chuchow

On June 23, 1931, a Decree of the Sacred Congregation de Propaganda Fide raised our mission district of Chuchow to the status of a Prefecture-Apostolic, under the direction of St. Francis Xavier China Mission Institute.

Chuchow is the largest civil prefecture of the Province of Chekiang, and contains approximately ten thousand square miles of territory divided up into ten cities, seven large towns, and numerous villages. It is situated south of the famous old city of Shanghai, and ninety miles from the ocean port of Wenchow. The district is one of rare natural beauty, and the climate is temperate.

The City of Lishui (formerly called Chuchow) is the centre of missionary activity in the Prefecture. This city has a population of about forty thousand, of whom only a few hundred are Catholics. In Lishui there is a fine church, a priests' residence, a boys' school, and a substantial convent in charge of the Sisters of the Immaculate Conception, Pembroke, Ont. It is at Lishui that our new missionaries will spend their first year in China in order to become familiar with the language and customs before being sent off to various places for mission work.

In addition to the church at Lishui there are also splendid new churches at Lungchuang, Sungyang and Pi-Wu-Ka, and scattered throughout the Prefecture are many oratories or chapels, for the most part very small and ill-suited to house the King of Kings when the missionary celebrates Holy Mass during a visit.



There is much work to be done in Chuchow, for out of a population of 1,500,000 only 3,000 are Catholics. The evangelization of a million and a half pagans is the work for which our seminary needs the support of Catholics throughout Canada and Newfoundland.

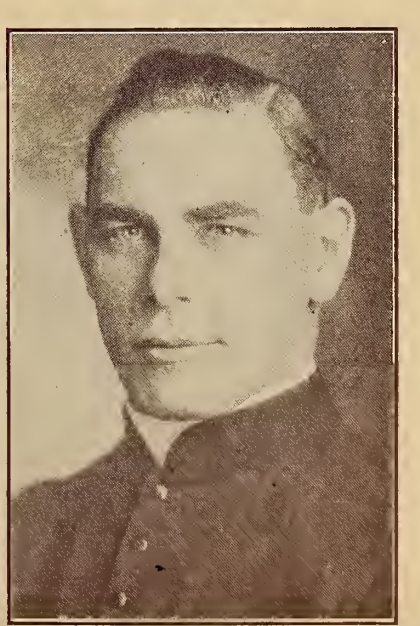
REV. J. V. MORRISON
Savage Hr., P.E.I.

REV. WM. K. AMYOT
Ottawa, Ont.

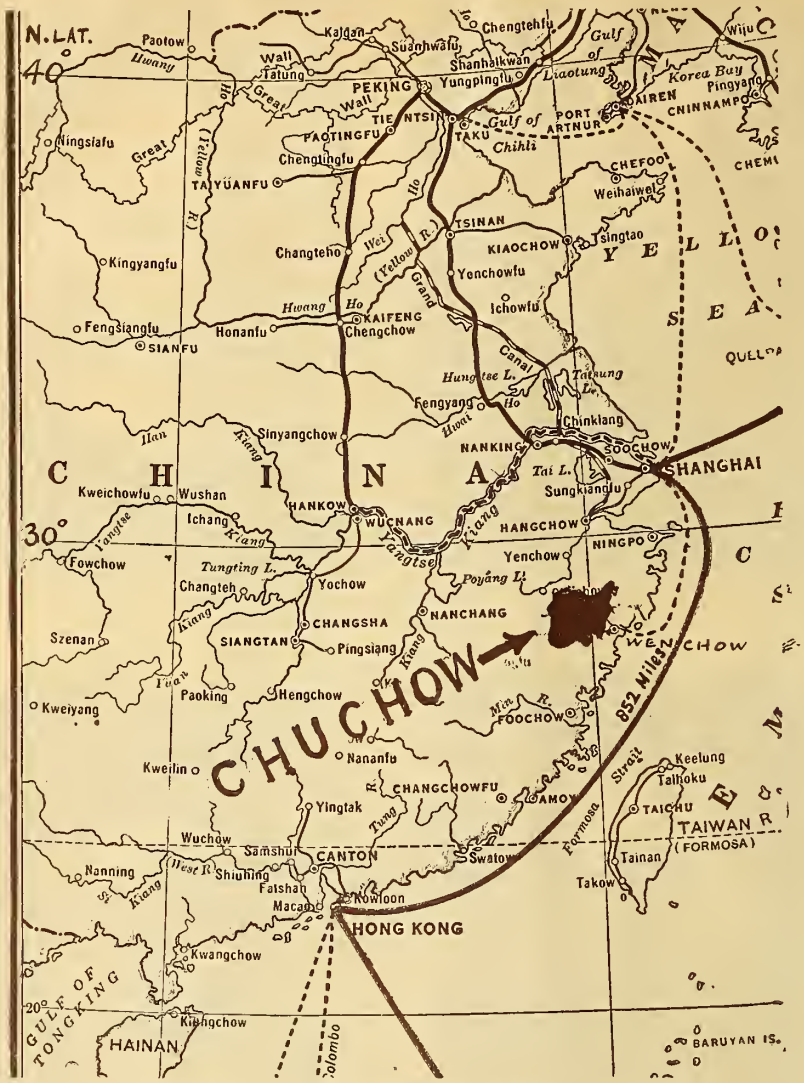
REV. A. GIGNAC
Ridgetown, Ont.

REV. J. E. VENINI
Oshawa, Ont.

REV. R. SERRA
Palau Sabardera, Spain

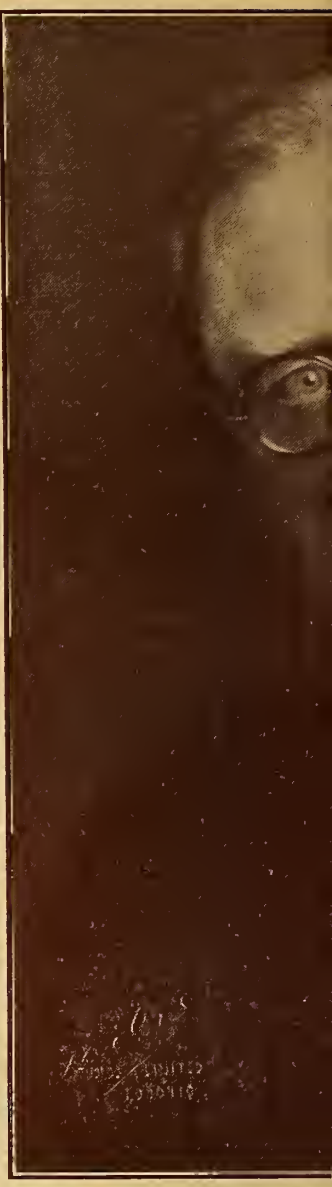


REV. B. BOUDREAU
New Bedford, Mass.

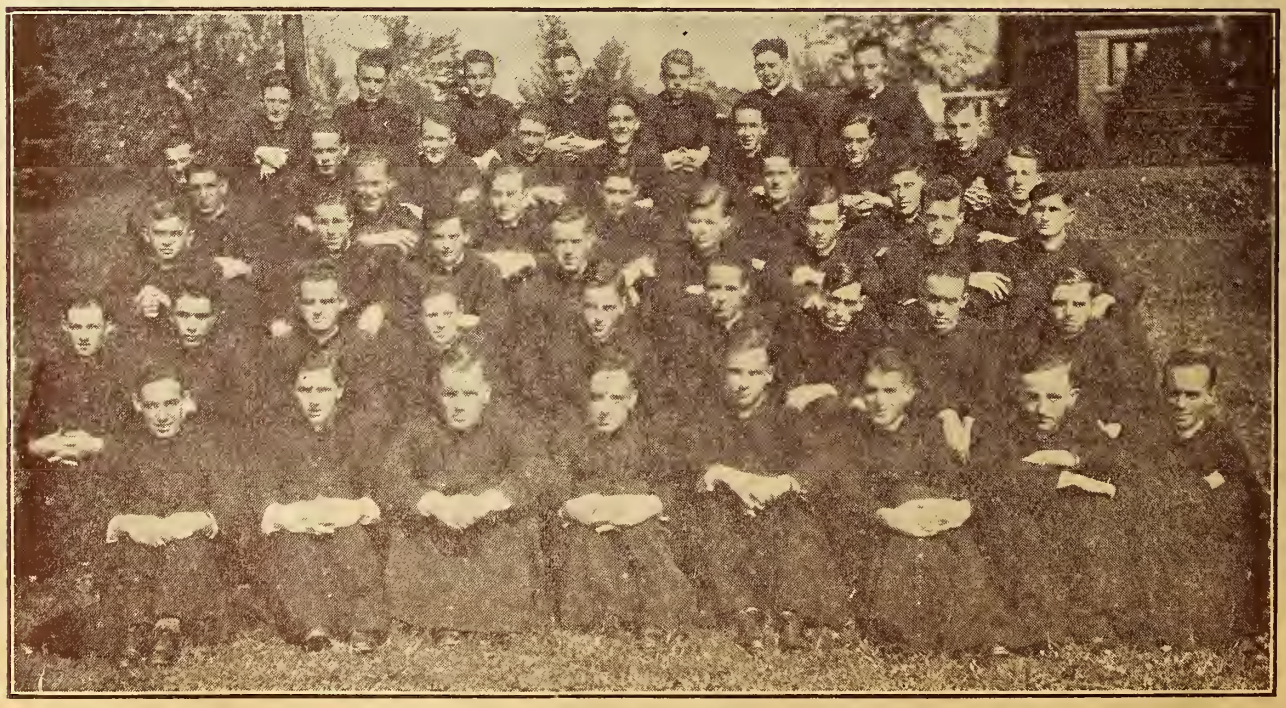


REV. L. BEAL
Otterville, Ont.

REV. D. E. STRINGER
Ottawa, Ont.



REV. JOHN MacDONALD
Windsor, N.S.



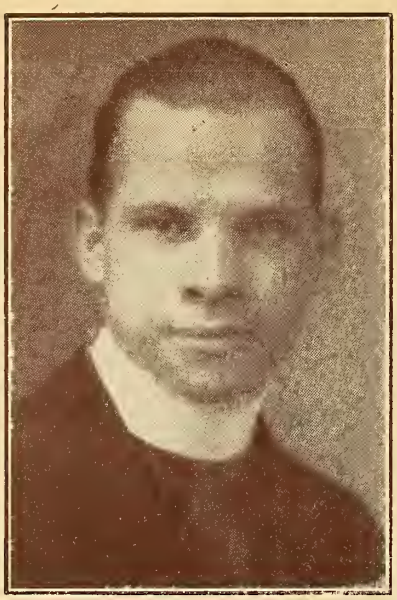
THE LOCATION OF OUR MISSION DISTRICT IN CHINA.

China looks to Canada and Newfoundland to provide the missionaries and the means necessary for the conversion of Chuchow to the Catholic Faith.

VERY RE
Superior General, St.

STUDENTS AT THE SEMINARY, SEPTEMBER, 1934

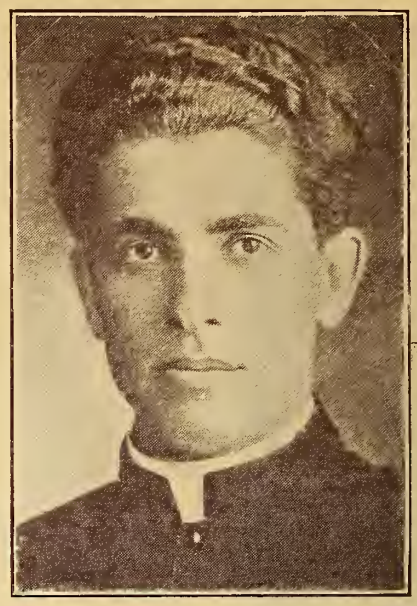
RAE, D.C.L.
China Mission Institute



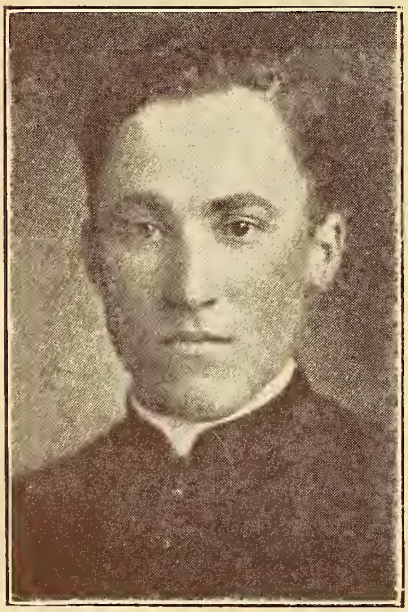
CHUCHOW, THE MISSION FIELD IN CHINA ALLOTTED TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY.

The names of the larger towns are given. The dots represent smaller towns and villages.

Six years hence all the young men pictured at lower left will, with God's help, be labouring as priests in this vast district. You will be glad if you play a part in preparing them for their future apostolate.



CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.



REV. WILLIAM McNABB
St. Thomas, Ont.

REV. JAMES McGILLIVRAY
Glace Bay, N.S.

REV. A. VENADAM
Pomquet, N.S.

REV. J. KING
Newburg, Ont.

NATIVE PRIESTS IN CHUCHOW
Rev. P. Kam Rev. P. Wong
Father Kam was ordained to the Priesthood in Canada.

REV. H. SHARKEY
St. John, N.B.
At Chinese mission in Vancouver.

REV. LORNE McFARLAND
Toronto, Ont.
Ordained Sept. 23rd, 1934.

REV. R. ROBERTS
Victoria, B.C.
Due to ill health, Fr. Roberts was disappointed at not being included in this year's departure group for China.

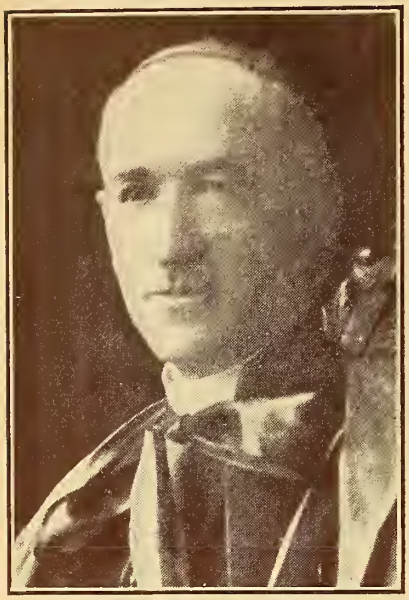
REV. PATRICK MOORE
Ingersoll, Ont.
Ordained Sept. 23rd, 1934.

SISTER MARY ANGELA
Mallow, Ireland

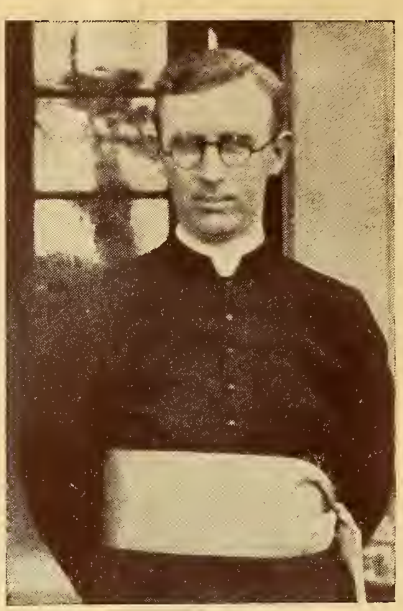
SISTER ST. MARTIN
Esmonde, Ont.

OUR 1934 MISSION BAND FOR CHUCHOW

ST. MICHAEL'S CATHEDRAL, TORONTO
Scene of the Departure Ceremony for our missionaries on Sunday night, September 30th.



REV. HUGH McGETTIGAN
St. John's, Nfld.



REV. GERALD DOYLE
Toronto, Ont.

REV. CRAIG STRANG
St. John's, Nfld.

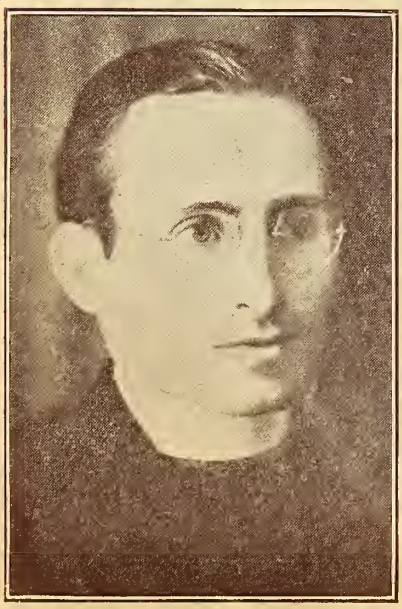
BISHOP KIDD

MONSIGNOR McGRATH

ARCHBISHOP O'BRIEN

THE BOARD OF ADMINISTRATION

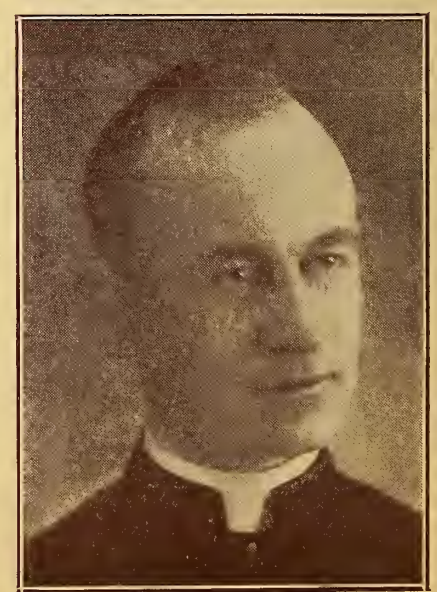
St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.



(Photos above and at right)

VERY REV. JOHN E. McRAE, J.C.D.
President of the Seminary

THE SEMINARY STAFF



Our students, numbering fifty-two this year, come from all sections of Canada and Newfoundland. They attend classes at St. Augustine's Seminary. The Staff of China Mission Seminary is pictured at left and below.

REV. A. J. MacDONALD
Bursar

REV. A. CHAFE
Editor of "China"

REV. M. L. CURTIN
recently joined our Institute

THE CONVENT AT LISHUI

The GREY NUNS of the Immaculate Conception

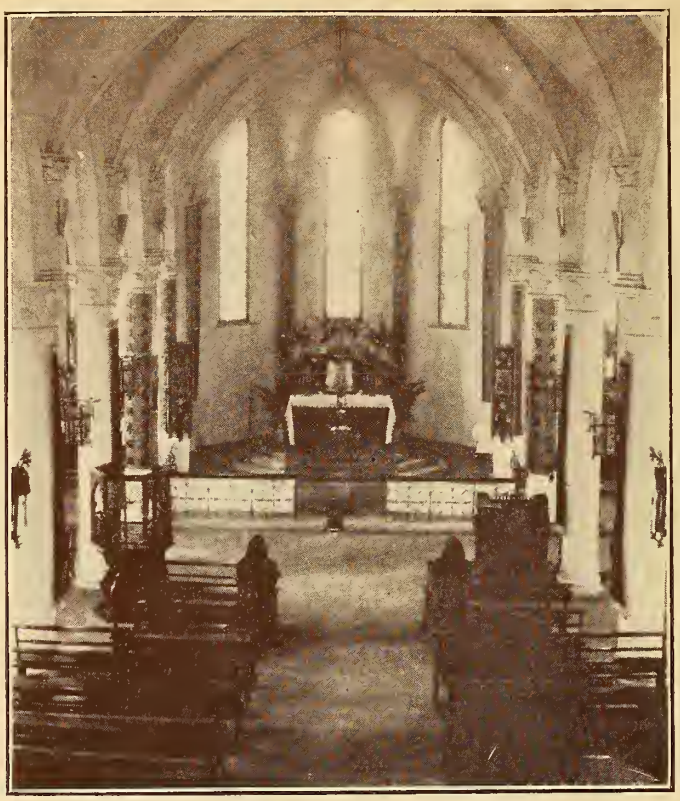
(from Pembroke, Ont.)

NOW AT

LISHUI

SISTER ST. JULETTA

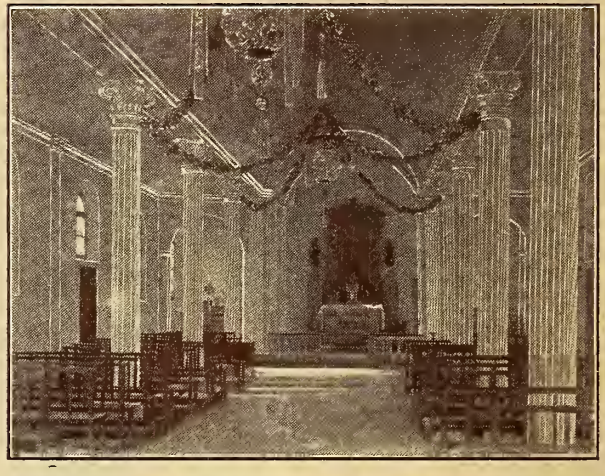
SISTER ST. ANGELA



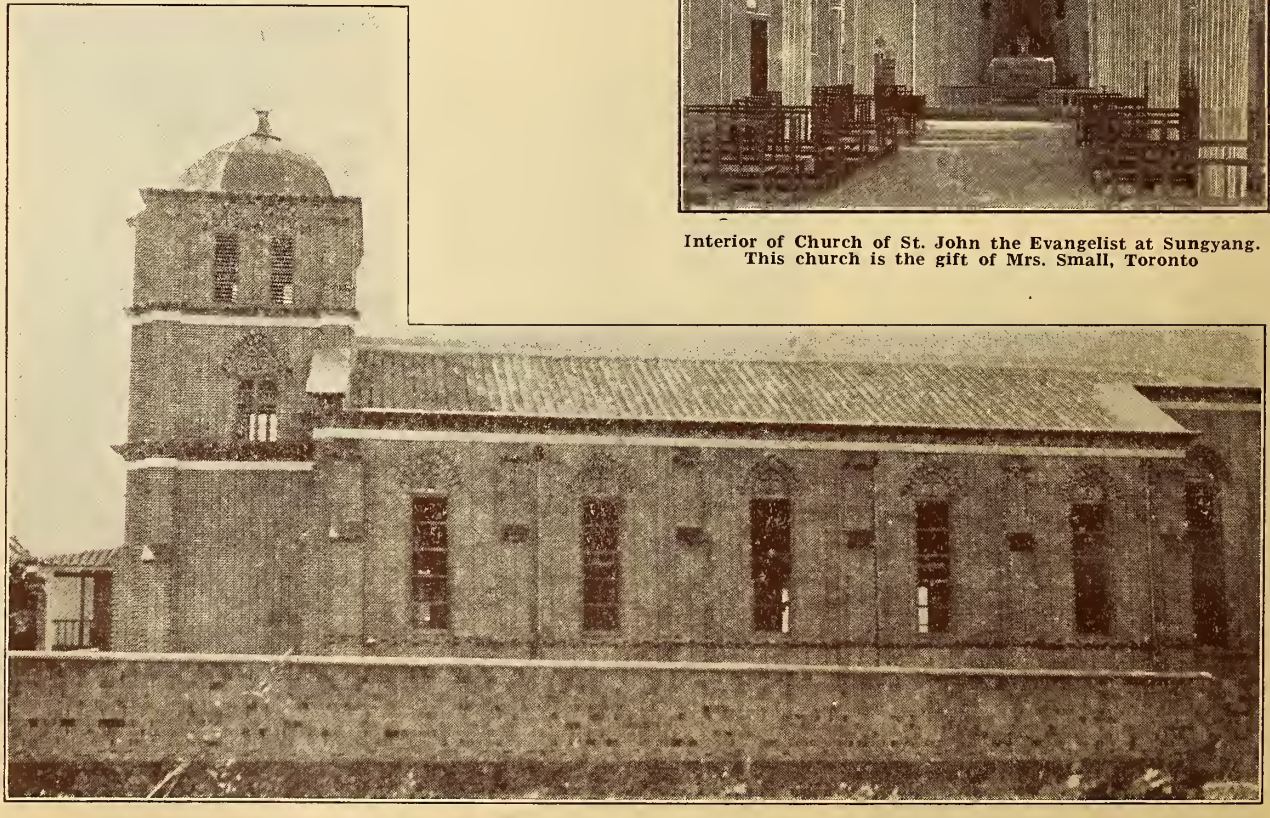
SISTER MARY CATHERINE

SISTER MARY DANIEL

SISTER MARY GENEVIEVE



INTERIOR OF THE CHURCH AT LISHUI



Church of the Sacred Heart at our mission centre in Lishui

At Lungchuang also there is a substantial church, erected a few years ago. The buildings mentioned are in the larger towns from which our missionaries operate. Tsingtien needs a church, and countless villages visited by the missionaries should have at least decent little chapels.

Interior of Church of St. John the Evangelist at Sungyang. This church is the gift of Mrs. Small, Toronto

This beautiful new church was completed early this year at Pi-Wu-Ka by Rev. B. Boudreau. It was the gift of an anonymous benefactor.

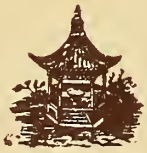
TEN YEARS AGO

(Extract from Sermon preached by the late Bishop Fallon, of London, at opening of China Mission Seminary)

The late Archbishop McNeil of Toronto was chairman of the Seminary Board of Control for almost ten years. He is shown here blessing our new Seminary at its opening on September 21st, 1924.

WHEN Peter speaks from the Vatican we are the humble, obedient sheep of the One Divine Shepherd, and so our Holy Father made Rome the source of inspiration—he made Rome the guiding influence—he made Rome the voice of the efforts of Catholics throughout the world, to put into effect the divine injunction to go out and succour those who are indeed in darkness and the shadows of death. Wonderful has been the response, marvellous has been the reply from every section of the earth and from every branch of the Catholic people; from every clime and language and nation. One of the first to jump into the breach to aid the foreign missions who were going forth from France and other parts of Europe was Ireland. Aid was also sent out from the United States. Is it to be wondered at, then, that this country of ours, so catholic in its history, should also have attempted to take its place in this marvellous movement? We find ourselves in Canada with a Foreign Mission Seminary established for the Province of Quebec in Montreal looking forward to a bright future, ready and only too happy to join hands with its sister institute, St. Francis Xavier Seminary for the Chinese here in Scarboro, praying one for the other and for their undivided success. Thus, our country has taken its place with the older nations of the world to carry the light of faith to the Chinese people—to those 400 millions, most of whom have never heard the saving name of Christ; many of whom have never seen the symbol of salvation. This is a wonderful mission—this mission which should throb with the heart of every young Catholic student.

It is perfect nonsense to think that the welter of blood through which the world went during five years has produced any of the results expected by even the least enthusiastic—there is no peace in the world—there is no harmony in the world—there is no recognition of justice in the world. Only God alone knows what is going to come out of what is called "Western Civilization". This may be just romancing. I do not profess to be a prophet, but it seems to me that up from that welter springs the figure of Christ again, and He points to a road that leads, not to self-seeking, commercial interests and financial bargains, but He points to the road that leads where none of us ever imagined we would be asked to go—out there beyond the western boundaries that are separated from us by thousands of miles; out there beyond the vast Pacific Ocean lies a land of mystery. It has a history of almost 5,000 years of civilization; it has a population of over 400,000,000 of souls, every one of which is as dear to God and every one of which was redeemed by the precious blood of Jesus Christ, just equally as yours and mine. It stands absolutely alone amongst all the nations of antiquity: Babylon, Syria, Egypt, Greece and Rome waned and were destroyed, and they were great empires of antiquity; but this wonderful nation, this mysterious nation, this nation of which we know nothing but which our ancestors were apt to condemn, this nation goes beyond the history of Babylon and comes down to the present day. It is called China. It has a civilization which in many respects puts to shame our boasted Western civilization, and ought to bring the blush of shame to any man who would compare it with what we consider the high developments of the age in which we live. A civilization that has an obedience for law and has had it for centuries, that we have never known and certainly do not know to-day. A nation that has an artistic people, with their own standards of art it is true, but nevertheless an artistic people. A civilization which is not surpassed in the world. A nation which has made a quiet, kindly people that wish to to be left alone so far as the disturbing elements of our civilization are concerned, and a civilization that is extravagant if you will; yes, over-developed if you wish, but which has a reverence for parents and ancestors which compels our admiration.

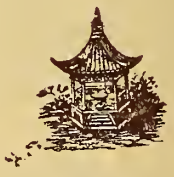


Archbishop Forbes raises the Monstrance over the bended heads of the people.

OUR WORK MUST GO ON!

OUR MISSIONS MUST BE SUPPORTED AND DEVELOPED

+



FOR MANY YEARS

this last page of "China" has been used to make appeals to our readers for help in our most pressing needs.

Looking through the preceding pages of this anniversary issue you have seen pictured the results that have been achieved through their co-operation.

In ten years at China Mission Seminary a great deal has been accomplished for the missions.

We take this opportunity of expressing our sincere thanks to those friends who have stood by us in the past, and we invite all our readers everywhere to maintain their practical interest in our missionary enterprise.

+

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

NOVEMBER, 1934

ATTENTION!

THIS is the last issue of "China" but one for the year 1934. Our mailing list unfortunately includes many names of subscribers who are not paid quite up to date. The only means we use to advise delinquent subscribers is the expiry date on their address label. Look at the date on your "China" now. If it does not read 1935, or later, we ask you to make use of the coupon printed on page 158 of this issue. When sending cheques or money orders please make them payable to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY

Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.

Where Savings Earn 3%

One dollar is sufficient to open a savings account with the Capital Trust. Regular deposits, however small, with interest at 3%, soon count up to appreciable sums. Deposit, or withdraw by cheque, through the mail or at our nearest office.

CAPITAL TRUST
Corporation Limited

100 Adelaide St. West
TORONTO

OTTAWA - MONTREAL

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West
Toronto

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.

OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 26,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XV. NOVEMBER, 1934 No. 10

WITH OUR NEW MISSIONARIES

SUNDAY night, September 30th, marked the seventh occasion of a Departure Ceremony for missionaries leaving for China from St. Francis Xavier Seminary. So great was the crowd which attended St. Michael's Cathedral for the event that many were unable to gain admittance. Readers of "China" are by now familiar with the account of this inspiring ceremonial. The procession to the sanctuary of priests and seminarians, the singing of the "Veni Creator", the blessing and imposition of missionary crosses, the renewal of the missionary oath of fidelity by the departing missionaries, and the singing of the stirring Departure Hymn. Rt. Rev. Monsignor Carroll, Administrator of the Archdiocese of Toronto, officiated at the Ceremony and gave Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament, assisted by Rev. L. McFarland and Rev. A. Chafe. The choirs of St. Francis Xavier Seminary and St. Augustine's Seminary, under the direction of Rev. A. Belanger, rendered the musical parts in faultless style. To Rev. Dr. Muckle and his staff of priests at St. Michael's Cathedral, as well as to all who aided in the success of this year's Departure Ceremony, our thanks are gratefully offered.

Shortly after the conclusion of the ceremony, Fathers Doyle, McGettigan, and Strang entrained for Vancouver, and many friends were at the station to bid them good-bye. From the missionaries came several notes along the way reporting an enjoyable trip. During their short stop-over at Saskatoon they were honoured by a visit from His Excellency Bishop Murray, whose gracious act was much appreciated. On October 6th our Mission Band, including two Grey Nuns for Lishui, set sail from Victoria. Father Roland Roberts thus describes the actual sailing: "It was a beautiful sight; the setting was perfect. The sinking sun, the band playing, the Sisters from the Convent and the Hospital singing the 'Ave Maris Stella' (five of their number were on board), and the white 'Empress' gliding like a true monarch of the sea over the rippleless surface of the Bay—all seemed to combine to make one think that a bit of heaven had come to earth to bid the missionaries Godspeed."

On Friday night at Victoria our entire Mission Band took part in a Departure Ceremony at the Cathedral there for Sisters of St. Ann and Sisters of Charity leaving for missions in Japan and China. Father Sharkey, of our Vancouver Chinese Mission, was the preacher.

Our missionaries were due to reach Shanghai on Sunday, October 21st, a date which, incidentally, marked the celebration of Mission Day throughout the whole Catholic world. By now they have met former seminary associates and old friends at the mission in Lishui, and we expect that readers of "China" will soon be able to know of their impressions of their adopted land. Every missionary going to Chuchow is a prospective contributor to our pages, and we hope for great things from the three priests who have lately gone into action in Fields Afar. Father Doyle has already written for "China", both in his student days and during his time in Rome. Father Strang has had literary experience as editor of "Inter Nos", the monthly record of seminary doings compiled by the students for the benefit of our missionaries across the water. And as for Father McGettigan, we know his year's experience as an assistant pastor in a Newfoundland outport has made him quite a raconteur, and he ought to find much in China to provide an outlet for his literary leanings. And we hope he uses a typewriter often.

The five members of this year's Mission Band will be the first of our missionaries to enjoy the new travel facilities on the journey up from Shanghai. The Province of Chekiang is keeping pace with modern developments in road-making in China, and whereas formerly it took almost a week of tiresome travel by small boat to reach our headquarters, now the journey can be made overland in busses in about two days. Tsingtien's pastor (at present it is Father Serra) always had the honor of the first visit from newly-arrived missionaries in our District. From there to headquarters in Lishui, a distance of approximately sixty miles, there is now a respectable highway for bus traffic. It appears that in the near future travelling in China will be done without these formidable difficulties which were the terror of missionaries only a few short years ago.

Conversions

But the New Converts Have No Chapel

A LETTER FROM FATHER SERRA

ABOUT three hours walk from our Parish centre of Tsingtien is a village called Lei-Zih. Some years ago it first received the knowledge of the One True God. At one time it boasted of a pagan temple, but when that collapsed nobody went to the trouble of rebuilding it. Lei-Zih is today one of our most promising out-Missions, and largely through the zeal and example of a young girl. She is in the bottom picture on this page, the girl at the right marked with an X. Her name is Yu Xia. An elder brother of hers was a Christian, and so Yu Xia was baptized in her infancy without opposition of her pagan father. When the catechist would visit her home (only several times in a year) she would show a marked interest in questions of doctrine. When 15 years old she persuaded her parents to become catechumens, and realizing that she could do much work among her people if she had a good education she sought permission from Father Gignac to go to the Convent at Lishui. She increased in knowledge and piety under the care of the good Sisters, and during her vacations at home she worked energetically in catechising her friends and relatives. Now the 30 families of her little village are nearly all catechumens. Only three families are entirely pagan. The centre picture shows some of the people after Sunday Mass when I visited them last May. All the children are baptized, and soon the adults will be Catholics. But the missionary is faced with a big problem, the cause of much sadness of heart. He has no chapel where these good people may attend Holy Mass. A small parlour in a Christian's home is rented to serve as a chapel on occasions. There is not even a room for the priest to sleep in on his visits. If we had the means to erect a chapel in Lei-Zih, I feel sure that in a short time all the inhabitants would be Catholics. What a wonderful thing it would be to have in our parish a village in which every man, woman and child would be worshippers of the One True God. This year, the people of Lei-Zih witnessed their first Catholic marriage. They could not all fit into the little room where Mass was said, but they crowded round the door, they were thrilled with the ceremony, and with the instruction and sermon given by the missionary. In the village at the foot of the mountain there is a piece of ground that my assistant, Father John McDonald, feels "has been reserved by Divine Providence to be used for a Catholic chapel where these poor farmers may learn the road to Heaven." All the people in the centre picture know their Catholic prayers thoroughly. I beg some reader of "China" to furnish us with the means to erect a chapel for this promising centre of Catholicity in Tsingtein Parish. Without a chapel we are hampered in our work of instruction and conversion, as the people have no place to gather and to assist properly at the services of the Church. Another place where we badly need a chapel is Dolou. The Christians of Dolou are shown in the top picture. It is really one of our very best places, but as yet we have no chapel. Surely our appeal will not be in vain. The Christians who will benefit by the generosity of some reader of "China" will pray fervently for the benefactor who supplies them with a chapel.

Rev. Ramon Serra,
Tsingtein, Chekiang.

Read Father Serra's letter on this page. It explains the pictures above.

From . . .

SHANGHAI to PEIPING

A Journey to China's Old Capital

By

REV. AARON GIGNAC

DURING August, Father Aaron Gignac, who has been making a special study of the Chinese language at Shanghai, was granted a short holiday during the course of which he visited Peiping, the ancient Capital of China. From a letter recently received from Father Gignac we give you this account of his journey. From accounts of travels made in our District of Chuchow the impression is easily created that China is a mountainous country. Certainly it is in our Chuchow Missions, but in the environs of Shanghai and all along the railway to Peiping, a distance of approximately one thousand miles, there is scarcely a single hill large enough to be dignified with the name of mountain. We'll let Father Gignac do the telling.

"I was going on a little holiday, and Peiping was my destination. Father Nugent, the Rector of the Grand Seminary of Ningpo, accompanied me to the railway station in Shanghai. The Western visitor would open his eyes in astonishment at the modernity and style of the Shanghai station. A 'red-cap' showed the way as I made for my train, the 'Blue Express', the equal of any train in Canada. Sharp at four o'clock the giant modern engine with its twelve cars pulled out for points North.

"Along the way a beautiful panorama of level farming country delighted the vision. As the journey progressed I could notice the gradual change in the methods of farming. Animals were being used more in the fields, and fewer humans were doing the 'heavy work'. In the South, water is pumped into the rice fields for irrigation purposes by hand or foot. Going North, I noticed oxen were used to provide the pumping power. In one place I saw a windmill, similar to a Dutch one, doing the work ordinarily done by several men in our own district of Lishui. Not so very many men, women, or children were working in the fields, but donkeys and horses were employed in the carrying of loads, etc.

"It was growing dark as we approached Nanking. I am told the train will cross the Yangsti river at eleven o'clock. The train ferry is modern to the last bolt. The train is divided into three sections and moved on to the barge for the crossing to Pukow. I understand this modern train-ferry was built in England and driven under its own power to China.

"The first morning out from Shanghai we reached Hsii Chow Fu, a city where the Canadian Jesuits have their Mission. Here all along the way nothing but level land as far as the eye could see. The farmers busy as usual in their fields, and here and there groups of naked little boys watching cows, pulling weeds, or doing other work according to their age.

The famous Temple of Heaven in Peiping. Father Gignac is standing on the steps, the figure at the left holding a white sun helmet in his hand.

"About four o'clock of the second day we reached Yenchowfu, the centre of the Missions entrusted to the Fathers of the Divine Word. Here these Fathers have their seminary, school, printing press, hospital, and schools in charge of Sisters, while a short distance outside the city they conduct a Leper Asylum. Not more than five miles from the city is the birthplace of Confucius, a place of pilgrimage for thousands of people every year who go to pay their respects to the ancient Chinese sage. So far the train has covered about half the thousand miles to Peiping.

"The roads in this vicinity are not mere paths as in Southern Chekiang, but they are quite large and suitable for carriage traffic. Many horse and donkey-drawn vehicles are on the roads. Farmers are driving to and from their work in ox carts, and caravans of donkeys laden with the produce of the soil go slowly along.

"I had left Shanghai on August 6th, and on the morning of the 8th, in a drizzling rain, we pulled into Tientsin. I was pleased to hear the people speaking the same dialect I had been studying, and still more pleased when I found I could converse easily with them. At 10.20 a.m. the train reached Peiping, the ancient Capital and the city of him who styled himself the Son of Heaven. Travelling alone, as I was, I found it a bit bewildering at first in this strange city amongst strange people, but I had little difficulty in locating the North Church, known as the Pei Tang, where the Lazarist Fathers are stationed, and where they have been working ever since the seventeenth century. I very much enjoyed their kind hospitality, and perhaps in a later letter I may describe for you some of the sights of Peiping."

SERMON

preached in St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto, by Rev. B. Doyle, C.S.P., at the Departure Ceremony for Missionaries going to Chuchow, September 30, 1934.

"Go out of thy country and from thy kindred and out of thy father's house and come into the land which I will show thee . . . and I will bless thee and magnify thy name and thou shalt be blessed." Genesis 12:1.

* * *

This call of Abraham was the first of its kind of which we have historic record. But down through the ages God's summons has sounded in countless generous hearts: "Go out of thy country and from thy kindred and out of thy father's house and come into the land which I will show thee."

Always does God make use of human agents in His work with souls. The Old Testament gives one example after another. Abraham was to found a race that was to keep alive the knowledge of one true God and eventually give birth to the Saviour. It was to Moses He gave the Ten Commandments to be delivered to the people. He raised up the prophets one by one to preach repentance and lead back His erring children. He sent John the Baptist as the fore-runner of the Redeemer, to prepare the way before Him. Why, even our Redemption was wrought by a man, the Son of God made man, born of a woman.

Since the coming of Christ and the establishment of the Church, God has continued to deal with mankind in that same maner, if anything in larger measure. He might have employed a different plan. He might have, Himself, conveyed to each individual soul knowledge of His truth. He might have imparted to each soul, using no human agency, saving grace. But no; the Apostles were to bear the message of Christ to the world, and were to carry with them for the salvation of souls, the grace merited on Calvary; the Apostles and their successors.

Early in His ministry Our Divine Lord indicated His plan. He had stopped to converse with the Samaritan woman at the well while the disciples went into a nearby town for food. On their return they offered Jesus the food they had brought. But He had now no desire for it. He hungered for souls, and, having tasted, as it were, the soul of the Samaritan woman, His hunger was whetted. "I have meat which you know not of," He said. "My meat is to do the will of Him that sent me that I may perfect His work." Then taking advantage of the surrounding country to bring home the significance of his words and the part they themselves were to play in perfecting the Father's work, He pointed to the fields, saying: "Behold I say to you, lift up your eyes and see the countries, for they are white already to harvest. And he that reapeth receiveth wages and gathereth fruit unto everlasting life." (John 3:35).

REV. BASIL DOYLE, C.S.P.,
Rector of St. Peter's Church, Toronto.

At this time, the disciples being young in their novitiate, the meaning of the Master's words was not clear to them. Over two years were to pass before they were to grasp their full import. Just before ascending into heaven, our Divine Lord enlightened them in full: "Going therefore teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and behold I am with you all days, even to the consummation of the world." (Matt. 28:19, 20). Then did their imaginations leap back to that other scene which now took on a definite and wonderful meaning. Looking out they saw the whole world like an immense harvest, ready to be gathered into the granaries of the Lord, and they were the laborers appointed to the work.

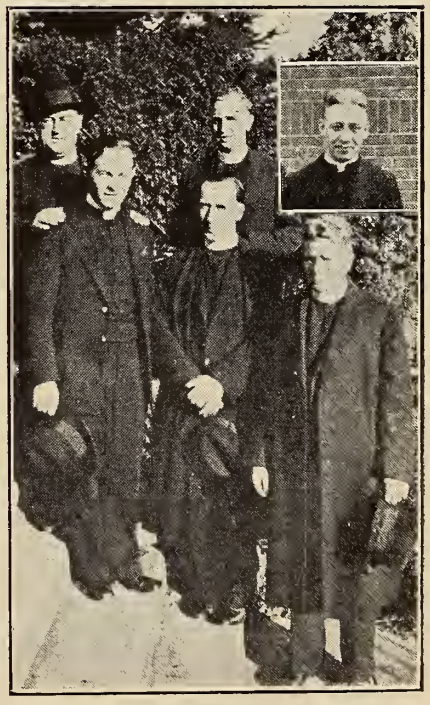
Then, too, they could recall other words of His to the same effect: "You are my witnesses . . ." "Whose sins you shall forgive they are forgiven them." "Do this for a commemoration of me." Hence, too St. Paul could later write: "For Christ therefore we are ambassadors . . . Let a man so account of us as ministers of Christ and dispensers of the mysteries of God." (2 Cor. 5:20; 1 Cor. 4:1. Finally we could hear these words spoken by Pope Pius X: "The immeasurable blessings won for the world by Jesus Christ, our Redeemer, are not bestowed on human beings except through the ministers of Christ and the dispensers of the mysteries of God."

Since men are God's instruments for the salvation of souls, it follows that every accepted call to the missionary life means souls saved. Every missionary has certain souls dependent on him for their salvation. Hence innumerable souls are lost through neglected vocations. Suppose, for example, St. Paul had continued to kick against the goal and gone on persecuting the Church of Christ? While there can be no doubt as to the eventual triumph of the Church, might it not have been much longer in coming? Who knows what mighty obstacles might have stayed its progress had they not been levelled in that first age by his sweeping zeal? But Saul, by the Divine Hand was stricken from his horse at the gates of Damascus, and conquered at last by grace cried out: "Lord, what wilt Thou have me to do?" From that day his zeal was turned to the cause of Christ. He who had threatened the very existence of the infant Church now became its foremost Apostle. If, in less than three hundred years after the Ascension, a Christian sat on the throne of the Caesars, under God one man, St. Paul, was largely responsible.

In every age St. Paul has had his disciples. There were Cyril and Methodius, Boniface, Patrick, Francis Xavier, our own Jesuit

In Shanghai last year our missionaries paid a visit to Mr. Lo Pa Hong's great hospital. Fathers MacDonald, McGillivray and Beal are shown with this foremost Catholic layman of China, who has done so much for the propagation of the Faith amongst his own people.

Martyrs and a host of others hardly less zealous. We know what wonderful work these men accomplished as ambassadors of God and dispensers of His mysteries, and how millions have owed to them the grace of Christ. Had any one of them failed to respond to the divine call the Church and the Kingdom of God on earth and in heaven, the cause of immortal souls, would have suffered just that much. Such examples bring to us the power God has given to men and their lofty place, as well as their responsibilities, in the scheme of salvation.



The three young men to whom we bid God-speed to-night are the newest disciples of those heroic missionaries of old. No less than they are these to be heralds of good tidings, messengers of God's peace, dispensers of His grace. Years ago there arose in the soul of each of them the question: "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" The answer came back, not in a blinding flash from the heavens, but still unmistakable, in those gentle tones heard only in the depths of generous hearts: "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men . . . Go out of thy country and from thy kindred and out of thy father's house and come into the land which I will show thee." They stand ready to go, eager to carry to nations that dwell in darkness and the shadow of death the glad tidings of good things.

It is impossible for us, of a Christian civilization, to imagine the misery and utter abandonment of the heathens. Theirs is indeed a sad lot, for they are without God in life, without hope in death, and without friends in eternity. True, they have their gods, but these rather add to their woes. They are gods of fear, carved in the most hideous and terrible fashions, the more to excite the terror of the people. How different from the strong and gentle Saviour whom we adore as God and Who is essentially a God of love. Yet they fall down and adore and offer sacrifices to these idols, adoration and sacrifice that are due alone to the one true God and therefore are a robbery of His glory. There is no brotherly love among the heathens; selfishness is the rule of their lives. There is no mutual trustfulness, for each looks upon his neighbor with suspicion. Thus the chief sources of human happiness are removed from them.

Poverty among the heathens is the most distressful kind. Nothing in our experience may be likened to it. Indeed, missionaries tell us that the miserable shack of one of our poorest families would be looked upon as a palace by these poor people and their rags of clothing as a court dress. And the poor among them are in the overwhelming majority. Their poverty is the cause of many crimes and is chiefly responsible for the prevalance of child-murder since each child means another mouth to be fed and another back to be clothed. The infants put to death in a year number hundreds of thousands.

Christ our Saviour hung on the cross with His arms extended to embrace all the nations. But to His missionaries he has consigned the task and the privilege of spreading abroad the light of Faith and dispensing His redeeming grace. Canada, her own soil crimsoned by the blood of martyred missionaries, now in her turn takes up the torch to carry it to distant lands.

Brethren, we have not the vocation, meaning for some of us that we have not the courage, to be active foreign missionaries. But I am confident I am expressing the will of you all when I assure these young apostles that we shall follow them with our prayers. May the Eternal Shepherd and their Divine Friend and Counsellor, from the tabernacles they will erect in China's desolate reaches, comfort their loneliness, console their discouragements and strengthen their hands. May Mary, Queen of Apostles, yes, and Queen of Martyrs, keep them close under the shelter of her mantle. May a million souls, one day in Heaven, thank Gerald Doyle, Hugh McGettigan, and Craig Strang for their inheritance of the unsearchable riches of Christ.

AT VICTORIA, B.C.

Rev. A. Gaudette, of the cathedral staff, the genial host to our missionaries in Victoria; Rev. Roland Roberts; Rev. Hugh Sharkey, in charge of the Chinese Mission at Vancouver; Rev. Hugh McGettigan, and (at right, rear) Rev. Craig Strang. Inset: Rev. Gerald Doyle.

THE FATE OF WONG—
"PIGS IS PIGS"—
ONE PROD TOO MANY

UP UNTIL NOON of June 7th, Wong Kwei Yong was just one of the four hundred million Chinese engaged in their daily struggle to keep brother Wolf from parking on their doorstep. A few minutes later, Wong Kwei Yong was just one of the thirty thousand Sons of Han who daily are "shuffled off this mortal coil". In Chicago parlance, he was "put on the spot and bumped off". It happened like this:

Wong was a merchant-trader from down Wenchow way. He dickered in most anything, and in all his dickerings he had made quite a little pile. This year his prospects looked rosy for a good turnover in dong yu, dong yu being an oil much used in the paint and varnish business. The oil is produced from nuts (alas, not edible) that grow on very ornamental trees flourishing in the mountains hereabouts, turning them into beautiful blossom gardens when the trees are in bloom. This oil is pressed from the nuts, up in the mountains, poured into five-gallon kerosene tins that have served their original purpose, and carried to the headwaters of the Wenchow river. Here it is purchased by the merchants, shipped by them to Wenchow, and from there to goodness only knows where. So Wong decided to take a fling in oil this year.

Now, transferring money from one point to another in this Celestial Republic is a very difficult and very dangerous undertaking. Only in the large centres are there any banks even remotely resembling banks as such institutions are understood west of the Suez, except, of course, in their decided penchant for closing their doors and hanging out a "No Funds" sign. In any case, Wong succeeded in mustering two thousand silver men in the city of Lungchuang. But two thousand cart wheels do not, by any means, constitute a light load for anyone to tote some twenty-odd—and some of them are very odd indeed—miles, and such was the distance still to be covered by Wong before he reached the oil mart. So he rustles about and gets his cart wheels and Napoleons and piastres converted into greenbacks. And here "enter the villains"—a trio of them. Soldiers of the realm they are, stalwart and true, guardians and protectors of the people, les braves soldats! Such a long time has passed since the paymaster last called their names that the sight of so much money, two grand and more, being changed into easily portable and payable-at-sight-and-no-questions-asked bills had the same effect on them as that fateful apple had on Eve: "fair to the eyes and fine to behold". And just think of all the good things they could buy with so much money, and the high old times they could have. Friends of Wong were these three members of the militia, next door neighbours in their native town of Wenchow. Easily and familiarly they chatted, smoking their cigarettes and swapping news of the old home town as they casually leaned on the counter while Wong carefully counted and scrutinized each bill, then wrapped them in his little packet of clothes, ready for an early start in the morning.

You Will Enjo

CHINESE

By REV.

Catholic Wills
For Mission Needs

In China, our priests need funds for new chapels, for new schools, for new homes, and for payment of salaries to catechists. In Canada, our Seminary needs support for the training of young apostles and for the maintenance of their home. Donations to our Burse Fund and our Building Fund are our greatest present needs. Think of our Mission work when making, or changing, your last will. Here's how you can do it; insert this clause in your will:

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO, THE SUM OF....."

A splendid view of Lishui, Mission centre of the Prefecture of Chuchow. The Church, and doubt, familiar by now to Fathers Doyle, McGettigan and Strang, and the two Gre umour of These

GNETTES
VENINI

BAMBOO—QUESTIONS—
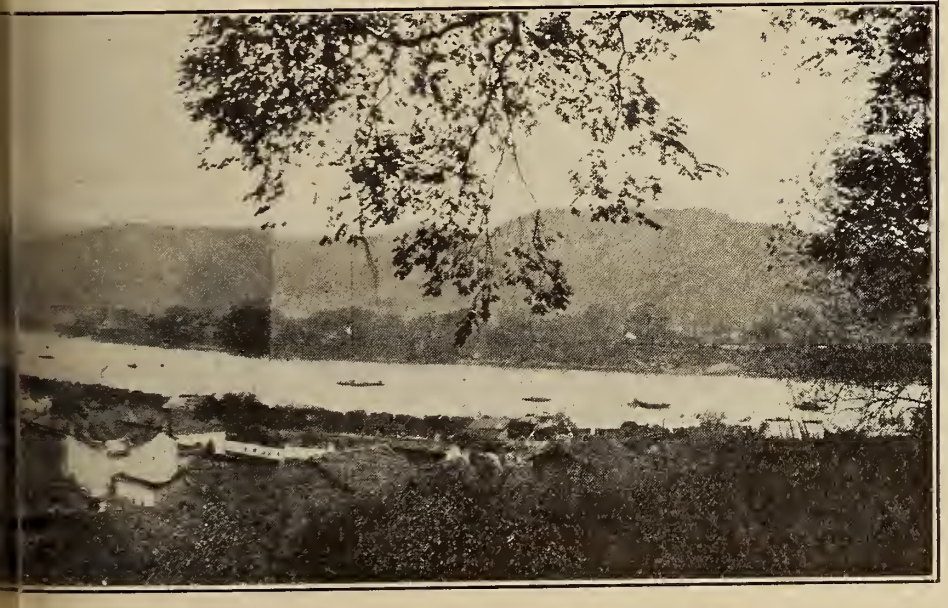
ITINERANT TRADESMEN

CAME next morning. Wong started out to buy his oil, his precious packet well hidden in the bundle tied to his back. And the cook of the local barracks found that he had prepared too much rice that day. Three places were unaccountably vacant at the noonday mess. And just about that time it happened. Wong and his three companions (they had so unexpectedly met on the road that morning —got orders, the soldiers said, to proceed at dawn to Patou) came to the foot of a stiffish hill.

"Brother Wong," says one of the soldiers, "let's tarry here a while and rest our weary legs before tackling this long climb."



"Oh, no," replied Wong, "I think it would be better to keep right on going."

"That's where we disagree," joined in a second soldier; "you may be going on, but your little bundle is not."

Now Wong was by no means dull of understanding. He was well versed in the ways of the world, and grasped the soldier's meaning just as well as if it had been written out for him. He lets out a shout for help—a shout that did not even bring him an echo in that wooded spot—and tries to make a quick getaway. The soldiers don't like it. Wong is now fighting for his money and for his life. If he has to give them up he is not going to do so without a struggle, and he fights gamely as the three ruffians tackle him. But three to one are heavy odds, and when they draw their knives on him poor Wong goes down to rise no more. The precious bundle is quickly slashed by eager and nervous hands from the limp and bloody form that was Wong, the corpse is cast into the ditch by the roadside, and the braves are off with their booty.

I had heard about the incident some distance further up the road. One of the foremen on the motor-road told me about it. "It was just too bad, that's all," and I continued on my way. Some time later I came to the foot of a hill, a beautiful secluded spot. A tiny brooklet rippled its way, singing, to the creek. Stately, century-old camphor trees towered their height and grandeur among the more humble arboreal brethren that carpeted their feet. Birds twittered in the branches of the trees. Cool and shady, the spot offered a respite from the sultry heat of the June sun. In the sky overhead, thunderheads gathered, promissors of a soon-to-arrive storm. And there in the midst of all this beauty and peace, one jarring note, the marring work of the hands of God's noblest creatures on this earth. The blood-stained corpse of a man, a man killed by his fellowmen for the sake of a few dollars. "Oh, Cain, what hast thou done?"

DOWN the road a few miles, taking shelter in a wayside inn from the storm that had burst in all its fury, determined to blot from the face of the earth that ugly thing lying back there in the ditch, I met a doctor coming out from the city to give first aid to Wong. "I fear you are too late," I remarked to him, "the poor man is beyond all earthly help." "Oh, well," he said, "I shall go on up, anyway, when the rain eases a bit, and straighten out the remains." A few more miles and I ran into a detachment of soldiers going out to hunt down their erstwhile comrades-iney Sisters, are the outstanding buildings. The city, river, and surrounding mountains, are no is this year's mission band. They reached Shanghai on Mission Sunday, October 21st.

HELP THE MISSIONS

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.
2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.
3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year—a life subscription costs ten dollars.
4. By making a Catholic Will—our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

arms. Two of the murderers were caught a few days later and despatched without further ado. The third man escaped. So that is the end of poor Wong—and two of his slayers.

During September all the priests in the Prefecture of Chu-chow gathered at Lishui for their annual Retreat. The picture above was taken at the close of last year's Retreat, and (at left) Fathers Beal and Venini are saying "so long" to the Retreat Master, Father McGoldrick, of the Irish Missions from Shanghai. Father John MacDonald is the priest at the right.

"PIGS IS PIGS"

SWEET POTATOES, wild pigs, a home-made bomb, and Mr. Yao's little piggies have lost their mama. The sweet potatoes belonged to Mr. Yao, and he did not plant them for the upkeep of the wild pigs that roamed the mountains surrounding his habitat. A bamboo fence was no deterrent for the rapacious appetite of any respectable wild pig. A few good prods with his snout and an opening was soon made in the fence, and there goes another hill of Mr. Yao's sweet potatoes. But Mr. Yao, he was not to be outdone. He would fix Mr. Pig—bomb him, by Geoffrey, blast him to bits! It had been done before. So Yao rigs up a bomb, conceals it in an especially large and luscious potato, and places the contraption where Mr. Pig cannot help gobbling it up. But alas and alack! A day or so previously Mr. Yao's big black sow had given birth to a litter of extra lusty squealers. "Milk, mama, milk. Lots of it, and more of it," was their continual squeal. "Very well," says Mama Sow, "we'll just jog along this very night and see how the master's potatoes are this year; I just saw an ad. in the latest magazine telling the world that piglets should be raised only on potato-produced milk. It is just the thing to keep their squealers in order!" "BOOM!" Mr. Yao started in his sleep. "Voila," he cries, "one wild pig less to raid my sweet potato field, and wild pig pork is not such bad eating at that!" The first streak of dawn saw Mr. Yao hurrying to his potato patch. Oh my, what a headache! There before him lay his own headless sow. And down there in the pig pen ten squealing squealers squealing for their mama and their milk.

ONE PROD TOO MANY

AS FOR THIS ONE, you can believe it or not! Here in our mountains the home fires are fed with brushwood cut from off the mountain sides. The brush is cut into even lengths, bound with roots or vines into bundles of varying weights, according to the age or strength of the cutter, and then trundled off home. But in the midst of all this brush sometimes there is a snake or two, and a snake, it seems, resents being hacked at with a woodcutter's knife. On this particular day a certain woodcutter finds a snake hanging to his hand. No ordinary harmless grass snake, mind you—the kind that used to bring joy to girls on their school picnics in the woods—but a natsy venemous fellow. Needless to say, that was the last finger this snake ever snared onto. The woodcutter and his knife saw to that. But what about the bitten digit? Now this woodcutter was not quite so fortunate as St. Paul, who, when he found himself in a similar predicament, after having been cast on the shores of Malta, simply shook the reptile into the bonfire. But our Chinese knife-wielder was not lacking in sang-froid so he simply takes his knife and—click! just like that, he lops off the stricken member. Curiosity, however, killed poor pussy, and it also killed the woodcutter.

A few days afterwards, his finger stump being sufficiently healed to permit him to resume his woodcutting, the idea came into his head to go and see if his dismembered finger was still hanging about. And, sure enough, there it was, just where it fell, but how swollen it was. "A good thing," thinks he, "that I had the presence of mind to act as quickly as I did. The poison did not have time to circulate in my blood." With that he starts prodding the swollen finger with a stick. Of course the finger was his own, so, in strict justice, he could prod it as much as he desired. But he took one prod too many. The thing bursted and scattered its vile contents over his person. A day or two later there was a funeral in his family, and he did not take an active part in it.

Now, as I said before, you can believe this or not. In fact, you have several options. My guess is that the woodcutter was not just quick enough in lopping off that finger; that is, if the blood travels through our complete system in some few seconds, as they say it does.

ITINERANT TRADESMEN

"I DON'T GIVE a tinker's dam." In these modern times, in a great part of the world at least, that expression will have lost its original meaning. It is quite probable that both the tinker and his dam are as extinct as the dodo. Not so here in China. Here the ambulating tinker is very much to the fore and very much in demand. For a few coppers he will tinker with anything you have, from your umbrella to your watch. He will even mend your shoes for you. And the most modern tinkers include rubber cement in their kit so that they may stick a patch on your rubbers when they spring a leak. He is to be found in the most inaccessible valleys and on the highest mountain tops, ever on the move in quest of something to tinker with. And he is only one of a veritable army of peregrinating artisans that continually scour the countryside in search of a living which, in American standards, would barely be considered an existence. Smiths, merchants, professional men and bandits, you run into them at the most unexpected times and places. If Mahomet won't go to the mountain the mountain must, perforce, go to Mahomet. The same principle holds good for the itinerant Chinese tradesmen. Their tools, or their stock in trade, as the case may be, are packed into baskets or boxes; these latter are slung on to their carrying poles, and they are off on a circuit that will keep them away from home perhaps until next New Year's comes round.

THE BLACKSMITH

SO WE HAVE the blacksmiths. They tote along with them their bellows and tools and are prepared to repair all and sundry pots and pans. Anything in the iron line. For payment they will receive cash or produce—rice, eggs—all is grist that comes to their mill. Closely allied to the Tubal Cains are the tinsmiths. The variety of articles that these really capable workmen can manufacture from old kerosene tins is truly remarkable. One is embarrassed by the choice offered. Lamps, ladles, spoons, dustpans, eaves-troughs, the list could be continued indefinitely.

This was meant to be a picture of Father Jim McGillivray setting out on the ferry for a visit to Pi-Wu-Ka, but the man with the hoe figured Father Jim's friends would recognize him by his hat—and that's all we see of him here.

TRAVELLING STORES

THE "DO-LITTLE BUY-SELL MEN" are very numerous. "Do-little buy-sell men", of course, means to be in business in a small way. These folks are mostly Wenchowese. Really travelling general stores. Flashlights, rubbers, needles, thread, ready-made clothes, boots, buttons, and brushes, they have 'em all, and more besides, and a powerful shrewd bargainer you must be or a long, long price you will pay for their wares.

THE CANDY MAN

THE CANDY MAN is most popular, especially with the younger generation, and some that are not so young. His sweets are mostly a confection of rice, flour, and sugar; little flat loaves of it wrapped up in bamboo leaves. With his little hammer the candy man breaks off the desired amount and is quite probably paid with old rags. These rags he will take back to the city with him, sell them to the housewives of the metropolis, and they will (the rags) eventually find themselves incorporated in shoe soles for the members of the household. Or, if he has received sufficient cash, the candy man may buy a cow hide or two which will also find its way to the city. On this city visit the candy man's baskets will be replenished from the proceeds of his barterings, and then he is ready to repeat his rounds.

THE CAKE SELLER

RUNNING a close second in popularity to the candy man is the seller of cakes. He is more usually a semi-local man, i.e., he does not come from the big city, but has his shop in one of the nearby towns. From there he periodically makes his turns about the surrounding countryside with his goodies. And quite good they are, too; I can guarantee that. The baker, he may not have a modern oven. He certainly does not know what "Cellophane" means, and YOUR hands are decidedly not the first to touch his cakes, but he has some fine toothbits, nevertheless and notwithstanding. He uses foreign flour to create his delicacies, and as an example of how the Chinese have cut down their "overhead" (not from choice but from the sheer pressure of circumstances) the flour he uses may be bought for less here than on the concessions at Shanghai, some several hundreds of miles distant. And the deliberateness with which the Chinese urchin lingers out his cookie or candy is further proof of a frugality rendered almost a second nature by centuries of striving for the bare necessities of life. Once upon a time (I can remember it myself) an all-day sucker—dignified now, I believe, with the title of lollypop—was more or less true to its name. A Chinese gamin would, I am sure, make his lollypop hang out for a pair of days, at least.

BAMBOO

THEN WE HAVE the bamboo workers. The backbone of the nation. A sine qua non. The Chinese just cannot understand how we poor barbarians get along at all at all when they are told there is no bamboo in our country. They think we are trying to bamboozle them. But their wonder may be readily excused when one considers the multiplicity of useful, if not absolutely necessary, articles that are manufactured from bamboo. It is even eaten. Eaten in the form of sprouts, and in many forms that are well past the sprout season. It is quite cheap here in the mountains, its natural habitat, and helps the poor people stretch their meagre supply of rice over the year. Huge quantities of sprouts, tons of them, are gathered in the Spring, steamed, dried, and stored away. Quite a considerable trade is also carried on in the dried bamboo which is shipped to Wenchow, Shanghai, and other points east, west, and north. And what a schoolboy's paradise the bamboo trees conjure up. Imagine a whole mountain side, a whole forest, of fishing poles! But oh, the irony of fate. There are no fish! At least no fish of a magnitude calling for Three of Monsignor Fraser's schoolboys from Kinhwa whom he sent to Hangchow in August to begin their studies for the Priesthood.

(Continued on page 158)

All in a Day's Work

Specially written for "China" by the Sisters of Charity, Chusan Island, Chekiang.

TATCHEE is a big village about ten miles to the north of Sinkomen, the other side of our Island. There are a good many Christians there and a nice little chapel of St. Agnes, looked after by a zealous catechist. Rev. Luke Yao is the pastor of Sinkomen, and Tatchee belongs to his district.

Since the Sisters received permission to pass the night from time to time in the Pilgrimage House at Sinkomen they are able to visit the villages on that side of the Island. The first of these expeditions was to Djao-ka-oh, the home of the Christian brigand, Li Yungsung, whose story was published a few months ago in "CHINA". He was captured last year, and through the efforts of the Sisters during their visits to his prison, he was brought to repentance and made his peace with God before the execution of his death sentence. His family, Li, was the principal Christian family in the village of Djao-ka-oh; their house was honoured in possessing the little chapel, but through the shame and disgrace occasioned by their brigand member, they were losing their fervour and gradually falling away from the Church. Last year the Sisters revisited the village and there was a big reunion of the Christians. All the sick of the village, pagans included, were cared for by the Sisters, and so the Christians regained their "face".

Hearing of this visit, the Christians of Tatchee begged with insistence that the next expedition to that side of the Island should be in their neighbourhood. The Tatchee Christians are not poor; several of our Holy Childhood girls have been married to boys from Tatchee, consequently there was some excitement when it was announced that the Sisters were going to make their first visit.

The day of the visit was settled, but as is often the case the devil did not like this affair at all, and the usual obstacles and difficulties began to crop up. On the morning arranged we were at the port before six a.m. to catch the little steamer which would take us to Sinkomen, from where we would be taken in sedan chairs the ten miles to Tatchee. Alas, no boats could leave port owing to a heavy fog, so after waiting for three hours we had to return home. The fog lasted for three days, and during that time came agitated inquiries from Tatchee. Three days gone by, and no Sisters yet. On the other side of the Island the weather was fine.

We tried again the following week, arriving at the port very early one morning. There were no boats for Sinkomen to be seen at all. The two regular ones had been confiscated by soldiers during the night for some military purpose. We were in a proper fix, for the day before a deputation had come to us from the Tatchee Christians urging that we must go, since so great preparations had been made for our reception. That was bad news for us; we would much prefer to have gone unannounced and avoided the reception; in that way we would have more time to visit the people and perhaps to make more baptisms of dying infants. However, one must always consider in China the great important question of "face". The Tatchee Christians were respected citizens, and to receive honoured visitors with full Chinese ceremonial was essential to maintain their "face".

Having waited two hours at the port, during which time many prayers were offered for a successful mission, one of the missing steamers arrived, and we were off at last on our first trip to Tatchee.

At Sinkomen, four big sedan chairs were in readiness, borne by eight stalwart men who had been signally honoured in their selection to carry the Sisters on this occasion. Away we went at a good pace, and soon arrived at the foot of Mountain No. 1. Mountains 2 and 3 were to be encountered before we could reach Tatchee. In a sedan chair the uphill climb is made slowly; to be inside the chair as it is swung from side to side is not an altogether pleasant experience. We shouted our wishes to be allowed to get out and walk, but these chair-carriers were not being robbed of their "face" by allowing such honoured visitors to walk over the mountains. At the top, the poor fellows were glad to rest and mop their streaming faces. We seized the first opportunity to get out of the chairs, and were on our way down the mountainside before the chair-carriers knew about it. Our protests against enduring the second climb inside the swinging chairs were granted all right. We feared we would get sick. But as we moved through a beautiful valley we were glad to be carried again. When we came in sight of the third mountain we discerned many people on top. Some came running down towards us, and then the fireworks began. This time there was no appeal from it. "Face" demanded that we submit to be carried up this third mountainside. At the top we were greeted by a company of twenty soldiers, who escorted us, ten in front and ten behind. We were urged to make all possible speed as it was now one p.m., and nobody had yet dined as all were awaiting the arrival of the Sisters.

Stretching to the sea was a beautiful valley; all around were the corn and bean stalks almost five feet in height. But my thoughts were not of the beauty of the scene; I was thinking of the other brigand chief, Tze Pao-Ding, who was also captured and executed last year. He also was a man from Tatchee, and he had been brought back there to be shot publicly. Two or three weeks before his death the Sisters had visited him in his cell and had instructed and baptised three of his robber-companions. Tze Pao-Ding had made this same trip to Tatchee in a sedan chair because of his heavy chains. He had passed over the same mountains, the same valleys as we now were traversing. What were his thoughts as he drew near to his birthplace in this beautiful bit of country only to meet his death. I felt sure that as he sat all alone in his chair he had thought of the Mercy of the One True God Whose belief we had taught him. Surely, also, he repeated the prayers he had learned from us, for in the prison he had assured us that they would be his very last words.

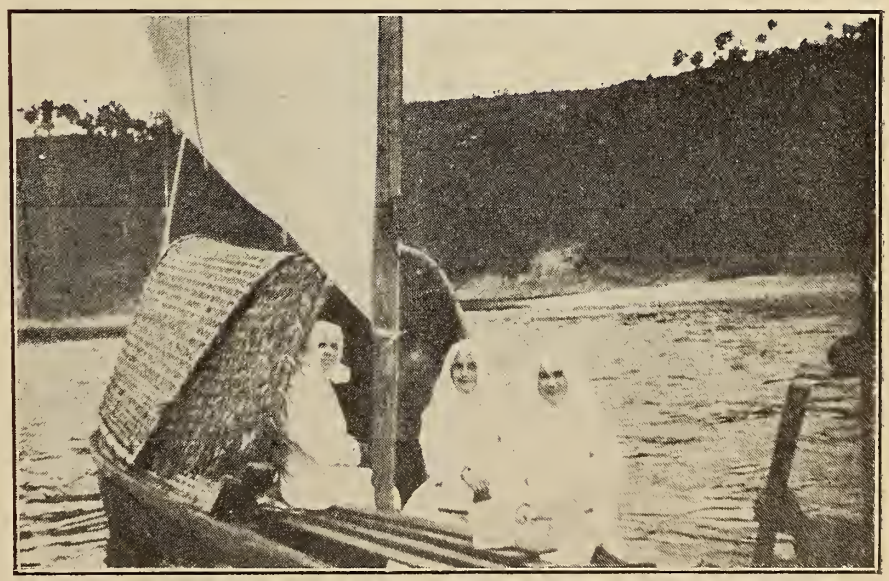
As we made our way rapidly towards Tatchee crowds surrounded us, coming out of the smaller villages nearby. Pagans and Christians alike were taking a part in the triumphant procession. We recognized some of the latter, among them the young girls who were shouting with joy at sight of the Sisters again. Fireworks went off in a perfect blaze as we entered the Mission building and stopped at the chapel door. The big entrance porch was decorated with arches of flowers, flags, etc. The soldiers lined up outside the chapel door while we entered for a few minutes prayer. We were then conducted to the biggest room in the catechist's house. To our horror, the crowds poured in after us and already were explaining their maladies and asking for remedies. Finally, the soldiers were called on to eject the people and leave us in peace to enjoy our long-delayed meal. The crowd was disappointed, and kept shouting to the soldiers that they wanted to see us eat, because we did so in a different fashion than they and the sight would be most interesting.



The heat was intense and the dinner was a penance. A first-class Chinese ceremonial dinner. Thirty dishes followed one by one, beginning with fruit, wine and sweet things. Just the opposite to European style. To be polite we had to taste each of the dishes, but not till the end were we given a bowl of rice. It was tantalizing, for we were really very hungry. I begged Sr. Cecile to get out a loaf of bread from our own provision basket, but she sternly forbade it. We, too, had to be careful not to lose our "face", especially when these good people had gone to so much trouble to entertain us so royally in their own fashion. Sister Elizabeth and I were exchanging mutually sad looks. We were both thinking of the time being used up in this fashion when it could be used to such advantage visiting the people. Moreover, there was the prospect of that return journey to Sinkomen before dark.

When the end at last did come, we promptly seized a medicine basket and made our way out with a woman companion. Two Sisters stayed in the courtyard and cared for the people who were kept in order by the soldiers. The rest of us hurried down the street, crowds following on all sides. We had to "park" in a court where we were instantly surrounded, and almost torn to pieces by the eagerness of our enthusiastic friends. Happily we had on our winter habits. I fear our light summer ones would have been completely spoiled as we were twitched from side to side. One woman asked for remedies for three different ailments, and when I suggested she move away to make room for others she protest: "Not at all. I want four other kinds of remedies for other members of my family."

All of a sudden I became desperate. I closed my basket, jumped on a stool and clapped my hands vigorously. All turned to listen. "Have I not a very good heart for the people of Tatchee to come so far to cure their sicknesses?" "Oh yes, indeed, yes," they all called out. "Do I not show you great politeness also? And why do you not show me some of your celebrated Chinese politeness? I have never heard that the people of Tatchee were not polite, yet to-day they push us from side to side." "Ah," they said, "the Sister is right!" "Now," I said, "I see many old women and mothers with sick babies, who cannot get near us for remedies; have a good heart for them, and bring them in close."

They understood, and at once made way. Several dying infants were brought up to us and at once the harvest of baptisms began. We distributed some "bibs" and in less than fifteen minutes came mothers running from all sides with tiny bundles in their arms. Many of these little infants were ready for the grace of baptism. Some of them were mere skin and bone; some were deathly sick and covered with all kinds of sores; others were just recovering from a bad attack of measles with evident pneumonia complications. What chance had these sick children to recover? Very little care is lavished on them; they have to take their chance with the rest as nursing the sick is not a Chinese virtue, especially in the more primitive parts of the country.

For several hours we worked hard distributing our remedies and doing what we could to help these poor sick people. Then we were on our way home again with this "goodbye" ringing in our ears: "Momo, mey mey chi ah, kwa-kwa lai, ah—go away, slowly, Sisters; come again quickly." All told, we had made more than 50 Baptisms in Tatchee. It might have been a richer harvest of souls had not the formal reception wasted so much time. But on the next occasion we shall go unannounced.

Sisters M. Genevieve, M. Daniel and St. Angela, of the Grey Nuns, returning to their dispensary at Lishui after a sick call "up the river".

CHINESE VIGNETTES

(Continued from page 155)

a good strong bamboo pole. Ten to one you cannot guess what is the favorite fishing pole here. Give up? A dried sunflower stalk! (Thank you for the ten spot.)

If, for some magic reason, bamboo should suddenly disappear from off the face of this delightful countryside, the folks hereabouts would surely be hard put to carry on. Rice grinders and other articles with which to prepare the rice for the pot; chopsticks with which to eat the rice; fans to cool the fevered brow when in the summertime the mercury tries to establish new high altitude records; chairs to sit on, and beds to lie on; combs to comb with, and fiddles to fiddle with—these, and a million and one other things, flow in an unending stream from the industrious hands of the bamboo workers. They certainly know their bamboo. They will make you an umbrella to keep the rain off you when it rains, an awning to keep the sun off you when it shines. Coops to keep the chickens in, and fences to keep the pigs out. The list could be continued almost ad infinitum, a long, long list, almost as long as the snake-like rafts of bamboo that go floating down the river to Wenchow.

* * * *

AND SO ON with the other trades. Painters, masons, carpenters. Even barbers. Ever on the move, ever on the alert to hear of any new construction work going on. Of labor unions they know not, their wages and working conditions being controlled solely by the laws of supply and demand. The usual manner of hiring their services is to have them do day work, eating the employer's food. The depression in making itself felt here at present with the result that workers are to be had, in certain lines, for twenty native cents per diem. The normal price would be about thirty-odd cents, boarded by the employer. It may thus be readily assumed that no relatives of Croesus are to be found amongst the Chinese workmen, though the god of riches is one of their favourite deities.

* * * *

HOW LONG have you been a Christian? Voila une question that is not often asked, I'll wager. The first time it was shot point-blank at me it left me rather flabbergasted for the moment. "Why, my people have always been Christians." Such was the reply that came first, I might almost say naturally, to my mind. But on the second thought, just in time to arrest myself from making a faux pas, I saw that, in truth, I could not so answer. My people were not always Christians. There was once a day when my ancestors were pagans, every bit as much pagans as were, a few years back, my interlocutors. Here in China it is something to be able to say one's family has been Christians for four or five generations. In this particular district the Christians are still in their infancy. They have not yet put off their swaddling clothes. It takes more than the reception of Baptism to make a Christian out of a pagan. Our Christians here have "put off the old man," in the language of St. Paul, but he still hangs around in the offing, and he manages to climb right back on again. Quite often. Quite too often. But that's the same old story the whole world over. And there was once a time when my forerunners were also toddlers, babes, in the Faith. How long have you been a Christian? Why should we be ASKED, and not ASKING, this question? Quien sabe? Only the inscrutable mind of Divine Providence.

* * * *

HOW ARE your nerves? Here is a fool-proof test for them. Come into our chapel, or, for that matter, into any chapel in the eighteen provinces and adjacent territories comprising this Flowery Republic. Kneel or sit as you wish. Begin your prayers. In a varying length of time a bevy of rustic gawks will come shuffling into the chapel. Slip-slop, slip-slop, they sidle to you in their heel-less slippers. They form silently a circle round and about you. Stare at you? Drill a hole in you with their eyes? Pshaw, man, they riddle you, turn you into a sieve. And each and severally of them afflicted with his own special brand of halitosis, B.O., and Hong-kong foot. My endurance record to date is seven minutes and forty-seven seconds. One missionary held out for ten minutes but his claim to the championship is seriously disputed. 'Tis claimed that he was snoozing when the count began and only woke several minutes later. He was disturbed by one of the peering paysans taking his breviary from his hands.

* * * *

STEP BY STEP we pounded our way along the cobble path. A stop at a wayside inn for a cup of tea and a few cakes. An acquaintance struck up with some equally weary and footsore traveller. Indian file, we start out once more, the catechist taking advantage of the occasion to explain a bit of doctrine to our fellow pedestrain. He was talking about the creation of Adam and Eve. "And," says he, "they were so innocent then, they did not have to wear clothes." "Oh, yes, I read about that," came the disconcerting remark, "the people just used the skins of animals back in those days, didn't they?"

YOU CAN USE THIS COUPON IN RENEWING YOUR SUBSCRIPTION

"CHINA"
St. F. X. Seminary
Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.

Dear Fathers:—

Enclosed find $ .....as a subscription to "China" for ..... . years.

Name ..... Name .....

Address ..... Address .....

....

(IS YOUR "CHINA" PROPERLY ADDRESSED? IF NOT, PLEASE LET US KNOW).

A LETTER—And a Not-too-Serious Comment

By
THE EDITOR
(who wants you to read this page)

★————★

WE got a letter a few days days ago. The fact is not startling; we get letters twice a day six days in the week. And right here is as good a place as any to say that we could very easily handle an increased number of letters, for, strange as it may sound, we live on letters. No, of course not, we don't eat our letters, but the payment for what we do eat (and our Bursar is particular that we never have cause for complaint) depends on what our letters bring to us in the way of good currency of the realm or its equivalent. But we started out to tell you of a letter we received lately. It came from a good Sister "down East", a frequent correspondent. Well, this letter went on to tell us of Sister's efforts on behalf of our Missions, and to offer us some congratulations on the conduct of our work. (So far, so good—and very good.) We think it necessary to state, at this point, that one of Sister's ways of helping us (and an excellent way at that in which we wish she had many imitators) is to secure subscriptions to "CHINA". In fact, the letter we're trying to tell you about contained a new subscription from one of Sister's friends. It did not boost our circulation, however, for if we remember correctly the same mail brought more than one notice of cancellation. (Note to subscribers: we could do with fewer letters of this latter type.)

By this time some of our readers are doubtless becoming a bit impatient, wondering what we have to say about the letter we started out to discuss. Evidently we are having a hard time trying to get to the point. Well, we are. You would, too, if your ears got as red as ours when we reached the part we are now singling out from that letter. Perhaps it's wholesome for us to have our ears get red once in a while (and, in case you don't know, by that we mean we suffer embarrassment). Anyway, folks, here's the sad news! But (pardon us, the plot thickens!) we can't yet bring ourselves to tell you what Sister's letter said until we remind you that our telling of it has a moral. Quotation from Sister's letter:

"My hands fell by my side not long ago when I learned that two of my subscribers from ———— had given up 'China', saying they found only the jokes interesting."

Now it took us a long time to reach the point, and before you start discussing its "news value", let me continue with Sister's letter and give you her reaction to the ex-subscribers' remark. The letter goes on: "I could not hide my indignation and could not help thinking how trivial are some people's interests. And that in ———— with a Catholic College and Convent Schools. No wonder we have so many spineless Catholics all over the world, Catholic countries not excepted. It was a sad eye-opener for me re the zeal some Catholics have for the cause dearest to the Heart of Christ, the salvation of souls for whom He shed His Precious Blood, when jokes interest them more than do the accounts of the struggles of our heroic missionaries to spread the Faith in pagan lands. Happily, all are not so!" Yes, happily!

We confess ourselves "stuck" —meaning that we can't decide whether we ought to berate the ex-subscribers for so callously passing up the opportunity of continuing to enjoy a good joke page by so ruthlessly cancelling their subscription; or whether we ought to feel pleased at the compliment paid to our regular "Nonsense" feature, withal at the expense of our other pages; or yet again whether this is not a good chance to have a little chat with all our readers, the Sister's letter serving as an introduction.

A chat it shall be, then, a little one, and it will be about the work which most interests any editor, his own publication. And in case there are more readers like our ex-subscribers from ————, the editor prints his little chat on the page where the universally liked "Nonsense" usually appears so that ALL will read it. Due to the publication of a pictorial issue last month there is more than the usual amount of copy on hand which we do not want to defer any longer. You'll find plenty of interesting reading matter in the preceding pages; there's the account of the Departure Ceremony and the journey of our new missionaries up to the time of their leaving Victoria. Father Serra writes pleadingly of his need for accommodation for his many new Christians in Tsingtien parish. Father Gignac tells of his train trip from Shanghai to the Ancient Capital of China. There's the stirring Sermon preached by Father Doyle when our missionaries were given their official "Godspeed" at the end of September. Father Venini judiciously mixes the serious and the humourous in his long write-up under the title of "Chinese Vignettes", and the Sisters of Charity at Chusan Island entertain with their method of saving souls through their medical ministrations. And lastly, we hope the page that follows this one you're reading now will excite your interest sufficiently to have you write us a letter—and make an enclosure. And we won't mind if, accompanying your money order or cheque, you make any remarks (complimentary or otherwise) about our "Nonsense" page.

But, to tell you the truth, this whole page is nothing but a scheme to draw to your attention the fact that our work cannot be supported, and our missions cannot be developed by people who get a great kick out of our joke page, and then are not interested enough in what our missionaries are doing to even read the letters we print on their behalf or even (so little it is!) keep their subscription to "China" up to date. And the editor hopes that your ears, gentle reader, won't need to get red when you glance at the date on your own "China" address label. There's a convenient renewal form printed just opposite. Perhaps it's your turn to make use of it. And with that we must end our little chat. The printer tells me there's no room for more, so it's up to you to have your say. We'll be looking out for your letter. Thank you.

A SUGGESTION for Your Charity-Giving during NOVEMBER

Why not give a donation to the HOLY SOULS BURSE in memory of your dear deceased relatives and friends?

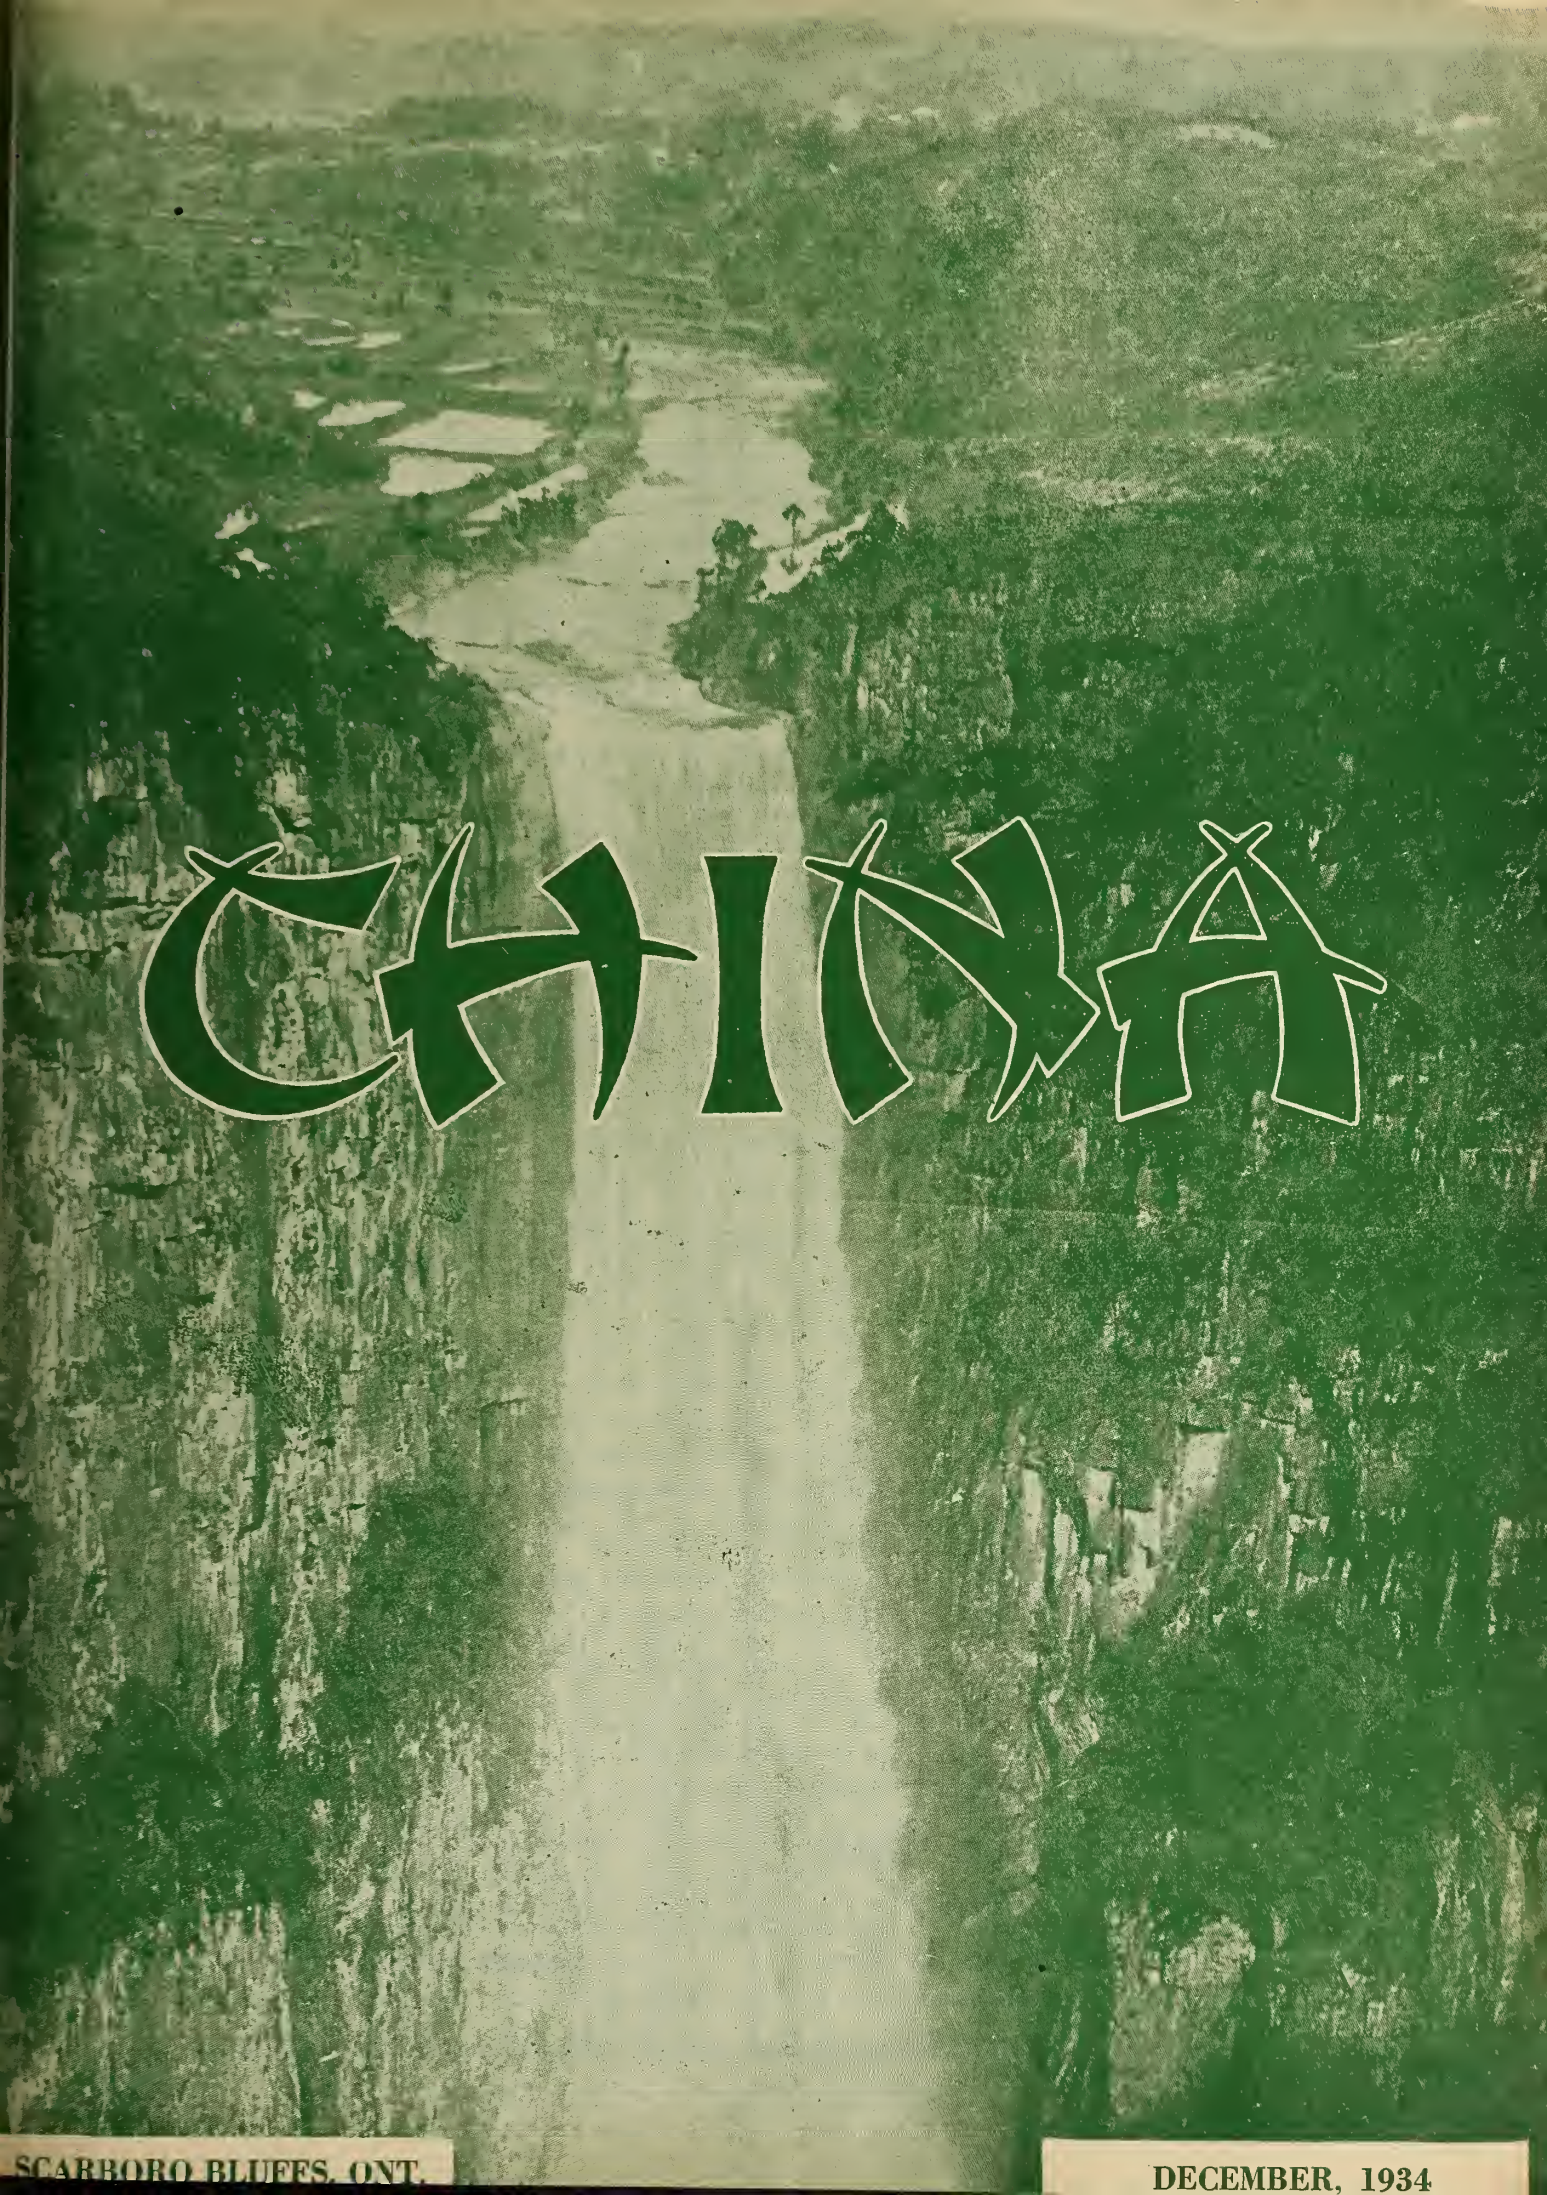
IF we had sufficient donations to our BURSE FUND our Seminary would become SELF-SUPPORTING

BURSES— What are they?

A BURSE is the sum of $5,000 given to the Seminary, at one time or in instalments, which, being securely invested, produces sufficient revenue to support a student. The capital is not touched, but remains intact. Year after year the revenue from a single Burse would be used to educate a student. When he is ordained and goes to China as a missionary, another student would be educated, and then another, and so on indefinitely.

Those blessed with an abundance of this world's goods could spend to no better advantage than by becoming the Founder of a Burse for China Mission Seminary.

A Burse is absolutely the most worthwhile monument to leave behind to your memory. What greater good can you do with your money than guarantee a succession of missionary priests perpetually?



Even small donations will be gratefully received to help complete any of our present incomplete Burses.

Help us by sending donations to our BURSES, either to the Seminary or in care of the "CATHOLIC RECORD", London, Ontario

Remember China in making or re-making your WILL

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

Very Rev. John E. McRae, President

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

DECEMBER, 1934

ATTENTION!

THIS, the December issue of "China", is the last one for the year 1934. Our mailing list unfortunately includes many names of subscribers who are not paid quite up to date. The only means we use to advise delinquent subscribers is the expiry date on their address label. Look at the date on your "China" now. If it does not read 1935, or later, we ask you to make use of the coupon printed on page 175 of this issue. When sending cheques or money orders please make them payable to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY

Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.

Where Savings Earn 3%

One dollar is sufficient to open a savings account with the Capital Trust. Regular deposits, however small, with interest at 3%, soon count up to appreciable sums. Deposit, or withdraw by cheque, through the mail or at our nearest office.

CAPITAL TRUST Corporation Limited

100 Adelaide St. West
TORONTO
OTTAWA · MONTREAL

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.

OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West
Toronto

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 26,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XV. DECEMBER, 1934 No. 11

THE MISSIONARY AND YOU

TO achieve enduring success for any worthwhile movement or undertaking it is essential that interest must be stirred up and maintained amongst the people who are concerned. It is an incontrovertible fact that the Foreign Missions of the Catholic Church constitute a worthwhile undertaking. It is also beyond dispute that if the work of the Foreign Missions is to succeed, and to continue to succeed, then Catholics the world over must manifest an active interest in that work, because all Catholics—there are no exceptions—are, or should be, concerned in the missionary endeavors of Christ's Church.

Since that is true of the missions of the Church in general it holds good also for the individual component units whose function it is to serve in a particular section of the vast Mission Field Afar. Such units are the various agencies whose activities centre in the preparation, sending forth, and maintenance of missionaries. Such a unit in the great world-wide apostolate is Saint Francis Xavier's China Mission Seminary. It is essential to the success of this institution that interest in its welfare should be created amongst the Catholic people of Canada and Newfoundland, for these are the people to whom it is meant to appeal in an especial manner. It is our conviction that no better means can be adopted to foster such interest than by making as intimate as possible the relations between the people at large and the missionaries who have this Seminary as their Alma Mater. That is why "China" presents, month after month, in picture and words the personnel of the Seminary and its graduates on active service in Chuchow, and tells one hundred thousand readers of their activities and their hopes for future successes as other Christs in search of the souls of men. We would not be telling you about our mission work and our missionaries if we did not feel that you wanted to know about them. Knowing about them ought necessarily to stir up your interest. And we fail to see how anybody can be interested in such work as ours, and such missionaries as ours, without translating that interest into action and desiring to share in their labors in some way or other. For there is an attraction in missionary activity that serves to bind closely together both those who are actually "Labourers in the Vineyard" and those who are watching and helping from "afar off".

Between you who are now reading these lines and the graduate missionaries and missionaries-in-training of China Mission Seminary there may not be any ties of family relationship; not one of the seventy-four members of China Mission Institute may have his home in your own parish, nor even in the Diocese to which you belong; yet, if they have not any of these claims on your attention you cannot deny the fact that they have with you a common membership in the Mystical Body of Christ; they are your duly accredited representatives in the fighting of battles for new conquests for your Faith, and as such "China" pleads on their behalf that you be not unmindful of the work in which they are engaged.

In making this plea to you, our readers, we have in mind the near approach of the Feast of Christmas, a time that is especially marked by a general widespread custom of remembrance and gift-giving among friends. The fireside of Catholic homes at Christmas time is made glad and peaceful beyond other seasons of the year. It is the special mark of the happy Christmas time that kindliness, goodwill and charity are all combined in the extra efforts which people make to give tangible expression to their esteem for one another. It is our wish that your brothers in Christ, your missionary representatives, take a place in spirit in your homes this Christmas season; that you be mindful of them and give a thought to their relationships with you.

WELCOME HOME!

As "China" goes to press, the Seminary is preparing to extend a glad welcome to Very Rev. John E. McRae, D.C.L., its President, on his return from an official Visitation of our Chuchow Missions. Returning to Canada with Dr. McRaé is Right Rev. W. C. McGrath, Prefect Apostolic of Chuchow. Monsignor McGrath has been ordered by his medical advisers in Shanghai to take an extended rest to recuperate from a serious illness which has kept him inactive since last June. More details will be published in our next issue.

"China" Wishes All Its Readers A Very Merry Christmas !

Religious Profession at Lishui

Described by
REV. J. D. McGILLIVRAY

ON THE feast of St. Teresa of the Child Jesus, the patroness of missionaries, a most impressive ceremony took place in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Lishui, Chekiang, China. Were it possible to admit of the slightest regret in Heaven, the Little Flower, who during her whole life had such a yearning for the foreign missions, would have looked down with a touch of envy on the two young sisters who were the center of this day's celebration. The ceremony that added to the honor of the Little Flower's feast was the final profession of two Grey Nuns of the Immaculate Conception—Sister St. Angela, formerly Miss Helen Lynch, daughter of John Lynch and the late Mrs. Lynch of Ottawa, and Sister Mary Genevieve, formerly Miss Jean Andercheck, daughter of Mrs. Andercheck and the late Henry Andercheck of Timmins, Ont., and a sister of Sister Mary Dolores of the General Hospital, Pembroke, Ont.

The Sisters' ten-day retreat ended Wednesday morning, October 3rd. Rev. Father Serra, acting for the Prefect of Chuchow district, wished to have the ceremony transferred from the Sisters' little chapel in their convent to the mission church across the street in the hope that the event would prove a source of edification for the Chinese.

As soon as the Christians had finished their morning prayers High Mass began. After the reading of the Gradual the Assisting Priest, vested in cope and preceded by the cross-bearer and two acolytes. repaired to the back of the Church where the two Sisters to be professed were waiting with their Superior. Being solemnly invited by the Assisting Priest, they entered the Church singing the gradual canticle "Laetatus sum" that was sung thousands of years ago by caravans of pious Jewish pilgrims "who, reaching the gates of Jerusalem, prepare to go up the holy hill in procession in order to present their gifts and offer up their prayers to God, in the holy place". "I rejoiced at the things that were said to me; we shall go into the house of the Lord." As the Sisters came to the middle of the church they knelt down to be invited once again—this time by the celebrant of the Mass, Father Serra. Three times the invitation went out to them, "Venite". Three times they rose from their knees singing their responses and approaching the altar. For the singing of the hymn "Veni Creator" the Sisters returned to the places prepared for them. Following the prayer a sermon was preached by Rev. Father J. P. Conway of Kashing who had conducted the Sisters' retreat.

"To express the greatness of the event that is soon to be enacted here," spoke the preacher, "is beyond the power of human speech. If a few just men would have saved Sodom and Gomorrha; if what seemed to be nothing more than a passing farewell from the thief on the cross was enough to canonize him; if a word of perfect contrition will wipe out a whole life time of sin; surely the joy in Heaven is difficult to describe when two young girls, rich in qualities that would command for them all the comforts and happiness that this world can offer, voluntarily leave home, friends, country—all that the human heart holds dear—to devote their lives to the needs of the sick, the poor, and the education of children in a foreign land." After dwelling on the greatness of the Religious Life and particularly that phase of it known as the Foreign Missions, the preacher emphasized the great example, the source of edification this action of those Sisters would be to all who will witness, or be informed of, the ceremony.

Immediately following the sermon the two Sisters came up again to the Altar. Now they must be warned of the importance of the step they are about to take, and the serious obligations they will be imposing on themselves. In the words of the ritual, "They must sacrifice everything without reserving the right to complain in the midst of the greatest humiliations and sufferings". It was then that those two Sisters gave us an example of sublime and heroic Faith.

We all know something of what a religious profession is like in our

(Continued on page 167)

SISTER ST. ANGELA

SISTER MARY GENEVIEVE

SAVING the HARVEST in SUNGYANG

By REV. J. L. BEAL

WHAT approached a national calamity occurred in China this past summer when the country was stricken with drought and the rice crop was seriously depleted. Since rice is the staple food of the Chinese it takes no stretch of the imagination to picture the harrowing results of a crop failure. The untold miseries and hardships then visited upon the people can in all truth be compared to the ravages occasioned in Ireland in the dreary years of the potato famine, 1845-47. The historic Irish Potato Famine had one good result: it sent hundreds of thousands of people out of their country to strengthen later on the Faith in other lands. In times of distress and famine here in China, there is also one consoling feature for the Catholic missionary; an opportunity is presented to show forth to the poor stricken pagans the all-embracing Charity of the Christian Religion, and, since action speaks louder than words, it often happens that fear and prejudice is overcome among otherwise hostile people when they see with their eyes that the missionary is doing his utmost to relieve distress among his Christian and pagan neighbours alike.

This section of Chekiang Province is noted for the excellent quality of its rice. A few weeks ago Father McNabb and myself strolled out to the country to see for ourselves how the crop was standing up under the hottest and driest weather experienced in China for sixty-one years. The ground was parched, wide crevices appeared extending to six or eight inches in depth, the tips of the stalks were burned, and it was evident that starvation faced the people unless rain would mercifully relieve the situation.

We decided that some special religious exercises should be held to beg Divine assistance in the averting of a calamity, and then we made a formal visit to the local Mandarin to inform him that in the Christian Church for three successive days there would be offered special prayers, etc., for the relief of the district from the drought. In the course of our conversation mention was made of the pagan ritual that the Taoists had for such an occasion. It did not take much argument to convince the Mandarin that the pagan rites availed little. He even went so far as to admit to us that he considered them nothing better than foolish antics. That he was sincere in his conviction was borne out in his treatment of a delegation of Taoist monks and priests on the following day. He refused to receive them when they appeared at the executive mansion with their proposals.

The pagan rite consists in nothing more or less than an exhibition of acrobatics by one of the priests. Two fairly large bamboo poles were fixed in the ground, and on the crossbar suspended between them the Taoist priest performed some gymnastics, the meanwhile uttering a series of unintelligible words which nobody appreciated. During this display the Mandarin was to have come out and adored Heaven and begged for rain. Had he refused absolutely to take part in such a rite there might have been serious results for himself, so he ordered a deputy to represent him. Immediately there were rumours that the Mandarin was no good and threats were made that he would be reported to the Provincial Magistrate. He was summoned a second time by a larger delegation of pagan monks, and this time he had to acquiesce to their demands. Amidst a wild shouting and general scenes of confusion the Taoist priests performed their rites.

In the meantime, we went ahead with our Triduum, and on the third day a remarkable incident occurred when the Catholic Mission property alone was watered by a shower of rain which lasted twenty minutes. The outlying places were denied this favour, and accusations were made against the Mandarin that he had failed in his official capacity. Following the Triduum we immediately began a Novena, and during the nine days it rained for hours almost every day. A public notice was posted on the Outer Gate of the city making mention of the efforts of the Christians, and I believe it had the effect of toning down the long established suspicions that many of the pagans entertained towards us. At the conclusion of the Novena there was a good supply of water in all the fields, sufficient at least to save the crops till cutting time. The Christians were especially faithful in attending the exercises of our Novena, and Communions were numerous. Many of the Christians would remain for three Masses each morning. I can say in all sincerity that Sungyang has seen a marvelous change in the past two years. We have gained the respect and sympathy of the people, and the future is bright with promise for the conversion of many pagans to our Holy Faith.

FATHER BEAL,
the new Pastor of Sungyang, examines some of the tobacco for which his district is noted.

FOUR CITIES IN ONE

Rev. Aaron Gignac continues his deseription of the former Capital City of China where he spent a vacation last August.

PEIPING, once called Peking, the Capital of the Ming and Manchu Dynasties, is made up of four complete and totally different cities. First, there is the Violet Reserved City, otherwise and more popularly known as the Forbidden City. This was reserved to the Emperor and his court. It was absolutely forbidden for any stranger to enter within. Since the establishment of the Chinese Republic in 1911 this city has been converted into a large museum.

The second is the Imperial City. It surrounds the Forbidden City. The third is called by Europeans the Tartar City; Chinese call it Nei Ch'eng or interior city. This in turn surrounds the first and second cities. Last comes the Chinese City. The natives call it Wai Ch'eng or outside city; sometimes it is designated as the South City.

The Forbidden City

Driving along the road from the railway station to the Pe'tang (the Cathedral and residence of the Bishop) we passed along a high red wall. Midway in this wall was an immense gateway looking into what reminded one of a triple tunnel. This, so the driver told us, was the entrance to the Forbidden City. It is situated in the very heart of Peiping. The day we visited the interior of this awe-inspiring place was light and sunny, so armed with my camera the guide and I set out. We found, however, on arriving at the immense entrance gate that one is not allowed to take a camera inside. The camera was left in care of the ticket seller and I was given a chip of wood as a "baggage" check. Viewed from the outside the Forbidden City extends about 3,300 feet from north to south, and about one thousand feet less from east to west. The city is surrounded by a wall twenty-two feet in height, and a moat one hundred feet wide surrounds the wall on the outside.

We entered the gigantic portals. Walking through this tunnel-like gate, the only sound we hear is the echo of our own footsteps. We were about to view the scene of ancient glory, the place where the man who styled himself the Son of Heaven had once his throne and his royal court. When finally we did get through the great gate we blinked as we emerged into the strong sunlight. We were inside the storied Forbidden City! What magnificence, what grandeur! It is almost impossible to begin to describe it all. We walked quickly from hall to hall and from building to building, and the more we saw the more our amazement increased. After a sightseeing trip of four hours we left the place and discovered that we had seen only one-third of the splendours of the city, for on any one day that is all that is open for inspection. However, we had included in our observations the Emperor's quarters, the halls of audience and of worship and of theatricals, and we had seen magnificent arrangements of bronze, jade, and pewter articles. The hall of clocks was most interesting. Whether or not, one Emperor had a special liking for clocks I know not, but I do know that he succeeded in gathering together a marvellous collection of timekeepers.

A view of the Temple of Heaven in Peiping. Father Gignac is the figure at left.

The next day we returned to visit the west section, which was formerly reserved for the empress, and was made up of her apartments and those of her servants, attendants, etc. An unusually interesting part, and of more modern occupancy, was the apartment of the boy-emperor, Henry Pu-Yi, whose establishment as emperor of Manchukuo by the Japanese is a matter of current history. Everything in Pu-Yi's room is undisturbed; things are now as he left them. Even his little bicycle is there.

The Imperial City

A wall about seven miles in circumference surrounds this section. The wall has fallen into disrepair, however. It is small when compared to other city walls in China, measuring only eighteen feet in height, and six feet thick. Four gates, named for the four points of the campass, open into the Tartar City. The largest wall that I've so far seen in China is the one surrounding the Tartar City. It is fifteen miles in circumference, measures forty-one feet in height, and is sixty feet thick at the base. It slants to a thickness of fifty feet at the top. The building of such walls certainly must have been no mean task, when one considers the amount of masonry concerned, and the time and labour that must have been expended on the construction. The continuity of these Tartar City walls is broken by nine immense gates; outside the walls on all sides, except the south, are gardens and farms, with here and there small clusters of houses. Inside each gate is a further semi-circular wall of masonry designed to offer resistance to invaders in case of war should they succeed in entering the main gates.

The entrance to the Winter Palace at Peiping. The White, or Peppermint Bottle Tower is clearly discernible in the background.

The Chinese City

Wai Ch'eng, the Chinese City, also has its wall, but it differs from the others inasmuch as it is made from tremendously heavy bricks of great size. It is roughly about one-third the size of the Tartar City wall. It is in this South City that is situated the famous Temple of Heaven. Wai Ch'eng was settled by the Chinese during the Manchu, the last of the Chinese Dynasties.

The visitor can now walk north from the Palace around a very beautiful park known curiously as the North Sea, where is situated the Emperor's Winter Palace. In this park there is the north end of a lake, hence the name. The lake is artificial, and the centre of the park has a hill formed from the soil and rocks excavated from the lake site. Crowning this hill is the white tower, or, as some Europeans call it, the peppermint bottle tower. Since young China has taken a hand in things, the lake I mentioned is the scene of boating and pleasure parties for young couples; formerly it was entirely reserved for the Emperor's enjoyment.

Other interesting sights in Peiping include the Llama Temple, the Temple of Confucius, the Hall of Classics, and also the modern Rockefeller Institute, the Grand Hotel of Peiping, and the Catholic University. The last three institutions are beautiful examples of architecture combining the best of both Eastern and Western features. Another important building is the National Library, built of reinforced concrete, but completely Chinese in design. In a later article I may have something to say of the churches of Peiping, especially the Pe'tang where I was so hospitably entertained during my month's vacation.

One of the Imposing Gates of China's Ancient Capital.

RELIGIOUS PROFESSION

(Continued from page 164)

convents in Canada. There the novices are surrounded by a beautiful religious atmosphere. The place, the people, the ceremony—the very best that the Catholic Church can provide. Family and friends are there with the professed. Here all that is missing. In the presence of a few priests, three Sisters, a small number of Christians, and in the heart of pagan China, Sisters St. Angela and M. Genevieve, solemnly made perpetual vows of poverty, chastity and obedience and consecrated themselves to Our Lord Jesus Christ in order to serve Him faithfully all the days of their lives.

The Mass continued. Following the "Ite missa est" the rings were blessed by the celebrant and presented to the Sister Superior, who placed them on the fingers of the newly-professed Sisters. After Mass all joined in singing a most sincere Te Deum.

The work of the Grey Nuns in the district of Chuchow is well known to readers of "China". Besides conducting a school for girls, and in their dispensary daily treating the sick and those with the most hideous sores, the Sisters are continually being asked out to the city and its environs to the hovels (unfit for human habitation) of those who are unable to come for treatment.

Occasionally articles appear in "China" written by our Sisters describing their work at Lishui. But many of their experiences must not appear in print. The standards of

(Continued on page 171)

A SPIRITUAL CONQUEROR

WITHIN the moated security of a castle in Basqueland, on the 7th April, 1506, was born the youngest of that generation of Xaviers. He grew strong. He was skilled well above the average in athletics, and he knew it. There was the mettle of a soldier in him, tempered, however, by a love for learning—not the love of the conventional bookworm, but a love that desired to shine.

Within the walls of Xavier he went to school. He learned quickly what was taught him. There was instilled into him a faith—he grew into it—a faith rugged and austere yet strong like the walls that stood around him.

In the world outside there was war. Francis' elder brothers had taken the Navarrese side against Spain. In one of the engagements of the war the town of Pampalona was attacked. The Navarrese hurled themselves on the little town, Francis' brothers Miguel and Juan amonst them—and if he had been old enough Francis would have been there, too. The Castillians were yielding, but at the last moment one, Ignatius, rallied them; they held out a little longer and probably would have won had not a cannon shot wounded their leader.

When Francis was eighteen he went to Paris, to the great school of the age. He entered into the ordinary life of the university. His studies succeeded well. He was not allured by the debauchery of the city; the scandalous lives of some of his fellow undergraduates and teachers repelled him. He ascribes his safety to a fear of destroying the lithesome and athletic body that was his. This explanation seems plausible enough, but we wonder how much his Basque faith and the grace of God had to do with it!

Francis had not been two years in Paris when there came within the circle of his friends a Swiss, a gentle, lovable and learned man. He and Francis shared rooms. Francis was not a saint at this time, but the potentially saintly material was not absent. The part that Favre played in making a saint of Francis can never be guessed at. But he did play a part, a part recognized by Francis and seemingly not a small one, for later Francis would surreptitiously insert the name of Favre in the litany of the saints.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER
The Heavenly Patron of all missionaries, who died within sight of China, the country of his dreams, on December 3, 1552.

No less wonderful is it that Francis dallied not with heresy. The renaissance was still in its first glow in the university city, and hand in hand with it ran the errors of the Reformation. Francis was amongst the intellectual elite. His ambition could easily have been fired by the intertwining of culture and heresy. There were even some interfering fellows who said as much and even went as far as to inform his brother on Xavier. Francis' apology of orthodoxy leaves no doubt about his feelings or his faith. "God knows," he says, "the mortification that I experience at being unable to recompense them according to their works".

It was at this time, when things were not well with Francis, that the captain of Pampalona came to live at his college. Ignatius saw the vanity and the nervous ambition of the young man. How far more he saw cannot be conjectured. He set himself to convert him. Ignatius tells us through Polanco that "Francis was the toughest clay he ever moulded". If we can believe the old histories, he spent morning, noon and night nagging at him. A nagged one always does something eventually in a paroxysm of rage. But to convert a man so that he lives a holy and heroic life would, we imagine, exhaust the energies of the most suasive nagger. Ignatius won over Xavier.

Francis was not the only disciple that Ignatius won. There were seven others—all men of ability and holiness, with Ignatius as their guide, who offered themselves to follow Christ. On the feast of the Assumption their contract was sealed on Montmartre. Plans were made for the future, but very few of them fructified.

After many vicissitudes, a headquarters for the group was made at Rome and Francis was made Ignatius' secretary. Their routine work had begun—they had become a stable body.

The new society was not two years in Rome before John III of Portugal began to make inquiries about it. John's possessions in the Orient were clamoring for missionaries. Here was new blood. Why not send some of it east? There would be less red tape to be disentangled in trying to extract a few members from a new order than from an old one. His Roman Ambassador, Mascarenhas, was instructed to bring back with him to Lisbon a couple of these new missionaries. Rodriguez and Bobadilla were chosen. Bobadilla was ill. The ambassador could not wait. Salmeron and Xavier were the only other two in Rome. Salmeron was for Ireland. It must be Xavier then. Would he go? The reply was never doubted. He had a day to prepare. Then Ignatius bade him goodbye: "Ite, omnia incendite et inflammate". Was this prophecy?

Eight months were to pass before their boat sailed. Rodriguez and Xavier toiled away in Portugal. In the court and out of it they left evidence of their work. John noticed it. He thought it rather presumptuous sending such a pair to evangelize the Indies while his own court could do with a little salutary edification. He decided to hold the two missionaries and he forced their hand by giving them a college. This made the situation delicate. A compromise was hinted. John accepted. Rodriguez stayed in Portugal and Xavier went to the Indies.

For eleven years he was to toil there. The hours of light did not end his work. The greatest work was done at night. Report after report tells us of somebody, a Goan, a Malabar, or his servants or companions finding Francis kneeling on the ground, his arms extended and his heart with God. With a little change of scenery his life would read like Christ's. All day long he preached —his every word and act was a sermon—whether he was among the sophisticated Goans, the simple Malabars or the distrustful Japanese. Yet never did the people think themselves preached at. Francis was too sincere for that. He just won the people, explain it how we may. And then, at night, just like Christ when He slipped away to the gullies in the hills around Tiberias or into the shades of the Garden of Olives, Francis would disappear in the woods and spend the night in prayer to prepare for the morrow.

Like Paul he journeyed unceasingly over land and sea, ever seeking new conquests. His constant cry is cryptic and pleading: "Da mihi animas".

He was harshly criticized, calumniated and maligned, but Xavier rose supremely superior to all. His work prospered, prospered even beyond what would have been his wildest dreams, but never enough to satiate a heart that took its motto from the "Kingdom of Christ".

It was hinted to him that he should stay in one mission, organize it and solidify his work. Yet he was not a free lance. He opened the ground, put men to work it and passed on. His work, too, was never slip-shod or too hastily done. Was it not Xavier that first brought faith's fire to Nagasaki? In Christian history has any soil run redder with martyrs' blood? Have three centuries of persecution deleted from this people's memory the name of Christ?

His journeys are a marvel of persistance. Through forest and storm-driven sea he made his way for God and for man. In eleven short years —in the prime of his life—he wore out that athletic body that was his pride. No sacrifice was too great for the cause.

Through all this dismal suffering there shines here and there a little deed of sympathy or a half suppressed wish to be back in Rome with his friend Ignatius. Little things like these will smother the word "fanatic" should it hesitate on our tongue.

There was disappointment, too, keen, heart-shattering disappointment. The mind and heart can rise superior to ordinary suffering, suffering in fact stimulates them, but disappointment, and especially disappointment in doing the work of God, requires a dauntless trust in Him Who never deserts His own.

In Japan such was his lot; elsewhere he was abused, here unsheathed mockery harried him. To seek the protection of the Mikado he trekked across the whole country. In winter, in the snow, he went, his companions fainting and benumbed. At night Francis would rise and cover his companions with his own scanty covering. But the great Mikado would make their way in Japan easy. Such was their hope. When they arrived at Miyako the place was a shambles. Civil war had reduced the city to destruction. The aristocracy had defeated the Mikado, who was now just their bauble. Jeers and stones told Francis that his journey was in vain.

Every country in the East he had visited and started the work of spreading the Gospel. China alone remained. No foreigner was allowed into the country beyond Canton. Francis, though, would try. He could at least become a prisoner and do good work that way. One never knew, too, how fortunate chances would present themselves. But he had yet to reckon with officialdom. It was adamant. No, he would not go, the danger was too great. Trouble ensued, but eventually Francis prevailed. A stubborn saint is about the last thing in the world you can stop.

In August, 1552, he arrived at San-cian, a kind of quarantine or Ellis Island to the port of Canton—the mushroom city of Hong Kong was not thought of in those days. He felt ill after leaving the boat. A shivering fit took him from time to time. He was weak, but his hope was strong. Very soon he would be in China laying the foundation for the Christian Church.

Yet though he was within sight of China he found it difficult to get to the mainland. No merchant would jeopardize his trade by putting him ashore. Days ran into weeks and weeks into months but no chance showed itself and all this time Francis grew weaker and yet weaker. At

(Continued on page 171)

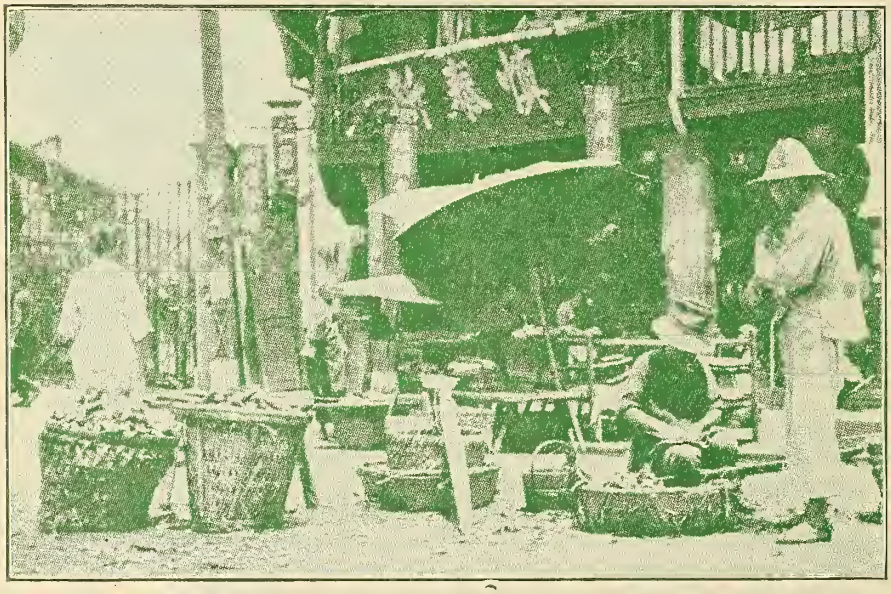
THAT ways and means of helping China Mission Seminary are not restricted to gifts of money was made clear on two occasions recently, and the Seminary very gratefully thanks the benefactors of whom we make mention below.

In October, Mrs. Brennan, of St. Anthony's Parish, Toronto, very kindly held at her home a "visiting day" in aid of the Missions, and generously entertained a very large number of her friends. The visitors came by invitation in a single afternoon and each one brought along a gift to be sent to China Mission Seminary. As a result, a few days later a car came to the Seminary loaded down with dozens of jars of preserves, fruits, vegetables and other good things for the table. It was a most welcome addition to the stock which must always be on hand to keep fifty young men supplied with the necessary calories and vitamins three times a day for nine months of the year.

And here's another proof that where there's a will there's a way to help the Missions. In Phelpston, Ontario, is a priest, Rev. J. M. Castex, from whom we have received benefactions on many occasions. On Mission Sunday this year, realizing that many of his parishioners who could not give gifts of money to the Missions would be willing to help by other means, he asked all who could to do so to contribute some products of their farms as an aid to China Mission Seminary. Within two weeks a truck load of potatoes and other vegetables, more than fifty bags altogether, was delivered (cartage paid) to us and now are stored in the root house, giving us the assurance that during the Winter months ahead we shall not have to worry about a plentiful supply of the ever desirable "spuds".

The gifts in kind to which we have referred, apart from the fact that they save us a considerable expenditure of money in providing for the needs of a large household, are evidence of the desire of the generous donors to do something to help us in our work here at the Seminary. It may be that what these friends in Toronto and Phelpston, Ontario, have done for us will be an incentive to others to share the burdens entailed by the obligation we have of providing for the upkeep of an institution numbering about sixty people.

Living in a Different World



By Rev. Bernardine Linesch, O.F.M.

LIVING in China is like living in a strange world. One does not have to be in China very long to realize the truth of this statement. A little over a half a year has convinced me of it. Everything is so strange, so different in China; I might even say upside down and backward. However, when a person gets accustomed to living here, this strangeness soon wears off, and the things which once seemed so odd seem quite natural. One gets used to seeing everything done in such a different way, and makes nothing of it. I am quite sure if I were to write this same article in six months from now, I would be at a loss what to write about. Even now I sometimes wonder whether the Chinese way of living and doing things is not in many ways as good or even better than our own, all things being considered.

So many peculiar observations in China now come to mind that I do not know which one to tell you about first. If what you are about to read now seems a little mixed up and incoherent, please do not mind. This is just an article on China.

At present I recall a few observations which I made right here in Wuchang Mission Compound. A little painting job was executed by Chinese painters. I watched the progress of their work to my great amusement. True to form, all the trimming was done first. The main part of the job followed starting from the ground on upward, believe it or not. The roof was the last thing to be painted.

A short time ago a carpenter was hired to do some repair work around the house. He came with a few small logs and several crude looking tools, and what he did not fix with his outfit is not worth talking about. He made slats for shutters, legs for chairs, repaired a few window sashes, built a new ladder, besides doing a lot of other odd jobs around the house. It is really surprising all that a carpenter can do with a few tree logs and so few and such poor tools. But why simply mention the carpenter's skilfulness. In China all artisans are skilful in their various trades considering their tools and the methods they use. Many things are made in China today as they were made centuries ago, in spite of all the helps afforded by modern foreign machinery and methods. It is a rare thing to see a painter use a brush or a tailor a sewing machine or even a tape measure for that matter.

Some merchants on Danforth Avenue, Toronto, wouldn't stand for this "sidewalk display" of wares, but almost all the markets in China are open shops.

A word about our courtyard and the hill just to the rear of it might be enlightening. I never saw such a variety of odd plants and trees anywhere in so small a space. The vegetation and verdure is characteristic of the semi-tropics. Outside of a few date palm trees, all trees are rare and have peculiar tendencies. Many of them keep their leaves the year round while others, after they have shed them, blossom out into fragrant smelling blossoms about mid-winter. Naturally enough where there are trees there are birds, and we certainly have our share of them. But they, too, are so different from the ordinary run of birds. It is true we have some sparrows, but where doesn't one find sparrows? Instead of seeing robins, thrushes, and meadow larks, we sometimes see the paradise bird, yellow-feathered birds about the size of robins, together with a number of other birds with sweet melodious tones, the like of which I have never seen or heard before. Magpies and white-winged crows are quite numerous and picturesque, to say nothing about the great majestic jays.

But now let us go beyond the limits of our compound for some more strange sights. The streets are for the most part nothing more than alley ways back home and are walled on both sides. There are no front lawns to be seen anywhere, and to see trees along the street is very rare. Merely to walk along the streets as they are constructed in China, one gets the impression that such things as trees do not grow here at all, but a bird's-eye view of the city from one of its hills immediately corrects this false impression. We, living here on Flower Garden Hill, have a fine view of a great portion of the city from our second floor enclosed porch. From this point of view many a false idea as to locations and distances which one gets due to travelling the winding walled roads in Wuchang is clarified at a glance.

The sights to be seen along a Chinese street are often amusing, sometimes sad, then again very ordinary. Many do not bear description here. You know in China practically everything and anything is carried on the shoulders of one, two, or more men, and believe me there are carriers and carriers. The second commonest thing to be carried is water, not to mention the first. The Chinese prefer river water to any other for their tea.

"YOU'RE NEXT!"
Chinese barbers, at least the ordinary head-shavers, are to be seen almost anywhere along the street.

From sunrise to sunset, the streets are generally crowded with people of all classes. With so many people daily milling about it seems like every day is a holiday. Since the conversion of many pagan temples into schools in this modern age of education, one sees the streets crowded with children of all ages on their way to school early in the morning, eating their breakfast as they go. About the same time can be seen the farmers carrying their vegetables to the market places. Almost all the markets in China are open shops, except for a few of the more high-class ones. Chinese barbers, at least the ordinary head-shavers, are to be seen almost anywhere along the street. Then, too, there is the usual crowd of people out marketing for the needs of the day, and still another crowd just walking about aimlessly, bowing here and talking there. The many different street scenes, described in detail, would make interesting reading in book form.

A few more items in brief will help you to realize why I say living in China is like living in a different world. First of all, the language question comes to mind. The Chinese language is really unique. Whether you grunt, cough or sneeze, you might be making a sound which has some meaning in Chinese. To write it one has to be an artist in the true sense of the word. To be able to read it one has to have good eye-sight and a good memory. To speak this language one has to have good control of the muscles of his mouth, and before anyone will be able to understand you when you speak it, the subject matter must be made clear either by gestures or some other ingenious way.

Chinese customs, too, are so different from our own. When they say yes, they usually mean no. When they say they don't want something you can be sure they really want it. If they ask you questions, it is not the sign of curiosity. That is their way of showing you that they like you. However, I have not found out yet what it is a sign of when they stand and stare at you.

If you like to travel by water come to China and you will get your fill of it. China seems to me to be just one big lake with an outlet to the Pacific Ocean, the Yangtsze River acting as a big funnel. The person who said China is nothing but a geographical figure did not know what he was talking about.

Where left is right; where lying and stealing are sometimes virtues; where banditry is chivalry; where mattresses are a luxury and knives and forks are unknown; where dogs all look sick and cats do not purr; where sounds are the queerest and smells the rarest; that is China—the land of the flea and the home of the shave.

A SPIRITUAL CONQUEROR

(Continued from page 169)

last a man was found who would dare the risk on payment of a bribe. On a day assigned he would come to the island. All the while Francis waited, avidly counting the hours until the journey began. When the day at length arrived the merchant failed to keep his appointment.

Disappointed and overcome with fever, Francis' strength gave way. On a wind-swept hill of San-cian he lay in a straw-thatched hovel. An incompetent Malabar watched him in his delirium. He lay dying within sight of China, the country of his dreams. How he had pondered and set his heart on gaining that country for Christ. While he was toiling in other lands he had always thought of China. China would be his last work. But now his life was ended. Gladly would he yield that life to Christ. But would the shadow of the cross ever fall on China—that great land with its teeming millions? He hardly dared to say—but yet he had Christ's words. The shadow fell—not in his time, but through his efforts—a short shadow it was, but deep. Slowly, very slowly, it lengthens. Let us pray that it will not cease to lengthen till in its shade it embraces all that great country.

—T. Martin, S.J., in "The Rock".

RELIGIOUS PROFESSION

(Continued from page 167)

both civilizations differ too much. That is only one of the many trials and unpleasant things daily confronting them. Yet they seem conscious of only one difficulty and that is their inability to cope with the demands made upon them. To be forced to turn away the sick from their door is the one hard thing in the lives of those Sisters. Their numbers are too few—five among two millions. This year two more Sisters will be here from the Mother-house at Pembroke. A wonderful help! Not everybody can leave home and come to China. But everybody, if they only wish to, can help the Sisters in China spiritually; and many can help them materially.

REPAIRS WHILE YOU WAIT
This wandering tailor believes in saving rent. His shop is roofed by the heavens and the only walls are those on either side of the street. The rest of China may be upset, but he looks quite undisturbed.

SHE FOUND HER GOD!

TIME and again we have urged our kind friends to pray and to make sacrifices in behalf of the missions. We are certain that you have prayed and have made sacrifices for God's poor pagans, for we could recount many an incident which undoubtedly was the result of someone's prayers. Suffice it to recount just one incident which happened at Safang lately.

One bright November morning two old women—Lo Po-po and Kuei Po-po—strolled in at the front entrance of the Safang compound. Although both were strange to us, yet Lo Po-po seemed somewhat familiar with the surroundings.

Hesitatingly she approached, saying: "Sister, I have brought you this Kuei Po-po who wants to join your religion. She came to my house and asked me as to the whereabouts of the Catholic Church. I happened to know of your dispensary, school, and catechumenate, and so I brought her to you. Will you accept her?"

There in front of us stood another of God's chosen ones in this land of innumerable souls who knew Him not. She was bent with age, but kindness and goodness shone out of her eyes. Then, too, asthma had laid its wasting grasp upon her poor body and one could see that her days were numbered. So we took her in as another charity pupil, even though our charity list had previously been more than filled. With a deep bow of thanks, Lo Po-po departed, happy in the thought that she had done a good deed to this forlorn soul.

Kuei Po-po immediately made herself at home, arranging her few belongings in one corner of our old catechumenate building. Her bed was made of boards, loosely arranged on iron benches with a little straw to cover it. She was neat and so arranged her quilts very carefully and packed her remaining treasures in the vicinity of her bed. She was happy, appreciative, and had a real good will to learn to know this God of the Christians.

The next day she started in the classroom and Kuei Po-po applied herself to her utmost strength. Due to her asthma she never could enjoy a solid night's rest and hence was very weak.

Before long, however, she could make the Sign of the Cross, say a part of the "Our Father," and knew something about "why" one joins the Church. At intervals she asked to rest awhile, but soon again she would appear in the classroom.

Speaking about the truths of our holy Religion, these old people grasp the ideas quite readily, but forget them just as readily. Kuei Po-po, though, was intent upon understanding it and keeping it. To remember all that had been said was impossible, so she fixed her attention on just one sentence and held on to that. Then during her nightly vigils she would ponder on these truths and eventually retain them in her memory. Some of her older classmates would get discouraged when they could not remember what had been told them, but she always advised them to remember just one statement and then to meditate on that. Often one could hear these good old souls discussing matters among themselves and seeking help from those whose memories were more retentive.

Dear reader, let me ask you here: "What is it that can turn the hearts and minds of these old people away from their created gods to an invisible God?—people who have for forty, fifty, and perhaps eighty years bent in adoration before hideous idols which to them meant all. What is it, I say, but the gift of faith coming from the heart of God Himself?" Perhaps in answer to your prayers have these souls received the wonderful gift.

After an interval of two weeks our good Kuei Po-po was confined to her bed, but she was always cheerful and resigned, and even though she was in pain, she continued her frequent rehearsals of the doctrine she had comprehended thus far.

Things were coming to a climax. The asthma was tightening its grip on its victim, in spite of all the care the good Sister nurse could give her. Our suffering Kuei Po-po asked permission for a few days respite with her relatives in the city. However, the Sister in charge did not consent to her leaving. And here lies the point. Why did the Sister refuse her consent? To grant the permission would have simplified matters all around. Why not just say: "Yes, you may go, and when you have rallied again we shall be glad to welcome you back among your classmates"? God in His merciful providence was directing it all: good Kuei Po-po had co-operated with His grace in beginning her studies, and her heavenly Father was leading her safely to her coveted goal. With her whole heart she acquiesced in Sister's arrangements, saying: "I will not go since Sister wants me to stay". Happy soul, happy will you be for all eternity because of your ready obedience!

On Sunday morning our good Po-po surprised us by attending the second Mass, for she said: "This is the Lord's day and I must adore God". But during the course of the Mass, her strength failing her, she needs must return to her bed. There she lingered on until Thursday morning, the vigil of our Immaculate Mother's feast. That morning she arose early and, to the astonishment of all, she dressed herself in her best clothes.

Her classmates urged her to rest a few days longer, but she insisted that she must "get ready". No one surmised what she was getting ready for. After she had dressed herself completely she retired again while all the rest of the catechumens repaired to church for Mass. After Mass our patient enjoyed a hearty breakfast. Later short calls at her bedside revealed that she was getting along nicely. Kuei Po-po was still highly interested in the truths of religion and she admonished all to study hard and try to retain at least one fact daily.

Just as the Angelus bell rang out its remembrance of our merciful Redemption another soul was nearing the portals of heaven. Kuei Po-po was found unconscious in the throes of the death agony. The Sister from the dispensary near by rushed to her bedside armed with the remedy of all remedies,—a bottle of saving water. Other Sisters arrived just in time to hear those momentous words: "I baptize thee, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost". Then medical aid was given, but there was no response. Our good Po-po clung to the thread of life and gave us time to call for the priest, who supplied the ceremonies of the Sacrament of Baptism and said the prayers for the dying. There lay a worn-out frame inhabited by a soul purer than the purest snow, clad by the infinite mercy of God in the cloak of sanctifying grace, ready to take its flight into the arms of Him who made it.

Round about stood pagans, Christians, and Sisters, praying for the departing soul which had received such signal graces. The pagans stood wondering at the peace and serenity of that countenance, and the composure of those attending in contrast to the shrieking and howling, banging of cymbals and gongs, and the rush and tumble when attending the deathbed of a pagan.

"How peaceful! Look, she is not afraid! What composure!" were some of the remarks uttered among the pagans. At two o'clock her pure soul took leave of its mortal habitation, to be welcomed into a better home where angels stood awaiting it.

Later we made inquiries as to just how it happened that this woman knew of the Church of God. We were told that in years gone by this old woman had heard from some one that there was a certain true God, and that it was in the Catholic Church that they adored this true God. Our good old friend bore this in mind and pondered how she could possibly find this God. She lived far out in the country, many miles from Wu-chang. She was an honest soul and the Lord kept this flame of faith and hope alive in her breast until one day she concluded that it behooved her to walk to Wuchang to try to find her God. She knew not where to inquire but just walked on where the Spirit led her. After several days of aimless wandering she reached Lo Po-po's house just a few doors distant from the home of the God she was seeking. Lo Po-po in turn fulfilled her part of God's plan by directing her to us.

Now, was it worth while coming to China even if but to save this one soul so evidently led by the hand of God? How was it that Lo Po-po, a pagan, did not turn her away, saying: "I have no time to take you to the Catholic Mission," as many a pagan would have done? How was it that the Mission accepted her in spite of the fact that there was little room? How was it that Kuei Po-po applied herself so well during the few days remaining to her? Why was it that she did not die during the night while all were asleep? Was it not, perhaps, because some one prayed for our poor pagans, or offered little sacrifices so that souls might be saved? Was it not perhaps on account of some little boy or girl who dropped a nickel or dime into the mite box instead of going to the movies, and by his or her sacrifice, moved the heart of God to inspire this old woman how to save her soul? We may conjecture, but we shall never know until the scroll of the Sacred Heart shall be unrolled on that day when all the good deeds of the lovers of Jesus shall be made known to the world.

At any rate, her pure soul went to heaven just in time to hand our feast-day greetings to our Immaculate Mother on December 8th; and there she will remember those who were her known and unknown guardian angels on the road that led to her God.—"Franciscans in China."

An interesting study of an old Chinese woman.

NONSENSE

Mrs. Jones—"Our new minister is wonderful. He brings things home to you that you never saw before."

Mrs. Robinson—"Our laundry man is just the same."

Elderly lady in plane—"Why so nervous and pale, my boy?"

Pilot (despairingly)—"We have lost both wings."

Elderly passenger (reassuringly)—"Well, don't worry about that. We'll get new ones as soon as we land."

The foreman reported that the jury was unable to agree upon a verdict. The judge said the case was a clear one, and added, "If you do not reach an agreement before evening, I'll have twelve suppers sent in to you."

"May it please your honor," spoke up the foreman, "make it eleven suppers and a bale of hay."

After a little dinner-party, when all the guests were gathered in the drawing-room, it was suggested that every lady should state the gift she most coveted.

Promptly, each lady announced her choice. Mrs. Johnson wished for exquisite jewels, Mrs. Williams desired to be the best-dressed woman in the town, while Mrs. Smith craved popularity. Suddenly, however, a tactless husband exclaimed:

"I say! Don't any of you care for beauty?"

He—"Did you hear about the Scotchman who had apoplexy?"

She—"No."

He—"He was throwing pennies to children and the string broke."

Mistress (indignantly)—"Just look at the dust on this sideboard, Mary. It's at least six weeks old."

Mary (calmly)—"Then it ain't nothing to do with me, mum. I've only been here four weeks."

Diner—"Waiter, you ought never to have brought this coffee from the kitchen. It's too weak to stir."

Judge—"You have a pleasant home, a good wife and happy children?"

Prisoner (hopefully)—"Yes, yer honor."

Judge—"Well, you won't see them for two months."

"Did you hear about our new stenog being hurt in the explosion last night?"

"How come?"

"A smile lit up her face and the powder went off."

"Is your wife economical?"

"Sometimes. She had only twenty-six candles on her fortieth birthday cake last night."

Helen Margis—"The secret of good health is onion eating."

Helen Dudewig—"But how is onion eating to be kept a secret?"

"Buy a bunch of violets for your sweetheart, sir?" urged the small boy.

"Haven't got one," replied the young man.

"Take a bunch home to your wife."

"Sorry, I'm not married."

"Here, buy the bloomin' lot to celebrate your luck!"

Mistress—"Really, Gertrude, I must compliment you on the excellent way you have ironed these things."

Gertrude—"Yes, mum, them's mine. I'll do yours the same if I get time."

Father—"So the teacher caught you using a bad word and punished you."

Tommy—"Yes, and he asked me where I learned it."

Father—"What did you tell him?"

Tommy—"I didn't want to give you away, Pa, so I blamed it on the parrot."

Small Nephew (after the wedding)—"I say, you've been married to George!"

"Yes, dear."

"Well, you told me Fred was the best man!"

Old Lady—"You are the rascal who sold me the sixpenny surprise packet last week, and there was nothing in it."

Hawker—"Well, wasn't that a surprise?"

Little Bobby's father owns a garage. Recently when Bobby saw a kitten purring contentedly he remarked: "Oh, mother, come here quick; the cat has gone to sleep and left her engine running."

Customer—(pointing to Chinese characters on laundry ticket)—"Is that my name?"

The Laundryman—"No, 'scliption. Means li'l ol' man, cross-eyed, no teet'."

Customer—"Er—thank you."

Judge—"Speeding, eh? How many times have you been before me?"

Speeder—"Never, your honour. I've tried to pass you on the road once or twice, but my bus will do only 55."

The Bore (dramatically)—"Picture the jungle by night, the prowling lion in search of prey, and me lying a few feet away."

The Bored—"Quite! No need to picture the last part—I can hear you."

Mrs. A. (to husband who came home carrying a manuscript)—"What is that in your hand, John?"

Mr. A. (pompously) — "Brains, madam. Are you surprised?"

Mrs. A.—"Not at all. I know you didn't carry them in your head."

He was reading to his wife an account of a famous naturalist's death.

"Reaching for a rare plant, he slipped over the cliff, and as he fell he gathered momentum."

"Oh, George," she interrupted. "The poor man! What an enthusiast he must have been. Fancy picking flowers even as he fell to his doom."

"Jim, I don't believe you've washed your face since I saw you playing football. Do you know it's very dirty?"

"I know, mother. But dad showed me the little things that live in water, through his microscope last night, and I'm not going to have them crawling over my face with their funny little legs!"

Young Author—"The art of telling a story consists of knowing what to leave unsaid."

Married Friend—"It doesn't make any difference, my boy. My experience is that she finds out, anyway."

Teacher—"Billy, can you take five from one?"

Billy—"Yes, sir, you can."

Teacher—"How do you mean, you stupid fellow!"

Billy—"Well, sir, I take five toes out of one stocking every night."

The housewife was superintending the dusting of her husband's library.

"Careful, Bridget," she said to the maid. "Mind how you handle the books. Some of them go back to George the First, you know."

Bridget, who was in the act of dusting a novel, smiled knowingly.

"Yes, ma'am," she replied, "and I see one or two of them ought to go back to the lending library as well."

"Madam, if you'll buy the car, we'll put your initials on free."

"Oh, it's not the initial cost. It's the upkeep."

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

FIFTY CENTS FOR ONE YEAR.

TEN DOLLARS FOR LIFE

ALL PROCEEDS DEVOTED ENTIRELY TO OUR MISSION WORK

KEEP in touch with the missionaries in China by becoming a subscriber. If you already receive "CHINA", kindly see whether your subscription is soon due (look at your address label). Renew it in advance for next year. Do so at once, and help our mission work which really needs your assistance. Just get a money order or postal note at your nearest post office and mail it to us with the coupon below.

A Fine but Inexpensive Christmas Gift for Your Relatives and Friends is a Subscription to "CHINA"

— — — — — — — — You can use the following coupon — — — — — — — —

"CHINA"
St. F. X. Seminary
Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.

Dear Fathers:—

Enclosed find $ .....as a subscription to "China" for ..... years.

Name ..... Name .....

Address ..... Address .....

.....

(If you have changed your address, please give us the OLD address as well as the NEW one)

VITAL FORCES

MISSIONARIES

are vital in the spreading of the Faith.

SEMINARIES

are vital in the preparation of Missionaries.

BURSES

are vital in the maintenance of Seminaries.

We ask you to remember the Missions when you make your Christmas Gift lists.

We have urgent need of donations to our Burse Fund . . . . . .

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
Scarboro Bluffs + Ontario
Very Rev. John E. McRae, Rector.

CHINA

HARBORO BLUFFS, ONT. FEBRUARY 1925

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.

2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.

3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.

4. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Where Savings Earn 3%

One dollar is sufficient to open a savings account with the Capital Trust. Regular deposits, however small, with interest at 3%, soon count up to appreciable sums. Deposit, or withdraw by cheque, through the mail or at our nearest office.

CAPITAL TRUST Corporation Limited

100 Adelaide St. West
TORONTO
OTTAWA - MONTREAL

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.

OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide 2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West
Toronto

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 25,400

Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XVI. FEBRUARY, 1935 No. 2

MISSION SUPERIOR HOME

We mentioned in our last issue that Right Reverend Monsignor McGrath had been obliged to return to Canada following a serious illness of many months in China. He remained some weeks in Vancouver and Victoria and reached the Seminary on January 6th. It is a very real pleasure to have him sharing our Seminary life with us again. Readers of "China" will be pleased to know that the Monsignor's health is gradually improving, and that he has benefitted greatly since his return.

Monsignor McGrath went to China in the Fall of 1931, and had been only a few months on the Missions when he was signally honored by the Holy See by being chosen as the first Prefect-Apostolic of Chuchow, the territory in China assigned to St. Francis Xavier Seminary for evangelization. He is optimistic about the future of the Church in China, and is looking forward to the day when our present students, numbering fifty, will be with him and the eighteen other priests now in Chuchow making new conquests for Christ in Chekiang Province.

AMUSEMENTS OR MISSIONS

Considering the fact that donations and contributions to foreign mission work have fallen off so alarmingly in recent years, and that it is so difficult for mission institutions such as ours to secure even a fraction of the amount necessary to conduct their work successfully, we were quite interested in a little statistical item which appeared recently in the daily press. Perhaps you will be interested, too. Interested, not so much in the statistics as in the reflection which inevitably must come to one interested in the work of Catholic Missions when he compares the material means available for mission work with the huge sums which were expended in a year of depression for one item alone: moving picture amusement.

According to safe estimates, about sixty million people each week attended moving picture shows in the United States alone. Taking the very moderate average of 30 cents admission fee for each individual, it means that each week 18 million dollars were expended on this form of amusement. Thus, one billion dollars were turned in to the coffers of the movie shows by American people in a single year. Catholics form a sixth of the population. Theoretically, they would have given 150 millions. That Catholics do constitute an imposing group of customers for movie shows is emphasized by the concern caused some of the producing companies by the spread of the Legion of Decency recently. The very lowest estimate would tell us that Catholics in the United States spend two million dollars a week at cinema shows.

We have not available any precise statistics for Canada, but we may state without hesitation that, proportionately, Canadian Catholics spend enormous sums weekly for movie attendance. In comparison, their donations to the missions are insignificant. There is no question of suppressing amusements and honest distractions, but there is the suggestion that if Canadian Catholics were to sacrifice a movie show occasionally and send the money thus saved to aid the missions, there would be a considerable impetus given to the work of the Church in foreign lands.

IT IS IMPORTANT FOR US

To weary our readers is the last thing we would wish to do. Yet, we must run the risk of it by mentioning so frequently the necessity of our subscribers supporting our work by the prompt renewal of their subscription to our publication "China". Literally, it is a matter of "bread and butter" to our missionaries to have the circulation of "China" maintained by paid-up subscriptions. You know, it is a problem — this subscription business. Perhaps you do not know it, but it is a fact that most secular magazines are not supported solely from their subscriptions. Take any largely-circulated secular magazine you wish. You could scarcely buy the paper in such a magazine for the five, ten, or twenty cents you pay to the newsdealer, much less get the stories which represent a vast outlay of money for printing, for pictures, and the prices paid to writers, etc. Such magazines live on their advertisements. Thousands and thousands of dollars are received for the advertising which goes into secular magazines. But for magazines like ours, subscriptions are the very bread of our existence. We want to keep on existing, so please help us by renewing your subscription, and, if possible, secure some new readers for us.

CATHOLIC MISSIONS

EVER since the day when Jesus our Lord said to Peter that the gates of hell would never prevail against the Church He intended to build upon him, as upon the rock of the new foundation, the Catholic Church, confident in the promise of Her Divine Founder, has always faced the most severe storms with an unusually calm countenance and unshaken hope in God's final triumph. Emperors and kings, scholars and revolutionists, have arrayed themselves against her in the course of twenty centuries. Once the moment of apparent victory had passed, one after the other they have disappeared from the scene of the world, while the silence of death has sealed up their grave forever.

But after all these storms, the Catholic Church still stands so strong and so firmly rooted in the love of millions, that not only does she fill with joy her own children, but also invites the respect and sympathy of those outside her pale.

All the history of the Catholic Church in China bears a striking witness to the above statement. But the experiences through which she had to pass in the last years, namely, since the Nationalist revolution, have made this witness wonderfully refulgent.

The Historical Background

In order to understand how the Catholic Church emerged victoriously from the Nationalist revolution, the historical background of the latter has first to be briefly recalled to memory.

The failure of the Boxer uprising to check the Western impact upon the East stirred up the patriotism of men who had studied abroad or travelled extensively. Chief among them was Dr. Sun Yat-sen. Within a few years, these latent forces broke up into the political movement of 1911, which brought to an end the millenary Imperial rule and established the republican regime with Dr. Sun as president.

The hopes centered in the new Republic soon proved illusory. Yuan Shihkia overthrew Sun Yat-sen, and by his monarchical aspirations led to the foundation of the Kuomintang or Nationalist Party, which soon formed a government of opposition in Canton under the aegis of Dr. Sun.

After the World War, China acutely resented the terms of the Treaty of Versailles. First anti-Japanese, then anti-foreign, and lastly anti-Christian feeling ran high throughout the country. Soon afterwards, Russian advisers were invited to Canton and Chinese Communists were admitted into the Party.

In the succeeding three issues of "China" will be continued this very interesting article by Rev. Paschal M. D'Elia, P.J., Professor of Missiology at the Pontificial Gregorian University in Rome and Member of the Sinological Bureau, Shanghai. The article is taken verbatim from "The China Year Book, 1934," and we reprint it as it appeared in "Franciscans in China". We advise our readers who seek information on the church's struggles in China to read these articles carefully. The subsequent instalments will give some interesting facts about the present status of the church in China.

On March 12, 1925, the Leader died, bequeathing to his Party the formal task of carrying out his revolutionary programme to fruition. A punitive expedition, under the leadership of General Chiang Kai-shek, was launched against the Northern war lords, with the aim of conquering the whole of China to the ideals of the late Leader. Within a few months the ever-victorious army reached Central China.

Then it was that the left wing, hitherto kept in check by the more moderate elements of the Party, gained the ascendency; anti-foreign and anti-Christian excesses became the rule. Schools, churches, and mission-buildings were looted or seized on the slightest pretext. Windows, partitions, staircases and altars were torn out, while images and statues of saints were broken or mutilated. Soldiers very often made themselves perfectly at home in Church property, dislodging foreign as well as Chinese priests, who had either to be content with the worst room of their own residence, or flee to the mountains.

The climax was reached in Nanking on March 24th, 1927, when a large force of Communist soldiers attacked the foreign residents, killing and wounding some, whilst others barely escaped with their lives under naval protection. The Catholic church in Nanking was thoroughly stripped and ignominiously turned into a stable, after everything sacred had been desecrated. Two Jesuits, an Italian and a Frenchman, teaching at Ricci College, were killed in their own residence, while two others had a narrow escape.

The sad news of the Nanking outrage soon spread through the country and became a menace to all foreign missionaries. Vexing questions were being asked, like: What about foreign missionaries? Is there still a place for them in China? Should they remain? Should they all leave for their native country? Should the Chinese be called not only to a larger, but to the exclusive, part of Church responsibility? Even so, would the Church survive at all?

These and other similar questions admitted of no easy answer, and missionaries were only too aware of it.

So much for the historical background of the Nationalist Revolution.

The Three Characteristics of the Nationalist Revolution

As to its psychological point of view, it has three main characteristics which singled the revolution of 1926-1927 out of any other previous outbreak.

First, the revolution was nationalistic, viz., exasperatingly patriotic. It contained aspirations and tendencies which dated back to the dislike of whatever was foreign or "barbarian", but which broke out in a way and with a violence hitherto unknown. It powerfully fostered a jealous sympathy for what belonged to the Chinese name and race: a keen sensitiveness of the independence of the Chinese people, inciting them to get rid of all importations once and for all, and exclude all interference from outside, be it called unequal treaties, Christian evangelism or foreign tutelage. It was not to be expected that Chinese Catholics would remain untouched by this rising tide. There were those who shared deeply these instinctive hankerings after ecclesiastical emancipation, this fever for autonomy, and who dreamt of a new order of things where they would be freed from European guardianship. According to them, more prominence should be given to the Chinese clergy by increasing their authority in the Church and in all grades, from the lowest to the highest, from the simple priest to the bishop. As for non-Catholics, they took more and more pleasure in identifying foreign priests with their nationality, religion with foreignism, and in making the masses believe that missionaries were the tool of foreign imperialism.

Secondly, the revolution was Demist, viz., it was permeated through and through by the ideology of Dr. Sun Yat-sen. Since the advent of the Republic, the history of China had been a succession of uninterrupted civil strifes. War lords had appeared and disappeared as if by magic. They had leagued together for and against one another. They had fought each other, betrayed each other, allied and fought again, to betray one another and to ally once more on the morrow. Factions and parties had been organized, divided, reorganized, redivided, and so on. And why? What were the interests at stake? What were the principles to be safeguarded? No one exactly knew. But the new party, which had taken good care soon to stamp itself with the envied appellative of "Nationalist", perhaps for the first time in Chinese history, had a full programme in view; the programme of the late Dr. Sun Yat-sen, namely, the happiness of the people. Imbued with foreign and revolutionary literature, Dr. Sun had amalgamated the triple slogan of the French revolution ("Liberty! Equality! Fraternity!") with Lincoln's celebrated phrase: "government of the people, by the people and for the people". Under his pen, "the government of the people" and "liberty" became Nationalism; "the government by the people" and "equality" became Democracy; "the government for the people" and "fraternity" spelled Socialism or rather

HIS EXCELLENCY, THE ARCHBISHOP OF TORONTO

"CHINA" VERY HEARTILY FELICITATES MOST REVEREND JAMES C. McGUIGAN ON HIS APPOINTMENT TO THE ARCHBISHOPRIC OF TORONTO, AND WISHES HIM MANY YEARS OF HAPPY SERVICE IN HIS NEW FIELD OF LABOUR.

Sociology. Shortly before his death, Dr. Sun launched upon China at large—and the Nationalist party religiously received and accepted—his famous ideology, his San Min-Chu-I, namely, the racial, the political and the economic principle in behalf of the people, or, to make it shorter, his Triple Demism, as the present writer translated it, coining a neologism derived from the Greek word "demos", meaning "people". The carrying on of Dr. Sun's full programme as it was embodied in the San Min-Chu-I was the task that the Nationalist party had set itself to.

Thirdly, the Revolution had unmistakable links with Communism. Emissaries of Soviet Russia, like Karakhan, Borodin, Galen, and many others, had been active —prodigiously active—in Canton, Hankow and elsewhere in China. The Whampoa Military Academy and some influential members of the Party had drunk deeply of Soviet political and economic theories. Dr. Sun himself had "flirted" with Bolshevik Russia. Having been refused help by the Western Powers, he believed that the salvation of his country forced him to throw in his lot with Russia. He did not burn incense to Bolshevism and Communism, but in order not to displease his Russian advisers and his Russian brought-up members of his Party, he did not deny in his lectures on the Triple Demism that these doctrines were worthy of some consideration. Hence, it happened that he sprinkled his book with more than one phrase savouring of Communism. It was enough

(Continued on page 30)

DAYS in SHANGHAI

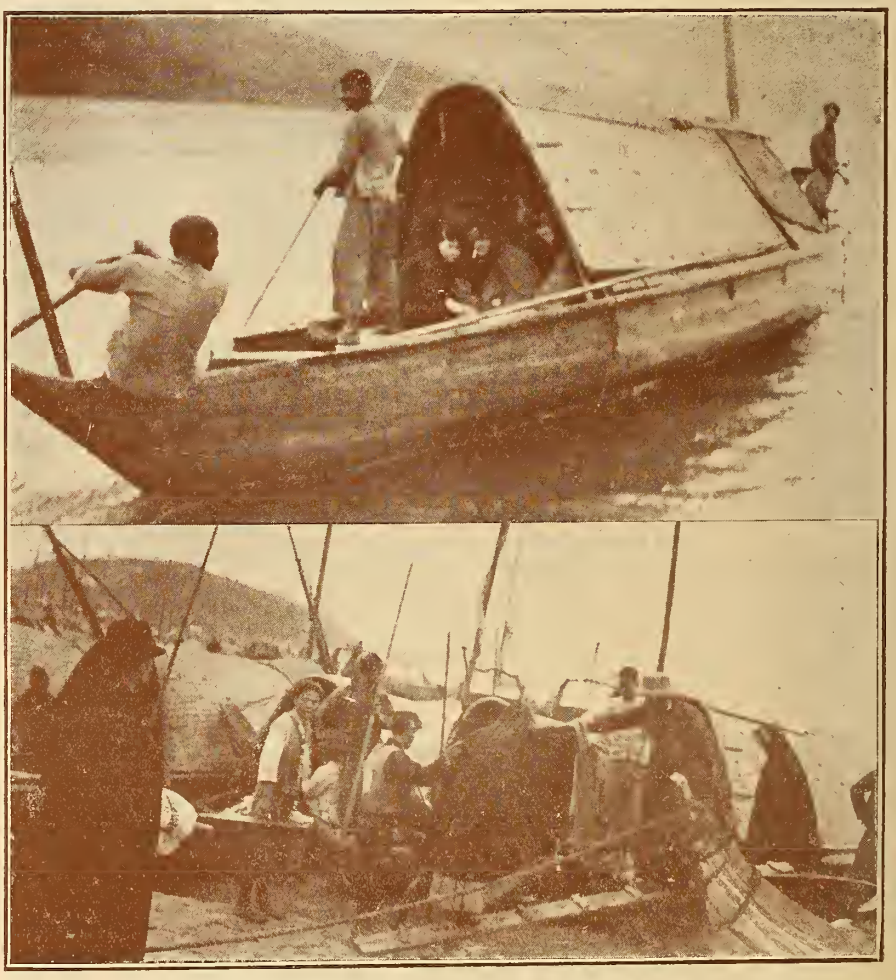
By REV. GERALD DOYLE

EVEN though no land could be seen on the morning of October 22nd the yellow water told us that we were in China, in the mouth of the Yangtze, that mighty river which stretches far into the interior of China.

Soon land appeared on the horizon, and the "Empress of Russia" which had brought us safely from Canada, weathering the tail end of a typhoon steamed steadily up the river with the tide, her bow throwing back a sickly yellow foam.

We passed a battleship and several Chinese junks, and from then on we made our way carefully through a colorful collection of Oriental and Occidental shipping. Fortunately we were to dock on the Shanghai side of the river, thus avoiding a trip across the river in a tender to the Custom's Jetty, so when within sight of her berth the big Empress went slowly astern up the crowded Whangpoo River and sided gently towards the dock. It was a thrilling moment as the boat drew nearer and nearer the wharf. We were actually in China.

While still a distance out in the stream we discerned two priests in the crowd behind the barriers and Father McGettigan, Father Strang and myself identified the beared priest as Father Amyot and the slighter priest as Father Gignac. Sister St. Martin and Sister Mary Angela spied two Grey Sisters in the crowd and decided, correctly, that they were Sister St. Julitta and Sister Mary Catharine, who had come to Shanghai from Lishui to greet the new arrivals and accompany the new Sisters down the coast and up the river to their new home, the Convent of the Immaculate Conception, Lishui, Che.



After a delay of more than an hour for examination of passports and for Custom's examination of baggage, we were able to exchange greetings and received a real welcome to China. Soon Fathers Amyot and Gignac had Father McGettigan, Father Strang and myself into a taxi which wiggled its way through the crowded narrow streets.

The Sisters took another taxi to the Sisters of Charity Convent, which was their headquarters while in Shanghai.

Father Amyot very capably fulfilled his duties as guide to Shanghai, so that conversation about the Seminary, the Departure Ceremony, and everything in general was interspersed with: "We are now on the Bund; that is the British Consulate," and we dutifully gazed at an imposing entrance. Passing a busy intersection we were informed that Nanking Road was the most important street in Shanghai, although some of the important banks and hotels were located elsewhere.

The streets and buildings were much like any Western city, but the people! There were many Europeans and Chinese dressed European fashion, but the coolies carrying packs and pulling rickshas left no doubt but that we were in China. The ricksha pullers always aroused my interest and in many cases my sympathy. Among the pullers of the privately owned rickhas were some strong well-fed runners, but some of the pullers of the public rickshas looked under-fed and weak as they plodded along the street either barefooted or with

(Continued on page 29)

GREY SISTERS BEGIN MISSION EXPERIENCES

Top view shows the Sisters on their way to Lishui in a river boat. In the lower view Father Amyot is saying "watch your step, Sister!" as the boat is boarded at Wenchow. Father Strang (at left) looks on.

PRIEST FIGHTS GANG TO SAVE CHINESE GIRL

AN incident which occurred recently in Tsingtien, in our Mission of Chuchow, has received a great deal of publicity, not only in Catholic newspapers, but it has "made the front page" of two of Toronto's daily papers. The priest who was the hero of the incident is our own Father John MacDonald who was ordained in 1931, and went to China that year. Father MacDonald is a son of Chief of Police Samuel MacDonald, of Windsor.

The newspaper accounts say nothing of the injuries to Father MacDonald, but letters from Lishui tell us that, as was to be expected, taking on a gang of toughs in a fistic encounter is not an easy job, even for a hefty missionary like Father "Chook". He had his glasses smashed, wrenched his back and had his hands somewhat injured. However, nothing more serious happened to the one-round champ, and a visit to the dispensary at Lishui and a few days rest restored him to normal good health. "It was hot while it lasted," says one letter, "but all's well that ends well."

FATHER JOHN MacDONALD,
who saved from a pagan marriage the girl shown in picture at top.

From "The Casket", published in Antigonish, we reprint a typical account as it appeared in the public press.

An old Chinese custom was rather rudely jolted in the district of Chuchow recently when it clashed with the tenets of Christianity as interpreted by Rev. John MacDonald, formerly of Windsor, N.S.

The custom in question, the selling of baby girls to their future husbands, is one that has the sanction of antiquity and pagan public opinion. It might still be enjoying uninterrupted honor had not one of its victims become a convert to Christianity and, spiritually, a ward of Father MacDonald at Tsingtien.

Educated by the Sisters at the Canadian Catholic Mission at Lishui, the girl told her teachers that the man to whom, years before, her parents had sold her for the immense sum of $45, had now come to claim her as his bride. The young woman found the idea repulsive, and Father MacDonald offered to see what he could do to have the engagement broken.

The girl's father agreed to let her have her own way in the matter, but the other man refused to give her up, even if it meant getting his $45 back. The girl took refuge at the mission school, and the prospective husband began what corresponds in China to "Habeas Corpus" proceedings.

In Tsingstien it was a bigger case than the Bruno Hauptmann trial, for it was the first of its kind on record.

After much deliberation the magistrate handed down his decision. He ruled that the rights of the prospective husband must be respected, and that he could take his forty-five-dollar bride.

That seemed to settle the matter, but Father MacDonald was only beginning to fight. Hurriedly reading up on Chinese law he felt that the magistrate's decision was unsound, and he appealed to a higher court. The superior court reversed the verdict of the trial judge, giving the girl her liberty.

The disappointed husband-to-be decided to have his bride, law or big "foreign devils" to the contrary nothwithstanding. He hired twenty bandits to raid the mission and carry off the girl. This is where he made his second mistake. He didn't hire enough bandits.

The outlaws swooped down on the school and for the first time in their unsavory careers came up against a husky Nova Scotia athlete. They didn't know that Father "Chook" had been a member of the Windsor hockey team when it was rated about the best in the Maritimes; neither did they know that subsequently he was left wing forward and captain of the St. F. X. College hockey team at Antigonish, and a very effective member of the Xaverian football team. They didn't know, poor chaps, and perhaps in any event they would not have greatly cared. Ice hockey and football enjoy only indifferent esteem in Lishui.

If the banditti had figured on any resistance at all in their sketchy plans, no doubt they expected the contest would be brief. It was. Father "Chook" met the attack alone. Two vicious wallops—and two bandits went down for the long count. The next two were tougher, and assimilated a Windsor right and left each before going into a coma. Then the battle closed. There were only 16 stalwart outlaws left, and they made a brave fight indeed against one man garbed in a clinging soutane, but the odds were too great. Father "Chook" waded through the squad distributing purple eyes and bloody noses without a lost motion, and when he had finished with number 16 and had started again with number five, despair seized the bandits and they scattered for the hills.

Photo by Leatherdale, Toronto

RIGHT REVEREND WILLIAM C. McGRATH
Prefect Apostolic of Chuchow, China

FIRST IMPRESSIONS

By

Rev. Craig Strang

(Lishui, China)

ON November 7th we arrived here after our very pleasant journey from Toronto, accounts of which have already been written. We were made quite at home by the other Fathers here, and were given one month's holidays before starting the study of the language. We are told that such a holiday is not waste of time, but has advantages that we will appreciate later on, and we take their word for it. So, for four weeks we have been doing nothing except using all our senses in getting acquainted with Chinese life, taking it all in without having much to say—especially to the Chinese. Our time was occupied by reading some matter on mission life, writing letters, talking to the priests about Seminary days, picking up some Chinese words, playing some football with the boys of the school, playing some victrola records and listening to the stories of the older Fathers. The Chinese customs caused us much amazement as well as interest, but it is not my purpose to set them down here, as they have been mentioned in other letters from here; I have chosen some incidents, however, that I think are worth while recording and telling about.

"Salve Regina"

Never before was I so affected by sacred singing (or singing of any kind for that matter) as when I heard the "Salve Regina" ("Hail, Holy Queen") rendered by the choir boys here after night prayers, under the direction of Father Venadam. During prayers the church is lighted by only two candles on the altar and a lantern at the back of the church, but after prayers they are extinguished and an aureole on the statue of the Blessed Virgin gave the only light in the sacred darkness, and a reginal splendour to the Queen whom it crowned. Then soft strains of the solemn rendition of "Salve Regina" flowed from the voices of some thirty Chinese boys in the choir loft. The harmony was perfect and the prayer went on . . . "vita, dulcedo et spes nostra, salve" ("hail, our life, our sweetness and our Hope") . . . these golden-voiced words must have sounded sweet to the Heavenly Queen, too. And so on, through the beautiful melody and more beautiful prayer, the voices and the hearts of the singers, doubtlessly mixing with those of the angles, made us forget we were in pagan China —wherever we were this was not pagan, and when the final echos of "O dulcis virgo Maria" died away we knew that Mary was truly honored and very pleased with the "good-night" salutation. Mention of Father Venadam's choir has already been made in "China", but that night was a new triumph for him and his boys. Never (in Canada or Newfoundland) have I heard Gregorian Chant more beautifully or properly rendered—it is worthy of mention, in my opinion, with the Choir of the Monks of Solemnes, and of others that excite the admiration of all Christian people.

At present Father Venadam is preparing his boys for the joyful Christmas music and hopes for the perfect precision that crowned his efforts last year.

Just as at home, the beautiful hymns we hear and sing as children remain with us through life and grow ever sweeter, so also here, when these Chinese boys leave school, they will take with them musical memories and sacred associations that will bind them ever to our Lord and His Blessed Mother.

Sisters St. Martin and Angela on board the "Empress" as it entered Shanghai, bringing them to begin their mission work in China last October.

"Oliver Asks for More"

One afternoon, without occasion, and on the spur of the moment, I entered the refectory of the boys' school attached to the mission. The boys were at their evening meal of rice with some vegetables, meat, and fish to give it a relish. Although silence was not enforced there was little or no talking—all too busy eating, but not too busy to give me a bow and a greeting: "Huh, Sun Kung". "Dig in, boys, don't mind me," I replied in the Newfoundland "wo" (dialect) and gazed around at the small tables with the three common dishes in the centre of each table, and at each boy with his bowl of rice and chop-sticks. Then I saw one empty rice bowl; its owner, I figured, ran out of his ration in his eagerness to have his fill, and had come to a full stop. But no, up he hopped and went to the head of the room where I spied a big pot of boiling rice only half diminished, yet being further depleted by the lad under my observation — he was asking for more—and getting it.

As I watched him I thought how the scene in many respects was similar to a famous one in English literature—when Oliver Twist "asked for more" in the village poor-house. How graphically does Dickens' pen describe the dire calamity of the boys there and how Oliver had to break the tradition and ask for more than the meagre ration allotted to them; nearly every edition of the famous story has this scene illustrated, for it has been powerfully instrumental in opening the eyes of England to the many abuses that its poor received and in urging that a stop be put to such inhumanity.

I was very happy to see my little friend in the dining-room "get more", but I know that there are thousands here in China getting nothing—often not even a first portion; but worse again, I know that there are millions of others still slaves to the abuses of paganism. And Christianity knows that. Christianity knows that God's priests are here trying to give to the famished souls the Food they so sorely need. They have described in many letters which appear in "China" the sad plight of these spiritual indigents. Why hasn't Christianity responded to this spiritual need as England did to its material one? Surely they do not need the pen of Dickens to do it. Many of the letters from our missionaries equal Dickens' rhetoric, and yet —why is there such little response? Maybe you can help solve the difficulty.

"One of God's Ways"

It is not often that a death occurs at the Sisters' Convent, but this morning (December 7th) Death visited it and took an angel on earth and made her an angel in heaven. She was a little foundling who was left at the Convent gate just two years ago. It is not the custom here to encourage foundlings, as the Sisters would not be able to accommodate them all. In all they have received four foundlings, and all of them were in critical conditions of health and did not live long after their baptisms—but this little one (Malia—Mary—she was christened) lived for two years and endeared herself to the Sisters by a loving disposition and a piety rare in one so young—the priests used to bring her presents, and her little friends loved her dearly. During her short life she was always ailing and in much suffering. I thought of "Little Nellie of Holy God". Although she had never received our Lord in Holy Communion, just a week before she died she received the Holy Ghost in the sacred anointing of Confirmation.

After Mass I saw her for the first time—she was in her coffin in the parlour. At four o'clock she had died, and her frail little body was reverently prepared and placed in a box lined with cloth. Very nice she looked in her little dress and with a medal of the Immaculate Conception suspended around her neck by a blue ribbon. In the forenoon she was buried in a field with her little predecessors and the grave marked by a cross.

All this may seem of small or no significance, but it is an undisguised manifestation of the way of God—and that is never insignificant. His way this time is remarkable both in its beauty and its simplicity. The little one will be missed by the Sisters, priests, and her little friends; that, and the memory of her suffering are the only notes of sorrow, and they blend with and render sacred the joy of her holy and happy death and will add more to her bliss as she celebrates the feast of the Immaculate Conception tomorrow in heaven.

"Uncleanliness and Ungodliness"

I've always believed the proverb, "Cleanliness is next to godliness", even when long ago I had to be forced to wash my hands and face, but recently I have been more convinced by a demonstration of the negative of this proverb.

It was in the Chinese temples —three of them I visited, inspecting the idols and altars. The faces and images were like what I had previously seen in pictures, some with expression of gluttonous satiety, others with sickly grins, some with vacant bovine stares, others with ferocious frowns or gaping mouths. But what I noticed most was the state of the buildings (not deserving of the name)—dirt and dust, neglect and dilapidation—it was no one's job to keep the place presentable; no one seemed to care. The first temple I visited was the biggest disappointment; it was not what I'd call a temple, or even a house; it was merely a shack, and then I saw the only good point about it —it was no better than the god deserved. As we were there one unfortunate came seeking knowledge of the future. The ceremony was quaint and simply absurd. The ignorant one was given a can (a pork and bean tin for all we know) in which were about twenty sticks like six-inch rulers. Kneeling down before Boussa (Buddha), he started to rattle and shake the can, assuming queer contortions himself as he did so, until one of the sticks objected and fell out. This was

(Continued on page 30)

The first parish in Chuchow to be visited by our new missionaries after reaching China last October was Tsingtien. The group above, taken at the entrance to the Mission house at Tsingtien, shows (left to right): Rev. H. McGettigan, Rev. C. Strang, Rev. Wm. Amyot (one of our most experienced missionaries, who came to Shanghai to greet the 1934 Mission Band); Rev. J. MacDonald (of Tsingtien), and Rev. G. Doyle. The two new Sisters (at left) were accompanied from Shanghai to Lishui by Sisters Catherine and Julitta.

Rev. Arthur Venadam, of Pomquet, N.S., with his Lishui choir boys, whom he has trained to be remarkably proficient in church music. Father Venadam went to China in 1931.

MY FIRST MISSION TRIP

By

REV. W. H. McNABB

Wednesday, Oct. 24th

We remained at the Mission in the morning. Before the Way of the Cross in the afternoon I was talking to an old Christian woman. She said she had never been outside of the city in all her life. She has, of course, the small bound feet of the older generation; they were bound when she was an infant; and since most of the travel in China even to-day is by foot, she would find it extremely difficult to venture on a journey. She has somewhat of a reputation for curing ills, much to her pride. She recounted one of her cures—a deaf child. I suppose her remedies consist of old formulas handed down generation after generation. She made the mission most faithfully—not missing a single exercise.

That evening we received another invitation to a banquet—this time in the city. But before going there we had another call to make—to a paralytic. This man, an old Christian, had formerly lived in the city near the Mission, but when he became paralyzed he had to move out to his son-in-law's, where apparently his religion was scoffed at and despised. He, however, was most firm in his faith and his only fear was that when death approached the priest would not arrive on time, for Suichang is sixty li from Sung Yang. We told him he would live a long time yet, for his paralysis is not very serious, and that we would call again when we returned from Nan Dong and would then bring him Holy Communion. He was reluctant to let us leave. His faith and devotion really touched me. He wanted to settle everything for his funeral in order that it would be carried out in Christian fashion and with all possible ceremony. He made us promise we would call again.

We set out for the home of our host, who lived just off the main street, but whose living quarters were very poor. However, he certainly put up a fine meal—chicken, potatoes, meat, various kinds of food unknown in Canada, and, of course, wine. Having eaten well and smoked a while, we went back to the Mission, stopping on the way to make a few purchases.

In our January issue we began Father McNabb's story of a Fall Mission journey to Nan Dong in company with Father Beal, the Pastor of Sungyang. The diary form of narration will help readers to appreciate the difficulties of travelling to the outlying mission stations. Circumstances on the missions are such that a good deal of time is necessary to round up the scattered Christians and give them an opportunity of fulfilling their religious duties.

Thursday, Oct. 25th

At eight-thirty we were on our way to Nan Dong. Owing to the mountains being so hard to climb Father Beal thought it better to hire a chair for me, though he himself never uses one, on this trip to Nan Dong. After riding twenty li one of the chair-carriers took sick and said he could not proceed. Father Beal said that he was an opium-smoker, though I could not see how he knew; hence I asked him. He said that all opium-smokers had yellow stain on their hands and that their eyes turn greyish. His strength gave out because he needed more opium to keep up his energy. I thought that I could continue the remaining distance on foot, so we left the chair-carriers and proceeded. After a few more li we came to a small village and there we stopped to have dinner. In the kitchen of the house we saw a real novelty—a large fish pond, about ten by three feet, set in the ground (the floors in Chinese houses are made of earth). By means of a hollow bamboo pole water was kept continually running into the pond from the near-by stream. The pond had several large fish—dark ones and gold ones. The fish could be purchased, and as the Catechist said, rather cheaply. After dinner we struck a long, gradual climb, then the down grade and into a town called Chi Eu. We stopped to take tea. Then leaving here we had another long climb. A long descent brought us to another good-sized place, but not Nan Dong. It was getting on towards sunset. Just one more long steep descent and we arrived at the outskirts of our destination. Nan Dong is spread out over quite an area, so that the people, to distinguish, give the different parts descriptive names. The first is Nei-Nan Dong (Inside Nan Dong), the second is Sjan-Nan Dong (Upper Nan Dong), while the place where we were heading for was the third, Yuoh-Nan Dong (Lower Nan Dong). The first place has a number of Christians so that we called to tell them of our arrival. From there we tried to take a short road, but lost our way in some rice fields, till we came out at the back of a Christian's house; and they, of course, pointed out the correct road. A second time we lost our way, for it's a queerly laid-out place. However, we were soon put right again and in no time arrived at the house the priest is accustomed to sleep in. It was just six o'clock. Nothing was prepared, so that they began to hustle around, getting straw and boards for our beds. Supper appeared about seven-thirty, and not a bit too soon, for we were hungry. After night prayers Father Beal spoke a few words about the importance of the Mission and the order for the next few days. Then we retired. This first night we found it very cold, for the house was built on the side of a hill. It had one window, the bottom of which was just chest-high when we stood up, and it opened right on the ground-level like basement windows in Canada. I could hear something moving around in the straw on the bed, but did not know what it was. I thought it might be a rat, a snake, or a mole. However, I found out several nights later as I turned a flashlight on to discover the noise-makers to be rats. That first night I was too tired to be bothered about it.

PERHAPS you are thinking of soon drawing up your Last Will. Do you wish to remember some worthwhile Catholic endeavour? Make a note of our legal title. It is ST. FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

IF YOU HAVE already made your Will, and forgotten to leave a portion of the wealth with which God has blessed you to do some good for God's work, it is not yet too late to remedy the defect. In re-making your Last Will please remember the Missions.

Father McNabb, of St. Thomas, Ontario, has fully recovered from the serious illness which nearly proved fatal to him a year ago. He is now helping Father MacDonald in Tsingtien. Father McNabb is here shown with six young boys whom he baptized.

Friday, Oct. 26th

The next morning it was cold. The Chapel, or rather the open parlor where we said Mass, was just across from the house where we slept. All during Mass I was shivering. After breakfast we sat in the sun to warm up. A little later we went up to Sjan-Nan Dong to see the property purchased for the building of a Church, school, etc., later on. We made a few calculations as to the probable location of Church, etc. The property is centrally located in the town, facing an important street. At the back, the river or better stream runs along. There, stones aplenty can be obtained for the buildings. Although the mountains are more or less wooded the trees are small and would not do for a two-storey building, hence it will be necessary to have two or three one-storeyed buildings.

While looking over the property a Catechumen came along and invited us to go up to his home to have tea with him. His home was not far. This man is somewhat of a public personage, for he settles law suits (such as may arise in little Nan Dong). His three daughters are baptized; one of them is to be married in another month. He had a new house built but a year or so ago. After sipping a little tea and taking a smoke, we returned to Yuoh-Nan Dong to take dinner.

In the afternoon we remained at home. In the evening quite a crowd gathered after we had eaten supper. We talked over many things. They were greatly interested in knowing about food used in Canada. They were surprised to know that corn, potatoes and beans grew there. And of course, we had to tell them that rice was not grown there, but that we could buy it. It is strange to them to think of people living without rice, for over here to be without rice means that you have a very poor fare, the poorest of the poor.

* * *

Saturday, Oct. 27th

Nothing eventful in the morning. In the afternoon we visited the Christians to call them all to Mass next day. The extreme poverty of the place is particularly noticeable in te ragged and patched clothing worn, especially by the children. How they pass the winter is hard to say. No wonder they freeze their feet, with very thin socks or none at all, but only old torn cloth shoes.

In the evening the crowd gathered again for a chat. They are very anxious to know about the new Church and school. The town has a small school, but it has only twenty or thirty pupils, the fee being too much for the poorer people. The weather has turned a little warmer, hence our room is not so bad as the first night.

Sunday, Oct. 28th

At the early Mass Holy Communion was distributed. Father Beal said Mass immediately after I had said mine. In the meantime I took breakfast and prepared to preach a Sermon on the Sign of the Cross. Mass and Sermon over, we gathered in an open space (a field) to have a picture taken.

In the afternoon we had the Stations of the Cross. Afterwards a number of interested parties came to find out more particulars about the new Church, etc. As the Christians are going to give of their own accord material and help (as much as they can) Father Beal put it up to them whether they wanted two buildings or one, and how they would be built. After the discussion an old man came to ask for some of Father Beal's tobacco. And why? Well, here's the story: Three years ago Father Beal had some Edgeworth tobacco with him in Nan Dong. He gave some to a fellow who, as he learned later, had been sick all that day, unable to eat or work, but after smoking the tobacco he felt completely cured and was able to eat a good supper. Hence the story went around that Father Beal had some marvellous medicinal tobacco. Thus it was that this old man appeared to ask for some this Sunday afternoon. He said he wanted it for his son who had a pain in the stomach. Father Beal averred that as far as he knew the tobacco had no curative power for such a pain. So then the old fellow asked did the Reverend Father ever have a pain like his son had. To which question the answer was no. This confirmed the old man's opinion, surely that brand of tobacco must be good for the stomach. In the evening a goodly number turned out for an after-supper chat, for this was our last evening there.

* * *

Monday, Oct. 29th

After Mass Father Beal gave the Mission Blessing. After I had finished my Mass one of the Christians came up and asked for a drink of Mass wine. Curiosity, I guess. I refused him, of course. We took breakfast and started with our two carriers back to Suichang. The man in whose parlor we said Mass accompanied us out for a few li, as he had some business to transact at the last moment; this kept us about an hour late. The sun was getting higher and when you go climbing mountains in Chekiang province it a leather or straw sole tied to each foot. These coolies would rent their rickshas from a company by the day and it would keep them hustling to make even a small profit. There are thousands of these rickshas in Shanghai and it is a sight to see them draw up at an intersection awaiting the change of the traffic light. Within a few moments a group of rickshas, five or seven abreast, and fifteen or twenty deep will be collected, ready to dart ahead when the tall majestic turbanned Sikh policeman gives the signal. At any hour of the day and in any part of the city can be found one or more wandering risksha pullers looking for fares.

(Concluded on page 30)

DAYS IN SHANGHAI

(Continued from page 22)

Continuing our drive we turned up Avenue Edward VII which divides the International Settlement from the French Concession. Scenes in a few side streets told us that Shanghai is Chinese as well as European.

Eventually we reached our headquarters in Shanghai, the Procure of the Lazarist Fathers, known in Canada as the Vincentions, after their founder St. Vincent de Paul. This house is the headquarters of the Lazarist Missions in China, and is large enough to accommodate visiting Lazarist missionaries. Here is caried on the business of the missions under the able direction of Father Moulis.

Dinner was over when we arrived and Dr. McRae and the other Fathers gave us a real welcome, and also a late dinner. The several days passed in the Procure were of real benefit to us, newly arrived in China, enabling us to come into contact with the genuine Catholic culture of those bearded veteran missionaries, Fathers Moulis, Crapez, Abeloos and Lassus, who direct the business of the Procure. For even as the statue of St. Vincent de Paul surmounted the main altar in the chapel, so also did the spirit of this Saint cast its influence over all in the house. During the day they are occupied with the temporal affairs of the missions, when they are always considerate, but when the necessity demands they can be very strict, but after dinner and supper they are ready for a joke, a discussion on any subject or a simple game of dominoes. It was delightful to observe these priests laughing and humorously chiding each other with a simplicity and gaiety that was by no means childish but which bespoke rather a certain greatness which is the fruit of years of prayer and service of the Church. Theirs is a Catholicity, not cramped by the slightest narrowing influence.

The next morning we had the pleasure of greeting Monsignor McGrath, although we were sorry that it had to be in the hospital.

We were quickly initiated into the ways of Shanghai and soon were able to get around without a guide. English was spoken in all the stores; our most interesting purchase was a sun helmet, in preparation for next summer.

The money question was a weighty consideration, especially the dong-pas, a copper coin a little smaller than an English penny, and at the present exchange one receives about 990 of these coppers for a Canadian dollar, so when one receives seventy or eighty of these coppers in change it is easy to understand why it is a weighty consideration.

We visited all the usual points of interest about Shanghai, including the orphanage at Zi-Ka-Wei, which is really wonderful. There can be obtained all kinds of church goods, chalices, statues, bells, medals, etc., all made on the premises.

On Sunday it was our privilege to take part in an outdoor procession of the Blessed Sacrament in honor of Christ the King at the Sacred Heart Convent. The grounds and altars were beautifully decorated; priests, Sisters, children and others marched and sang. I am sure that Our Eucharistic Lord was pleased with China's homage.

Another privilege was having dinner with Father Frank MacDonald, S.J., the Canadian pastor of the Church of Christ the King, the parish in Shanghai for English speaking Catholics.

After nine interesting days in Shanghai we embarked on the "Haian", a small Chinese coastal steamer which would take us to Wenchow; as the "Haian" steamed down the Whangpoo River to the Yangtze I noticed that the date on the bell was "1873". Although the date betrayed the age of the boat it also gave the information that the "Haian" was built in the same year in which the Little Flower was born, which was a pleasant thought for the missionaries making their first voyage on a Chinese boat.

We remained on deck late that night, singing all the songs and hymns we could remember, and watching the lights on passing junks and steamers.

When finally I went below the bunks were prepared for the night. Yes, the bunks, the mattress, the pillow and the bedding! It was not, of course, the same as that which we had experienced on the "Empress of Russia". However, I felt that it was a good introduction to mission life in China. I closed my eyes and eventually slept.

The boat continued on to Wenchow.

OUR PRIESTS IN CHINA

CATHOLIC MISSION, LISHUI, CHE.—Very Rev. R. Serra, Reverend Fathers V. Morrison, P. Kam, A. Gignac, A. Venadam, J. McGillivray, G. Doyle, H. McGettigan and C. Strang.

CATHOLIC MISSION, KINHWA, CHE.—Rt. Rev. J. M. Fraser, P.A.

CATHOLIC MISSION, SUNGYANG, CHE.—Rev. L. Beal, Rev. P. Wong.

CATHOLIC MISSION, LUNGCHUANG, CHE.—Rev. J. Venini, Rev. D. Stringer.

CATHOLIC MISSION, TSINGTIEN, CHE.—Rev. J. MacDonald, Rev. W. McNabb.

CATHOLIC MISSION, PI-WU-KA, CHE. — Rev. Bernard Boudreau.

CATHOLIC MISSION, HUANG D'AN, via JUIAN, CHE.—Rev. W. Amyot, Rev. J. King.

(The postage for a letter to China is five cents)

FIRST MISSION TRIP

(Continued from page 28)

is not exactly cool plodding from stone-step to stone-step. When noon arrived it found us still far from the place where we had taken dinner coming to Nan Dong, so we decided to eat in Chi Eu. The Catechist gave a little talk and left a doctrine book at this place. At five-thirty we were back in the Mission in Sui-chang.

Tuesday, Oct. 30th

In the morning Father Beal took Holy Communion to the paralytic. He also gave the Mission Blessing. I proceeded ahead to Chu-z-ka by chair, for Father Beal had some further business to arrange. I left at eight-fifteen and arrived at five to twelve. This is very fast for chair-travelling—the distance being forty li. The Catechist expected our return and soon had dinner ready. The baggage-carriers arrived about two o'clock. They said their legs were aching, so that they would stay over a day in Chu-z-ka to rest up, before the long trip back to Nan Dong.

About 5.45 p.m. Father Beal and the Catechist came in. Yesterday's long, hard trip from Nan Dong and to-day's forty li made Father Beal confess that he was really tired.

Wednesday, Oct. 31st

Market Day in Chu-z-ka. Market Day means more in China than it does in most places in Canada. The whole neighborhood for 30 or 40 li would be in town. It being a bright day, I strolled out with the Catechist to look about the town. At this time of the year the Fall products are brought in—rice, peanuts, chestnuts, sugar-cane, etc. We met several Christians on the streets. We called on a salt merchant who has a boy studying in the Sung Yang Mission School. He was originally a native of Wenchow—the seaport some 150 miles east of here. He was most polite, serving sweet and hot water (a special treat in China). Then he brought us tea and boiled eggs—fortunately for me the eggs were not the two-year-old variety—but were quite fresh.

The Chinese use salt in large quantities for preparing and preserving foods, so much so that the large salt merchants sell only salt and make a good living. This day particularly is a busy one for them; I could see this man's clerk wrapping up package after package as fast as customers appeared. The salt is purchased in Wenchow and is brought inland by boat and raft in large baskets. The salt is a very coarse kind—greyish in appearance.

From here we passed along several other streets and then back to the Mission. In the afternoon we walked out three li to visit some Christians and to tell them to come to Mass on the morrow—The Feast of All Saints. These particular people had been neglecting their duties and hence we went to check them up.

* * *

The Feast of All Saints

Before prayers started we looked to see if the people whom we called on yesterday afternoon came or not—but no, they were not present—it looked as if they had not heeded our words. It had been raining during the night and indeed was still unsettled, so we thought they had let the weather hold them excused. And so when we had given up hope of their arrival, in they came, except one who did not show up at all. Someone, I thought, back home was saying a prayer for the Missions and it had not gone unheeded—it had brought these men out after such a long stay away. Father Beal preached.

After dinner we started out for Sung Yang, twenty li away. We got back to our central Mission just in time for Rosary and Benediction at three o'clock. I had been through my first experiences on a Mission trip, and I thoroughly enjoyed it, despite the discomforts. Now I know a little of what it means to be a Missioner on "active service".

FIRST IMPRESSIONS

(Continued from page 26)

the answer to his petition, but it had to be interpreted, and there was a fellow (who may have been a priest) behind a dirty counter who did this for a consideration. It was pitiable to watch the man's face as he listened to the utterance of the oracle.

What a beautiful contrast are the Catholic Churches; big or small, rich or poor, they present a cleanliness due to such a holy place. I have not yet come to know just what "pagan holiness" is, but whatever it is, the squalid surroundings seem quite distressing.

CATHOLIC MISSIONS

(Continued from page 21)

to make the left wing of the Kuomintang believe and make others believe, that the Revolution should be above all Communistic.

What was then the attitude of the Catholic Church when she faced Chinese Nationalism, Dr. Sun's Triple Demism, and Soviet Communism in China? To answer this threefold question is the main object of the present paper. Insofar as she succeeded in extricating herself from this trple difficulty, she emerged victoriously from the Nationalist Revolution.

(To be continued)

The new altar in Chu-z-ka chapel, seven miles from Sungyang. This beautiful altar is the gift of Mrs. Elizabeth Toal, of Dublin, Ireland, a generous benefactress of our missions.

Fisherman: "I tell you, it was that long. I never saw such a fish!"
Friend: "I believe you."

Mistress: "Why don't you ever water the rubber plant, Norah?"
Norah: "I thought it was waterproof."

Lady: "Oh, so you've been in touch with Royalty, have you?"
Tramp: "Yes, lady, I was once stung by a queen bee!"

First Coal-trimmer to second Coal-trimmer: "Did you know, Bill, that in the advertisements this ship is called 'a floatin' palace of rest and recreation'?"

Father: "Everything I say to you goes in at one ear and out the other."
Youngster (thoughtfully): "Is that what we have two ears for, father?"

"I've eaten beef all my life, and now I'm as strong as an ox."
"That's funny; I've eaten fish quite a bit and I can't swim a stroke."

Mistress: "Mary, if that's Mrs. Gabber, I'm not in."
Mary (returning): "It was, ma'am, and she was very glad to hear it."

Junior (smart boy): "Let's play Adam and Eve."
Little Julia: "How do we do that?"
Junior: "You tempt me to eat your apple—and I do."

Veteran: "Anyhow, there's one advantage of having a wooden leg."
Friend: "What's that?"
Veteran: "You can hold your socks up with thumb tacks."

Fortune-teller: "There's a dark woman following your husband."
Visitor: "She'll soon get tired; he's a postman."

"Goin' away, Mike?"
"I am that!"
"Well, if it's the next train ye're after catchin' ye just missed it!"

Gertie: "Isn't George ever going to marry?"
Flo: "No; I don't think he intends to marry. He is studying for a bachelor degree."

Father: "It's a good plan, my dear, always to think before you speak."
Daughter: "But, dad, when I do that the girls have changed the subject."

"Where have you been for the last four years?"
"At college, taking medicine."
"And did you finally get well?"

Mrs. M'Tavish (to a sick husband): "Donald, Sandy M'Grabbe has called. Can he come up and see you?"
M'Tavish: "Aye, but put the grapes awa first."

Mrs. Brown: "I've just asked Mrs. Smith 'ow 'er ole man's gettin' on, an' orl 'er said woz—'E's out of order.' Does 'er mean 'e's bad?"
Mrs. Jones: "No, 'e ain't bad. She's got that sayin' orf them broken slot misheens. It's swank, an' means that 'e won't work."

A dusky highwayman stepped out into the road and called to another darky: "Throw up yo' hands, brudder."
"Can't do it, cause ah get rheumatics in mah hands," was the reply.
"Nebber mind that. Ah's got automatics in mine!"
"Yo' wins, brudder, yo' wins."

"Look here, Mrs. Murphy, why have you been hitting my little boy?" asked an extremely indignant mother.
"I hit your boy because he was rude and called me a fat old pig!" retorted the other woman.
"But, goodness me, Mrs. Murphy, you ought to know better than that. Hitting my son won't do you any good; you'll have to start dieting!"

Yawning Miss: "Is that watch of yours going, Willie?"
Lingering Suitor: "Yes, dear."
Miss: "When?"

"Man," said the stern-faced woman, "will wake up one morning and find that the world is ruled by women."
The husband grimanced.
"Um," he said, "that's just like a woman, that."
"What's just like a woman?" she asked snappily.
"Why," he answered, deliberately, "to get the better of a man while he's asleep!"

"So you think he's an advocate of free thought?"
"Well, he offered me a penny for mine."

Whipper—"My college son is poor at football and worse at track work."
Snapper—"He might as well go in for an education."

"Here's one name on the committee that I never heard of."
"Oh, that's probably the person who actually does the work."

McGinty: "I've a terrible corn on the bottom of my foot."
Pat: "That's a foine place to have it. Nobody can step on it but you."

"Father," said little Eric, "what is a diplomat?"
"A diplomat," replied the father, "is a man who remembers a woman's birthday, but forgets her age."

"You should take this mulberry-colored dress, madam, it would suit you as you are so pale."
"But I'm not usually so pale. I am only shocked at the price."

Impressionistic Artist—"I do wish you would watch that child. He has spoilt two of my pictures already."
Wife (after anxious scrutiny): "Which two, dear?"

Her Partner: "If you are tired of dancing, Mrs. Newrocks, we will sit down and have a little tete-a-tete."
Mrs. Newrocks: "Oh, dear me no, after such a big supper I really couldn't eat anything."

"Mummy, do you say 'It is me,' or 'It is I?'"
"Always remember the rhyme: 'It is I,' said the spider to the fly."
"But couldn't you say 'It is me,' said the spider to the flea?"

Mother: "No, Jimmie, for the third time I tell you that you cannot have any more dessert."
Jimmie: "All right; but I don't see where dad gets the idea that you're always changing your mind."

Jackson—"Heaven bless him. He showed confidence in me when the clouds were dark and threatening."
Wilson—"In what way?"
Jackson—"He lent me an umbrella."

"Does your wife talk a lot?" a a man asked a friend.
"Talk a lot?" was the reply. "If I suddenly became deaf and dumb, it would take her a week to discover it!"

Father: "You say you won this prize at school for sport? This book was given for arithmetic, and it has another boy's name on it."
Son: "Yes, dad, I fought him for it."

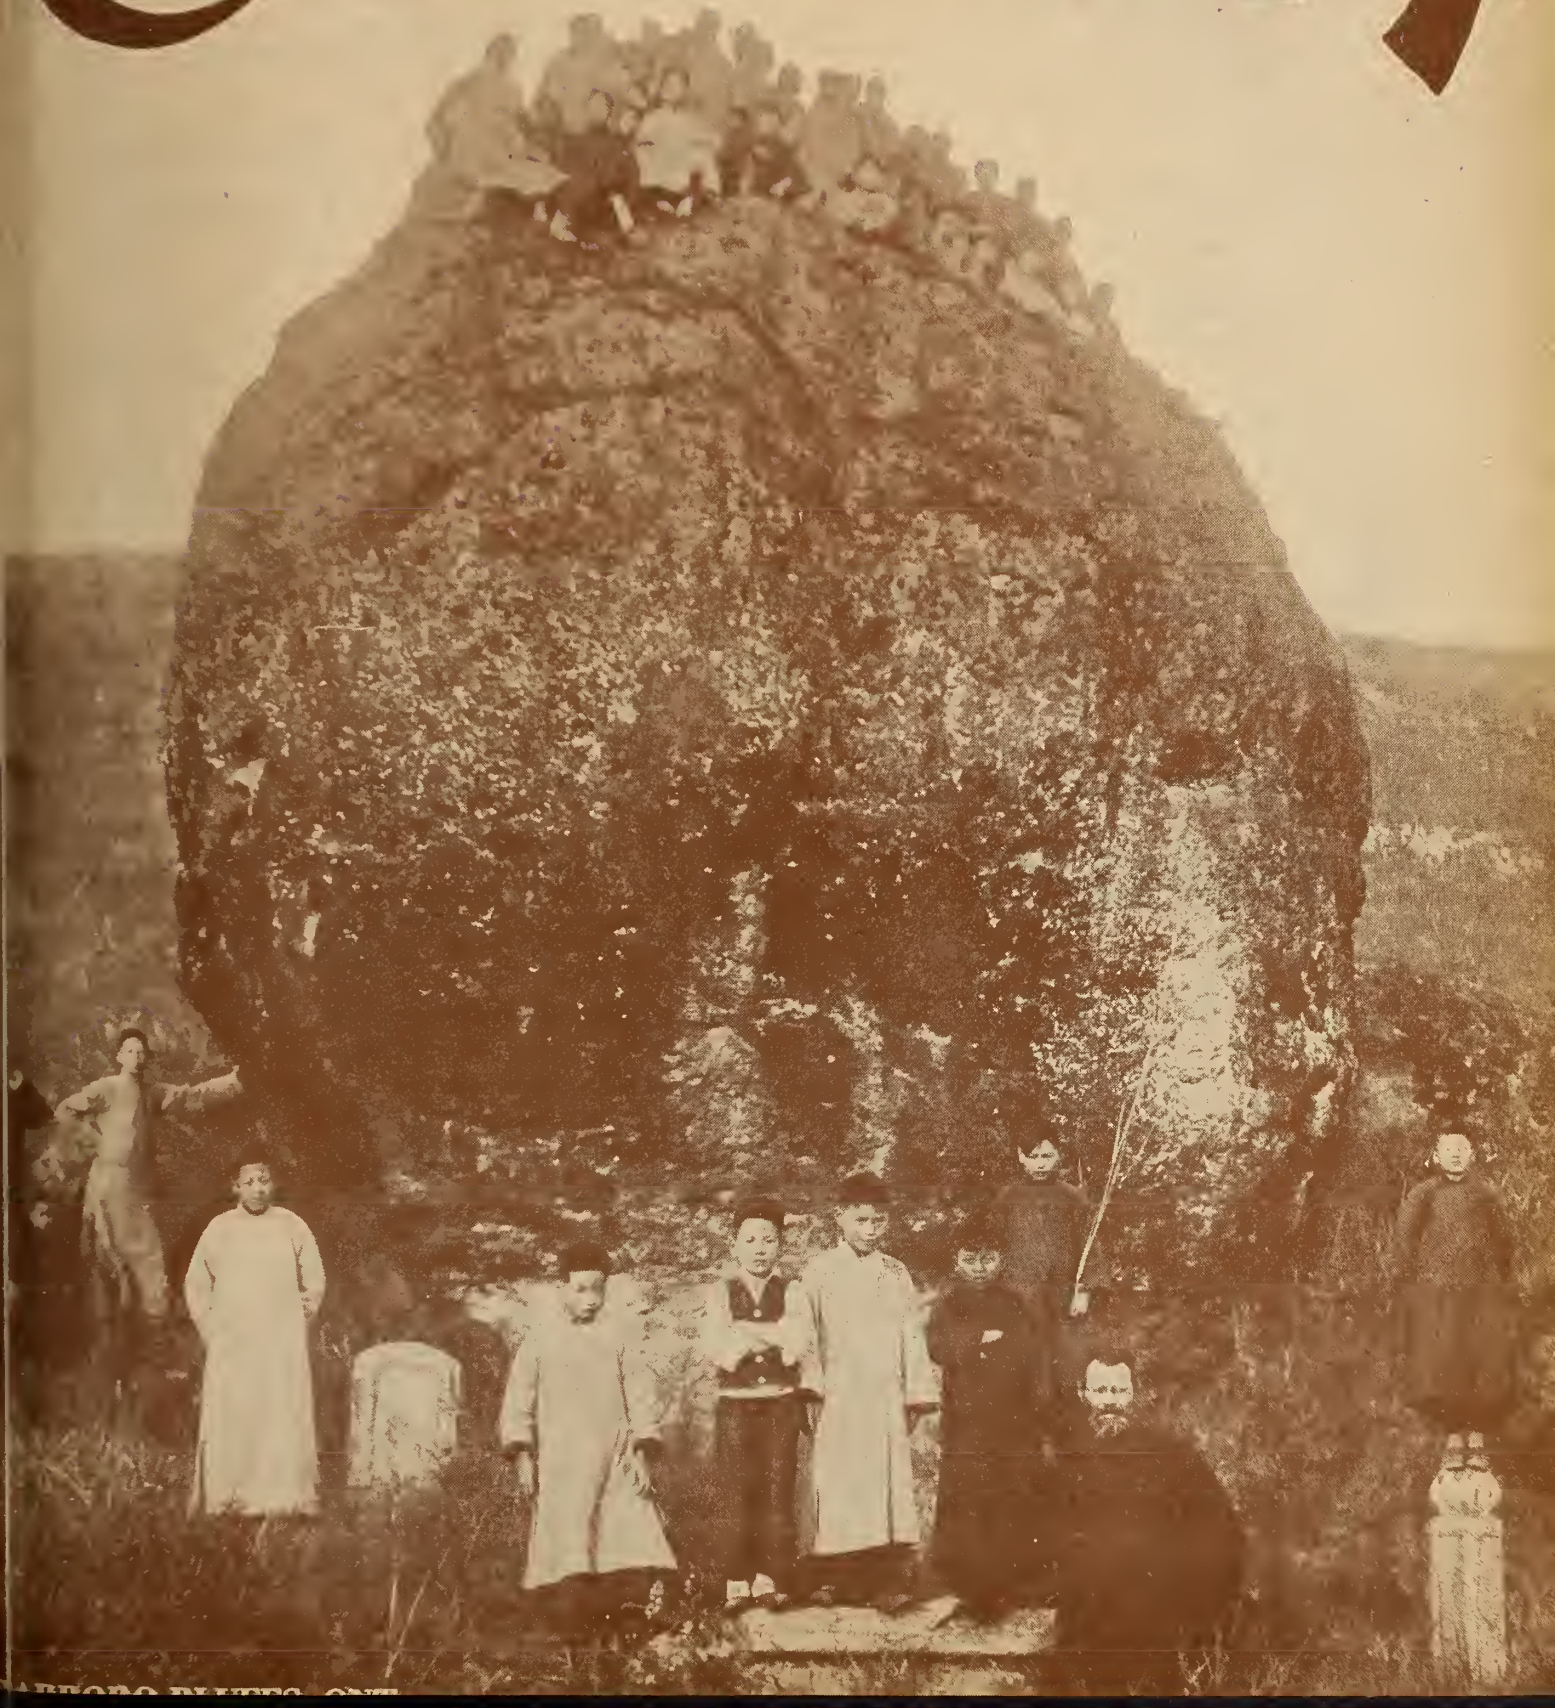
Our Work Must Go On!

Our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, Must be Supported.

Our Mission in China Must be Developed.

SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY

has ordained 22 Priests since its opening a little more than ten years ago. 48 students are now preparing for ordination at the Seminary. Altogether, 77 persons (priests and students), depend on the readers of "CHINA" for their support and for the upkeep of the Seminary, as well as for the development of the mission of Chuchow in China confided to the Seminary for evangelization. A large amount of money is required for these purposes. The only revenue received is what comes through the mail day by day. Our needs are many, and so once again we ask YOU, dear reader, to send us a little help if you can possibly afford it. Won't you put a cheque or a money order in the mail for us to-day, please?



Give your gift for the love of God, and you will give a gift that is worth while, no matter how small it is.

ALL TOGETHER, NOW! LET'S HELP THE MISSIONS!

St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario

Very Rev. John E. McRae, President

CHINA

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.
2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.
3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.
4. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Where Savings Earn 3%

One dollar is sufficient to open a savings account with the Capital Trust. Regular deposits, however small, with interest at 3%, soon count up to appreciable sums. Deposit, or withdraw by cheque, through the mail or at our nearest office.

CAPITAL TRUST Corporation Limited

100 Adelaide St. West
TORONTO
OTTAWA - MONTREAL

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.

OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West
Toronto

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 25,400
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XVI. MARCH, 1935 No. 3

The Apostolic Delegate's Visit to China Mission Seminary

HIS Excellency, Most Reverend Andrew Cassulo, Apostolic Delegate to Canada and Newfoundland, is at present engaged in an official Visitation to Seminaries and Higher Institutions of Learning throughout the country. On Friday, January 25th, it was the privilege of China Mission Seminary to welcome His Excellency. and to have him as its honoured guest for a day.

On his arrival in the morning. the Apostolic Delegate was received by the President of the Seminary, Very Rev. Dr. McRae. The priests and students of the Seminary accompanied His Excellency in processional order to the chapel, where was held the liturgical ceremony prescribed for the reception of a Prelate making a Visitation. During this ceremony the President of China Mission Seminary read to the Apostolic Delegate the address printed forthwith, and in reply His Excellency expressed his pleasure in visiting the training home of foreign missionaries in Canada. To the students he addressed words of encouragement and appreciation, and paternally gave to all the Apostolic Blessing. The Seminary choir rendered "Ecce Sacerdos Magnus" and "Oremus pro Pontifice" in part singing.

During the day, His Excellency very graciously received individually the members of the Staff and the students of the Seminary, and with each and every one he chatted familiarly, giving them to understand something of the zeal which filled his heart when the Foreign Missions were concerned, and assuring them that our Holy Father, Pope Pius XI., would be most interested in the report of his Visitation to China Mission Seminary. In the evening, as he took his departure, His Excellency stated that he had enjoyed immensely his stay with us. It was for himself an inspiration to come and stay amongst priests and seminarians who were devoting their lives to the work closest to the heart of the Pope. "I have been happy in speaking to you all of the Foreign Missions," said His Excellency, "for I know that the Missions are in the very centre of our Holy Father's heart."

Following is the text of the address presented to the Apostolic Delegate by the President of the Seminary:

"His Excellency,
The Most Reverend Andrew Cassulo,
Titular Archbishop of Leontopolis,
Apostolic Delegate to Canada and Newfoundland,
Apostolic Inspector of Seminaries.

"May it please Your Excellency:

"The Mission Seminary of St. Francis Xavier welcomes you this day, both as the representative in this country of our Holy Father, Pope Pius XI., and as Apostolic Inspector of Seminaries.

"This being the first official visit of an Apostolic Delegate to the institution, we humbly and reverently offer the assurance of our homage and devotion to and our love for His Holiness, the Vicar on earth of Jesus Christ and chief Pastor of His Church, whose august person and sacred office are represented in the person of Your Excellency. We beg to assure you of our devout prayers for him and for the Church during these days of severe trial and anxiety. Sharing our Holy Father's anxiety, his misgivings of the world and his paternal fear for souls, we trust that we may loyally assist him through prayer and participate in his hopes and confidence.

"In a more intimate sense we joyfully welcome Your Excellency as Apostolic Inspector of our Seminary.

"Young as the Seminary is, being still in its infancy, we feel we are justified in feeling a certain amount of pride in what it has accomplished during its ten years of operation here.

"The work was founded in 1918 by the Reverend John M. Fraser, Missionary Apostolic, for the purpose of educating and ordaining secular priests for the Foreign Mission Field of China. In 1923 its management was assumed by the Bishops of Ontario, and in 1924 the present house was established at Scarboro Bluffs under the patronage and warm encouragement of the late beloved Neil McNeil, Archbishop of Toronto. It opened with eleven students, and today it numbers on its roll fifty young men, who, coming from all over Canada and Newfoundland, are faithfully preparing to devote their lives to the conversion of pagan China.

"Inspired and quickened to action by the voice of the Vicar of Jesus Christ, the gloriously reigning Pius XI., Pope of the Missions, they have answered his appeal by enrolling themselves in that ever-growing army of laborers in the vineyard of the Lord. And in them, we sincerely feel we can assure Your Excellency, the Seminary has a group of neophytes who, by their devotion to duty, unquestioning obedience and loyalty, and unfeigned piety, are a credit to it and give promise of fruitful priestly work among those far distant teeming millions, whose salvation they are aspiring to effect.

"In the course of this inspection, Your Excellency will, undoubtedly, discover much that is imperfect and showing room for improvement. We humbly beg to state, however, that we are fully conscious of our weakness and defects, largely due to insufficient space, slender means, and these uncertain from day to day, and to human frailty, and we are most grateful for this opportunity of official and paternal correction.

"We feel also that we cannot permit this occasion to pass without acquainting Your Excellency with the fact that what the Seminary has accomplished it owes to the magnificent generosity of the faithful throughout Canada and Newfoundland. In many cases they have provided out of their want the material means of carrying on this work, and to them we owe a debt of gratitude which Almighty God alone can repay.

"Finally, we deeply appreciate this gracious visit with which Your Excellency has deigned to honour us, and we tender the assurance of our prayers that Almighty God may bless you and render your labours fruitful of many souls in China and over the whole of Your Excellency's jurisdiction.

"We beg Your Excellency's blessing on us all—the Seminary, its benefactors, its priests here and in China, its students, and its work."

Shih-t'ang

by

REV. JAMES D. McGILLIVRAY

SHIH-T'ANG is a little village on the Chuchow River, about eighty li from Lishui. Why this town is called Shih-t'ang (Rock-pool) I never inquired. As long as the title includes the term "rock" no one can say the place is mis-named, for it is mostly all rock. Except where it opens onto the Chuchow River, Shih-t'ang is completely surrounded by mountains of solid stone.

When Father Morrison, the pastor of Lishui, was making the Fall missions, the Christians of that district asked him if it were possible to send them a priest to celebrate the feast of Christmas this year.

Within the past two years an attempt has been made to connect the principal cities of this district by means of roads. How often, in Canada, have we heard this remark: "Oh, if we had a car how convenient it would be to go here or to go there, etc. . . ." The young people, I suppose, never heard that; it is ancient history. All have cars now. Up to within a few months ago if we were going to visit one of the missions and were logical in our wishing, the first wish would be for a road. Even now, to arrive at Fr. Beal's mission at Sungyang or Father Amyot's mission at Huang-t'an one can take a small boat for a part of the way, if there is water in the river. If the water is very low, a raft replaces the boat. For the remainder of the journey you can claw your way along the side of those mountains. But one of the means at your disposal is not a road in the ordinary meaning of that word. At present, with the exception of those two places, there are roads going to the mission centres. All we need now is a Ford. Isn't that true to life? No sooner have we a road than we start wishing for a car. Foreign missionary priests—and sisters, too, are hard to please. They are always wishing

(Continued on page 39)

CHRISTMAS AFIELD

By REV. GERALD DOYLE

THE Christmas spirit was in the air at Lishui.

Father Venadam was in the church with his choir preparing for Midnight Mass. Plans were made for a fine Christmas Crib which would delight the Christians, and large gorgeous lanterns were placed around the mission compound and in the church; it was not difficult to imagine how brightly they would gleam on Christmas Eve.

There were rumors of a large Christmas cake, geese and even mince pie. In fact everything pointed to an ideal feast day celebration, a day of "much praying and much eating".

It was thought that all would be at home for Christmas except Father McGillivray, who was scheduled to go to Yunhwo for that great feast, and incidently give the Chinese an opportunity to appreciate his first Chinese sermon; then a letter arrived from Monsignor Fraser asking for a priest to assist at Kinhwa over Christmas.

Father Serra gave the necessary authorization, so on the morning of December 24th, in a wobbling rickshaw, I left headquarters for the bus station outside the walls of the city. I was accompanied by Mr. Ou, a former seminarian who spoke Chinese and Latin, but no English.

That bus ride from Lishui! The road along the edge of the river is blasted out of the rock. The Gorge Route along the Niagara River gives a slight idea. The road is narrow, and at places there is a sheer drop of a few hundred feet. The driver goes ahead at a good speed, approaching blind turns with a nonchalance which is almost awe-inspiring. Back seat drivers would have heart-failure in this bus. The better way is to watch the scenery from the side and keep eyes off the road ahead, unless blessed with good nerves. The Chinese seem unaware that there is any possibility of a mishap. A woman across from me is contentedly cracking watermelon seeds! The passenger behind me becomes sick from the fast motion. Dogs on the road are unaccustomed to motor cars and are usually frightened and know not what to do, sometimes they run ahead and then to the side. One dog paid no attention to the oncoming bus—poor dog, he's dead now. The driver did not even slow down.

Two cows on the road instead of going to side, race ahead of the bus. The driver slows down and sounds the horn, as a cow is a valuable animal in China. After a frantic dash of about 400 yards the cows, in seeming dispair, turn to the side, one loses its footing and slides a few feet toward the edge of the cliff, and has seemingly started a long drop to the river below. Some of the passengers cry out, but the cow recovered its footing just in time. The bus continues on its way.

At Chin Yuing, 90 li from Lishui, it was necessary to change busses. This town is in our district, but as yet there is no chapel there. While awaiting the bus two girls with newly-painted cheeks went giggling by.

The next stop and change of busses was at Yung Kan, which is in the Kinhwa district. During the wait, I opened the lunch prepared for me by the Sisters in Lishui. There were apple-sauce sandwiches (by request), a few cookies, a piece of cake and some candies, so it turned out to be a real surprise package. The lady in charge of the little tea shop poured out a cup of weak green tea for me. It was at least wet and hot. Before coming to China I had thought that I would always be able to get a good cup of tea, no matter where I was. At the mission we have black tea like at home, and tinned milk and sugar are usually available, but on the road one must be content with Chinese tea, in fact it is very welcome although not always obtainable.

Eventually the bus started on the last lap to Kinhwa with the usual formalities, the whistle blew and we were off. A real ceremony is necessary to bring the bus to a standstill at a bus station, sufficient to dock an ocean liner. As soon as the bus is within sight of the station, the station master stands in the road and starts waving green and red flags. I tried to figure out the code, but it was beyond me, or perhaps it is different for each station, and only the bus driver is in the secret.

The bus carries not only passengers, but other things. In the aisle are a few bags of rice, and as these notes were jotted down my feet rested on a sack of meat, the torn corner of the sack revealing its contents.

A gentleman in the corner satisfied a certain desire by inhaling the odor from an orange peel which he gracefully held to his face.

At a stop a couple of farmers excitedly boarded the bus, and sat on the sack of meat at my feet. Evidently it was their first ride in a motor car, and it was interesting to watch the expressions on their faces.

The Crib at Kinhwa, 1934.

Being a foreigner I was more or less an object of curiosity, but when once I removed my hat, and they saw my blonde hair I was more than ever an object of interest.

At Kinhwa it was necessary to pass over a pontoon bridge after leaving the bus. Taking rickshaws we had a long ride through the city before reaching the mission. Monsignor Fraser gave me a fine welcome and brought me to my room.

There is a fine church and residence at Kinhwa, and I enjoyed visiting the mission compound under Monsignor's guidance. We saw the kitchen and next to it was the cook's room. The poor man was sick while I was there, but fortunately the man who did the laboring work around the mission was able to take his place, while a farmer who was called in completed the kitchen staff.

There is a good number of boys in the school while the girls' school is under the direction of Chinese Sisters.

All was prepared for Midnight Mass. The church was decorated with lanterns and hangings, and several bright oil lamps lighted the church very well. The Crib, especially prepared, was very fine. During the evening the priests heard confessions, preached, and the choir sang Christmas hymns. Many pagans were present, and it is to be hoped that some will become catechumens.

At midnight Monsignor Fraser came to the sacristy, and when he was vested we entered the church, and commenced the Pontifical Solemn High Mass. Monsignor was celebrant, Father Tcheng was assistant priest. Father Kiang was deacon, while I acted as subdeacon. The Sisters sang very well and the people were very devotional, even though some of the children fell asleep. What pleased me most was the large number who received Holy Communion.

After the High Mass I celebrated my three Masses at a side altar, and then I went into the house and had a lunch before retiring for the morning. The time was three o'clock in the morning of Christmas, which meant that it was two o'clock in the afternoon of December the 24th in Toronto, as China is thirteen hours ahead of Eastern Standard Time.

IN THE CONVENT GARDEN AT LISHUI

I assisted at the ten o'clock Mass celebrated by Father Kiang on Christmas morning, and by the end of the Mass I was almost immune to the sound of cannon firecrackers exploding.

For our Christmas dinner we had goose, very well cooked, and I enjoyed my first Christmas dinner in China.

In the afternoon Monsignor Fraser showed me the city, and it is a fine Chinese city, with several buildings of solid foreign construction. There were some very good stores, but the railway station was a real surprise. It is new and modern with every convenience. Many small cities in Canada would welcome a similar station.

While the city was interesting it was sad to think that to these people the day was just another day, the 19th day of the eleventh moon. Christmas meant nothing to them, very few of them had even heard of the meaning of this great feast. Business went on as usual.

In the evening it began to rain and Monsignor and the other priests said that it would be impossible to leave in the morning, as the roads would be too dangerous. In the morning, however, after Mass and breakfast I set out for the bus station, carrying four loaves of bread and a dozen buns. The bread in Kinhwa is good.

Arrived at the station we were informed that all the busses had been commandeered by the military to transport soldiers to the Lungchuan district, where the bandits were rather active. As there was a possibility of one bus leaving in an hour I decided to wait, so in a typically Chinese restaurant near the station I sat down and read the office of St. Stephen, Martyr.

The restaurant was open to the street, and the "kitchen" was near by. A previous rain and a present drizzle made everything wet. A dirty mangy white dog sniffed me over, and an industrious chicken pecked at the mud on my shoes.

After an hour's wait the boy told me that it would be impossible to get a bus that day, so with down cast eyes, to avoid the mud and puddles, I returned to the mission, there to receive another welcome from Monsignor Fraser and the other priests. They were not surprised at my return. It seems that in China it is almost impossible to surprise a missionary. Experience has taught him a great deal.

After a wait of two days, there being no certainty as to when the busses would be on schedule again, I telephoned Father Serra who gave me the necessary permission to go to Shanghai to have some dental work attended to, on for or wanting something. You cannot satisfy them. Some are actually looking forward to the time when there will be a little chapel and school in every important centre. Did anyone ever imagine such optimism?

(Continued on page 44)

SHIH-T'ANG

(Continued from page 36)

The road to Shih-t'ang is no boulevard. At one place the bus is polled across the river on a bamboo raft. Not a bit dangerous, of course. But just as a little precaution the passengers get off. The arrangement is all right. At least a certain harmony exists; if the road were any better it would surely "lose face" when this bus runs over it.

On Saturday afternoon, Dec. 22nd, the importance of my mission overshadowed the inconveniences of the journey. I was on my way to poor people in a little village lost in the mountains of Chekiang: to take away their sins by the sacraments of Penance and Baptism, and to bring down from Heaven—for the first time on Christmas night at Shih-t'ang—so they could receive Him in their hearts, the same God Who was born in Bethlehem nearly two thousand years ago. Did it make any difference how I got there?

The Christians did their best to show that they appreciated the great grace God was giving them. There were firecrackers, paper lanterns and noise galore. Many came in from the surrounding villages.

On Christmas Eve the services start much earlier in China than in Canada. Long before eight o'clock they are well under way. Before midnight the priest and catechist both have preached. Between the sermons the people are praying. Praying in China is also different. In Canada sometimes the priest has to speak to the people for not answering the prayers, particularly the Rosary, out loud. That is a fault that does not exist here. When a Chinese starts to pray, he is praying out loud—he is singing at the top of his voice. At times one would prefer the other extreme, especially when hearing confessions that are not coming in any too clear at best.

At twelve o'clock I said two Masses and distributed Holy Communion, then packed the Mass kit to leave early next morning for Yun-ho, a city forty li distant, in order to say the third Mass there on Christmas Day. It was three o'clock in the afternoon when I arrived at Yun-ho. No, the roads and bus serivce are not perfect yet.

When Dreams Come True

"The Shen-fu (Spiritual Father) is wanted at the telephone office in the city," was my first greeting on arriving at Yun-ho. My very good friends, Fathers Venini and Stringer, were 'phoning from Lungchuan for me to visit them as I was already half way there. Once a year, at the time of retreat, all our priests have a chance to see each other. At other times if one happens to be in range of a brother priest he would certainly like to drop in on him. But there was another reason why an invitation to leave Yun-ho was most acceptable.

Away back in 1927, while at St. F. X. University, Antigonish, I received my first introduction to Yun-ho. It came by way of an article in "China" written by Father Morrison, who was pastor there at that time. In that issue Fr. Morrison described his only place of abode as "one windowless room with a damp mud floor", and so cold that he could write only between eleven and three, when he had the sun.

Perhaps that write-up of the difficult life of the missionary priest in China influenced my choice of vocation. It certainly came at a time when a decision must be made. Did the pitiable condition of the priest's house at Yun-ho have something to do with my coming here? I know it had a whole lot to do with my leaving there. Father Morrison's description flattered the place. It hasn't a mud floor. It has no floor at all; just the bare ground. And at places the walls do not come down to the ground. No stove, no heat of any kind. No light, no window, and I could not leave the door open because both the rain and the people would come in. And there were periods when one could get along quite nicely without either. On the walls still remains the "Charlottetown Guardian", Father Morrison's home town newspaper, which he had plastered over the cracks to keep out the cold wind—away back in 1927.

In three days I had administered to the cares of the few Christians for the time being, and then I was quite willing to accept Father Venini's invitation. In fact, my own job at Lishui did not look too bad after that experience. And it was to Lishui I came, for the soldiers had commandeered all the busses going to Lungchuan.

Out in that pagan country one would never expect to see any sign of Santa Claus. Yet that is not true; he actually came to me. On Christmas Day my boy produced a box containing cake, fruit, candy, etc., to go with our rice. It was not difficult to guess where the box came from—the Grey Nuns at Lishui. Not only in regard to tending our sickness, but to add those little human touches that make life worth while, our Sisters never miss an opportunity. The missionary life would be difficult, indeed, without them.

The Students at the Seminary have enjoyed one of the best hockey seasons in years. The recreation periods have seen many a thrilling battle on the ice. And, believe us, seminarians take their hockey seriously. The above view shows the "Senior" teams. The young man standing at the right had the difficult job of referee. Following a series of victories against their sporty rivals of St. Augustine's, the "Seniors" quite confidently essayed to teach an all-star "Junior" team a few tricks. Result: Seniors 0, Juniors 5. Now the boys in the above picture are humbly referring to themselves as the "ex-Seniors". But there will come a day, perhaps, when the jubilant juniors will learn that it doesn't pay to "rub it in" too much to really good hockey players.

The STORY of YU SHAN

By

A Missionary in Chuchow

THE readers of "China" are already acquainted with the little village of Lei Zhih, the history of which was so fittingly described by Father Serra's letter published in the November issue of "China", and with the little Chinese Christian girl whose Chinese name is Yu Shan. The following story woven around this little girl's life is so filled with thrills, plots, dangers and romance that it sounds more like fiction, yet it is an actual story of a long difficult struggle for faith, justice, and freedom from Chinese customs and pagan abuses, made by a little Chinese Christian girl who is helpless except for the strength and protection she seeks and receives from God through fervent prayer. The final outcome of which leads to the greater glory of God and her own happiness.

The story centers around Yu Shan's home village of Lei Zhih, which nestles at the foot of the mountain about two hundred yards from the river which flows along at the foot of another high mountain. In his letter Father Serra told how this village had at one time only three Christians, while today there are only three pagan families, and of how this was accomplished for the most part by the little Christian girl called Yu Shan.

Yu Shan was born of pagan parents in the year 1916. When still a mere infant she became very ill, and was not expected to live, so her brother, a young Christian man, called in a catechist or Christian teacher in the village, and with the permission of his pagan parents had his little sister privately baptized. There was no permanent catechist or Christian teacher in the village, and the brother being a boatman was very seldom home, so little Yu Shan recovering from her sickness, and having no one to teach her the Catholic faith was brought up by her pagan parents as a pagan. But, since in China little girls are not wanted by their parents, Yu Shan, when nine years old, was sold to another pagan according to the Chinese custom as future wife to his son, although she would remain with her parents until the time of the marriage.

A few years later when the Canadian priests took over the district, the visits of priests to these outlying villages became more frequent, and Yu Shan on hearing more and more about the Christian religion became interested in her baptism, and with a few kind words from the priests started to learn the doctrine. For this purpose and at her own earnest request the priests obtained permission from her parents, and had her sent to the Grey Sisters' convent school at Lishui where, as Father Serra remarked, she made good progress in knowledge and piety under the care of the good Sisters, and during her vacation time at home she worked and prayed most zealously in catechising her parents, relatives, and friends. It was at this period when so happy in seeing that her many prayers and energetic works were gradually having their effect upon her parents and many neighbors by convincing them of the futility of idolatry, that she was called upon to bear yet another cross. For it would seem that God was now only preparing her to fight a still more difficult battle for her faith and freedom against pagan evils and injustice.

This arose from the marriage contract made by her father when he sold her some seven years previous. The time for this marriage was now rapidly approaching; the more Yu Shan thought about it the more unwilling she was to join her future with a pagan, who, for a living made josh-sticks which have no other use or purpose than pure idolatry. The fear and uncertainty of the future was an incitement for her to learn even more clearly and perfectly the Christian doctrine, to pray more fervently for the conversion of her parents, and have more confidence in God's help; while the devil was making greater efforts to win back her soul and the souls of her parents and friends. The future looked black, her hopes of being released from the marriage seemed futile; her father, not yet a Christian, was absolutely unwilling to have the contract broken, nor would he do anything to help his daughter, but as a true pagan left her to fight her own battle. From then on she was afraid to go home during vacation time, knowthat her father would not protect her, and that she would be taken away by her promised husband.

The first signs of hope came when the priest finally persuaded the father to defend his daughter and to make every effort to have this contract broken, for unless he did, he could not receive baptism which he now desired. The father then sought ways and mean to induce the pagan to release him from the contract, but all was in vain, for the pagan not only flatly refused, but told the father that, unless he handed his daughter over at once she would be taken by force.

The father in the meantime having been baptized, and seeing that all his good efforts to have his daughter freed from this pagan marriage were of no avail, as a last resort sought the protection of the Chinese law (wherein there is now a new law which requires the consent of both parties for a marriage, regardless of any contract that may have been made by the parents when the parties to be married were only children). Still the pagan husband-to-be, not to be out-done, and fearing that he should lose the case if taken to court, increased his efforts and disregarding all laws made several desperate attempts to capture the girl, but fortunately without success. It was now no longer safe for Yu Shan to go home or to any place near the village, for her life was in danger, so during the greater part of the past summer's vacation she had to seek refuge with friends in Tsingtien.

Three times during the summer she and her father were called to the court in Tsingtien. From the first and second trial it seemed that the judge was in favor of Yu Shan; but during the third trial, whether through bribery or fear he refused to decide the case and referred it to the Mandarin, the highest authority in the district, who, being more inclined to favor the old Chinese laws and customs, not only gave a decision against Yu Shan, but scolded her for attempting to break her father's contract, and at the same time spoke openly against the Church, and upbraided her for being a Christian.

Heart-broken and disappointed beyond words, the father and daughter went to the priest's house and through bitter tears told the priests of the unjust decision they had been given. The priest seeing the rank injustice of the whole affair and bitterly resenting what the Mandarin had said about the Church, advised them to press their case and take it to the Higher Court at Wenchow, where justice would surely be given them. In the meantime, they were not to be discouraged but pray and place all their trust in the good God, and all would turn out for the best. On November 24th, the case was tried at Wenchow, and a final decision was given to the effect that the previous decision given by the Mandarin at Tsingtien was unjust, therefore null and void, that the father was completely released from his contract, and Yu Shan was not obliged nor could she be forced by law to marry, but was free to marry whom she wished. On returning to Tsingtien after the trial Yu Shan and her father heard Mass and received Holy Communion in thanksgiving for all that God and His priests had done for them, and intended leaving for their home that afternoon, but on hearing that the priest was leaving the next day to make a four-day mission at Lei Zhih, they waited and with the priest and his sacristan set off the next day for home, where they were warmly greeted by relatives and friends, everyone, men, women, and children were rejoicing so much that Father MacDonald says "He never saw a happier crowd since coming to China".

But in their joy little thought was given to the treachery and threats of the pagan party, to whom the verdict of the court meant very little except to increase his anger and determination to capture the girl by hook or crook. And so the following morning after Mass the happiness of Yu Shan and the other Christians was brought to a sudden end. Father MacDonald was making his thanksgiving after Mass when he heard shouts for help coming from the next room adjoining the one used for a chapel. Rushing from the chapel to see what the trouble was, he found a crowd of Christian men and women pounding on the door leading to a small room used for the priest's bedroom. From the excitement and confusion he understood there were bandits in his room. Without waiting for the Christians to break the door down, he ran back through the chapel and around to the back of the house where there was another small door to his room; there he was met by four or five men armed with sticks and knives, who immediately attacked him, striking and holding him fast by the arms so that for a time he was quite helpless; but being well-trained in the art of self-defence and realizing it was a fight for his life, he finally broke loose and started to use his fists in real old policeman style, knocking down for the count three or four including the leader of the gang. By that time the Christians had come to the rescue, and after twenty minutes or so of hard fighting succeeded in driving off the intruders, who while making a hasty retreat did not forget to pour forth volumes of wild curses and maledictions,

(Continued on page 44)

Entrance to the Court of Justice in Tsingtien. Here Yu Shan's case was tried. Dr. Sun Yat Sen's memorial park in the background.

CATHOLIC MISSIONS

The Catholic Church vs. Chinese Nationalism

This is the second instalment of a very interesting article by Fr. D'Elia, Member of the Sinological Bureau, Shanghai, and Professor of Missiology at the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome. This article, taken verbatim from "The China Year Book, 1934", gives a graphic description of the Church's struggles in China. This struggle was threefold, namely, the Church vs. Chinese Nationalism; the Church vs. the Triple Demism; and the Church vs. Communism. As Fr. D'Elia points out, in so far as the Church succeeded in extricating herself from this triple difficulty, she emerged victoriously from the Nationalist Revolution.

WHAT Chinese Nationalism wanted was: China for the Chinese! This meant that China should rid herself of the manifold chains by which she had hitherto been fettered: Customs, unequal treaties, concessions, leased territories and unfavorable balance of trade. This meant also that China should be treated on a footing of equality as well as in civil as in religious matters. Therefore: Catholicism should be utterly disentangled from foreign politics of any country; it should never oppose the emancipation of China or the vindication of her rights; it should pave the way so that the Chinese communities, provided with Chinese bishops, might soon be made independent of foreign missionaries.

Viewed from this precise angle, the matter was easy for the Catholic Church to handle. She had to make clear and unobjectionable to the Chinese people and their leaders her own century-old policy and practice. This she did in a long series of statements and facts which were not inspired by any spirit of transient expediency or timely accommodation to the trend of events, since some of them dated far back beyond the Nationalist revolution. This latter, however, came in time, to stress them and in some circumstances to hasten and multiply them.

The Church has always held that patriotism, provided it is in harmony with natural divine right, is a moral virtue akin to justice, which therefore has to be praised and encouraged. Being the Church of St. Stephen of Hungary, of St. Wenceslas of Bohemia, of St. Elizabeth of Portugal, of St. Louis of France, of St. Joan of Arc, of Columbus of Genoa, of thousands and thousands of young men who died on so many battlefields, she cannot help teaching sincere and heroic love of one's own country, desiring its strength and prosperity. And when, as it is the case in China, international problems have first to be solved in order to reach this state of strength and prosperity, the solution of them, in the eyes of the Church, should be sought along the evangelical path of justice and charity. This teaching had already materialized, for instance, in the answer which came from the Vatican relative to the affair of May 30th, 1925. Pius XI in his first Encyclical of December 23rd, 1922, had already written: "The love of one's country and one's race, when regulated by Christian law, is a powerful source of manifold virtues and of acts of heroism." Having received therefore a telegram from the Professorial Body of the Peking National University, asking him, in the name of Christianity, to mediate in the settlement of the dispute of May 30th, he answered, telling how much in sympathy he was with the "great Chinese people", and hoping that "order and concord might soon be restored in a spirit of mutual understanding, conformity with the principles of justice, of equity, and of Christian charity".

Likewise, on July 1st of the same year, the Apostolic Delegate to China wrote: "The Church has no prejudice whatever against China. . . . Chinese Catholics are free, as are all Catholics the world over. Religion does not in any way curtail their civil rights and could not in any way wound their lawful patriotism; on the contrary, it sanctifies the latter by the example of the Divine Redeemer who wept over the ruin of Jerusalem."

In order clearly to disentangle the Catholic Church from any Western Power, one of the first acts of Cardinal Achille Ratti, on assuming the See of Peter, was to succeed where four of his predecessors had failed, namely, in having the Holy See represented in China. Hardly six months had elapsed since his election, when on August 9th, 1922, he established the Apostolic Delegation to China, appointing Mgr. Celso Costantini as his first Delegate. In the eyes of non-Catholics "this was a master move on the part of Rome, for it once and for all destroyed the supremacy of any single national group working in the Chinese mission field". (International Review of Missions, London, 1929, p. 98.) Moreover, "instead of letting the missions depend on the protection of some foreign State" (The Month, London, 1927, p. 252) it gave unity and direction to missionary labours and tended to remove the natural prejudices and fears about foreign invasion. Thus the blow which came in 1927 had been prevented as early as 1922.

Nevertheless, anti-Christian agitation pretended that Catholic missionaries, too, were the tools of foreign imperialism. Thereupon Pope Pius XI on June 15th, 1926, issued a letter wherein he strongly rejected such calumny. The mere fact, he said, that the Church is Catholic, namely, Universal, should suffice to dispel this anti-Christian cloud. Besides, "the Church takes care not to mingle or get entangled with politics and civil affairs" and "she has never tolerated that her missionaries should back by their action the policy or interest of any foreign Power", not even of their own. In times past, when China had not yet entered the path of modern international life, it happened that foreign Governments had—as it was their duty—to take upon themselves the protection of the Church against persecution. But even then, never had the Church "intended in any way whatsoever to back the policies that perhaps foreign Governments might eventually have cherished in protecting their own nationals." Missionaries are not the emissaries of foreign Powers but the ambassadors of Christ, and hold their mandate from His Vicar on earth.

Time and again foreign missionaries have been reminded by the Pope that in the mission field there should be no such thing as nationalism, meaning thereby the tendency to work for the glory or the influence of their own country or race. They have to work for souls and nothing else than souls. Nationalism has always proved a scourge and even a curse for missions; nay, it is the most dreadful plague of apostleship, pestis teterrima apostolatus.

To work for souls in mission lands means not only to save souls, but above all, to plant the Church, a Church native to the soil, provided with her own priests and bishops. Ever since the beginning of missions in non-Christian lands, it has been the constant policy of Rome to urge the establishment of native clergy, including priests and bishops. A huge amount of ecclesiastical documents from 1926 up to our own days had no other aim except to remind missionaries that their first and most urgent duty is to establish a regular, normal, indigenous Church, self-controlling, self-propagating, self-supporting, proceeding in some sense from the vitals of the people themselves. But never had the Popes spoken so openly and so strongly as Benedict XV in his Apostolic Letter, "Maximum Illud", and the present Pope Pius XI in his Encyclical, "Rerum Ecclesiae", issued respectively in 1919 and 1926. The conclusion of the latter was: "Christ's Kingdom cannot be established and made steady anywhere in any other way" then by indigenous priests and bishops. Therefore "nothing will prevent any longer natives from being placed at the head of parishes, and lastly of dioceses, to be erected as soon as it shall please God."

These last words were of February 26th, 1926. Less than four months after, on June 15th, when there were as yet no Chinese bishops, the Pope insisted that the "foreign priests and bishops should co-operate with Chinese priests and bishops for the welfare of the Church and of the country". On October 28th of the same year, the world learned with astonishment that the Pope in person had consecrated in Rome the first six Chinese bishops of modern times. Once more the Catholic Church had provided for the blow which was to come in the following year. Since then the movement of the indigenization of the Church has been speedily accelerated both by facts and the Shanghai Council, whose decrees became laws of the Church on June 12th, 1929. Today twenty-one territories, with about 500,000 Catholics, representing almost a fifth of the whole Catholic population, are under Chinese prelates; moreover, the Vicar Apostolic of Canton has a Chinese as his auxiliary bishop. And the ground is daily being made ready for still more Chinese bishops.

The nomination in 1926 of six native bishops, which, however, had been immediately prepared by the nomination in 1923-24 of the first two Chinese Prefects Apostolic, came to some of our Protestant friends as a great surprise, and they wondered whether this act on the part of the Catholic Church was but a political move to meet the new circumstances. They asked us to write on what they called "the New Policy of the Catholic Church".

(Continued on page 44)

A LEGEND OF HEAVEN

THE angels had ceased from their singing
Strange whispers were filling the air;
The Saints seemed perturbed over something
And gathered in groups, here and there.
Strange people were walking through Heaven,
With shadowy garments and face.
Said Paul to Saints Thomas and Andrew—
"Who let those queer folks in this place?"
But no one could answer his question;
He set out to look for his mate,
For surely St. Peter could tell him,
He'd know if they passed through the gate.
But Simon knew nothing about it,
So off they both went to explore,
And hunted in vain through the heavens,
Until, at the very last door,
They heard such a terrible racket
Both looked at each other and stopped.
Says Paul—"What can Joseph be doing?"—
For this was his carpenter shop.
Then, opening the door kind of slowly,
Sure, what do you think they did see—
A hole in the flag-stones of Heaven,
And Joseph down there on his knees;
Till, spying a ladder descending,
They saw the whole mystery unfold—
He'd built a back door-way to Heaven
To rescue the poor, suffering souls.
St. Peter got mad as a hatter;
"Old man, this has all got to stop,
Or else you'll get put out of Heaven;
We'll close up your carpenter shop."
St. Joseph got up from the ladder
And drew himself up full of pride—
"If you dare to put me out of Heaven
I'll take with me, Mary, my bride;
And since she is truly God's mother,
She'll take with her, Jesus, her Son,
And then there won't be any Heaven."
Says Peter—"St. Joseph, you've won."

From FATHER SHARKEY'S
"THE ANVIL OF THE CROSS".

THE STORY OF YU SHAN

(Continued from page 41)

along with the threat that they were going for more help and would be back for a second battle.

It was not until the fight was over that Father MacDonald learned they were not bandits he had been fighting, but a gang of twenty men from the mountains sent by the pagan who had been defeated in the law-suit, to carry off Yu Shan. One of them had evidenly been in the chapel, and as soon as the Christians had left after the Mass was over, gave the signal to his friends, whereupon two of them entered the front part of the house, which is Yu Shan's home, where they met her father, who being alone at the time was immediately struck a blow on the head which left him unconscious; they then ran across a kind of a court-yard to the end of the house to the chapel. Yu Shan was still making her thanksgiving after receiving Holy Communion, when they came to the door of the chapel and beckoned her to come out. The small passage way where they were being dark, Yu Shan did not recognize them until she had stepped outside the chapel; only then did she realize that they were after her. She tried to escape through the priest's room at the side which was the only way open, but it was too late, they were upon her before she could close the door. By this time two more men came running through the chapel into the priest's room and bolted the door on the inside, while the rest of the gang had gone around to the back of the house with the intention of carrying Yu Shan up over the mountain before the Christians would have a chance to rescue her. It was then that Father MacDonald heard the noise and came to the rescue. At all events they did not succeed in capturing Yu Shan, and once more the devil and his advocates had to suffer another shameful defeat. In the midst of the fray Yu Shan had received many bad bruises about the head and body and was unconscious.

While her mother and other Christian women were attending to her wounds and the men were preparing for the second attack from the invaders, Father MacDonald managed to pull himself together and took command of the situation. Realing that prudence was the better part of valor, and seeing the enemy were not in sight, he ordered the father to get a boat quickly, and with his sacristan took Yu Shan and her father to Tsingtien for police protection, where he at once notified by telephone Father Serra the Pro-Prefect at Lishui. On his arrival in Tsingtien that afternoon, Father Serra placed the matter before the Mandarin who promised to send his police at once and have the culprits arrested. The next morning Father MacDonald went to Lishui to have his injuries attended to, and at the same time enjoy a short well-earned rest.

The following day Yu Shan was also taken to Lishui where under the tender care of the Sisters she will soon be well again and safe at last from all trouble and danger after her hard struggle and harrowing experience. While in the boat on their way to Tsingtien after the fight that eventful morning, Father MacDonald was binding up her father's wounds when Yu Shan began to cry. "Why do you cry?" asked her father, "it is all over now and we are safe." "Yes, we are safe," replied Yu Shan, "but look at the good Father's hands, they are all cut and bleeding, all because he fought to save us."

This then is the exciting story of our little Chinese Christian girl, Yu Shan, whose great faith, devout prayers and unfailing confidence in the goodness of God has saved her from a terrible future of actual slavery. It is plain to be seen that God was ever at hand in answer to her prayers to protect her. We know God will not be out-done, so that the good which Yu Shan has done in converting souls for Him has not gone unrewarded.

According to our patron Saint Francis Xavier, "if we are to convert the people of China, we must first of all educate the children." And if there is any truth in the saying: "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world", we must place more and more stress on the education of the Chinese girls who are to be the future mothers of our christianity. With good Christian mothers the chances are a hundred to one that the children also will be good Christians. I beg of you, therefore, to pray and help the missionaries all you can to find ways and means to educate in the Catholic doctrine the thousands of little Chinese girls who otherwise will have very little, if any, opportunity of knowing and receiving the many graces and benefits that our Holy Catholic Faith holds in store for them.

PERHAPS you are thinking of soon drawing up your Last Will. Do you wish to remember some worthwhile Catholic endeavour? Make a note of our legal title. It is ST. FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

CATHOLIC MISSIONS

(Continued from page 43)

A small pamphlet in English was issued in 1927 by the present writer developing the thesis that the consecration of these Chinese bishops was but the crowning of a century old policy, and that, therefore, the spectacular event of October 28th, 1926, meant not a new policy, but a new era for the Catholic Church in China.

The first of these three difficulties stated above was thus easily solved—or rather had already been previously solved—by the Catholic Church.

(To be continued)

CHRISTMAS AFIELD

(Continued from page 38)

my explaining that going now would save time and the necessity of a trip a few months later.

I am now in Shanghai, the most cosmopolitan city in the world, and I hope to return to Lishui tomorrow. By now all the Christmas decorations have been removed and probably the Crib is no more, but I shall be glad to return to Lishui, the headquarters of the Canadian Mission to China, for to me it is home.

HOW FAR FOREIGN?

By

REV. F. BLANK, O.F.M.

"WHAT strikes me most is your frequent use of the word 'foreigner'. Is it because you think of yourself as a foreigner, or is it because the Chinese like to drive it home?" writes a friend. My reply is restricted to my own experience and observations made in Wuchang, which, according to visiting missionaries, is less courteous than other cities.

No, it is not merely because we think of ourselves as foreigners, the word is dinned into our ears from many sources, sometimes with malice, then again for sheer amusement. As we pass along the street, the call "foreigner" or even "foreign devil" may come from a teashop, workshop or home. If we ride in a rickshaw, a youthful rascal passing by may roguishly greet us with a few words which, by their insinuation, contain nothing less than an insult. Although these thrusts at our feelings are not of daily occurrence, they are not so rare as to surprise us when they do happen.

How do we react to such effrontery? Since the missionary knows that this scoffing proceeds only from the cruder element of the populace, he, "possessing his soul in peace", endeavors to bear all in the same spirit with which His Divine Master and Model bore insult and mockery. In the service of the Lord there is greater heroism in suffering unjust reproach than there is in accepting compliments. The latter are flowers which soon wilt; the former, jewels in the heavenly crown.

One thing that calls down unfavorable comment upon the missionary is the Chinese garb which he wears in conformity with the regulations of his religious community. Whether Christian or not, those Chinese who from time to time meet the missionary take no particular notice of him, but those who see him very rarely are nonplussed, and they relieve their confusion of mind with the exclamation: "A foreigner wearing Chinese clothes!" In these days many students and, in general, men of higher walks in life are adopting western styles. It is considered a mark of education and advancement. Little wonder, then, that they are perplexed when seeing Westerners in eastern apparel.

But our differences with the natives do not always make us the target for ridicule; on the contrary, there are times when we are the object of admiration and esteem.

Surely, the Christians always love their missionary. Although they are proud to have one of their own race to be chosen by God to perform the exalted duties of the priesthood, yet it is difficult to say whether they prefer their own to a foreign missionary, who, they well know, has made great sacrifices to help them obtain salvation. They are truly devoted to him.

Also in the class room of the High (Middle) School the English speaking foreign missionary holds an enviable position. Though most of the students may be pagan, they value their English teacher for the one reason that he speaks the language which they also would like to know and speak. However inattentive these students may be at times, they are completely absorbed when their English teacher reads aloud in class with the view of giving them the clear and correct pronunciation. Likewise, the school which has English speaking missionaries as teachers always has a large enrolment.

Out of his official capacity as shepherd of souls or teacher, the missionary, when dealing with fair-minded people generally, is respected, for even the lowest classes of Chinese admit that, in nearly all respects, other nations are superior to their own. In fact, their esteem of things foreign not rarely is exaggerated to the length of real "fish stories". Conversation brings out this fact. One evening while walking along the shore of the mighty Yangtze in company with a few school boys, I found amusement in the argument of two little chaps whether or not that big stream is bottomless. From that discussion my attention was diverted to the question of an older boy, age 14, who asked: "Do fish swallow boats in America?" At first I doubted whether I understood his Chinese, but on inquiry I learned that boys really pass the story that foreign fish are big enough to swallow a boat. Merely an exaggeration of foreign greatness!

The very word "foreign" occupies a prominent place in the Chinese language. A match is foreign fire; coal oil, foreign oil; cement, foreign stone dust; a steamer on the river is a foreign boat; besides, there are foreign tiles, foreign money, foreign clothes. The dictionary has a long list under this classification.

Since the scope of these few lines is limited to my own local observations, not even a passing reference can be made to the past centuries, in which many missionaries have suffered hardships and persecution on account of their nationality as well as for their preaching of the gospel. One can

(Continued on page 46)

YOU CAN USE THIS COUPON IN RENEWING YOUR SUBSCRIPTION

"CHINA"
St. F. X. Seminary
Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.
Dear Fathers:—

Enclosed find $.....as a subscription to "China" for ..... years.

Name ..... Name .....

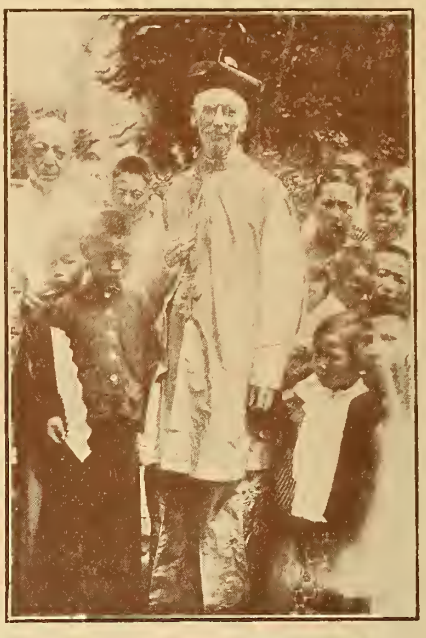
Address ..... Address .....

....

(IS YOUR "CHINA" PROPERLY ADDRESSED? IF NOT, PLEASE LET US KNOW)

From Monsignor Fraser in Kinhwa

JUST after the New Year, a letter came from Monsignor Fraser from Kinhwa, telling of the work being done there by himself and the native priests under his direction. Monsignor writes as follows:



"Today we buried little three-year-old Mary, who died of smallpox. Young as she was, she knew enough to ask for Confirmation. Yesterday I was called to the church to administer the Sacrament. What a sight she presented! Smallpox is a frightful disease; her face was a hideous mass of sores and bereft of all human semblance. She is better off now—an angel in Heaven, with the added glory and happiness conferred by the Sacrament of Confirmation.

"The other day Father Kiang and I visited for the first time Kinhwa's new Mandarin, who formerly was Mayor in Father Beal's city, Sungyang. He was very kind and courteous. He told me how he had helped Father Beal to purchase a piece of property adjoining his church. We spoke of many topics, amongst others of the now famous North Mountain near here. Buses will be running on the new motor road to there this year. This new summer resort with its great cool caverns promises to become an attractive spot. Many tourists from Shanghai will now visit this and other beauty spots of the province, in making the great circular tour on the highway just completed.

"I received today a letter from one of my assistants, Father Ly, telling me that on the Feast of Epiphany he was going to baptize 80 catechumens at Siaokaotsu.

"You will be pleased to hear this news. This is the beginning of conversions in the county of Yungkang, which up till my arrival had not a single Christian. The Spirit has begun to move over the waters. Eighty new Christians in one village! This would make a nice little parish in itself. Pray the Lord of the harvest soon to send laborers into this fruitful vineyard.

"Siaokaotsu is in the south-eastern corner of Kinhwa district, just near the confines of the Chuchow Prefecture. Sixty miles away, in exactly the opposite corner, another movement towards the Church is taking place. My assistant there recently baptized 44 persons in one day, and the catechist of the principal city writes that several hundred families of late have entered the Church."

A recent picture of Monsignor Fraser, showing him in Kinhwa, surrounded by the Chinese children whom he loves so dearly. "China" takes this opportunity to extend sincere sympathy to Monsignor Fraser on the death of his sister, Miss May Fraser, who died in Toronto in February. The prayers of our readers are earnestly begged for the repose of her soul. R.I.P.

THE ANVIL OF THE CROSS

"China" has on many occasions been favoured by poems written by Father Hugh Sharkey. Before leaving for China in 1929, Father Sharkey published some of his poems in a volume entitled "The Loom of the Fairies". It met with instant favour. Recalled to Canada in 1933 to do missionary work among the Chinese in Vancouver, B.C., Father Sharkey has been hard at work and has done magnificent pioneering in Vancouver. Despite his arduous labours he has found time to add to his collection of poems, and readers will be pleased to learn that he has now published his second volume. The new book of poems appears under the title of "The Anvil of the Cross". In the Preface to his new book, the author writes:

"My first book of verse, 'The Loom of the Fairies,' was published a few years ago, when I was leaving for the mission field in China. It was put together hastily and was intended merely as a souvenir for my many dear friends; but it received a wonderful welcome, even from those who were complete strangers to me. Since then, many have insisted that I should publish another book of poems, and at last I am acceding to their request. The proceeds from the sale of this little book are to be used for our struggling little Chinese Catholic Mission here in the City of Vancouver. That is my apology for offering these poor poems to the public, and it is hoped that if the book is not bought for the sake of the poems that are in it, it may be bought for the sake of the souls that depend upon it."

The "Anvil of the Cross" is a neat volume of more than 140 pages, bound in imitation leather. It sells for $1.00. Readers of "China" who wish to help the Chinese Mission in Vancouver and at the same time add a pleasing volume of poems to their library are requested to write direct to Father Hugh Sharkey, Chinese Catholic Mission, 572 East Georgia Street, Vancouver, B.C.

HOW FAR FOREIGN?

(Continued from page 45)

hardly be a foreign missionary without feeling and often being made to feel that he is a foreigner. Still, those who understand the missionary's viewpoint know that he brushes aside all unpleasantness that arises from his position, constantly keeping in mind the vision described by St. John: "I saw a great multitude, which no man could number, of all nations, and tribes, and peoples, and tongues, standing before the throne, and in the sight of the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands."—"Franciscans in China."

OUR COVER

The picture on the cover of this March issue of "China" shows a group of schoolboys from Tsingtien on an outing with Father Serra. The boys are up on the rock all right, but we certainly don't know how they got there.

NONSENSE

Customer (to butcher) — "Those sausages you sent me had meat at one end and bread at the other."

Butcher—"Yes, ma'am, in these hard times it's difficult to make both ends meat."

Young Wife (anxiously)—"Do you think I've put too much salt in the soup, dear?"

Model Husband—"No, darling, not at all. There is, perhaps, not quite enough soup for the salt; that is all."

It was during the War. A patriotic woman, visiting a farm, noted a stalwart young man milking. "See here, young man! Why aren't you at the front?" she demanded.

"Well," said the milker, "I guess it's mostly because this cow ain't any different from any other!"

"I 'ear your old man's getting better after all, Mrs. 'Arris."

"Yes, dearie; and it's put me in a bit of a 'ole. I've sold all 'is clothes to pay for an 'ead-stone."

Two small boys, who had been fighting on and off all the evening, were eventually sent up to bed.

"And don't forget to say your prayers, both of you," said their mother.

There was silence for a few moments, and then one of them called out: "Mummie! Will you come up and speak to Jimmy? He keeps on asking God to bless me, and then says things under his breff."

The young man seated in the dentist's chair wore a marvellous shirt of striped silk and an even more wonderful check suit. He also wore the vacant stare that so often goes with both.

"I'm afraid to give him gas," the dentist murmured to his assistant.

"Why?" asked the assistant.

"Well," said the dentist, "how shall I know when he's unconscious?"

Catty—"My dear, I could give you a wrinkle or two!"

"I'm sure you could, darling, and never miss them, too."

Dora—"And so you quarrelled?"

Lallie—"Yes, and I returned all his presents, and what do you think he did?"

Dora—"Something horrid, I'm sure."

Lallie—"He sent me half a dozen boxes of face powder, with a note, explaining that he thought he had taken as much as that home on his coat since he first met me."

"How do you suppose Solomon got his great reputation for wisdom?" inquired Mrs. Peck.

"Oh, I'm sure, Henrietta, it was not from anything he thought up for himself," responded Henry, meekly. "You know he had a great number of wives and he probably listened carefully to all of them."

Wife—"A fine husband you are. Why, you can't even keep me in clothes."

Husband—"No. And I bought you a home, and I can't keep you in that either."

Office Boy — "Please sir, I think somebody wants you on the telephone."

Chief—"Now, what is the use of saying you think I am wanted? Am I wanted or not?"

Boy—"Well, sir, somebody rang up and said: 'Is that you, you old idiot?'"

Two Negroes were boasting about the merits and qualifications of their respective motor cars, both typical worn, shabby old wrecks.

One of them said: "Dey's just one reason why Ah cain't run disheah cah o' mine 200 miles an houah."

"An' whut's dat reason?" asked the other.

"De distance is too long fo' de shawtness of de time," said the first.

A touring actor entered a tailor's shop and gave an order for a suit. He took home a small pattern of the material and showed it to his son.

"What do you think of it, Tommy?" he asked.

"Not bad," Tommy replied.

"Why, you're looking at the wrong side," added the actor.

"I know I am," the boy replied, "but that's the side I shall have to wear when the suit comes down to me."

Two Irishmen met during a rain storm. They argued, and inevitably the argument turned into a fight.

For a while Mike got the better of Paddy, then he slipped and in a moment Paddy was on top of him.

"Now then, me ole son of Oireland," he said, "will ye give in?"

"No," said Mike, trying to struggle up.

The fight continued, and once again Paddy gained the upper hand.

"Give in now?" he asked.

"No!" cried Mike.

"Then change places with me," said Paddy. "I'm getting wet keeping the rain off ye."

"You never say nice things to me now. You used to call me your heart's delight!"

"Yes—de light that failed."

"Why do you object to my becoming engaged, daddy? Is it because of my youth?"

"Yes, he's hopeless."

She:—I have been asked to get married lots of times.

He:—Who asked you?

She:—Mother and father.

"What's that bloomin' noise outside this time o' night,"

"Why that's an owl."

"Of course it is, but oos 'owling?"

Young man (in library)—Have you a book called "Man, the World's Ruler?"

Lady Librarian—You might find it in the fiction department, sir.

"What is the secret of your reputation as a great leader?"

"My skill in guessing what was sure to occur, and then loudly advocating it."

Mother—Who's the brightest boy in your class, Junior?

Junior—Bill Smith! He pretends to be looney so he won't have to study.

"If I were you," she said, during a lull in the domestic storm, "I would have more sense."

"Of course, you would," he retorted decidedly.

Golfer—"Hi, caddie! Isn't Major Pepper out of that bunker yet? How many strokes has he had?"

Caddie—"Seventeen ordinary, sir, and one apoplectic!"

Millionaire—"My boy, you must never forget to be kind to the poor."

Son—"Why, Dad?"

"You never know; they may be rich one day!"

"Does your husband ever quarrel with you?"

"Goodness, no! James is too much of a gentleman. He just goes out and slams the door!"

A—"Did you hear about the fellow who invented a device for looking through brick walls?"

B—"No; what does he call it?"

"A window."

Our Work Must Go On!

Our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, Must be Supported.

Our Mission in China Must be Developed.

SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY

has ordained 22 Priests since its opening a little more than ten years ago. 48 students are now preparing for ordination at the Seminary. Altogether, 77 persons (priests and students), depend on the readers of "CHINA" for their support and for the upkeep of the Seminary, as well as for the development of the mission of Chuchow in China confided to the Seminary for evangelization. A large amount of money is required for these purposes. The only revenue received is what comes through the mail day by day. Our needs are many, and so once again we ask YOU, dear reader, to send us a little help if you can possibly afford it. Won't you put a cheque or a money order in the mail for us to-day, please?

Give your gift for the love of God, and you will give a gift that is worth while, no matter how small it is.

ALL TOGETHER, NOW! LET'S HELP THE MISSIONS!

St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario

Very Rev. John E. McRae, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

APRIL 1935

The Radio League of ST. MICHAEL

+

The Radio is a tremendous and powerful instrument for good, and Canada's Catholic Hour brings to thousands of homes every Sunday the Catholic interpretation of important events of the day. Priests from all over the Continent speak on Canada's Catholic Hour. The Radio League of St. Michael makes this possible. The League is supported by membership. Listen in to its Sunday programme over Station CRCT and help by becoming a member of the Radio League of St. Michael. Address your communications to

THE RADIO LEAGUE OF ST. MICHAEL 200 Church St., Toronto

Where Savings Earn 3%

One dollar is sufficient to open a savings account with the Capital Trust. Regular deposits, however small, with interest at 3%, soon count up to appreciable sums. Deposit, or withdraw by cheque, through the mail or at our nearest office.

CAPITAL TRUST Corporation Limited

100 Adelaide St. West
TORONTO
OTTAWA · MONTREAL

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West
Toronto

Royal Insurance Co. Ltd.
OF LIVERPOOL, ENGLAND

Fire, Life and Casualty

27 Wellington St. E. Phone ELgin 7231

PERCY J. QUINN, Manager
Royal Insurance Building
TORONTO, ONT.

BEAVER BRAND

At the Sign of the Beaver

The finest of carbon paper and typewriter ribbons are made in Canada under this trade mark. ¶ You may order direct. Prices are no higher, notwithstanding the exceptional quality.

Canada Carbon & Ribbon Co.
Limited
510 King Street East
TORONTO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 25,400

Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XVI. APRIL, 1935 No. 4

A CONSTANT STRUGGLE

Foreign Mission work is a constant struggle. It is ever hard and difficult. In this regard it is the same at home as on the mission field. At times the task of winning and holding the interest and support of mission helpers seems to match the labour of the missionary to gain the interest, confidence and trust of the pagan.

It should not be so. Yet we must be frank enough to admit that many people are apparently as indifferent about our foreign mission work as the pagans among whom the missionaries live and labour.

Foreign mission is not the special engagement of a select group or class of Catholics. To place the burden of this great and primary work of the Church upon a comparatively few hundred or thousand is utterly unfair and a deliberate dodge of a responsibility appraised altogether too lightly in many circles and places.

It is not that great sums are sought even though there is desperate need of such. Catholic foreign mission work does not proceed or progress on the huge endowment policy. There is always—as there must be—the element of sacrifice necessary to ennoble and bless the work.

What we look for, what we feel we have a right to, is a bit larger interest on the part of the many who are quite able to share in this work. If this interest were well and widely distributed, there would not be the distress and discouragement that hinders and depresses those who gave themselves for this work in place of their brethren, who by reason of conditions and circumstances of life, must remain at home.

Foreign mission work is not the peculiar work of any particular religious community, society or association. All engaged in this work give themselves to it because it is the great work of God's Church.

As Catholics, our obligations are not entirely restricted to parish, diocesan or national needs. True, they have their definite, full and proper place and force. They never rest in such majesty and power as to completely overshadow or unjustly minimize and depreciate the needs and rights of foreign missions and missionaries.

"To say that we are overwhelmed with local claims and home wants," said Cardinal Manning, "and that money expended for foreign missions had better be spent on the spiritual destitution at our own doors, is the most shallow and the most miserable of delusions."

"MY VOICE ITSELF"

Our Holy Father, Pope Pius XI, has himself officially characterized mission magazines as "My voice itself." They are, too, the "Voice of the Missions," speaking with the tongues of the missionaries themselves. The very theme of the various organs of the missions is the everlasting sacrificial story of the Cross, told in all its pathos by the raconteurs of Christ. Naturally, it is our desire that as many Catholics as possible be readers of "China", for thereby their interest in the work of God in Fields Afar will be quickened, and their hearts will be stirred by the realization of what is being done to bring the message of Redemption to so many souls spiritually poverty-stricken in the mission fields.

The Vatican publication, the Osservatore Romano, has for a long time dwelt upon the significance and value of missionary publications. And since there is on the part of some of the faithful, and here and there on the part of the reverend clergy, a prejudice against organs which are so important to the missions, it may be well to reproduce what the Osservatore says in this regard:

"These mission publications are the living voices of the missionaries. Though a majority of them are issued in the interests of the particular needs of the missions entrusted to one or another order or religious community, they do not in any way constitute a detriment to the general mission interests which the Roman Congregation of the Propaganda and its publications represent. Rather they help the cause by winning little worlds of readers for the special mission fields, and in this manner help to awaken the Catholic conscience regarding the great general missionary task of the Universal Church."

"China" Wishes its Readers a Very Joyful Eastertide.

SOWING the SEED in SUNGYANG

By

REV. J. L. BEAL

THE exception proves the rule in many cases. For the past few months there seemed to be an absolute lack of religious spirit among the Christians and a cold indifference on the part of the pagans who were accustomed to pay regular visits to the Mission. From the account written a few weeks ago I advanced arguments to show that unless the people got some material help along with the doctrine, they were not interested in what the Church had to offer in the way of Salvation.

The light is not to be hid under a bushel. With this principle before my mind, I started a campaign against this indifference in order to rouse the people from this insidious torpor to a spirit of fervency. Two fast walking catechists were sent out every day to the homes of would-be-Christians and delivered my message. The surrounding country villages heard the message and among the many, twenty-five promised to come to the Mission which was opening February 8th for the benefit of those who had not heard a proper explanation of Catholic doctrine.

The estimated population of this fair city is 25,000 — one out of every thousand is thinking about saving his or her soul. The proportion is still pretty high, but there are other places with a higher average. Now among the 25 who promised to come, only six attended the exercises during the Mission. We had a hard break in the weather, it poured rain most of the time, showers being interspersed by hail and snow. To these six faithful members much credit is due. The inclemency of the weather failed to dampen their desire to learn what they could before signing their names in the register of Catechumens. The elder of the six was an adherent of the Lutheran church for over twenty years. He called one day after New Year's for an explanation on several points of doctrine he could not understand; because his religious superior was unable to give a satisfactory answer he sought out the Catholic Priest. This man was sincere and his sincerity was rewarded by finding the true path, the source of living water that is able to quench the thirst of man for truth and knowledge. I warned him as well as the other members of possible repercussions from pagan friends or from associates of his erstwhile persuasion. The Christians were encouraged to attend the Mission daily because there was a Plenary Indulgence to be gained if they faithfully attended for the five days. Many did come and gave the neophytes a good example by going to confession and daily Communion. Many more were impeded by social calls of friends at this time of the year, when everybody goes visiting and banqueting until the fifteenth of the month. It was the first time this ceremony has been displayed. The results are not big numerically but the seed has been sown; God will give the increase in due season.

Even the people of Newburg, Ont., will have difficulty in recognizing the missionary in this picture as Father Joseph King. Father "Joe" is with Father Amyot at Huang T'An. A letter received recently says that the barber has restored Father King to his normal appearance.

The next reception will take place in the ninth month when the rice crop will be harvested. There will be a respite in the field of labor, when many will be able to attend another five-day session. The Christians and pagans will be better prepared than for this last one, because it was all new to them.

As I have mentioned in a previous article, our efforts are well repaid by the co-operation of the faithful few. We are encouraged to continue in this constant warfare against the powers of darkness and draw as many as we can from the Shadow of Death into the Light of Salvation. I had asked many of my friends at home, and Religious, to assist me by their prayers that this Reception Ceremony be a success. To all these faithful co-workers I want to express a word of thanks. If there is any credit due me for this work I want to refer it all to you who have been so instrumental in making it a success. It gives me courage to work even harder, when I know and am assured of such noble assistance from friends across the water. With your continued co-operation by prayers and good works, I hope to be able to tell you after the next ceremony that a larger number have entered the ranks of Catechumens and are preparing for Baptism. With your help and the Grace of God it will be made possible.

It is my holy ambition to get this church filled with faithful followers of the Gospel. I will say it is the experience of every priest when he enters the pulpit, a feeling of regret and sorrow, to have to announce the Word of God to only a handful of listeners, to have to look at row after row of empty seats. To those at home it may have an added tinge of sorrow that the collection box will be more of an ornament than a receptacle for alms. Here we are satisfied for the most part in having the listeners, poverty makes it almost prohibitive for collections. Help me get the pews filled with worthy listeners. Providence will take care of the rest.

Off the Beaten Track

By

REV. DESMOND STRINGER

IN our particular part of Chekiang the months of September to December are the most delightful as regards weather. Every one knows what a Fall countryside looks like—a riot of colors. So we chose this time to make a trip to a town sixty-five li away. Father Beal had been trying for a number of years to visit this place which, as yet. is not a Christian centre. We would go and see whether or not there was any possibility of introducing the Faith to its inhabitants.

The path was the usual cobblestone one, winding and weaving its tortuous way through rice-paddies, wheat-fields, hamlets and villages. Whereas other paths we have trod went up and down with a level stretch thrown in here and there, this one seemed to go up and up, now gradually, now abruptly, but always up. After five hours walking we turned to look at the clouds (or was it just fog) that hid the valley from view. The summit reached, we began the descent. It might be well to entitle this downward stretch "Dentists' Delight". If it was any longer we both should have been mere skins full of disjointed bones. And yet our carrier bore a load on his shoulders of nearly a hundred pounds — an evident proof of the food-value of rice.

Evening saw us approaching the town. Just as we were entering, a pagan, his hands full of joss-sticks, came to the door of his home to make his bow to the gods of the wide open spaces. We passed him just as he made his profound bow, and to all appearances he was making it to us — Paganism acknowledging Christianity—perhaps.

We stoped at a hotel which Fr. Larry insisted reminded him of the Royal York, but it was just the "Fiddle" to me. Please, oh please, don't ask for an explanation of that one; the people of the town here never heard the word "violin", so we're safe. This hostel had a central ventilation plant, a trifle draughty if the wind happened to be too strong. Our room was graced with four beds, each made up of two benches, a board, straw mattress and a mat. The rest of the furniture consisted simply of a table and chair. The first night we spent in peaceful wakefulness trying to induce the rats to stay out of our room. Our meals we took in the dining-room, the mud floor of which was swept clean for the "foreign gentlemen". The food was the ordinary fare, rice, pork, bean-skin, vegetable and wine. Chop-sticks were of the new streamline type, which added greatly to their manipulation.

Strolling about the town next morning we were impressed with the numerous and various evidences of a virile paganism. It was the first of the Chinese month, a day on which sticks of incense and candles are lit and placed before the household shrine, and outside the door in honor of Tien. The temples, however, presented a rather wretched appearance; several of them we saw were used as workshops and schools. We learned, too, the story of the evolution of the god known as the "Eternal Protector". A student he was and very industrious, so much so that often he burned the midnight candle. On one occasion, as he was studying very late, he heard voices outside his window which opened on a court yard in which there was a well. Here the townspeople came to draw water. He listened to the muffled conversation and was shocked to realize he had overheard a plot to poison the well. Unable to prevent the deed, at least he could stand guard and warn the people away. Early morning found him sitting at his post. Soon water-carriers came, but he prevented them saying that the well had been poisoned during the night. A crowd collected; they would not believe him; in fact, they prepared to do him harm. Seeing the futility of further explanation or reiteration, he jumped up and cast himself into the well. The poisoned water

(Continued on page 62)

VERY GOOD FRIENDS OF FATHER VENADAM IN LISHUI
Seated, left to right: Mr. L. Q. Wong, High School student; Fr. Venadam; Mr. N. F. Lin, a business man. Standing: Mr. P. L. Wong, High School student, and Mr. W. C. Liu, a High School Professor.

CATHOLIC MISSIONS

The Catholic Church vs. The Triple Demism

This is the third instalment of a very interesting article by Fr. D'Elia, Member of the Sinological Bureau, Shanghai, and Professor of Missiology at the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome. This article, taken verbatim from "The China Year Book, 1934", gives a graphic description of the Church's struggles in China. This struggle was threefold, namely, the Church vs. Chinese Nationalism; the Church vs. the Triple Demism; and the Church vs. Communism. As Fr. D'Elia points out, in so far as the Church succeeded in extricating herself from this triple difficulty, she emerged victoriously from the Nationalist Revolution.

THE second difficulty admitted of no easy solution. It concentrated around the attitude of the Church towards Dr. Sun's teaching and the book, the Triple Demism. Imposed as it was upon all schools, even mission schools, as a "sine qua non" condition, it was impossible for the Church to ignore it, impossible even to keep silent concerning it, as countless faithful would be affected by its teaching. The Church had to deal with the new generation all aglow with Demist doctrines. On the nature of these dealings depended, for a great part in 1927, the future of Christianity in China.

The threefold question to be answered by the Church was this: should the book be approved as a whole, or condemned as a whole, or does it contain a mixture of good and evil? If so, the duty of the Church was to separate the wheat from the chaff, to show what was good and what was Utopian, equivocal or wrong.

The present writer was asked to set himself to this task and to solve it to the best of his ability, in behalf of the Catholic missionaries and faithful. This he tried to do in a French publication which came out early in 1929. (Paschal M. D'Elia, S.J., "Le Triple Demisme de Suen Wen", Shanghai, 1929, 1930.)

The book contains the integral and literal translation of the celebrated San Min Chu I. Exactness of translation was purposely given in preference to elegance of style. The text was commented on in historical, critical or explanatory footnotes. Then the unwieldy mass of the sixteen lectures was digested in an analysis as lucid as possible, and the underlying theories were reviewed from the standpoint of the Catholic Church.

Then came the writer's final judgment, which was as follows: Racial Demism deals with Chinese nationalism. It is sometimes unjust towards foreigners, but Dr. Sun's ideas are not altogether wrong. The Catholic Church accepts and consecrates the nationalism which remains within the limits of natural and divine law.

Political Demism does not raise any difficulty from the Catholic viewpoint as the Church accepts all forms of government.

Economic Demism on the contrary, and its embarrassed terminology, raises many serious problems. The main difficulty is this: Socialism and Communism are condemned by the Church; now Dr. Sun often admits that his economic Demism, Socialism and Communism are interchangeable terms; from which it would logically follow that Dr. Sun's economic Demism is condemned by the Church. If so, the whole book was to be rejected. Nevertheless, the author, after having weighed the meaning of every word, every sentence and phrase used by the original writer, strove to prove from the Chinese text itself, that Dr. Sun's Socialism was not the one condemned by the Popes, and that his Communism was a Communism only in name. The whole economic Demism was then digested in ten short theses bearing the following conclusion: "At the risk of seeming to utter a paradox, we think that, with the Triple Demism in hand, we may tell Sun Yat-sen that, no matter what he says, he is neither a Communist, nor a Socialist, but simply a Demist, and that, once cleared of the obscurity of formulae, and the somewhat intentional ambiguity of terms, his Demism can by means of a few corrections, be presented in such a way that it does not oppose the Catholic teaching. Were Sun Yat-sen truly a Socialist, "a fortiori", a Communist, he would have spoken very differently and would have demanded other reforms. Nowhere does he base his teaching on philosophical materialism; nowhere does he condemn the right of private property as illegitimate; nowhere does he assert the absolute primacy of the State over property, family, and education.

This threefold judgment was found sound by eminent theologians and sociologists to whom the book was previously submitted, both in China and in Europe. Moreover, it was endorsed by the Papal representative to China, Mgr. Costantini, in a letter addressed to the author and made public. Later on, the Prefect of the Propaganda, the late Cardinal Van Rossum, also congratulated the author for his painstaking work.

Even the National Government of Nanking was pleased with this publication. The Publicity Department of the Central Executive Committee soon asked for 5,000 copies of the first edition. This was the occasion of issuing early in 1930 a second French edition "revised and corrected". At the same time, Dr. Chang Monlin, then Minister of Education, and Dr. Wang Chung-wei, at the time President of the Judicial Yuan in the Nanking Government, and representative of China at The Hague as permanent judge in the International Court of Justice, in a joint request to the author asked him to issue an English edition of his study on Dr. Sun's lectures, in order to give it "a broader reading". The Government authorities were well aware of the fact that to comment on Dr. Sun's teachings in a fair and just way without leaning to either side was "a rather delicate" problem; in fact, so delicate that both of them thought that "criticisms of Dr. Sun's doctrines sometimes lead to misunderstanding". They were, however, of the opinion that the Catholic missionary who had translated the San Min Chu I and commented on it, had succeeded in carefully avoiding these misunderstandings. Consequently, an English edition was asked by these two Government authorities.

This English edition came out in 1931 (Paschal M D'Elia, S.J., "The Triple Demism of Sun Yat-sen". Franciscan Press, Wuchang, 1931) and was generally very well received by the English press, both in China and abroad. ("Book Reviews of the Triple Demism of Sun Yat-sen", Franciscan Press, Wuchang, 1933.) The "International Review of Missions" remarked: the book "is naturally written from the Roman Catholic point of view, but is none the less valuable for the Protestant reader, both because so much of it is essentially true, and, also, because it shows the Roman Catholic outlook."

The book helped to disperse the last anti-Christian clouds from the political horizon of Young China, and bring an understanding between the Nationalist Government and the Catholic Church. Thus in an interview with the Chinese Chancellor at Nanking, Mr. Yang Feng, the Apostolic Delegate could assure him that Catholics were "ready to expound the Triple Demism in their schools, with the proviso, however, that, wherever possible, the same should be harmonised with Catholic teaching, and that the integrity of Catholic doctrine should be safeguarded." ("The Chinese Recorder", 1929, pp. 402, 536.)

This point of the impossibility of touching, even slightly, the "Catholic deposit" of truth was emphasised still more by the Apostolic Delegate on different occasions, especially when he was invited to attend the State funeral of Dr. Sun at Nanking. Then he informed the Government that his connection with Dr. Sun's Triple participation was not to be interpreted as having any doctrinal Demism. He wrote: "We appreciate everything in this book which is in accord with Christian doctrine, but we would not admit any theory or interpretation which could touch the purity of our faith," Bolshevism, for instance. The Government took respectful note of this declaration, while the Minister of Education remarked: "But we are not Bolshevists, and we appreciate the help of the social doctrine of the Catholic Church for the reconstruction of China." ("Il Pensiero Missionario", Roma, 1933, p. 121.)

The political atmosphere was thus cleared, and the relations between Church and State became again not only normal but rather cordial.

On August 1st, 1928, a striking message("The Chinese Recorder," 1929, pp. 33-42) of sympathy was sent by the Holy See to "the most noble people" of China. In it it is said that "the Holy Father, who has followed and continues to follow with lively interest the course of events in China, and who was the first to treat China not only on the basis of perfect equality, but also with an attitude of a true and most particular sympathy, consecrating with his own hands at St. Peter's, in Rome, the first Chinese bishops, heartily rejoiced and rendered thanks to the Most High for the end of the civil war." Then, taking a lead which to some of the Powers was a stumbling block, and to others a scandal, the Pope hopes that the Chinese people might soon be freed from the heavy international burdens which they resent so much and wished that "full recognition would be given to their legitimate aspirations and rights". The Papal organ commenting on this Message stated that it was an act "full of solemnity, of majesty, and of charity, which before the whole world pronounced a judgment without appeal in favour of the justice and legitimacy of China's aspirations. Just like any other nation, she has the right of living, of rising, and of strengthening her civil, religious and social life." ("Osservatore Romano", September 21st, 1929.) The Message was received with joy by the Chinese Government. The Minister of Foreign Affairs, Dr. C. T. Wang, wrote: "We are heartily grateful to the Sovereign Pontiff for the sympathy he shows to the Chinese Republic, and the desire he has to make use of the strength of religion to stir up the Chinese renaissance and foster her peace and progress."

The following year, the Catholic Church was officially invited to send a representative to the State funeral of Dr. Sun. Previously the Government took great care to give assurances that no ceremonies out of keeping with the attendance of the Papal Envoy were to have place at the funeral. The Papal representative was received in Nanking and treated for

(Continued on page 62)

A corner of the Public Garden in Tsingtien, the town where Fathers John MacDonald and Wm. McNabb have their central mission.

CHINESE

By REV. J

IT isn't very often we get a trio of them in a string. In fact three a day is even a rarity. Perhaps it is the heat. They say the heat does affect one's nerves. Though I didn't think the folks hereabouts had any nerves. Plenty of nerve I know they have. Our stripped peach trees bear mute and stark testimony to that. What's that? Oh! I beg your pardon. I was referring to family squabbles. Or rather neighborhood squabbles. Free-for-all affairs. Privacy is a decidedly unknown quantity amongst the descendants of Confucius. Even more unknown than the "x" of algebra fame. All that separates most families is a partition of thin and well-cracked boards. What would a Chinese house be perfectly unsuited for? A soundproofed talkie studio. Then there is no knocking at doors for permission to enter. There are no doors, not during the waking hours, at least. The whole front of the house is removable, and is removed. Section by section it is yanked down in the morning and banged back up again at night. Much like the solid wooden shutters on many of the stores in Italy. Or perhaps, to be more exact, it should be said that only the business houses are equipped with such dismountable fronts. Homes that do not face on Main Street have fixed fronts; and doors. Huge cumbersome affairs with wooden hinges, that are creaked open at the rising of the sun, and on the going down thereof, screeched shut. But if these non-business houses have fixed fronts, they make up for their exclusiveness by the fact that there is seldom one sole family living under the same roof. Quite often—nearly always—it is quite possible to visit all the families living in one section, without getting out from under cover. This, perhaps, will help to explain why the Japs had such a stiff time, during the Shanghai incident of a couple years back, clearing out the snipers hidden in the houses.

SO there you have a little local color for the three-ring squabble circus. The first act was put on by the cooper's wife and the spouse of the sargeant. Next door neighbors. Erstwhile friends. Forthwith bitter enemies. They are really to be excused, however, because, according to Freud, they are incompatibles. As he and his psycho-analysts would have it, "they cannot keep their evil urges, their passions, etc., down in the cellar". But they are to be excused for that also, because neither of them knows what a cellar is, nor what psycho-analysts are either. But Mrs. Copper certainly does know that Madame Sargeant has infringed on her washing-board rights, and that is an affront not to be lightly condoned. From washing board rights to personalities is less than a step. Skeletons dragged out of closets? The whole cemetery is ploughed up. On and on they go. When they can go no further, they repeat. My, how I envy them their volubility. If I could only speak like that, I am sure I would have China converted in six months. Then the bugle blows, and the sargeant he comes home for his dinner. The barrage continues, unabated, and Mr. Sargeant finds himself drawn into the melee. That makes two to one, so Mr. Cooper he steps into the fray to even things up. Bon! The sargeant he calls in his relatives, his friends, anyone who will listen to him. And the cooper he knows quite a few people himself. So by now we have a first class brawl in full swing. The blacksmith drops his tongs; the butcher wipes his hands on his apron; the grocer measures out Mrs. Brown's pint of peas in a hurry; and they all come to have a "look-see"; and a few words to boot. The crowd is so dense that it is only with considerable difficulty that the sweating coolies, laboring under their staggering loads, succeed in clearing a gangway. But the farmer swinging along with his buckets of precious fertilizer has only to mention his all-powerful "open sesame", to find a path cleared as if by magic before him. Contestants? Spectators? It is impossible by now to distinguish which is which. What a bedlam! What a flow of language! What a pity Webster died so soon! There are at least two pages of words to be added after zythum and zyxomma. Shakespeare with his vocabulary of a mere fifteen thousand words!

Foul. Insulting. Immoral. Beastly. Rotten. All that and more were the invectives hurled back and forth. "Don't say such things," admonished one would-be peace-maker; "they make people laugh at you." Which was just exactly what the onlookers were doing. And repeating the more spicy vituperatives. Which all goes to show just what an idea our pagan friends have of the sinfulness of such things. Why you would almost think they had been reading the Police Gazette or some of the other "literature" that graces the book stores of the enlightened. And the hate, the venom, with which these corruptions were spat forth. Vitrolic they were meant to be, but they did not even singe. The receiver was every bit as hot as the sender. Countered, tit for tat.

The football field in a public park in Lishui.

GNETTES VENINI

ROME. London. Lungchuan. The citizens pay their taxes to Mussolini, King George or Chiang-kai-shek, but Adam is their father, and their mother, Eve. And even at that, I believe the squabblers of Lungchuan have the edge on their ilk of the Eternal City or the Town on the Thames. At least they seldom come to blows. Words are cheaper than arnica. The worst row I ever witnessed was staged, not in pagan China, but in the very centre of Christendom. We had just come from our jubilee visit to St. Paul's-outside-the-walls, and were on our way to the catacombs of St. Sebastian, out on the Appian way. As we trudged along the dusty road, dusty as only Italian roads can be, a youthful Garibaldi of some twelve summers came tearing out of a court-yard. Just like he was going places. And following in his wake came a series of yells, screeches, curses and blasphemies. Mass production as interpreted by two daughters of Romulus. They were at it hammer and tongs, tooth and nail. Hair. Clothes. Blood. All were flying. It seems that the hopping hopeful who pulverized us on the road was the apple of one mother's eye, the thorn in the side of another. A species of thorn apple, as it were. In this particular instance the thorn had pricked a little too sharply, was nipped, and was in process of being reduced to apple-sauce (if you don't mind a metaphor hash) when the mother of the first part arrived on the scene. Hence the battle. And wars have been started for less. The compliments passed out in the shadow of the Seven Hills were much of a oneness with those of the dirty street in Lungchuan. The sole disparity was in the combinations of the vowels and consonants, if any vowels were used. The meaning was the same in both cases. The hate just as great. Teach Mrs. Cooper and Madame Sargeant, Italian, or vice versa, and the two pair could double for each other any day in the week. But this Fascisti affair was a serious thing. A fight to the finish, and only the timely arrival of the carabinieri resulted in the doctor getting the business rather than the undertaker.

But the Lungchuan gendarmes do not come unless they are called for. And they do not go away unless they are paid for. So they were not sent for. Our Act No. 1 was quelled by the intervention of the inevitable middle man, plus a sheer lack of verbial vim. A husky Shantung road-builder was the peace-maker, and he exhorted the belligerents, all and singularly, to live in peace, "because," said he, "you have to live more than one day." I don't know. We'll give the native of Shantung the benefit of the doubt. But that statement of his sounded to me like a wisecrack. But it really doesn't make any difference, because, personally, I am convinced that neither Mrs. Cooper nor Madame Sargeant understood ten words of the peace-parleys. The negotiations were carried on in the best of northern mandarin, and I am willing to wager a tuppence that neither of them, or the both of them together, know where the local school-house is. Mais, que voulez-vous? The thing had to finish sometime.

MRS. COOPER also had a few lines to say in the second act. She was quietly sitting in her shop, resting on her laurels. With her was Mrs. Bean Curd. We'll call her that because the income from the sale of bean curd is the chief source of revenue for her cigarettes and her finery. Now to understand this act it must be known that Mr. and Mrs. B. C. do not pull well together. Perhaps the cigarettes and the finery have something to do with it. But anyway they don't pull together. In fact they pull apart. So much apart that Mr. B would desire that Mrs. B spend a little more of her time on her own premises. Again it might have been the heat. I don't know. But it certainly was hot. And perhaps Mr. B was exceptionally riled this evening. In any case, he meanders over to Mrs. Cooper's and orders his bride home.

"Sez you?" says she.

"Sez I," says he, and makes a grab for her. And succeeds in seizing her by the arm. She, in turn, attempts to anchor onto Mrs. Cooper. Now between all this grabbing and seizing and anchoring, Mrs. Cooper finds herself mixed up in her barrels and buckets. And that doesn't please her one bit. And she wants to tell the whole world in general and Mr. B. C. in particular. So the record is put on once more, Mrs. B. C. playing second fiddle. But Mr. Cooper, he readily agrees "that sufficient for the day is the evil thereof". He has had

(Continued on page 59)

The tennis court within the mission compound at Lishui is a great attraction for the young fellows, one of whom is here serving a hot one to Father Paul Kam on the far base line.

IN A LITTLE CHAPEL AT HUANG-T'AN

By REV. Wm. K. AMYOT

"WELL, can you beat that, Father King! Look who's here!"

"Wan - chih - tee - kee me - oh?" (Have you eaten your rice yet?)

"Chih - tee - kee - bay," (Eaten), came the answer.

"Here for the Feast?" "Ah!" . . .

"There you are—the first arrival for this evening and it is just 9 a.m. Things promise well as to attendance."

Christmas Eve is always a busy day in China and this proved to be no exception. The sacristan with willing helpers put up decorations, and Father King was overseer in the placing of the Crib. Others were busy preparing a lunch for the Christians to be eaten after Midnight Mass.

Darkness came all too soon and with it the worshippers began to arrive in earnest. Like moths about a candle, they gathered around the pump-lamp that was being primed for the night's devotions. Amid a babble of voices and a sea of faces outside the windows we ate our evening rice. That over we proceeded to the chapel and like the children after Pied-piper they followed us up the narrow stairs, and sat themselves down for the evening. It was just about 7 p.m. mind you, and prayers were not scheduled to begin till eight-thirty.

In order to avoid the rush later some came to confession, then at the appointed time prayers began. The uninitiated might wonder what this was all about—the happy crowd of Christians shouting out those prayers, often each on his own separate note, and some of the visitors passing remarks to their neighbors, just the ordinary preliminaries to Midnight Mass. They do it that way, you know! The Lord must understand and smile sometimes, too, at the rumpus. When the intermissions came, instead of going out for a walk and some tea as is usually done, they stoically stuck to their places. They were so comfortably packed in like the proverbial sardines, and it was warm, which is just what the Chinese enjoy.

More confessions and then after the third period of prayers, sermon, and more prayers it was midnight and Christmas.

Bang, bang, bang! go the cannon crackers in salute, and immediately we began Midnight Mass. Enacting over again, renewing once more, in this far off isolated mountain-hemmed valley, in our poor rickety up stairs chapel, the wonderful mystery of Bethlehem. Void of worldly comforts or grandeur, as others know them, like in Bethlehem of old, it was night—yea, and in a land where so many were not interested, no room in their homes for the Prince of Peace. Yet here in the bright light were the few adorers, the poor, like the handful of shepherds that first Christmas night. Here, they had gathered to see again that which had come to pass. Representatives only of a race of people who recognize not the God who created them. Here, again offering Himself for these and for all mankind was the Word Made Flesh—God, and He dwelt among us. O happy memories! O blessed Communion of Saints! Yes, and more, O happy anniversary! for it was this very night two years ago that we first began to reserve the Blessed Sacrament here in Huang-T'an, that He whose "delight is to be among the children of men" might continue to tabernacle among us.

The Christmas feeling was in the air and Father King did his share by acting as choir and organist all in one. There was some little commotion caused when the shuffling process had to be gone through for those who wished to receive Holy Communion. They managed, though, some way. Then the Blessing—on Christmas one feels somewhat as the Pope must feel when blessing the world.

During the second Mass the Christians made their thanksgiving after Holy Communion — praying out loud, of course. They then filed down stairs, many of them for the first time since 7 p.m. Perseverance is a virtue.

Before going home each was supplied with a putty-like patty, a species of cold pounded-rice delicacy (?) with some sugar in it, lacking wrapper of any kind and certainly their hands were not the first to touch them. The best name for such things is just "rubber-cake". In that form they were easily and equally distributed and were enjoyed by the whole crowd. We didn't hear of any reported as sick so presumably their "innards" were able to stand the shock. On our part though, "from eating rubber-cake, O Lord deliver us".

A few Christmas carols made it seem more like old times. Two o'clock in the morning, why that makes no difference, nothing but

Not much to look at is this poor, dilapidated little building—but it is the centre of activities for the growing Christian community of Huang T'An. The upstairs portion is a chapel, while the lower section is the home of two Canadian missionaries.

Father Ly, a Chinese priest working with Msgr. Fraser in Kinhwa, baptized the 79 persons shown in this picture. The ceremony took more than five hours. These new Christians live in Siaokaotsu, near the confines of Chuchow Prefecture. Msgr. Fraser's letter, which was published in "China" last month, reported a remarkable movement towards the church, and hundreds of pagans are under instruction for Baptism.

bandits could disturb these people after they have gone to bed.

Firecrackers soon brought the crowd back in the morning for the other Masses. And once more they lustily sang out the prayers. Their voices never seem to tire. The grownups, like the children, had a grand time setting off those ever present firecrackers, whose sound rolled up the valleys on either side. The Christians, you see, were having a feast of their own and were letting the pagans know about it.

At noon, they laughingly told us how one man had made a flying leap for safety and shinnied up a pillar when the chapel floor gave warning that it was weakening under the strain of age and an excessive load. It didn't give way though, but I doubt if it will stand many more such gruellings. One breathes freely only after the crowd gets safely down on such occasions.

Those living far off then came in to make their bows and to be wished a good trip. (Some nearby Christians had kindly put them up for the past night.) So with many a "Tsow-hah!" (i.e. walk well) or "Ma-ma-tsow!" (slowly, slowly walk) they departed and headed for the hills.

Quite a number were back also for Benediction in the afternoon, making it very near to a twenty-four hour day, and Christmas, 1934, had become history.

True there is nothing startling in all this, but it gives one just a little idea of how things are carried out in a small mountain village in China. And for Father King and myself this way of spending Christmas has its own consolations.

CHINESE VIGNETTES

(Continued from page 57)

plenty. Too much. So with the aid of friends or foes he shunts Mr. B. C. off to his own camping ground. And Mrs. B. C., she comes stamping along as well. She is going to play first fiddle now. Whiteman, with all his saxophones, trombones and dish-pans, could not manufacture half as much racket as was bellowed forth from that pocket-edition emporium. And could Mrs. B. C. play her fiddle. Whew! The very bean curd curdled a few extra curds. Even the baby next door woke up.

AND still it was all as nothing. For of a sudden a horrible yelling, roaring, grunting, rose from behind the spectators. They had simply to turn on their heels, and there was Act No. 3. Ah! This was a real tilt. Barnum had saved his best for the last. The piece de resistance! the climax! Bang! Thud! Ouch! Tear 'em away! There was a crowd! Milling about like a herd of wild steers just about to stampede. The street is very narrow. Fifteen feet at most. And half of those fifteen are taken up by a canal, with only the approaches to the houses boarded over. Our gatekeeper, an ex-bamboo weaver of eighty-odd birthdays, usually sits out at the doorway of an evening. A drag on the old bamboo pipe. A chat with the neighbors. They help to draw out the long day. But when he saw that scrimmage, heaving, weaving, back and forth, he picks up his bench and walks. After running the race for a decade, and more than the allotted span, he has no desire to be trampled to death by a mob of wild men. Nor drowned in a dirty canal. Yes, this was a battle royal. Two brothers. Who can put up a better fight than two brothers? Cain and Abel showed them how to do it, didn't they? Masons these freres were. Building a big stone bridge for the new motor road. Heaving about heavy rocks from morn till night. And swinging hefty sledge hammers. Perhaps it is well that their little difference of opinion took place after working hours. But I must admit the loving lads were very practical. They chose as their trysting-place a spot right opposite the coffin-maker's shop.

Finally by dint of much entreating, exhorting, threatening, together with an equal amount of pushing and pulling, a veritable tug-of-war, Cyril and Cedric were unravelled and consigned to their respective corners. And who do you suppose were amongst the most ardent peace-makers? Mr. Cooper and the Sargeant. "Naughty, naughty," they admonished, "to fight like that."

Slowly the rumblings of the bout died away with the dispersion of the fans. One by one, the sections of the disappearing house fronts found themselves lodged in their allotted slots. Our octogenarian banged shut the gates of the mission. Lights out. Peace.

— A Lenten Allegory —

Casting for a Simon of Cyrene

SCENE: The mission world: 10,000 x 100,000 souls; a seething mass of unregenerate Shintoists, Buddhists. Animists, Confucianists, Mohammedans, Hindus, Jews.

Time: Daily, from the rising of the sun until the going down of the same; from the morning watch even unto night.

Protagonist: The Mystical Body of Christ: 1 Lord, the Pope of the Missions; 2 Lord, the Society for the Propagation of the Faith; 3 Lord, the missionary Orders and Congregations of the Catholic Church.

Retainers: All mission-minded folk and subscribers to mission magazines.

Antagonist: Anti-Christ: 1 villain, Communism; 2 villain, pagan customs and prescriptive rites; 3 villain, spirit of laicism.

Judas: All apostates, national or individual.

Pilate: Compromise in high places—weasel concordats.

Herod: The spirit of concupiscence.

Scribes and Pharisees: The spirit of patronage.

High Priests: The simoniacal hierarchies of ancient cults.

Simon of Cyrene: The Apostolate of the Press.

Soldiers: The temporal power of pagan governments.

Mob: Oriental devil worshippers: Eskimo medicine-men; fakirs from the land of the rising sun; bonzes and marauding bandits from the land of the dragon; lamas from the table lands of Tibet; sun priests and priestesses from the valley of the Nile; African anthropophagi; voodoo mistresses from the black hills of Jamaica; sun-baked Mayas and leather-skinned Indians; and over all, with cracking whip, alternately lashing them to fury and despair, Usury, the Simon Legree of the mission field.

Properties: A cross: suffering; 3 Nails: moral, mental and physical pain; A Crown of Thorns: the pride of place and power; A Reed: any nominal Catholic; A Spear: "Why support the foreign missions?" A Sponge and Vinegar: the opiate gag of silent indifference; 30 Pieces of Silver: political preferment, social prestige, extravagance in opera, symphonies, movies, dinners, liqueurs, taxis, cigarettes, cigars, marcels and beauty parlor comforts, sartorial delights, furs, silks, radios, fashion models, apartment appointments, bridge, chocolate floats, ring or rink side seats, best sellers and so forth and so forth.

SYNOPSIS

Jesus Christ died to redeem all men from hell. Though, as Man, He can die no more, yet, in His Mystical Body, He daily dies upon the mission field. For there, the members of his Mystical Body are locked in visible and invisible combat with the traditional foes of Christendom,—with immortal souls, the guerdon of success. Flying the pennons of the Pope, barricaded with grace and reinforced by the prayers and aid of organs for the Propagation of the Faith, the militant members of this Mystical Body are forever pressing forward, falling, rising, stumbling on, in their efforts to set the Cross within the stanchion posts of pagandom—even though in so doing, they may be carrying the wood for the sacrifice and be transfixed thereto. Yet, lest they prove unequal to the task, there is need of a modern Simon of Cyrene, there is need of the Apostolate of the Press.

The Mystical Body of Christ upon the mission field today is calling for a more vigorous Simon of Cyrene.

The Mystical Body of Christ upon the mission field today is pleading for the sustenance of concerted Catholic Action as exercised through the Power and Apostolate of the Press.

Is Christ, is the Pope of the Missions, is the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, is heathendom waiting for you?—From "Jesuit Missions".

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE

FIFTY CENTS FOR ONE YEAR.

TEN DOLLARS FOR LIFE

ALL PROCEEDS DEVOTED ENTIRELY TO OUR MISSION WORK

KEEP in touch with the missionaries in China by becoming a subscriber. If you already receive "CHINA", kindly see whether your subscription is soon due (look at your address label). Renew it now and help our mission work which really needs your assistance. Just get a money order or postal note at your nearest post office and mail it to us with the coupon below.

A subscription to "CHINA" gives you a share in the many spiritual works offered by our priests and students for all benefactors of our missions.

— — — — — — — — You can use the following coupon — — — — — — — —

"CHINA"
St. F. X. Seminary
Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.

Dear Fathers:—

Enclosed find $.....as a subscription to "China" for ..... years.

Name ..... Name .....

Address ..... Address .....

.....

(If you have changed your address, please give us the OLD address as well as the NEW one) turned him black; which, when the people saw, they realized the truth of the words he had spoken. Someone afterwards saw him rise from the well, and, holding a sword in his hand, ride away on a horse. The final step was to number him among the gods.

OFF THE BEATEN TRACK

(Continued from page 53)

The people of this town seemed quite friendly, at least in a negative sort of way, but the farmers are the same sociable class they always have been. Walking through the fields we chatted with this one and that, asking questions as to crops and the like; making known who we were and why we came. It is said every locality has its particular trait even in dress. Here we noticed that the women wore as the everyday head-gear a towel draped loosely and somewhat resembling a bonnet. As regards the houses, brick walls were far more numerous than the customary mud ones.

In the afternoon we called to see the Mandarin — this having been arranged for in the morning when we sent our cards. He seemed rather conscious of his position — he was only a young man just turned thirty. He regaled us with hot water instead of the customary tea, and was rather fidgety during the interview. Yet he kept excellent order in the town and his position is no sinecure. Bandits ravaged and burned the place about five years ago and who can tell when they might come again.

Staying at our inn was a young Chinese and in the course of a conversation struck up with him we learned that his parents were Christians, and that he had run away from home. No, he was not baptized. But now he was in difficult straits. Our Cathechist urged him to follow the example of his parents, but the only response he could elicit was a promise to "think it over".

In the evening some school boys came along to have a look at us, and a feed of peanuts. They get a great kick from watching and listening to a foreigner read in Chinese. We took out a Cathechism and proceeded to read, asking them now and then how they pronounced a certain character or what was the meaning of this. To one only of them did we give a Catechism although each wanted one. In this way interest will be more sustained since it must go the rounds as each one has his look.

Before we left the chief of police paid us a visit—did some one say, "a doubtful compliment?" He was quite chatty telling us about the Catholic Church as he knew it in his far-off Province. He was from the North. It was his hope that we would open a chapel in this vicinity.

As nothing further could be done for the present we decided to hit for home. Perhaps our visit shall bear fruit and we shall be able to open a chapel there. And of those who read this we ask a prayer to this end.

CATHOLIC MISSIONS

(Continued from page 55)

the first time with the same ceremonial as the representatives of the other nineteen nations. Thereupon, a Church authority in Rome commented: "Three years ago Chinese revolutionists, poisoned with Bolshevism, were shouting: Down with the foreigners! Down with the missions, tools of foreign imperialism! To-day the Church has gone to Nanking, not to offer apologies, but as a friend of China, borne on the prestige of her doctrine of justice and love."

On December 29th of the same year, 1929, the Nanking Government was officially represented at the celebration of the Golden Jubilee of Pope Pius XI, which took place in the Cathedral of Peiping, in the midst of an immense congregation, fifteen Ministers of different nationalities and a score of the highest Chinese officials.

During the Sino-Japanese conflict, Dr. Yen, chief of the Chinese delegation at the League of Nations, made, in February, 1932, a strong appeal to the Pope, imploring a word of sympathy in behalf of his country. Pius XI in his answer emphasized the unmistakable proofs of good will which he had repeatedly given to the Chinese people, and assured them of his prayers that peace might soon be restored between the two great nations which God made neighbors in the Far East.

When the Chinese Government, during the spring of 1932, appointed the Emergency Committee to meet in Loyang with a view to study the means of avoiding the profound economic crisis which was threatening the nation, among the 110 members from the most prominent personalities of the Republic, were to be found five Catholics. One of them dared to make a very bold proposal for a non-Christian assembly. He remarked: To rely on the resources of Confucianism, Buddhism or Taoism, for the relief of China's chaos is but to lose time. Let us therefore do more and better. Let us turn to the Ten Commandments of God. And having explained each one of them, he concluded: "With the faithful observance of the Decalogue, our people would be entirely relieved within only three months."

On February 7th, 1933, Dr. Kung Hsiang-hsi, a prominent member of the Chinese Government, received in a special audience by the Pope, thanked him for the successful activities of his Delegate to China, and for the educational and cultural works of the Catholic Church in China. Although he is not a Catholic, he also asked the Pope to give the apostolic blessing to his country and earnestly to pray and make the Catholics all over the world pray for the peace of the Far East.

The above statements and facts abundantly prove that not only is there no incompatibility between Demist China and the Catholic Church, but also that they can help one another, all the more so, that the Leader of the Party was a Christian and sympathized with Catholicism. To foster and develop Christian teaching in China would therefore mean to carry out more fully Dr. Sun's legitimate aspirations in all fields, racial, political, social, as well as religious.

(To be continued)

OUR COVER

The picture which decorates our cover this month was sent us by Father Gerald Doyle. The young girl—who is known by the name of Marsella—is the companion of the Grey Sisters at the Lishui Convent. She accompanies the Sisters on their trips and is a most helpful young lady in many respects.

NONSENSE

Williams: "I wish I was dead."
Friend: "Can't you marry her—or did you?"

Criminal (who has got a life sentence): "Oh, my lord, I shall never live to do it."
Kindly judge: "Never mind, my man, do as much of it as you can."

Mr. Newrich: "'Ow much do you charge to trace back family 'ist'ry?"
Geneologist: "Fifty pounds to have it hunted up; one hundred and fifty pounds to have it hushed up."

Guest (being shown paintings): "Did you say that was a Correggio?"
Host: "No, a replica."
Guest: "Oh, well he's a pretty good man, too, isn't he?"

Jones: "Could I borrow enough on my policy to buy a car?"
Official (life company): "You might, but we'd have to cancel your policy if you drove that kind of a car."

Passer-by (to workman with hod of bricks): "Hi, one of those bricks fell on my foot."
Workman: "You're lucky. Look at all the bricks that didn't!"

Woman—"Why do you liken that man to the busy bee? He isn't particularly industrious, is he?"
Her Husband — "Oh, no, he isn't that. But nearly everyone he touches gets stung."

"This picture took ten years of my time."
"That is a long time just to paint a picture."
"Oh, I painted it in ten days—the rest of the time I spent trying to sell it."

An inquisitive old lady was always waylaying the new minister in the street to ask him questions. One day she stopped him and said: "Mr. Smith, would you please tell me the difference between Cherubim and Seraphim?"
The young minister thought wildly for a moment or two. Then he replied, with an inspiration: "Well, they did have a difference, I believe, but they have made it up."

Wife: "Don't you think a man has more sense after he's married?"
"Yes, but it's too late then."

The old gentleman tumbled over a five-barred gate just in time to save himself from the angry bull. "You brute," he spluttered, shaking his fist at the animal, "and I've been a vegetarian all my life."

"What did you pay for this car?" asked the garage man who had been asked to overhaul it. "Well, as a mater of fact, a friend gave it to me." "Man, you've been swindled."

Mistress (trying to compose reference for discharged maid): "Really, Jane, I can't think what reason I can give to explain your leaving."
Maid: "Well, ma'am, suppose you just put, 'Why I let her go I can't think'."

Landlady: "I'm sorry the chicken soup isn't good. I explained to the cook very carefully how to make it, but perhaps she didn't catch the idea."
Boarder: "It tastes to me as if it was the chicken she didn't catch."

Mrs. Billus (returning from doctor's): "John, the doctor told me tonight that I need a change of climate."
Mr. Billus (listening in): "That's all right, Maria. The radio says it's going to be twenty degrees colder tomorrow."

Diner: "What on earth is this broth made from, waiter? Surely it isn't chicken broth?"
Waiter: "Well, sir, it's chicken broth in its infancy. It's made out of the water the eggs were boiled in."

"Mother, isn't dinner ready yet?" asked Bobbie.
"No, dear, it's much too early," responded mother.
"Isn't the clock slow?" asked Bobbie.
"No, dear," replied mother.
"Well, I guess my stomach must be fast then," added the child.

Two small boys were returning to the boathouse after a very successful fishing trip.
"We must come here again, Bill. Did you mark the spot where we caught them all?"
"Yes I put a cross on the bottom of the boat."
"Fathead! We might not get the same boat next time!"

"You look worried, dear. What are you looking for?"
"A husband."
"But you've got one."
"That's the one I'm looking for."

"My boy," said the magnate to his son, "there are two things that are vitally necessary if you are to succeed in business."
"What are they, dad?"
"Honesty and sagacity."
"What is honesty?"
"Always—no matter what happens or how adversely it may affect you—always keep your word once you have given it."
"And sagacity?"
"Never give it."

Johnny had been the guest of honor at a party the day before and his friend was regarding him enviously.
"How was it? Have a good time?" he asked.
"Did I?" was the emphatic answer. "I ain't hungry yet!"

Johnny—"Mom, won't you give me that candy now?"
Mom—"Didn't I tell you I wouldn't give you any unless you kept still?"
Johnny—"Yes, but——"
Mom—"Well, the longer you keep still, the sooner you'll get it."

Judge (in Traffic Court)—"I'll let you off with a fine this time, but another day I'll send you to jail."
Driver—"Sort of a weather forecast, eh, Judge?"
Judge—"What do you mean?"
Driver — "Fine today—cooler tomorrow."

"I say, Brown, have you got that umbrella I loaned you?"
"No. I loaned it to a friend. Are you wanting it?"
"Not exactly, but the chap who loaned it to me says the owner wants it."

Old Gentleman — "Why are you crying, my little man?"
Little Boy (sobbing bitterly) — "I don't know what to do. Mother won't let me stand on my head and Daddy grumbles because I wear out my shoes."

Among the guests at a reception was a distinguished man of letters. He was grave and somewhat taciturn. One of the ladies present suggested to the hostess that he seemed to be out of place at such a party.
"Yes," replied the hostess with a bright smile, "you see, he can't talk anything but sense."

Problems Can be Solved by

CATHOLIC WILLS

For Mission Needs

The instinct is strong to "keep what we have". Yet when death summons we must go to the grave "clutching in our dead hands only that which we have given away". If you feel you cannot share your earthly possessions now with God, perhaps you will be mindful of Him and His Missions when drawing up your last will. You can be sure that what you leave to carry on Catholic Mission work will merit a blessing on your soul, and cause your name to be held in benediction long after you are dead. In China, our priests need funds for new chapels, for new schools, for new homes, and for payment of salaries to catechists. In Canada, our Seminary needs support for the training of young apostles and for the maintenance of their home. Think of our Mission work when making, or changing, your last will. Here's how you can do it; insert this clause in your will:

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO, THE SUM OF ..... "

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

MAY 1935

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.

2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.

3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.

4. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press
263 Adelaide St. West Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.

2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.

3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.

4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.

5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 25,400
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XVI. MAY, 1935 No. 5

THE LIFE OF A MISSIONARY

WHEN once a young man decides to give his life to the work of the Foreign Missions he begins to learn things concerning the attitude of Catholics towards the Missions. What strikes him in his contact with people is the honor and esteem shown towards those who are engaged in missionary enterprise. It seems to be part of the Catholic mentality to have such high regard for missionaries, and it is in fact a praiseworthy attitude.

FATHER DESMOND STRINGER, writing in this issue of "China" on "The High Romance" of the missionary life in China has some excellent things to say which support the contention that the missionary of modern times has a life as difficult in most aspects as had the pioneers of old. In some respects, of course, there is a favorable difference. It is true, for example, that the hardships of travel have been lessened to some extent. That has happened quite recently. Even the first of our missionaries who went to Chuchow found it much more difficult to get to their missions than, say, the last group who went over. Development of the highways has made that possible. Again, the missionary of today can preach the Gospel openly, whereas had he lived in pioneer days he would have had to do this secretly. Moreover, it is easier for him today to obtain food and clothing more suited to his nature than in the days of old.

APART from such aspects, however, conditions in China have not changed very much. The Chinese people are the same. Their nature has not changed nor have their social conditions been much improved. It is not our intention to disparage the Chinese nature or character, but, as Father Stringer points out, it is an open fact that Western and Eastern ideas concerning culture and civilization do not agree. Even Chinese leaders of modern times realize the lack of culture among their own people, and the late renowned Dr. Sun Yat-sen stigmatized his nation for this lack of culture. Over a year ago there was launched a "New Life Movement" (which was outlined in "China" at the time) sponsored by the Chinese National Government. General Chiang Kai-shek, Generalissimo of the Chinese Army, states that the purpose of this Movement is to create and develop "a new national consciousness and mass psychology" to do away with the "age-long influences of apparently sanctified customs" and the "age-long aloofness and habits . . . . which have a tremendously suffocating effect upon a great country." But changes are slow in coming.

THE result of this stagnation and lack of culture and civilization is a serious problem for the missionary. In Father Stringer's words "one of his first concerns on the missions—and the most difficult—is the study of the Chinese mentality . . . . here in China the missionary is as a voice crying in the wilderness of paganism. On every side he sees and hears much that does violence to his sense of Christian refinement. But it is the missionary's task to lift up the age-old Chinese culture from its heathen depths and 'baptize it into the Catholic Faith'." For the missionary to take into consideration the Chinese philosophy of life and accommodate himself to it as far as Christian principles will permit is indeed not an easy task. There are sacrifices required in this respect which no one can imagine who has not experienced life in China.

CONDITIONS on the Missions have not yet reached the stage where isolation and loneliness have been deleted from the list of hardships to be endured by the missionary. When a person leaves home to enter religious life we are accustomed to refer to him as having "made a sacrifice". Surely, those who have bravely broken the links that bind them to home and family and have ventured "out into the deep" in far-off China have made a great sacrifice. But their going to China is only the beginning of sacrifice. Among the pagan people whom he has adopted as his own, the missionary, as a rule, is forced to live a life of isolation. He is even denied, except at rare intervals, the happiness of association with his fellow priests. Having been assigned to a particular parish there he stays, laboring day in and day out. And whilst thus doing the work of his Divine Master he knows what it is to endure physical hardships. He must be out in the heat, in the cold, and in the rain. And any of you who have faithfully followed the experiences of our missionaries as related in their letters in "China" will know that the "luxuries" of life are an unknown quantity for the priest or sister on a mission trip to Chuchow. Missionary life indeed has its romance when it comes to physical sacrifices.

THE hardest feature of a missionary's life is his daily contact with a people whom it is difficult to understand. The missionary newly arrived in China goes through a trying time till he assimilates some of the truths so well enunciated by Father Stringer for the guidance of our missionaries-in-training here at the Seminary. When the first romantic notions are dissipated the missionary must trust more than ever to his unshaken faith in the Providence of God. Thank God, the missionary, despite all handicaps, keeps his hand to the plow. You, dear reader, who have learned from the pages of this magazine the trials and difficulties of our Canadian missionaries in China, should have their cause deeply rooted in your hearts, and by your prayers and your alms give them the encouragement they need to carry on their work of saving souls.

ORDINATIONS AT CHINA MISSION

LESS than one week after his enthronement as Archbishop of Toronto, His Excellency James C. McGuigan, D.D., visited China Mission Seminary, and we had the privilege of welcoming this illustrious Archbishop as he did us the honor of performing in our Seminary chapel on Wednesday, March 27th, his first Ordinations in his new See.

Second Minor Orders were received by James Leonard, Toronto; Harold Murphy, Kingston; Leonard Hudswell, Tweed; and Lawrence McAuliffe, Peterboro. William Matte, Gogama, Ont., received First Minor Orders. These five young men, together with two others (Ronald Reeves, London, and John Maurice, Ingersoll) will be ordained priests before the end of this year for our Mission in China.

Archbishop McGuigan gave a splendid address to our students, encouraging them in their high vocation, and telling them of his own personal interest in all that concerned the Church in foreign fields. As a missionary Bishop he would paternally foster and promote the interests of our Mission Institute.

The following Address of Welcome was given to His Excellency by Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President of St. Francis Xavier Seminary:

To The Most Reverend
James Charles McGuigan, D.D.,
Archbishop of Toronto.

May it please Your Excellency:

In graciously consenting to visit St. Francis Xavier Seminary, Your Excellency, is honoring it, not only by conferring Holy Orders for the first time as Archbishop of Toronto, but also by affording us, its priests and students, the opportunity of welcoming you within its walls and tendering you the pledge of our respectful homage and loyalty as your subjects and our love and obedience as your children.

Mindful also of the tremendous responsibilities attached to your high office, we beg to offer Your Excellency the assurance of our constant prayers, that assisted from on High, you may be enabled to bear them successfully unto the end.

Engaged, as we are, in training and ordaining young men for the mission field of China, which has been confided to us by the Holy See, Your Excellency's appointment has for us a very special significance in view of the fact that our gloriously reigning Pius XI is "The Pope of the Missions".

Often has he proclaimed his predilection for this part of the Church's activity and urged upon clergy and laity the necessity for valiant efforts to win to the Faith the millions of pagans who still sit in the shadow of death. He has even written that "the Church has no other reason for existence, than, by enlarging the Kingdom of Christ throughout the world, to make all men participate in His salutary redemption," and that, besides safeguarding the flock already within the fold, she is to "strive with might and main to win over and to join to Christ all those who are still without the fold".

Since then "The Pope of the Missions" has selected Your Excellency for the most important See in English-speaking Canada, may we not rejoice in the conviction that Toronto has an Archbishop whose heart is missionary and beats in full sympathy with the nearest and dearest interests of the heart of the Vicar of Jesus Christ?

That this conviction is further well founded, we need only look back to Your Excellency's record as Archbishop of Regina.

In that archdiocese you were confronted with a task which demanded sacrifices, laborious efforts, patience and deep faith and confidence in Divine Providence, under conditions which in almost every respect resembled those to be met with in the foreign field.

That the Seminary has thus far succeeded, one need only recall the fact that it opened its doors here in 1924 with ten students and numbers to-day some seventy-six members in this country and in China.

To the warm encouragement of the late beloved Archbishop McNeil, whose vision was world-wide, whose courage was as great as his Christlike love of souls, the Seminary owes its place in the Archdiocese of Toronto. To his guidance, sympathy and fatherly solicitude is, in no small measure, due its success. To the Bishops of Ontario, under whose management it is, and especially to their representatives on its Board of Directors, it is ever grateful for their sympathetic co-operation in rendering easier a path beset more or less always with obstacles.

ARCHBISHOP McGUIGAN
(Picture, courtesy "Catholic Register")

In this review, necessarily brief, we beg to draw Your Excellency's attention to the magnificent generosity of the Catholic body, both clergy and laity, throughout Canada and Newfoundland, who have supplied the financial means without which it would have been impossible to carry on. From them have come the material offerings which have enabled us to educate priests and send them to join the Church's ever-growing army in China. To this great body, who unerringly sense the pulse of Catholic Action, and who are drawn as if by divine inspiration to zeal for the foreign mission work of the Church, this Seminary owes a debt of gratitude which Almighty God alone can satisfy.

Your Excellency's visit to our Seminary this day, for which we are most grateful, marks the beginning of a new epoch in our work, strengthens our confidence and renews our faith in the merits of the great undertaking for which God's Church was founded.

We humbly ask Your Excellency's blessing on it all, its benefactors, its priests, its students, and its catechumens and converts in far-off China.

Signed on behalf of St. Francis Xavier Seminary,

J. E. McRae,
March 27, 1935. Superior.

FISH-POND

By REV. GERALD DOYLE

EVER since Our Lord told the Apostles that He would make them fishers of men, priests and missionaries have often been called fishermen striving to save souls, to bring all into the Church founded by Our Divine Lord. St. Francis Xavier is said to have fished with a net in India, where he converted large numbers, but it is thought that if he had landed in China he would have contented himself with a rod and line, making individual rather than mass conversions, because the Chinese are difficult. St. Francis referred to China as the "rock", giving an indication of its difficulty for the missionary.

Now whether the great Saint would have used a net or a line here in China it is certain that the missionaries to-day use only the line. While at times in some sections they are busy recasting the line into the pond, in the majority of cases it is necessary for the missionary to exercise great patience, to call into play every means at his command to land even one convert, and often when he thinks that one is landed, it slips back into the water, or it is rotten and the hook will not hold, but perseverance and the assistance of those at home who help in spiritual or material ways means an ever increasing number safely landed.

All of which leads up to the reason for the title at the top of this page. The missionary comes to China to save souls and for that reason this pagan country, with its teeming millions, takes on the appearance of an immense fish pond, with the waters often disturbed and murky. For the missionary China is a fish pond.

Please pray that the missionaries will be good fishermen.

* * *

REPORTS from Shanghai state that Father John MacDonald, who had a fistic encounter with some Chinese "badmen" last November, is much better and will soon return to active work on the missions. While it is true that Father MacDonald successfully defended himself when attacked, he did not emerge unscathed, but had a pair of badly-injured hands and suffered from shock. He came here to Lishui for treatment and when his hands were almost better he went to bed with influenza and then suffered from an attack of quinsy.

After the New Year he went to Shanghai to have his glasses, which had been broken in the fight, repaired, and for a thorough physical examination. The doctor sent him to the General Hospital and after tests had been made he underwent a severe and prolonged treatment for amoebic dysentery, following which efforts have been made to keep the vertebrae in the proper place; having been injured years ago in hockey, the displacement of the vertebrae was aggravated by his recent display of Catholic action. At all events he will soon be back with us (it is now March), ready to carry on his work.

* * *

FATHER WILLIAM AMYOT arrived here a few days ago for his Spring visit. He reports that all goes well up in his mountain parish of Huang T'an and that Father Joseph King is as spry as ever and has increased his weight by two pounds. Father King is still faithful to a resolution made after last retreat and daily separates an embryo beard from his engaging countenance. Stick it right out, Father Joe. Incidentally Father Amyot returns to the mountains with permission to build a new house, one floor of which will serve as a temporary chapel. Father Amyot hopes he will have enough money to finish the work.

The new house is a real necessity as Fathers Amyot and King have been living in very poor quarters. Eventually it is hoped to build a church which will be dedicated to the Immaculate Conception.

* * *

THERE was a disturbance in the street in front of the mission a few nights ago but the few priests who heard the loud talking did not pay any special attention to it. In the morning we learned that a young man aged 22 had been badly burned and he had been brought to the convent for the Sisters to treat.

"Just before midnight the gatekeeper called us," one of the Sisters told me, "and informed us that a young man had been burned and that they wanted us to come. Naturally we could not go at that hour so they brought him to the gate, Mr. Wong, the catechist, coming, too. There was hardly an inch of flesh not burned, even his hair was all singed

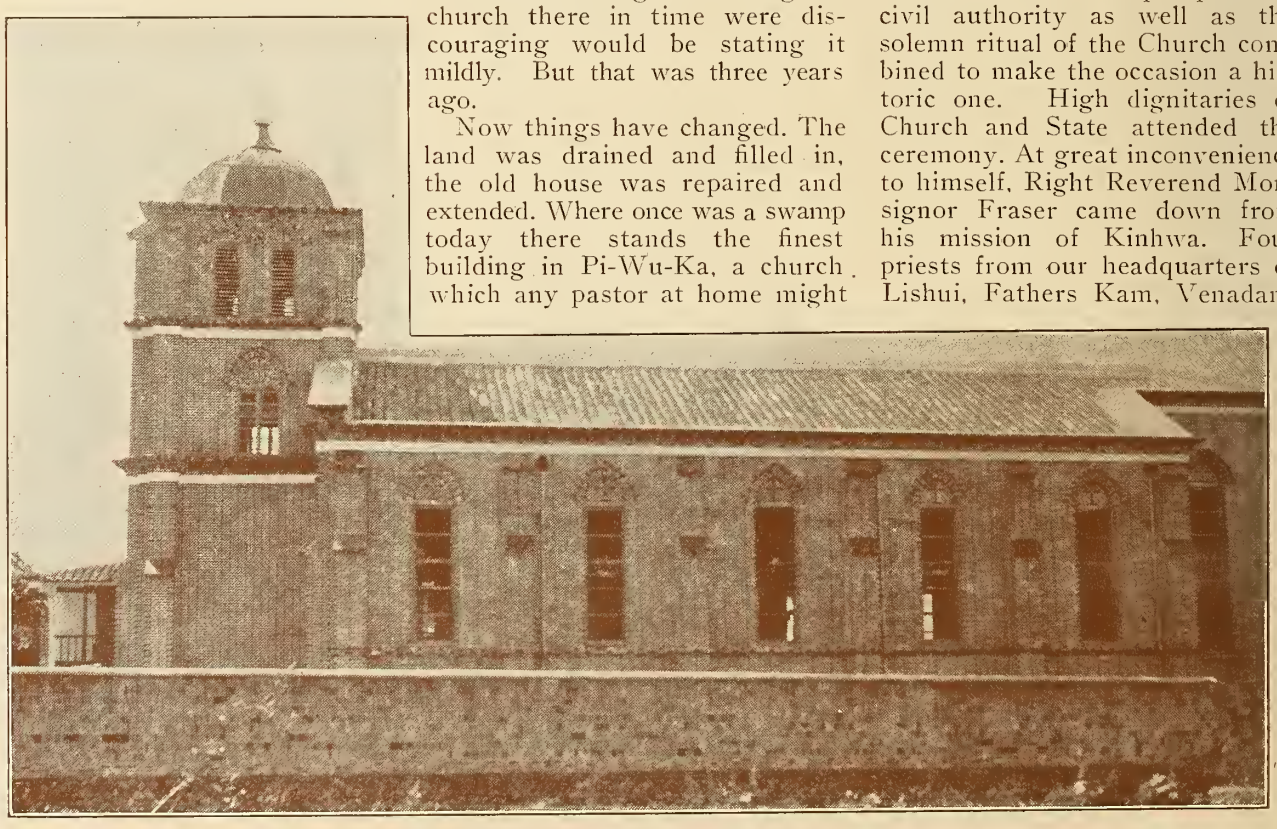
(Continued on page 75)

On the beach at Lishui last Summer. The priest is Father McNabb, of St. Thomas, Ont., wearing sun helmet.

Blessing of New Church At Pi-Wu-Ka

Described by REV. CRAIG STRANG

EVEN casual readers of "China" can easily see that the life of a missionary is filled with hardships—great and many. When these hardships are brought to the attention of the Catholic people at home it is not with the intention of showing the missionaries in a heroic light, but rather to demonstrate to the people that, despite difficulties, the missionaries are achieving results because of the financial and moral support received from friends of the missions. As the missionaries would like to see their works multiply, so, too, ought the donations of mission supporters be increased in order to permit this.



But mission life is not all difficulties—the missionary also has his successes, those successes which mean to him all the human encouragement he ever has. And so it is of a successful work that I write today. Happy I am to describe for readers of "China" the ceremony which took place on February 10th at Pi-Wu-Ka, the blessing of the new church which was donated a few years ago by an anonymous friend in Newfoundland, and of which Father Bernard Boudreau, of New Bedford, Mass., is the architect, builder, and now the proud pastor.

Letters which have appeared in "China" on other occasions have told of the sorry plight in which Father Boudreau found himself when he first opened the mission in Pi-Wu-Ka, and of the trying circumstances of the following three years. The "church" was an upper room in a house that was almost tottering to the ground; it was more like a barn than a house—"and not even a good barn", as Father Jim McGillivray wrote when he made his first visit there one Christmas. This mission property was in a bad state; it was really nothing but a swamp. To say that prospects for the building of a regular church there in time were discouraging would be stating it mildly. But that was three years ago.

Now things have changed. The land was drained and filled in, the old house was repaired and extended. Where once was a swamp today there stands the finest building in Pi-Wu-Ka, a church which any pastor at home might be proud to have, and proud to have been its builder. It is a substantial and lasting monument to the generosity of a kind donor and to the indefatigable zeal of a hard-working missionary. We pay tribute to Father Boudreau's skill in designing and erecting his church. Under his direct supervision, and with his own unstinted labor, he raised this edifice to the great glory of God and for the salvation of souls.

It is a long story and a soul-stirring one, and we newcomers have arrived in China just in time to see the glorious climax in this chapter of pioneer work in the Prefecture of Chuchow.

Preparations for the event were long in the making, for the Blessing of a new church is not a daily, nor even an annual event here. All the pomp of the civil authority as well as the solemn ritual of the Church combined to make the occasion a historic one. High dignitaries of Church and State attended the ceremony. At great inconvenience to himself, Right Reverend Monsignor Fraser came down from his mission of Kinhwa. Four priests from our headquarters of Lishui, Fathers Kam, Venadam, Father Boudreau's church at Pi-Wu-Ka, dedicated to the Canadian Martyrs.

McGillivray, and Strang accompanied Very Reverend Ramon Serra, our Vicar-Delegate, who officiated at the Blessing. Father Wong, the preacher for the occasion, came from Sungyang, and Father McNabb journeyed from Tsingtien to assist as Master of Ceremonies. As best I can I will now describe for you the event.

On the previous afternoon five priests from Lishui boarded an already overcrowded bus and set off for Pi-Wu-Ka in a heavy downpour of rain. We were greeted in the village in a most enthusiastic fashion; innumerable strings of firecrackers were set off, terminating in an extra loud salvo as we reached the Mission compound. Father Boudreau had hired the best city orchestra for the event, and they rendered a most choice selection at our entrance, by way of a hearty welcome. Refreshments followed, and as we supped the Chinese tea and munched at the Chinese delicacies the orchestra played appropriate "luncheon music"—not to be compared, of course, to Rex Battle and his Royal York orchestra. Everybody gathered round as we ate, commenting on our appearance and our conduct and bowing to us every time they caught our eye.

During the remainder of the afternoon and until eighty-thirty at night there was a constant stream of visitors; many were pagans from the village who came for a "look-see", and many were Christians from distant places who came to witness the ceremony. At 8.30 p.m. all the Christians assembled for night prayers, and a goodly gathering it was. Throughout the evening bright and multi-coloured lanterns were hung, and they cast a cheerful gleam on the surroundings. Outside, the rain poured down. However, we were quite comfortable in the quarters which Father Boudreau had prepared for us; we had brought our own "pu-kai", or bedding.

Sunday dawned, and the weather showed no improvement. In fact the weather was so miserable that it would have spoiled any other occasion but the present. It would take more than a deluge to dampen the ardour of the priests, or the interest, enthusiasm and devotion of the Christians, who all showed up in their best attire. We said our Masses at an early hour. The Christians had come in for morning prayer, Mass, and Holy Communion, after which they left for breakfast and later returned for the ceremony. It is worthy of mention that some who could not get room on the bus on Saturday rose at five o'clock, took the early morning bus, attended the High Mass and received Holy Communion during it; they were up from five o'clock to nearly noon without breaking their fast.

"China" heartily congratulates Rev. Bernard Boudreau, of New Bedford, Mass., the Pastor at Pi-Wu-Ka, whose zealous labors have been crowned by the blessing and dedication of a splendid church in his parish.

By ten o'clock on Sunday, February 10th, the congregation had assumed enormous proportions that taxed not only the capacity of the Church but crowded the whole Mission compound. The Sacred Ceremony commenced. The cloth was stripped from the altar and the church emptied. The Christians stood at a short distance and the procession around the church began. Father Serra, vested in cope, was accompanied by Monsignor Fraser in his vestments as Protonotary Apostolic, and by Fathers Venadam and McNabb, who read the responses. They were partly sheltered by umbrellas, and in this fashion the walls were blessed outside. Then the procession entered the church and the blessing was given to the interior; last of all came the blessing of the altar. The church at Pi-Wu-Ka was placed under the patronage of the Canadian Martyrs. The congregation had resumed their places; special seats were reserved for the mayor and other civic officials. Then the Solemn High Mass was celebrated by Father Serra. Msgr. Fraser was present in the sanctuary; Father McNabb was assistant priest, and Father Venadam directed the choir from the organ gallery.

Father Paul Wong preached an appropriate sermon, calling attention of his listeners to the Heavenly Patrons of the new church. He pointed out how these heroic apostles had brought the Catholic Faith to far-off Canada and how their influence had spread and was now being reflected in the lives of the missionaries and people present in this new church. As a result of the sacrifices made by these saintly missionaries a few centuries ago —a sacrifice of their whole lives, even unto death, unto martyrdom —Canada was now a Christian country. That same spirit of sacrifice which prompted these valiant saintly men to leave their homes and journey far to preach God's message was the same spirit which animated priests in Canada to leave their homes and come to the Chinese people with the same message of God's love for all His creatures. The preacher concluded with an earnest exhortation to his fellow-Chinese to do all in their power to spread the good tidings brought them by the Catholic missionaries, and to strive to make their China God's own country. Father Wong's sermon made a deep impression on everyone present.

When the ceremony had ended, the rest of the day was spent in inspection tours, especially by the pagans, who asked many questions. Let us hope that what they learned that day will ultimately lead some of them to the True Faith.

Father Boudreau had prepared a Chinese banquet for his guests, and admirably filled the role of a genial host. Arrangements had also been made to provide for those Christians who had come from afar—nobody was forgotten. A good-will banquet was tendered to the civic officials on the following day. We could not remain for that, as our various

(Continued on page 75)

THE HIGH ROMANCE

A Letter to a Seminarian

From
REV. DESMOND STRINGER

IN every walk of life a very great deal depends on one's mental and imaginative view of it as a whole. There is a couplet I heard somewhere, which seems to epitomize what I mean:

"Two men looked out through prison bars,
The one saw mud; the other, stars."

A missionary's life is a romantic one, even though some do frown on describing it so. The author of "The Romance of a Priest" writes, "romance implies a blending of the heroic, the marvellous, the mysterious in actions, manners, ideas, languages or literature." Surely that is wide enough to admit its application to the life of a foreign missionary. Further on he tells us "the romance of the Levite is the gradual development in his soul of the realization of his Creator." Your life on the mission will be replete with opportunities to realize there is much which is heroic and marvelous and mysterious if you have eyes to see and ears to hear. The fact of coming away from all that you regard as "culture" is to perform an heroic act. Here on the missions you are as a voice crying in the wilderness of paganism. On every side you see and hear much that does great violence to your sense of Christian refinement. Disgust may grip you and then discouragement. An heroic exercise of faith is often necessary to secure your heart and mind and soul against a daily and constant contact with pagan environment. To keep alive and foster the growth in yourself of a love for your charges when they continue to remain indifferent or hostile to your advances, to be treated with contempt by those who are vastly your inferior, that, I think you will agree, calls for heroism. In the midst of paganism to preserve the bloom of your Catholic heritage; to maintain the freshness of your mind; to retain your finer feelings and not permit them to become dulled; to augment and intensify your happiness of heart; to be and act the Catholic priest and gentleman and sustain that standard while you live and breathe and move in the insidious atmosphere of heathenism — all this demands effort which can quite truly be called heroic.

Our work is not alone concerned with the preaching of Doctrine or the dispensing of Sacraments, but also in endeavouring to lift this people out of the slough into which idol-worship has sunk them, and clothe them in the raiment of Catholic culture. The very idea of such an accomplishment is a marvelous one—just how much so you will understand more clearly after living here a few years. I know perfectly well neither of us can have any reasonable hope—short of a miracle—of viewing this ultimate success. Likely we shall live and die in the night even before the first glimmer of dawn. It is perfectly natural that we should desire to taste the wine of success; perhaps we do, sometimes, but the flavour of gall is too predominant to our uneducated sense. This lack of visible success is a spot where discouragement lurks, but we can fortify ourselves against it by remembering that others will reap where we have sown. Any success that does crown our labours will be the result of hard work. During the past year or two occasionally I have watched the road builders at the task of breaking a motor-way through these mountains. Hundreds of these fellows chipping, chipping, chipping away the hard rock. Every once in a while they were assisted by a blast of dynamite. It seemed a perfect allegory portraying the work of the missionary. Daily he picks away at the rock of paganism, and at intervals the Holy Ghost blasts out a chunk when there is a movement of some village or clan towards the Faith. It is in this constant labouring that you will pursue "the gradual development in your soul of the realization of your Creator"—that is, your romance; and the deeper your love of Him the higher your romance will be.

A study in expressions.

Yes, the wider your education, the more thorough your work will be; but that does not mean necessarily greater results in the number of conversions. A Christian is primarily the product of God's grace: but a well-educated mind is of great help in preparing the way for it. Up till now our converts have sprung chiefly from the poor and ignorant. There is still that stratum of society versed in the history of Chinese culture and achievement who must also be taught the knowledge of God. We have the example of the first Jesuits, highly educated men, who won a foothold in this Celestial Empire by their gifted minds. Somewhere I read that the Chinese are worshippers of intellect. Be that as it may, we should be able to talk intelligently on things Chinese — to demonstrate the power of Christ's message to save Chinese culture as it saved that of ancient Rome. Later on I shall say more about this.

There are certain times in the year when you have plenty of leisure. If you have the habits of study and reading these periods of enforced rest from active work will be filled with many useful and pleasurable hours. As regards a hobby, by all means have one, but do not let it have even the faintest semblance of anything Chinese. One that takes you into the open air is preferable. Something, anyway, by which you can from time to time escape the daily grind. Learn to play the organ. Apart from its being almost a necessity for services, it is excellent recreation. Sometimes when a knotty problem defies solution or you are undergoing a mental strain, being able to sit down and play a few airs helps you to relax. It is really an art, you know, the ability to relax. And while I think of it, remember that sleep is one of your most precious possessions anywhere, especially over here. So when you go to bed leave all problems at your prie-dieu.

One of your first concerns—and most difficult—on the mission will be the study of the Chinese mentality. You have read and heard enough to realize there exists a wide gap between ours and theirs. Keep before your mind the broad reason for coming here—the impregnating of Chinese culture with Christian principles. The other day I happened to be reading again what is known as the Sacred Edict which treats of the five cardinal relations among mankind. Wieger, in his "Moral Tenets and Customs in China", treats it in ten chapters. It is a system of ethics codified by Confucius. But, lacking a supernatural sanction, it has to-day little hold on the people within range of my experience. It is valuable as a source of information on Chinese character. Many of their customs and manners will appear to you blatant and insincere. Others may seem irresistibly funny. To understand them is a difficult task, accomplished only by careful reading and close observation. Confucius says "When one is respectful, but without manners, he is tiresome". See the point? For you to act the gentleman according to the best norms of their culture will be to demonstrate to the people at large that Christian principles greatly enhance these standards. The Chinese are sticklers for what we call "standing on one's dignity". In the chapter on Education of Youth, we are told that the intention in establishing the customs was to secure "mutual respect by distinguishing the high from the low, the superiors from the inferiors". You will have to know your place and how to speak and act accordingly. There is not the spirit of democracy here that you find at home. I am not discussing which is better; just stating what conditions are. It is rather difficult to explain in a few lines. Perhaps this illustration, insignificant though it may be to you, will help. At home we say "Thank you" for a service done irrespective of the person's status. Here servants do not expect such a formal acknowledgment. This is but a trivial thing to be sure, but it is the conglomeration of trivial things that stamp you in others' eyes as cultured or not. If you are right in some things and wrong in others you can imagine what impression you will make.

Do not be surprised when, on being introduced to a stranger, he begins to ask your age, the extent of your financial resources, how much you paid for an article of clothing you happen to be wearing, and the like. You don't say (or look, either), "That doesn't concern you". Such directness will not carry you far. If you do not care to state the price, all you need reply is it cost more than such and such an amount. If there happens to be a big discrepancy between the value of the article and the amount named he will know all the more surely you are simply telling him it is none of his business; but it is done with politeness—all "faces" saved. "Face" is a curse, no doubt, in many aspects, but never make a person lose it where you can possibly avoid doing so. The Chinese is "a double person; the real one that does not appear, and the false one that is acting a part". Remember this when one of your Christians, feeling himself offended, stays away from Mass for months. You call on him and he tells you, "Yes, I'll come next Sunday", but does not. The dual-personality is at work. Keep this in mind and save yourself a lot of worry. He does not want to make you "lose face" by saying he will not come; you are expected to know that until his injured dignity is repaired he is just not going to come. I'll grant you such mentality is aggravating, but it does exist. Therefore, study their characteristics. Look back now and read that definition of romance. Isn't there plenty of it?

Yesterday was the centenary of Sir Robert Hart, of whom the N.C.D.N. writes that "of the foreign names which are written in the history of modern China Hart's name stands as high as any." Further on it gives a quotation from Morse which runs thus: "He understood the Chinese character as no foreigner in China, since the early Jesuits, has understood it; he plumbed the Chinese mentality, and, a master of the Chinese language, could present a case in style which, appearing defective and childish to the Western reader, appealed to the subtile but restricted Chinese intellect with a force that was irresistible . . . he never put his foot forward so far that he could not withdraw it, and before making a serious proposal on an important subject he was certain that it would be accepted, either because he had carefully prepared the way or because he had insight into the tendency of events." There is much food for thought in this appraisal of him that will help you in your daily life here. Note in particular his ability to adapt himself to the limits of native intelligence. He arrived at this perfection only by strenuous effort. In your dealings with the people and when called upon for a decision, think carefully before giving it, and once given stick to it. And never make a threat of any nature unless you are prepared to follow it out if necessary. Also, don't take "it" out of charity. When your charges do something that pleases you speak a few words of praise.

A group of converts in Father Beal's parish of Sungyang.

To explain the slow progress of the Church here is certainly beyond my powers. Merely saying that God is withholding the gift of Faith is no explanation at all. If He acts so it is probably because the people are not prepared to receive it. But why? There we have ground to work on. The reason in a general way may be the same as one suggested in explanation of a like reluctance on the part of India's millions to accept Christianity—that what they refused to date "was not so much the Christian faith as its European form". Dealing with this question in his book, "Renascent India", the author gives a passage from St. Augustine writing on the unwillingness of the Jewish élite of Our Lord's time to accept Him. He paraphrases the quotation thus and applies it to India: "They fear that, if all believed in Christ, none would be left to defend their own divine civilization and polity against Western invaders; for they feel Christ's doctrine to be opposed to their own piety and to their own ancestral traditions". The following paragraph is his summing up. I will quote it for you, changing the name India to that of China. It may give you an idea or two. "There it seems to me lies the true impediment to China's conversion, and until China can be convinced, not only by word but by deed, that Christ has not come to eradicate all that constitutes Chinese civilization and piety and self-determination and freedom, but rather has come to restore the ancient patrimony of the Chinese to its pristine purity and to transform (Catholicize) it with a new glory of perfection—until then, humanly speaking, no conversion of China as such, and as a whole, can be expected." Something similar seems to be the trouble with Japan, who "believes her present plight is due to her surrender to western civilization"; further on this "western civilization" is qualified by the word "materialistic".

Whence comes this confusion and ignorance as to what Christianity means? And what is the remedy? The fear seems to be that we are here to nationalize them according to our various nationalities: Canadian, English, French, etc., Protestant religions or sects, since they are national, must rather strengthen this notion of the Chinese. One educated Chinese told me he thought we came here to teach the Chinese foreign customs. Multiply him by some few hundred millions and see what your task is. We have to teach this people that Catholic principles not only mean the salvation of their souls, but also the saving of the best in their ancient culture. The old Romans suffered from this blind ignorance and fought with fury against the very Power that was to preserve to posterity much that was finest and noblest in it. Belloc writes of that ancient Roman culture that "it was, as it were, baptized into the Catholic Faith". Such is our task, to lift up the age-old Chinese culture from its heathen depths and "baptize it into the Catholic Faith." I won't say that the final product would be to your liking. I can't imagine Chinese culture even after its regeneration as being something I would wish to adopt. Because of this I can understand a little more clearly what used to be a mystery for me—how a Chinese, after having lived a long time in the West, still hankers to return to the East. I suppose it's that same sense of being in exile that fills us both, that feeling of isolation I spoke of before which affords you opportunity to practise heroism.

Just a final word. Do not come to China with the idea that the people are waiting for your message with eager hearts and open minds. Some few, yes—those, as I said above, whom the Holy Ghost blasts out. The motive urging you to spend your life here is charity—love of God and neighbour. "If love is true, service for the beloved is the greatest pleasure." Note the word is service, not results. The pragmatic test is not the only one. In the final reckoning it will be the extent of your love and not your results which will determine the reward. There is a Scotch word "cuiter" which tells you what you must do from the moment you set foot here until you put it down in Heaven. Look it up. Doesn't it require heroism, love, patience, any word you will—and is it not all a romance?

In the city of Tsingtien, Chuchow Prefecture, newspapers may be read and the news learned without the expense of buying the paper. Here's the "newspaper stand" provided for public use.

FISH-POND

(Continued from page 69)

and kinkly. He looked like a dried up baked potato. There was no hope for him so Mr. Wong told him the truth and explained to him about baptism. The young man was well disposed and after the minimum of instruction he was baptized, following which we gave him an injection of morphine to relieve his pain. He died this morning at 7.30. He had been a Christian for about seven hours. One of the school-girls, who lives in the same house, told us that he was awake all night and that he prayed all the time. Towards the end the effects of the injection wore off and he suffered very much, but he kept on praying."

The soul of another Chinese has gone to Heaven — guided there through the ministrations of our wonderful Sisters at Lishui.

* * *

IT was a prolonged burst of firecrackers that was passing without comment from the missionaries at supper, as one becomes inured to the sound of explosives after a short time in the interior of China, when someone stated that the neighbors were bidding farewell to the goddess of the kitchen who was returning to "headquarters" to make her report at the close of the year.

This goddess of the kitchen has the place of honor in every pagan Chinese kitchen and while she may be more or less forgotten during the year, she receives plenty of attention as the Chinese New Year draws near, for then, according to the pagan superstition, she returns to "headquarters" to report on the behavior of the people during the year. Sugar is placed in the mouth of the idol in the hope that the deity will say sweet things about her worshippers. Finally spirit money (similar to our stage money) is burnt and the goddess departs in the smoke, so the story goes.

* * *

IN spite of the efforts of the Chinese government to have the people follow the Gregorian or Foreign calendar, the country, as a whole, still holds fast to the traditional calendar, guided by the moon, and the Chinese New Year is the one great time for celebrating throughout the country. This year it fell on the fourth of February and, while the post office and the schools under government control remained open, stores and other establishments here in Lishui shut down and all took a vacation. At New Year's all debts must be paid and on the day before men may be seen going about endeavouring to collect money owed them. Seeing them walking from house to house carrying a lighted lantern in the daytime reminds one of the old philosopher who, with a lantern in hand, started out on his search for an honest man. This business of collecting money continues until the early hours of the morning of New Year's Day.

On New Year's Day scarcely a person is to be seen on the streets and the odour of joss sticks, being burnt to placate the gods, comes from almost every house.

After a few days the stores begin to open, the boatmen on the river start off on trips and things take on a more normal appearance, except that there is the preparation for the great dragon procession, which takes place on the fourteenth day of the New Year. This procession must be seen to be properly appreciated and deserves an article by itself.

HIS MASTERPIECE

An artist conceived a great picture,
Yet feared after all his toil
That even the whitest background
His masterpiecc would spoil.
So He sought for a spotless canvas;
He would paint on a fadeless scroll
And away in an unknown village
He found it—a virgin soul.
So He took all the blue of the heavens,
He took all the gold of the sun,
With the hundred hues of the rainbow,
And He mixed them into one.
He sought all the beauty of Nature,
He bought all the glory of Grace
And ctched with His brush on the canvas
The wealth of one Woman's face;
And the whole world stood enraptured,
And the angels sang for mirth,
For His portrait was so perfect—
It brought a God to earth.

The above is from Father Hugh Sharkey's Volume of Poems, "The Anvil of the Cross", copies of which may be secured from the author. The price is one dollar, and the proceeds from the sale of his poems go to help maintain his Chinese Mission in Vancouver. Address your order to Rev. H. Sharkey, 572 East Georgia Street, Vancouver, B.C.

BLESSING OF CHURCH

(Continued from page 71)

duties took us to our respective Missions on Monday morning.

For many reasons the people of Pi-Wu-Ka will remember the ceremony of the Blessing of their new Church of the Canadian Martyrs. The celebration, Chinese fashion, was extended over three days, in the course of which every individual resident of the place visited the Mission at least once. Throughout the three days the orchestra did their duty manfully, taking time off only for necessary respites and meals. The significance of the occasion was not lost on the people, and they are well aware of the privilege that is theirs in having such a beautiful church in their midst consecrated to the service of God.

Thus ends an epoch in the history of Catholicism in the little parish of Pi-Wu-Ka. Another epoch, and perhaps a more trying one, is already begun—that of attaining the purpose for which the church was erected, to bring the people to it and to foster them in it. All the good work that it will help to accomplish will redound to the benefit of the kind donor, and the goodness of the donor in giving will have effect upon the hearts and minds of those who worship in Pi-Wu-Ka's church. It works both ways—"it is twice blessed, it blesseth him that gives and him that receives". The work of continuation is no less important than that of beginning; in the eyes of the world it may not be as glorious, but you, dear readers, who seek not after worldly glory; you who wish to see God's Kingdom spread in China; you who want God's blessing in your heart and in the hearts of those near and dear to you; you it is who are privileged to be the instruments God will use to make possible the continuation of this work in Pi-Wu-Ka and in other sections of the Prefecture of Chuchow confided to the care of St. Francis Xavier Seminary. Our needs you know; it needs but a willing heart to help. So, in offering thanks to our benefactor for this new church, and in offering sincerest congratulations to its Pastor, Father Boudreau, we offer the readers of "China" the opportunity of helping to keep the work going.

CATHOLIC MISSIONS

The Catholic Church vs. Communism in China

This is the final instalment of a very interesting article by Fr. D'Elia, Member of the Sinological Bureau, Shanghai, and Professor of Missiology at the Pontifical Gregorian University in Rome. This article, taken verbatim from "The China Year Book, 1934", gives a graphic description of the Church's struggles in China. This struggle was threefold, namely, the Church vs. Chinese Nationalism; the Church vs. the Triple Demism; and the Church vs. Communism. As Fr. D'Elia points out, in so far as the Church succeeded in extricating herself from this triple difficulty, she emerged victoriously from the Nationalist Revolution.

UNLIKE the second difficulty we have just spoken of, the third one, coming from the Communist tendencies of the Left Wing of Chinese revolutionists, admitted of no other solution than suffering and prayer. And this the Church did with overflowing abundance, as it was impossible for her to come to a compromise or reach an understanding with a doctrine so destructive of human society as Communism.

Suffering has been very acute in the last years for Protestants and Catholics alike. Some missions, especially, in Kiangsi, Fukien, Hunan, Hupeh, Honan, Anhwei, have been in constant turmoil since the Nationalist revolution. Missionary effort has been at a standstill; it has been blocked by more than one obstacle: by colossal inundations, by educational restraints, by many wars, political agitations, anti-religious movements, but above all, and first of all, by the Reds, because of whose depredations the Church, "the eternal beginner", had to begin all over again.

A huge number of churches, schools and residences have been destroyed. When they escaped destruction, they were forcibly occupied by troops and looted. Missionaries, both foreign and Chinese, were often robbed, beaten, wounded, held captive or killed.

From an exhaustive inquiry we have personally conducted among all the heads of the Catholic missions, it results that, during the years 1926-1933, outside of a large number of Chinese Catholics who were either robbed, beaten or killed, there were as many as 39 Catholic missionaries who were slain by Communists, brigands or other outlaws, and at least 264 who were captured by the same, the duration of their captivity varying from a few hours to four years. Today (January, 1934) there are still four missionaries who are captives, one of them having been in the hands of Communists ever since May 1st, 1930. All their names, without a single exception, their historical data, and the pictures of the great majority of them are in our possession. They will soon be the object of a special publication under the title, "The Witnesses of Christ in China".

As the inquiry we have just mentioned embraces not only the period 1926-1933, which is the special object of this paper, but extends also to the beginning of the Republic, it seems worth while to add here the result of this information.

From 1912 to 1933 there have been 50 Catholic missionaries killed and, at least, 334 captured. (Up to September, 1934, this number was increased by 3 deaths and 3 captures.—Ed.) Eighteen of them have been captured twice, and four, three times. The number of the captured reached its zenith in 1930 with as many as 77, while both in 1929 and in 1931 as many as 8 missionaries were put to death. Most of the victims are, of course, priests: 220 captured and 43 killed, in addition to six Vicars Apostolic captured and one killed, two Mission Superiors captured, ten lay brothers captured, 29 seminarians captured and four killed, and 60 Sisters captured. The Mission of Hanchung, Shensi, comes first in numbers captured with 29, and that of Ichang, Hupeh, leads in those killed with 7, thus deserving its appellative of "The Bloody Mission". The Chinese Secular Clergy hold the record with 91 captured and 16 killed. As for nationality, the highest percentage of both captured and killed is also held by the Chinese since they reported 104 captured and 18 killed, the Italians coming next with 53 captured and the Belgians with 10 killed. These figures splendidly bespeak the heroism of the indigenous Church which is second to none in this martyrology of our own days. Here are the figures of both captured and killed during years 1912-1934:

	Captured	Killed
1912	1	1
1913	1	1
1914	4	2
1915	..	..
1916	3	..
1917	1	..
1918	2	1
1919	1	..
1920	4	1
1921	9	1
1922	12	1
1923	10	2
1924	12	1
1925	10	..
1926	20	4
1927	33	6
1928	30	4
1929	43	8
1930	77	6
1931	36	8
1932	13	1
1933	12	2
1934 (to Sept.)	3	3
Total	337	53

The hardships those missionaries had to undergo very often tested to the limit their endurance. In the impossibility of making many quotations, which will have their natural place in the coming publication, mention will only be made here of the cruelty with which Father Gabriel Liu, a Chinese priest of Weihweifu, Honan, was treated. One night after he had retired to bed, he was rudely awakened by highwaymen, who pressed revolvers to his throat and ordered him, half-dressed, to follow them. Leading him to a secluded spot, they filled his ears with molten wax, blindfolded and bound him hand and foot, then confined him in a hole which they sealed with a huge millstone. The cave, dug out as a cellar for potatoes and turnips, was so low and narrow that the prisoner could not even kneel up straight, and there was not sufficient air to breathe. The captors lifted the stone a bit to allow a better circulation of air, but they made him remain in the dungeon for 27 days. Liberated finally, he was allowed to return to his family in a state of utter nervous exhaustion.

The revenge of all these modern martyrs is, of course, nothing but prayer and charity.

In the middle of the year 1933 a humble Chinese servant succeeded in braving the dangers of a bandit camp and carrying Holy Communion, secretly, to a Spanish Jesuit, Father Esteban of Wuhu, Anhwei, who has been in the hands of the Communists ever since December 17th, 1931. The consecrated Host had been concealed in a pyx wrapped in silk and attached to the shirt of the poor servant. The letter which Father Esteban sent on this occasion breathes of sublime nobility. He wrote: "I am content to be a captive and to suffer for Jesus Christ, to bear imprisonment which will end when God wills, either in liberty that I may work again in His service, or in death for Jesus Christ. I am well. Thank you for the cans of milk: I have sent them to the hospital of the Reds that I may return charity for their hatred. I think you will appreciate this little sacrifice for these poor folk who cannot understand a doctrine of love for one's enemies. I preached this to a group here one day, and a Red leader told me I was insane. If they only knew how much I loved them and all the Chinese."

Charity is added to prayer for one's enemies. Thus at the end of 1932, at the request of the military authorities, Monsignor Massi, the Vicar Apostolic of Hankow, consented to care for the welfare of 2,300 Communists taken prisoner by General Chiang Kai-shek. The missionaries were happy to take a purely Christian revenge, in overcoming evil with good. In fact, those poor Communists had often ruined missionary work, captured and killed missionaries by hundreds. Now that they had fallen into their hands, they were given as a reward: food, shelter, clothes, medicines for their body and Heaven for their soul. And all this was lavishly given to them. In 1932 from September 28th to October 20th, as many as 388 Communists were baptized when on the point of death, and 160 more, between October 21st and November 21st of 1932.

The former Apostolic Delegate has recently said: "Looking back over the last troubled years in China, what shines most luminously, what promises most for to-morrow, is the discipline of our forces. Our organization, buffetted most violently, remains intact. The page the missionaries have written is, from a human aspect, a sorrowful one, but from a supernatural aspect, refulgent with glory. I feel proud of my connection with the Church's redoubtable battalions in China. Almost without interruption for years now, we have had priests in bondage among the bandits or Communists. Such men honour the Church; their deeds make tomorrow glorious with hope."

It was in this way that the Catholic Church solved the Communistic difficulty of the National revolution.

In spite of the most serious handicaps, such as endemic civil war, anti-Christian movements, exasperating Nationalism, steadily increasing anarchy, Demist ideology, extensive banditry, widespread Communism, captures and murders of missionaries, the Catholic Church in China to-day not only goes on with her supernatural work, but develops in a way which borders really on the wonderful and the miraculous.

Rev. Arthur Venadam, of Pomquet, N.S., is known for his love of Sacred Church music. Since his arrival in China in 1931, he has done remarkable work amongst the youth of Lishui and his choir there is the admiration of all. Under his capable direction the group of boys in the above picture have learned to sing Gregorian Chant extremely well.

NONSENSE

He—"I once travelled four hours on foot just to give a fellow a thrashing."

She—"And then you had to tramp back for four hours?"

He—"No. I came back in the ambulance."

First Mother—"Are you bothered much by your children telling fibs?"

Second Ditto—"Not so much as by their telling the truth at very inappropriate times."

Teacher—Johnny, what's the difference between a battle and a massacre?

Johnny—A battle is where a whole lot of whites kill a few Indians, and a massacre is where a whole lot of Indians kill a few whites.

The other day an ex-soldier expressed an opinion of what the next war will be like.

"It will be terrible," he said. "The safest place will be in the army, and the soldiers will spend their spare time knitting comforts for the harrassed civilian population."

"So your baby is two years old. I suppose you are teaching him to talk."

"No, indeed, we are trying to teach him to keep quiet now."

Wife—"Mrs. Jones has another new hat."

Hubby—"Well, if she were as attractive as you are, my dear, she wouldn't have to depend so much upon the milliner."

Bore—"Whenever I start to talk about my India days I am reminded of the time—"

Bored—"Well, it's nearly midnight now."

Wife — "Before we were married, Jack, you said I was a queen."

Husband—"Yes—but I have lost my taste for a monarchial form of government."

"Am I good enough for you?" sighed the fond swain.

"No," said the girl, candidly, "you're not; but you're too good for any other girl."

Dietitian — "Yes, a few lettuce leaves, without oil, and a glass of orange juice. There, madam, that completes your daily diet."

Mrs. Overweight—"Thank you so much, Doctor, but do I take this before or after meals?"

Professor (after lecture) — "Any questions?"

Student—"Yes, sir. How do you calculate the horse-power in a donkey engine?"

Dentist (to small boy who has had some teeth extracted)—"Never mind, Bobby, they'll soon grow in again."

Bobby (eagerly)—"Will they be up in time for dinner?"

"John," said Mrs. Finnerton, "are we going to have a garden this year?"

"Well," replied Mr. Finnerton, "will you have time to keep after me till I weed it for you?"

This was sent to a teacher after she had sent a message by a boy to his mother that he must be sent to school cleaner:

"Dere techer,—Our Johnny ain't no rose—he comes to school to be larnt not smelt—Mother."

One of the two flappers in the bus was reading a newspaper.

First Flapper—"I see that Mr. So-and-So, the octogenarian, is dead. Now, what on earth is an octogenarian?"

Second Flapper—"I'm sure I haven't the faintest idea. But they're a sickly lot. You never hear of one but he's dying."

Mr. Jones was airing his views at the dinner table about the inconsistencies of women.

"These modern girls who protest that they are never going to marry," he said venomously, "why, everybody knows they will belie their own words at the first opportunity."

His wife kept a discreet silence.

"Why, Martha," he said, "I once heard you say that you'd never marry the best man alive."

"Well—I didn't," said Mrs. Jones.

"Gal," pleaded a colored suitor at the conclusion of an impassioned proposal, "ef you' don' marry me Ah'll go crazy!"

"Humph!" sniffed the unmoved belle. "An' who's gwine fin' it out?"

At an evening party a woman was describing how she had had a quarrel with her husband, but had made it up, and to commemorate the event had planted a sapling.

"There, you see," whispered one wife to her husband, "if we had done that, what a splendid avenue of trees we should have had by this time."

An Irish Guards officer called up a sergeant and spoke of the unsoldierly appearance of a recruit.

"He looks very slovenly, sergeant."

"Yes, sor."

"Are you sure he washes?"

"Yes, sor."

"Absolutely certain he washes?"

"Yes, sor, but he dries a bad color, sor."

A farmer had a horse he was anxious to sell, and one day while driving with one of his summer boarders the horse stopped so frequently as to lead the boarder to ask:

"What ails your horse that he stops so often? Is he balky?"

"No," replied the farmer, "he's all right. It's simply he's so darned afraid somebody will say 'Whoa,' and he won't hear it, that he stops to listen."

Mabel: "Did that painter who stained your front door to look like mahogany do a good job?"

Edith: "He shall never darken my door again."

The terrible child watched the visitor sipping his tea for a few minutes, and then protested.

"Mr. Smith drinks just like anybody else," he bawled. "Not like a fish at all!"

Ace (relating experience): "I had flown three miles over the German lines when I found that my engine was missing."

The Girl: "Mercy! How could you fly so far without any engine?"

"What's the noise?"

"John, the barber, is shaving himself."

"What's the conversion about?"

"He's trying to persuade himself to have a shampoo."

"Yes, I'm a cosmopolitan. My father was Irish, my mother Italian. I was born in a Swedish ship off Barcelona, and a man named McTavish is my dentist!"

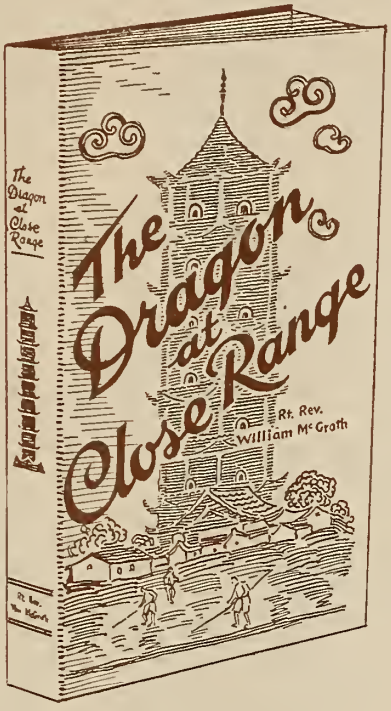
"What's McTavish to do with it?"

"Why, that makes me of Scottish extraction!"

Mrs. Catterson—"I don't like Mrs. Chatterton. She's so sly and deceitful."

Mrs. Patterson—"Doesn't she tell the truth?"

Mrs. Catterson — "That's the trouble. Every time I'm certain she's lying I find that she isn't."



A Book You Will Want to Read!

"The Dragon at Close Range"

By RIGHT REV. W. C. McGRATH

Prefect-Apostolic of Chuchow

English-speaking Canada's first notable contribution to Mission literature

Graphic pen pictures of Mission life in Chekiang

Actual stories of Monsignor McGrath's own experiences in China, written in his well-known free and easy style. Some of these stories have already appeared in the Catholic Press of Canada under the pen-name of "Sinicus". The second part of this most interesting book tells of the Mission experiences of our priests and sisters in Chuchow.

178 Pages

55 Photographic Illustrations

Price, One Dollar, Postpaid

ORDER BLANK

ST. F. X. SEMINARY,
Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Dear Fathers:
Enclosed please find $..... for ..... copies of Monsignor McGrath's book, "The Dragon at Close Range". Mail the book to

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

.....

Problems Can be Solved by

CATHOLIC WILLS

For Mission Needs

The instinct is strong to "keep what we have". Yet when death summons we must go to the grave "clutching in our dead hands only that which we have given away". If you feel you cannot share your earthly possessions now with God, perhaps you will be mindful of Him and His Missions when drawing up your last will. You can be sure that what you leave to carry on Catholic Mission work will merit a blessing on your soul, and cause your name to be held in benediction long after you are dead. In China, our priests need funds for new chapels, for new schools, for new homes, and for payment of salaries to catechists. In Canada, our Seminary needs support for the training of young apostles and for the maintenance of their home. Think of our Mission work when making, or changing, your last will. Here's how you can do it; insert this clause in your will:

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO, THE SUM OF ..... "

ንቁ

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT

JUNE 1935

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.

2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.

3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.

4. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press
263 Adelaide St. West Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.

2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.

3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.

4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.

5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 25,400
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XVI. JUNE, 1935 No. 6

SERVING THE MISSIONS

HOW many Catholic people are generous in their efforts to share their Faith with others? How many show their appreciation of the Gift God has given them? It may be truly said that we show as much appreciation for our Catholic Faith as we manifest zeal in living up to our missionary obligations. Generally speaking, the measure of the one is the measure of the other. That is why, if we wish to be arden and zealous followers of Christ, our missionary zeal should never be at a standstill. True zeal cannot remain inactive. On the contrary, it must ever grow deeper and deeper and seek for new conquests and new activities.

IF we are truly Catholic at heart, we never lose the Catholic viewpoint. As members of the One True Church we must always be vitally interested in the progress of the Church everywhere. It is the duty of the individual Catholic to support his parish church and school, but one's duty does not stop there. It reaches out into the vast world and must embrace the work of the foreign missions. To have the true Catholic outlook means that one sees beyond the limits of one's parish and does something to aid the propagation of the Faith in places further afield.

"LIFT up your eyes and see the fields already whitened unto the harvest". Today, God's Church is in need of much help for her missionary work. A vast and well-nigh overwhelming task faces the Catholic missionary. A thousand millions of immortal souls are still sitting in the night of heathenism and in the shadow of everlasting death, and the stark statement of fact that millions of these souls annually pass into eternity without baptism, and without knowing their Creator and Redeemer, certainly ought to arouse to some measure of action those Catholics who are guilty of selfishness and lack of appreciation in the matter of their Faith.

UNQUESTIONABLY, the highest form of serving the Missions is to give them personal service. That in itself is a special vocation, not open to very many. But there are communities of young men and young women who have followed such a vocation, and it is by aiding such groups of missionaries that the average lay person has the opportunity of himself serving the missions. Many there are who can excellently serve the missions by praying for an increase of missionary vocations or by directly fostering such vocations. The number of Catholic missionaries on active service throughout the world today could be multiplied twenty times over, and still there would be work aplenty for them all to do. The distressing fact is that the support of the present army of missionaries is a difficult matter. That brings us to speak of another way in which the ordinary body of the Faithful can serve the missions, namely, through their financial support.

IT is in respect to financial contributions to the missions that the average Catholic fails to be unselfish, and fails to realize his duty; somehow or other he looks upon mission support as a work of supererogation. It is far from being so. If there is any one charity that has a claim on every kind of Catholic citizen, that charity is represented by the foreign missions of the Church. Our Holy Father himself has said that charity to the Missions is the greatest of all.

WE who depend on each day's mail to bring us the means necessary to maintain our Seminary and support our missions in China can speak at first hand of the lack of financial support given to the foreign missions by the average Catholic. We say "the average Catholic", for this leaves room for those friends of ours who have helped us through thick and thin. God alone knows how much we are indebted to those individuals and families who make a sacrifice every month to send us their contributions. During the past five years of depression, due to the widespread unemployment, our mission alms have dwindled and continue to dwindle. It has been a time of much anxiety and has meant much sacrifice for us to keep our Seminary functioning efficiently in the important work it has to do. If only more readers of "China" would hearken to our appeals for financial support, then there would be a load lifted from our minds. It is the readers of "China" who must support our work. Do you object to our use of the word "must" in these days of strain? Some, no doubt, may say, "But how can we give, when we haven't it to give?" or "I haven't had any work for three years. Where is the money to fall from?" May we insist again, that our request is not made to those who cannot give—who are out of work! We appeal to those thousands of Catholic families who are in a position to help the missions and yet who never do so. All we ask is that those who enjoy the blessings of Faith, and who are able to spend money on unnecessary worldly frills and pleasures sometimes sacrifice a little and remember God's work. Keep in mind that our cause is yours and that of Christ; and that we must rely both on you and on Him: on Him, to bless our work; and on you, to contribute towards it.

FISH-POND

By REV. GERALD DOYLE

FIRE! The window of my room was like the door of a blazing furnace. The outside bell clanged impatiently, Father Morrison having leaped from his bed and rushed outside in his fare feet and pulled the bell-rope. With the light streaming into his room, his first impression was that the building where the boys were sleeping was in flames. The flames and sparks leaping two hundred feet into the air, lighted the whole neighborhood and at first glance the fire seemed very close, but when looked at calmly it was evident that it was about two hundred yards down the street. Fortunately there was no wind and as there were several mud walls and a few open spaces between the fire and the mission property, we were in no personal danger.

All the priests were aroused and a few walked down the street to see the fire better. The time was three-thirty in the morning.

A large two-storey building housing several families was a mass of flames. When we arrived the roof had fallen in and there was no possibility of checking the fire, it was a case of keeping it from spreading, and on this occasion the mud walls proved their worth.

The fire-fighting equipment, while incapable of coping with the situation, arriving, as it did, very late, was better than I expected here in the interior of China. Six men worked a pump while a well-organized bucket brigade kept up the water supply. When going at full pressure a stream of water can be thrown about twenty-five feet in the air.

A great crowd had collected and the police and soldiers were busy keeping the crowd back and clearing a passage for the pail carriers, each of whom received a ticket for each pail carried. The next day he would collect on his tickets.

By four o'clock the fire had nearly burnt itself out, so we went back to the mission and to bed.

EVER since Our Lord told the Apostles that He would make them fishers of men, priests and missionaries have often been called fishermen striving to save souls, to bring all into the Church founded by Our Divine Lord. St. Francis Xavier is said to have fished with a net in India, where he converted large numbers, but it is thought that if he had landed in China he would have contented himself with a rod and line, making individual rather than mass conversions, because the Chinese are difficult. Now, whether the great Saint would have used a net or a line here in China, it is certain that the Missionaries to-day use only the line. While at times in some sections they are busy recasting the line into the pond, in the majority of cases it is necessary for the Missionary to exercise great patience, to call into play every means at his command to land even one convert, and often when he thinks that one is landed, it slips back into the water, or it is rotten and the hook will not hold, but perseverance and the assistance of those at home who help in spiritual or material ways means an ever-increasing number safely landed.

All of which leads up to the reason for the title at the top of this page. The Missionary comes to China to save souls and for that reason this pagan country, with its teeming millions, takes on the appearance of an immense fish pond, with the waters often disturbed and murky. For the Missionary China is a fish pond.

Please pray that the Missionaries will be good fishermen.

The next morning, or rather, later the same morning, a visit to the scene showed only smouldering ruins, but even so, soon the industrious Chinese were clearing things away to prepare for the new building.

As to the cause of the fire: Several men were playing cards and one of them went out for a few minutes and on returning threw a lighted cigarette into a heap of refuse, which ignited. The men were arrested.

At home, one of the first thoughts after, or during, a fire is the amount of insurance. Here in the interior of China insurance is available but in practice the premium is very high and it is doubtful if the insuring company will meet its obligations when a claim is made, or it may have ceased to exist before the fire occurred. So, generally speaking, very little property is insured here.

* * *

Some time ago an old woman arose in the night and, lighting a match to find her way, accidently set fire to the netting over her bed. The house was burnt down and several families lost all their possessions. The old woman was quickly arrested, not only for her unfortunate act, but also to save her from the wrath of the impoverished families. Their wrath was greater because their misfortune was caused by an old woman.

The woman here in old pagan China receives, generally, only secondary consideration, while if she is old and cannot work, she receives very little consideration. The treatment of women is one great difference between a pagan and Christian country. Our trip up the river last year provides an example of the pagan mentality. Two boats were engaged for the trip, one for the Sisters and one for us. The Sisters' boat was lighter and had better boatmen, with the result that they made better time. We passed the night at Tsingtien and on arrival at the river in the morning we found that the baggage in the boats had been changed and we were expected to take the better boat. Why? Because we were men and naturally received the preference over the women. But the question was quickly settled by Father Amyot ordering the baggage changed once more and the Sisters took the better boat.

The Chinese boatmen could not see things our way at all, at all.

THE Chinese fear the three "F's", namely Fire, Flood and Famine. To many, starvation is just around the corner and this year a great number will probably die as a result of the bad crop of last summer, when the heat was the greatest experienced in sixty years. But the rising river is an annual menace. The room I am in now has been flooded three times in the last generation, once half way to the ceiling, and as a result of the rain during the past two weeks the river rose six feet.

The worst flood in this district in recent times was about twenty-four years ago when many families were impoverished. One of the chapels in our district was burnt down by the flood. No, I am not confusing matters. Lime was stored in the building and when the water seeped in and mixed with the lime the walls ignited and the house burnt down.

Following this flood the city of Tsingtien was equipped with life boats, which are now rotting away.

* * *

FROM the outpost of Lungchuan word comes that Fathers Venini and Stringer are carrying on and making progress in a difficult section. Father Stringer writes: "Everything up here is as it should be, even to rumours of a thousand bandits one hundred and fifty li away. They are a nuisance, as they disrupt the mail service."

Father Stringer's good humour will carry him through many difficulties.

* * *

LACKING an ear, a soldier of the Chinese Army walked into the Mission dispensary here at Lishui to-day (the 15th of April) and asked the Sisters to dress the wound where the ear was recently cut off. This soldier, together with two companion soldiers, was captured by the Reds in the southern section of our Prefecture of Chuchow. The Reds were undecided whether to keep them prisoners, to kill them, or to mutilate them and set them free with reminders of their visit. The last course was decided upon and one had his nose cut off, the second surrendered three fingers, while our visitor had his ear neatly severed from his head, and under the ear the Reds added a deep gash, just as an extra reminder.

The Sisters dressed the wound and remarked that the only consoling feature was that the Reds performed the operation very expertly, using a sharp instrument and making a clean cut.

* * *

BACK from that most interesting city, Shanghai, Father John MacDonald is now in the best of health and prepared to make up for lost time in the Missions under his guidance. After a couple of days spent here at Lishui he left for Tsingtien, but the first breakfast he had with us provided an occasion for some ironical laughter, in which he quickly joined. Father John was nicely settled at the table and with knife expectantly poised he glanced around with a mystified expression. "Where is the butter?" said he.

There was a surprised pause and then came the above-mentioned laughter, while someone gently informed him: "You are on the Mission now, not in Shanghai. If you are here next Christmas we may have some, but it is not promised."

A sign-post outside Lishui, which may not mean very much just yet to Fathers Strang or Doyle. Father Stringer holds the camera. The above three priests are among our most regular contributors to "China".

Healers of the Borderlands

A Tribute to Nursing Sisters in China

Tibet, China.

MARIE DES ANGES arrived back in Tachienlu a few weeks ago. Leaving here some years ago, she went to Shanghai, taking charge of the General Hospital there. Later she returned to Italy, where she had charge of a sanatarium for sick Sisters home from the Foreign Field.

Marie des Anges is one of the most charming and capable Mother Superiors we have ever had on the Tibetan frontier. A Canadian by birth, she spent her early years in Quebec, and there she also received her medical training. This strong, energetic Sister is on the happy and sunny side of sixty, yet to look into her fine, handsome face one would imagine she was still in the region of thirty. It is one of the delights and pleasures of life to meet and speak with Marie des Anges. Her sweet, Christ-like spirit surrounds the wounded Chinese soldier, the poor, sick wood carrier, and the dying lama, with comfort and hope and cheer. A poor Chinese patient believes he has to limp, but when Marie des Anges has attended to his foot he feels like walking. Love and kindness and mercy and patience are some of the words you begin to think of when you sit in the presence of this gentle lady.

Some Other Workers.

We have been very fortunate in the Mother Superiors up here on the Chinese Tibetan border. Some years ago Sister Alice, also a Canadian, spent a term in the French Hospital. Then came Sister Rose, also a delightful Mother Superior. Sister Alice is now in Chengtu and Sister Rose is in Kiating. Both these women have ministered to the poor and sick here in Tachienlu, and when any European needed their help and nursing they were prepared to come night and day till the patient was well and strong. When young Emmons, of Harvard, returned from the Gong Ga with his feet badly frozen, these kind ladies rendered all possible assistance. And when Dr. Reichelt fell from his horse on his way up the Jedo the Sisters did all they could to ease the doctor's pain. Both Roubin and Mandeville found a warm spot in the

(Continued on page 94)

SUNGYANG

By
REV. L. J. BEAL

SINCE my appointment here as Pastor in Sungyang (early last September) I have tried to learn the true state of affairs in this city as well as in the outmissions. The results attained are not very inspiring, but still there are hopes for the future. One of the biggest difficulties in our mission work is to try to understand the mentality of the people. We ourselves are accustomed to calling a spade a spade, but our Chinese people call a spade a hoe or anything but a spade. In plainer terms, many of the people with whom I have come in contact here are "double-faced". If they would only mean what they say, or say what they mean, it wouldn't be so bad. Let me recount an incident which explains what I want to say.

After our last Retreat at Lishui, Father McNabb and I returned here by chair, stopping en route for dinner at a small town. The restaurant keeper was highly pleased to have us as his guests. Business was good. Our carriers told this man we were Catholic priests, and added lots of other information common in these parts when "foreigners" were being introduced. Instantly, the restaurant keeper showed a lively interest. Very sincerely (as I thought) he professed his willingness to know something about our business and the religion we taught. I took the man's name and address, assuring him he would hear from me at the first opportunity, as soon as I had the Fall programme mapped out. After the regular missions were completed I sent my esteemed acquaintance a letter informing him I would be along the following week to give him the instructions he had so ardently longed to receive. I made the trip in company with my catechist. Our would-be host was not at home. After our much searching for him, he suddenly appeared, and at once began to give us a long line of false excuses. I was sorely disappointed in the changed attitude of the man. After I had spoken to him at length on questions of religion, he flatly confessed that he would continue to believe that one religion was as good as another, and that it made no difference whether one adored God or the devil.

I sought another opportunity to speak with him, but he was too busy at the time preparing to take in a pagan "show" which was going on a short distance away. He was more interested in having a good time than in learning something which would help him save his soul. There are millions in China (and elsewhere) just like this man. They refuse to accept the graces offered them. When they are faced with the necessity of choosing between the true and the false, they are unwilling to make the sacrifice required in following the Light.

There is no doubt about the fact that ninety-five per cent. of the Chinese people are poor—extremely poor—and needs must work hard to scrape together enough to keep them alive from day to day, and to put away a very little to help them join in the festivities of the New Year as best they may. I have come to the conclusion that for the most part they are a materially-minded people, for whom things spiritual have not a very strong attraction unless they see the possibility of personal gain. Of course, there are exceptions to this, but as a general rule there must be something more enticing than Christian doctrine before they act seriously about becoming converts.

Some time ago I had twenty or more workmen in the mission compound; they all wanted to become Christians, and while their pay lasted they seemed to be very much in earnest, even attending the devotions in the church, but as soon as the work and the pay ceased their fervency also ceased. What was I to conclude?

Speaking as a missionary of several years' experience, I will say that sometimes the temptation is strong to let things go the easy way, and to fall into a state of indifference when efforts seem to bring but meagre results. But that would never do. As a missionary, one must be prepared for that. One knows that the going is hard, and one must be prepared for reverses. The missionary receives his consolation from the few who really respond to his efforts and make use of the Grace of God. He knows that the conversion of even a single pagan is a work of God's grace, and that any sacrifice made to bring even one soul to God through Baptism is well worth while.

To those of you who have been following our work as recounted in "China" it may come as a surprise to know that only thirty-nine per cent. of the baptized Christians of Sungyang attended Sunday services during last year; several have apostatized, and many have incurred impediments which forbid them to receive the Sacraments of the Church. To offset these reverses, friends of the missions everywhere ought to redouble their prayers and their good works, and make personal sacrifices if necessary, in order to obtain for these poor people the grace and the strength to reach the goal they at first set out to gain, but who have weakened so badly along the way.

HOME FROM CHINA.

Following a serious operation in Shanghai, Father Beal has been ordered by his doctor to return to Canada for a much-needed rest. He is due to arrive here towards the end of May. Father Beal's home is in Otterville, Ont.

"GOOD MORNING GLORY"

By

REV. CRAIG STRANG

SINCE I arrived here I have assisted at the burial of three Christians; I was out on my third this morning and it was the first to give me occasion to see how a Chinese city wakes up—I kept my eyes open, watching the city open its. Father Venadam was to perform the ceremony, but I accompanied him to find out how it is done and to pick up as much information as possible; this time I was especially curious to see the city during its first hour of the long day—I don't know why I call it long—it just seems that every day with them must be long, but of course they have an entirely different opinion, and in that opinion they are probably more correct than I am in mine.

It is interesting to watch any city coming to life—coming from the dead quiet of night to the quick and lively bustle of busy day. The wailing mourners and the shrieking flutes which formed part of the funeral procession brought many onlookers to the doors — some coming straight from the bed. Disheveled hair, blinking eyes, yawning mouths, garments hastily thrown on (if cast off at all for the night) or highly disarranged (if they had been slept in) were the chief features of each spectator. The pigs were still sleeping in the kitchens—a funeral didn't mean much to them, certainly not enough to lose any sleep over.

Restaurant owners had been up earlier and had their "Monday Morning Specials" ready for consumption (maybe they were the early birds, up after the worm—literally). Their fires made the first smoke of the morning, but the smoke clung most tenaciously to the street before rising above the houses. Their stoves, which were mostly in front of the stores, were made of large oil casks, with an opening in the side, and in a big black pan on top of it simmered what goes to make the breakfast menu; it was not a bit like ham and eggs, though some of it looked like porridge. In a short while employees would tour the streets with the food on large trays (sometimes balanced most dexterously on their heads), and you can have your whole breakfast brought to your bedside for a few cents.

It also happened to be market day and the men from the country, with their pigs and fowls, their vegetables and meat, had already taken their stands at the busier corners. As we passed they were having their morning smoke and had not yet started shouting their wares in their high-pitched voices, which, to our ears, are indistinguishable noises.

As we approached the city gate the day was getting brighter and warmer and drier. People now were in a more advanced stage of their morning toilet and some were having their morning rice, seated on the door step. Yes, by now the world had the sunrise, whether it was waiting for it or not. Only the more indolent or the weak did not rise to greet him—he may shine on "the just and the unjust", but when he first appears he does not shine on the late risers. But if they didn't rise to greet him our wailers and players succeeded in getting them out and told the world "here comes the sun" as well as here comes the corpse. Early as we were, we did not meet any milkmen, as you might think we would; nor did we meet any of the late home-comers who meet him in their evening clothes. There are no milkmen, and there certainly is no milk, and we have no fast "over-night-ers" and no smart evening clothes. Of course I didn't miss the milkman as I drove along; in fact I think he would be out of place here, and at the time he never occurred to me at all—it has occurred to me only now as I write about it, but you have to read it just the same.

Outside the city walls the only signs of coming day were the level rays of the sun and the vapour from the dew of the night. Bing Crosby would feel just as much at home here as in his shower. Fortunately the field which was chosen for the grave was not far and we arrived there after a short cut through other fields. By now it was even warm and the coolies who carried the coffin let down their heavy burden and took the spade and picks and shovels from the top of it. It was a big coffin, indeed, and I saw it really needed the eight men to carry it. The relatives were with the hired mourners and it was hard to distinguish them, for they were all dressed in the mourning garb—long white robes and white hats, not unlike a cook's. The grave was dug—about one foot deep—earth would be piled up on the coffin to form a mound in the shape of a pyramid.

The relatives were all pagans, for this had been a death-bed conversion — a conversion wrought by the care of the Sisters. For many months they had been visiting this man as he lay sick unto death in his bed and they freely interspersed spiritual medicine with their hypos and

(Continued on page 91)

A funeral procession leaving the Mission Compound at Lishui.

Brilliant! Snappy! Provocative! Most enlightening! These are some of the adjectives used by enthusiastic readers who have "discovered" Monsignor McGrath's "most 'different' book ever published on the work of the Foreign Missions".

From cover to cover you will enjoy "The Dragon at Close Range". A copy of this book ought to be in every Catholic home and in every Catholic school library.

Sample Page of Illustrations.

"The Drago

By RIGHT

Prefec

FC

(Repro

YOU look through W China a land mys cruel dragon which sym

But now come close trips through the moun Your eyes will be opene tion. At close range th country of beauty, inha lovable people. You v country's pride", intima lessly-recurring natural inhuman exploitation, a we have ever known.

China! Vast land inarticulate masses! Y unknown! Pagan huma blighted human souls i transforming love of t salvation.

Why are we in Chi answer. To give of o reclaim those precious s live; to gain for the lo in creation it is not His that forever rest not till

178 Pages

Price, On

ST. F. X. SEMINARY,
Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.
Dear Fathers:
Enclosed please find $ .....
Monsignor McGrath's book, "The Dra

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

.....

lose Range"

cGRATH
how

)

ook)

om afar. You see in lding, sinister as the ith us on our mission

ntryside of Chekiang.
veritable transforma-gon turns out to be a uman and altogether
bold peasantry, their k poverty and relent-
n-made suffering and ie most cheerful folk

gedy for the helpless,
the tragedy to them
r onward to eternity,
r come the vivifying,
Who died for their

e, kind friend, is the best in an effort to died that they might Master the one thing love of human hearts

McGrath,
tolic of Chuchow.

55 Photographic Illustrations

Postpaid

..... for ..... copies of
'. Mail the book to

.....

.....

.....

You have friends who do not subscribe to "China". They know little or nothing of the great work for souls being accomplished by our youthful priests and sisters in a pagan land. We appeal to each reader of "China" to secure one reader of "The Dragon at Close Range". Order your own copy now. Enclose one dollar with the order blank at bottom of page.

Sample Page of Illustrations.

CATHOLIC MISSIONS

The Present-Day Catholic Church in China

For the past four issues we have printed a most enlightening article which was originally written for the "China Year Book" by Father D'Elia, an authority on the Chinese Missions. Here we present his concluding word.

To those who wish to get a real insight into the position of the Church in China we recommend a re-reading of the articles we have published in recent months under the title of "Catholic Missions".

TO cast even a cursory glance on the actual work and expansion of the Catholic Church in China is to realize more intimately how she emerged victoriously from the Nationalist revolution.

To-day flocks of people ask to be received into the Church. We hear of thousands and thousands from Kiangsi, who, realizing how empty are the promises of Communism, are asking for baptism: missionaries there write that they are simply overwhelmed with work. Sometimes what was meant for destruction is precisely what brings people to the Church. The district official of Haimen, Kiangsu, related in 1928 how a young lady whom he knew became a convert, although she had always been bitterly opposed to the Catholic Church. Questioned by him why she had joined the Church, she answered: "The revolution of Wuchang, and later, that of Nanking, brought terrible scenes before my eyes. I was surrounded by murder and bloodshed. Confronted with the bestiality of man, I realized that charity alone—charity such as is taught and practised by the Catholic Church—is capable of saving the world. I became a convert." And the non-Christian official added: "The example and the words of this friend made a deep impression on me. The more I study and observe Catholicism, the more I am convinced that the salvation of our people is there, and not elsewhere." ("The Rock", Hongkong, 1928, p. 306.) In 1933 the Mandarin of Lichwan, Hupeh, although himself a pagan, said in a public speech: "There is only one way to restore peace, and that is by leading the people to the Christian religion." Thereupon a score of families expressed their intention to study Catholicism.

The number of missions, each one under the care of a Vicar or Prefect Apostolic or Mission Superior, has jumped from 76 in 1926 to 122 in 1933-1934. Every corner of this immense Chinese field has been planted with a Cross. The recorded Catholic population to-day is 2,624,166, not including about half a million more preparing for baptism. Last year the actual number of conversions was 69,715, which was the largest record since 1923. There are at present 86 bishops, of whom 13 are Chinese. The Chinese workers reckon 1,614 priests, 340 brothers and 3,360 sisters as against 2,346 priests, 429 brothers and 1,730 nuns hailing from a score of different nations, thus splendidly bespeaking the universal character of the Catholic Church. The future is brighter still. New workers come in hundreds year by year from Europe and America. Outside of the 12 central or regional seminaries established for the benefit of several missions, many Vicariates or Prefectures Apostolic have one or two seminaries. To-day as many as 813 Chinese youths are immediately preparing for priesthood, while 5,507 more are receiving the first training in Latin in view of Holy Orders. These figures do not include 41 Chinese studying in Rome, nine studying elsewhere and 357 trained in a religious order.

This picture was sent to us by Monsignor Fraser. He reports a wonderful movement to the Church in many sections of the district of Kinhwa. This group was photographed after Mass one Sunday at Pukiang.

Catholic education is much in honour. Non-Christian students, often children of high officials, flock to our schools. In Hongkong, for instance, there has been an increase of 700 pagan girls in 1932. Between seven and eight hundred schools at least have been registered with the Government. The three Catholic universities of Shanghai, Peiping and Tientsin have been granted final registration. Colleges and universities number 102; higher primary schools, 362; primary schools, 3,135; catechetical schools, 1,099. The total attendance of all these schools is 146,401 girls and 210,228 boys.

The high standard of Christian life is shown by the reception of the Sacraments. Last year, the following figures were reported: baptisms, 483,637; confirmations, 89,476; confessions heard, 9,246,204; communions distributed, 24,361,733; marriages blessed by the Church, 19,733; extreme unctions, 33,276. In this respect, the Vicariate Apostolic of Nanking-Shanghai takes the lead: with a Catholic population of 151,769, last year as many as 1,055,657 confessions were heard and 3,154,486 communions were distributed. These dry figures are a marvellous tribute to the enrooted faith of our Catholics, when we consider the almost insurmountable difficulties, especially of travelling, many of them have to overcome to receive the Sacraments.

Works of charity also are in full swing. Last year we had 432 orphanages with 2,512 orphan boys and 20,330 orphan girls, besides 68,409 children of the Holy Infancy. Sick and aged people to the number of 80,177 were taken care of in 260 hospitals and asylums, while 7,799,693 consultations were given in 744 dispensaries.

Concluding Word

The history of the Catholic Church in China is a glorious one. It is a story of ups and downs, of seeming defeat and of steady triumph. To reap successes, victories and triumphs when the path is easy and there are no obstacles on it, is a beautiful and meritorious thing, but much more holy and much more meritorious is it to reap the same harvest in the midst of difficulties.

This is what the Catholic Church has done in China, especially in the last years. Not only has she weathered the storm, not only has she maintained her former position, but also she has improved and deeply consolidated it, thanks to the untiring labours of her missionaries, both foreign and Chinese. She can therefore look with confidence to the future, for Christ has promised his Church that "the gates of hell shall not prevail against her".

If you went into the corner bookstore and saw a copy of "The Dragon at Close Range" you would want to buy it at once. Don't deprive yourself of the pleasure of reading Msgr. McGrath's book for the sake of the trouble it means to post a letter. Use the order form on page 87.

"GOOD MORNING GLORY."

(Continued from page 87)

prescriptions and pills, and if the latter failed to restore the fast-failing life, the former succeeded in giving a new life that knows no ailments and destined never to end.

When the grave diggers had finished their work, Father Venadam began his, and blessed the grave according to the blessing in the ritual, and the schoolboys who made part of the procession chanted the prayers in Chinese—and it sounded quite pleasant on the morning air. As soon as it was over the grave diggers set to work again. The relatives approached to pay their respects to Father Venadam and me and went so far as to kneel down and do it—just imagine making a little fellow, no more than three years old, kneel down on the yet wet grass and bow to us as if we were gods. However, I understand that the rest of the family have signified their intention of coming to listen to doctrine and I hope some day they will bow before our Lord in the Tabernacle even as they kow-towed to us that bright and early morning. After some futile remonstrance and exchange of greetings we wended our way back to the city.

By now the city was fully awake—all the stores were open, all the people were up, and all the pigs were out—I saw one little piggie who was up too early, for he was getting killed. I had a good laugh as my rickshaw man went down a hill a little too fast and ran into a store, knocking down one of the panels that serve as a wall at night, but we drove on with the indignant shouts of the storekeeper and the laughing railery of the onlookers in our ears. On the whole it was a nice way to start the day and the week, and as I thought you might like to read about it, I took some notes as soon as I got home, and fill them out now (about a month afterwards). When, and if, this appears in CHINA it will be more than a month from now, but I think it will be fairly fresh in my memory, and I hope it will be a little diversion for you as you read—and perhaps be a little informative as well.

Father Venadam stands by as the grave-digger goes into action. Notice the path through the ricefield along which the funeral procession came.

"MINGO"

By Rev. J. McGillivray

"GET up, get up quickly!" whispers Father Venadam, "there is another thief on the premises again to-night." Some of us are sleeping on the verandah; others in their rooms with the windows and doors all open. It is a very hot summer. The next night it is Father Stringer who is calling the gang, or whoever first detects the burglars. One night the alarm is given by Msgr. McGrath, who is seriously ill and is awakened by a thief coming through his window. Another night we are aroused by Father Kam, who hears a burglar trying to open his screen door.

There is not very much to steal, but the danger is of setting the place on fire. The thieves blaze their trail by lighted josh sticks; the odor of incense is all around. We get up and get out. Fortunately, by that time they have made a good get-away. I help search the grounds. Not a bit nervous at all, but really, I was never very enthusiastic about catching one of those fellows. Perhaps I wouldn't be able to let him go. They do not come alone, and are usually equipped for something more than a social call. Their favorite entrance is by digging a hole under the mission wall. A few pots and pans, perhaps a piece of meat or some old clothing is missing, and a night's sleep ruined. The weather is uncomfortably hot; one is lucky to get to sleep at all. To be called out at one or two o'clock to drive away thieves puts an end to one's sleep for that night. And that ritual was performed far too often last summer. Now we have reason to believe in future our slumber will not be so interrupted. Mingo has arrived.

A Chinese came to the Mission one night this winter with a big black and white dog. That the dog was foreign was seen at a glance. The Chinese dogs of this district would destroy every vestige of love for animals in the most ardent heart. In many places the expression, "You're a lucky dog", will pass in friendly parlance, but not in China. The word "dog" is a contemptuous term and admits of no other meaning. The reason is easily seen. The color of those Chinese dogs is a dirty yellow, the hair is off them in spots, and they are full of scabs and sores.

Mingo is a foreign dog. His coat is glossy, and up until lately he has been well cared for. The man who brought this dog to us says he found him out in the country and thought he belonged to the foreigners at the Catholic Mission. It is the bursar's duty to take care of all visitors, so I gave the finder four ko-tz (about thirteen cents, Canadian) as his reward, and proceeded to make our guest at home until his owner is found.

The dog does not seem a bit friendly. His tail hasn't wagged an inch since his arrival. During his recent wanderings he was not favorably received. As the way to the heart is through the stomach, we try him out on some bread and meat. The dog is foreign, all right; no stranger to that food. Bread and meat is to him what corned beef and cabbage is to Dinty Moore.

How about a place to sleep? Accompanying Msgr. McGrath a year ago, we combed Shanghai in a vain attempt to procure a suitable watch dog. So far we have not had the honor of receiving a dog visitor. There are some shavings in the wood-shed. That should make a fairly good bed—but not for him! No sooner is he left there than he starts to bark and set up a fuss. There seems to be nothing wrong, so we leave him again. The same thing happens. That's no good. We do not want any unnecessary noise; some of the priests and all of the boys are in bed. Well, I can show him my room. It is no palace, but a friend gave me a nice pair of curtains for the window. His highness follows me in. There is a fire in the stove. After giving the place the once over, he finally curls up on a straw mat and in a few minutes is dead to the world. I should not think of disturbing so particular a guest. As a mark of his appreciation for the treatment given him, the next day he refused to allow anyone to enter my room. Both priests and servants had to await a word from me before he would treat them as friends. An ideal watch dog. Not cross; that would not do, since we have on the premises over one hundred school boys, but he is able to distinguish unwelcome visitors.

Alas, his owner arrived, or, more correctly, his custodian. It seems the dog has more than one owner. That is to be expected in China. Buying a piece of property the other day, actual dimensions 30 feet by 27 feet, a good-sized drawing-room, six people had a share in that spot of land. And they actually called it a field! It took the middleman something over a month to talk all parties to terms. His fee was 130 Mex (forty-five cents, Canadian). He earned his money. In almost every transaction a middleman is indispensable. Without him the prey would not be worth the powder. A foreigner would be talked hoarse days before his Chinese friend would think the subject was properly introduced.

Mingo's case is in the hands of the middleman. And the dog himself is occupying a comfortable place right under my desk.

EARLY in May, Sister Matthew McGettigan, of the Presentation Order, died in St. John's, Newfoundland. "China" offers sincere condolences to Father Hugh McGettigan, her brother, one of our Missionaries who is now in Chuchow, China. Our sympathy is also extended to the sorrowing parents, Mr. and Mrs. Matthew McGettigan, 28 Leslie St., St. John's, and to the other members of the family, Rev. John McGettigan, Parish Priest of Marystown, Nfld.; Sister M. Ignatius, of the Presentation Convent, Grand Falls, Nfld.; Sister M. St. Hugh, of the Maryknoll Foreign Mission Sisters, Los Angeles, California, and two brothers, William and James, in St. John's.

We beg the prayers of our readers for the eternal repose of the soul of the deceased Sister. Requiescat in Pace.

SILLY SYMPHONY

By

REV. CRAIG STRANG

In our last issue, Father Strang told us of the ceremonies marking the reception of guests on the occasion of the blessing of the new church at Pi-Wu-Ka. Now, in humourous vein, he has something to say about the orchestra which enlivened the celebrations. You'll enjoy this.

ABOUT that orchestra at the festivities at Pi-Wu-Ka. I am sure the editor would not want a drawn out account of it in a write-up of the ceremony—he may not want it separate, either—long or short, but maybe it will slip by him somehow or other—if it doesn't slip by, look what you would miss:

This particular orchestra had about fifteen pieces (instruments), and for three days only five men were playing them; that cuts down expenses, and the host has to dish out less rice. The player who plink-plunked on his guitar also bla-blahed on his trombone; he who ta-taed on the cornet also tweet-tweeted on the piccolo. The violinist held to his own, but everybody else switched about. The orchestra pit was a little bandstand erected near the door, and it had straw over it to keep the rain off. The players sat around a square table, as if playing a game of poker (in fact they kept their poker faces all through the performances), and the instruments in the center of the table looked like the "pot". The man at the traps had a lot of gadgets to handle—his cymbals were very handy and came in for a lot of banging—he also had the block of wood, but whatever its significance it could not be heard over the din of the other instruments.

The leader of the orchestra was not what you'd call a knock-out—I don't suppose his fan mail was very great; people with stocking caps, yellow teeth and absolutely no personality are not big hits. He did not play any instrument, nor do any directing for what I could see—he just used his vocal chords—notice I did not say "sing". He was very base. I called him "Ha-cha," which is the Chinese for "a good laugh." His staff now was more presentable, though they did not go to any pains in "slicking" up. They had a little lad with them whom, it seemed, they were training. That little fellow I know would make a big hit in the movies—he could play opposite Shirley Temple great. But soon his voice will crack—soon he will lose that look of guilelessness, and will be like the rest of the players—maybe he will have yellow teeth, too.

The program was as varied as it was long and as weird as it was strange—they played everything from the latest hit ("From your wee tiny feet to your great pig tail—I love you") to the oldest of the classics: "The Story of the Three Kingdoms", and many others too humorous to mention. But the "Three Kingdoms" is a real symphony—it comes under the definition of classic music because you can't whistle it, and it has a whole lot of movements, plenty of tempo and the most startling changes. It embraced every variety of theme from care-free hilarity (indicated by much banging and booming on the drums) to most pathetic and doleful sighs, as if an oyster were crying for its mother-in-law (indicated by much scratching and scraping on the part of the violins). The rendition of the composition was most strenuous, and so every now and then a player would reach down for a big iron tea-pot and take a copious "swig"; the tea was a big feature, for it kept the kitchen boy busy filling the fast emptying pots. But I don't blame all the noises on the tea.

Interpretive music is a weakness of mine, and I tried to construct the story of the "Three Kingdoms" as they played through it. The music convinced me that they were in a state of chaos, and there seemed to be constant war amongst them. At times there was dialogue, and I was lost then; Ha Cha would come out with great guffaws and the man on his left emitted feminine screams, as if saying, "Lover, go way from me". The plot was thickening, I reckoned, and so was his voice, but that made no difference — nothing seems to make a difference, for the audience, however much they liked it, betrayed only mild interest and murmured politely "ha Ding," which is "good hear," and means that it is a knock-out. To make a wrong story short, Ha Cha ended up the symphony with a prolonged "OOOH", as if he was the man on the flying trapeze.

Saying it with Music in China is like doing a lot of other things here—be unintelligible, be unnatural, be impersonal, but above all else be noisy. So if you are in the mood for that kind of thing, tune in to Pi-Wu-Ka on Monday mornings at five-thirty, and sway to the ba-ba-boom of Ha Cha and his Happy Noises.

HEALERS OF THE BORDER-LANDS.

(Continued from page 85)

hearts of these Canadian ladies and when the State of Belgium failed to function the two Shanghai boys enjoyed some delicious wine, a present from the Sisters. Just before Marie des Anges left for Shanghai and Italy, she and Sister Alice very kindly nursed me through a serious attack of rheumatism, and when we met her at Christmas, her first question was, "How is the rheumatism?" Dear soul! Apparently I found a very warm spot in this Sister's heart as she told me many years ago I was very much like her brother in Ireland. I felt the compliment! It may be difficult for those on the outside to realize how eternally busy these good women are and the tremendous amount of work they get through. Here is a sample of a little note:

"Very kind of you indeed to remember an 'old friend'.
Excuse delay in replying to your kind note.
So busy—always the same story—busy and so little work is done.
Hope I will have the pleasure of seeing you.
Very truly in Christ,
Marie des Anges."

An Excellent Clinic.

There are six foreign Sisters in the French Hospital at the South Gate and their daily clinic has been the envy of western doctors who have visited Tachienlu. Frequently the number rises from one to two hundred and the morning scene outside the dispensary must remind these nursing women of a similar scene around the Pool of Bethesda, where we read, there lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water. The mass of vile and disgusting and terrible sores, many of them almost beyond the art of healing, which these gentle ladies attend to day by day, is sometimes unbelievable. And the good work goes on summer and winter, even when the Sisters themselves are needing rest and medical attention. Sometimes they have a spare moment, and when they have they make some little delicacy for the old bishop, Mgr. Giraudeau, now fifty-five years on the Tibetan frontier.

—North China Herald.

SECRET SOCIETIES IN CHINA

CHINA'S ancient secret societies, with centuries of tradition behind them, are being revived under the stress of widespread banditry, civil war, and the growth of Communism. In general, these secret societies are combinations of the people to protect their interests.

For centuries, these secret societies have grown stronger in periods of chaos, and practically disappeared during periods of peace and prosperity. Their reappearance usually marks displeasure of the people with their rulers, and during some periods in China's long history they have become powerful.

In southern China, the secret societies take the form of "tongs," familiar in the United States among southern Chinese immigrants. The "tongs" are wider in scope than northern secret societies, and have continuous existence.

In northern and central China, secret societies are almost entirely protective associations of farmers and laborers, designed to guard their members against the extortions of tax-collectors and soldiers, and the raid of bandits.

Reports appear almost daily in the Chinese press of the activities of the Yellow Spears, the Red Spears, the Heavenly Gate Society, and the Watch and Ward Society, all of which have a long and fairly honorable history. Picturesque leaders have appeared to inspire the people to fight for their lives and property.

These societies naturally have grown most rapidly in Honan and Shantung provinces, the seat of major fighting in the civil wars, which were hardest hit by military oppression and banditry. The four major societies have acquired a membership estimated at five millions, and have organized their own paid armies.

In Honan the Yellow Spears have been welded into an effective force under the leadership of "Mad Chang," a dynamic young man believed to have mystic powers by the more superstitious Chinese. He calls himself the "reincarnation of a tortoise."

"Mad Chang" inspires his followers by a fantastic rigamarole familiar to the student of Chinese superstitions. He claims to have a magical stove which manufactures magic pills rendering his army immune to bullets.

Before going into battle, Chang makes a lot of pills, and instructs his followers to carry them. Then they rush into the fight with great confidence. The fact that many of his soldiers fall in battle does not seem to weaken the confidence of those that remain.

Some of his followers claim that "Mad Chang" will be the next Emperor of China, after the militarists are defeated. Half a dozen of these claimants to the former imperial throne have appeared during the past three years, but all except "Mad Chang" have disappeared into oblivion.

Where these secret societies are well organized, they serve the useful purpose of keeping off bandits and curbing tax collectors. Frequently their leaders seem to be honest and sincere men.

—North China Herald.

A view along the mission trail to Nan Dong in Father Beal's parish of Sungyang. The hillsides are terraced so that all available land may be cultivated.

Mistress—"Nora, you've left your fingerprints on nearly every plate."
Maid—"Well, it shows I ain't got a guilty conscience, anyway."

Sunday School Teacher—"Can any of you little girls tell me who lived in the Garden of Eden?"
"Yes, teacher: the Adamses."

Pat—"That was a foine sintiment Casey expressed at the dinner last noight."
Mike—"What was it?"
Pat—"He said that the swatest mimories in loife are the ricollections of things forgotten!"

The insurance agent asked the prospect: "Did you ever have appendicitis?"
"Well," answered the prospect. "I was operated on, but I have never been quite certain whether it was appendicitis or professional curiosity."

The Doctor (to patient)—"You go to your chemist and ask him for some iodhydragyrate of iodide of potassium, some ankydroglucochloral and some dioxyamidoarseno benzol—and I should not be surprised if with those we shall be able to triumph over your loss of memory."

"Most interesting," said the sweet young thing to the motor car salesman, "and now show me the depreciation, please. I hear it is heavy in those cars."
"As a matter of fact, madam," replied the opportunist, "we found it a source of worry and had it removed altogether!"

The barber had cut him, nicked him and gashed him.
"Give me a glass of water, please," gasped the victim.
"You aren't going to faint, I hope," said the barber with alarm.
"No," replied the victim; "I just want to see if my mouth will hold water."

Absent-minded lady teacher, in trouble with the gears of her car, to traffic policeman—"I can't attend to you yet. Put your hand down."

Two Chicago girls were doing Italy. They were standing in front of St. Mark's. "Elizabeth," asked one, "is this Venice or Florence?" "Consult your timetable," was the answer. "If it's Monday, it's Florence; if it's Tuesday, it's Venice."

Teacher—"Harry, can you tell me what classical music is?"
Harry—"Yes, ma'am. It's any kind a feller can't whistle."

Visitor—"Your son is rather small for his age, isn't he!"
Fond Mother—"Oh, no; most boys of his age are overgrown, I think."

Young Wife—"I want some lamb, please."
Butcher — "Yes, ma'am, which part?"
Young Wife—"Oh, the part you eat mint sauce with."

Mrs. Bing—"They say the Government is going to control everything."
Mrs. Sting—"Well, it's going to have an awful time with that Jones boy who lives next to us."

"How you gettin' on wid youah 'rithmetic, Lou?"
"Well, I done learned to add up de oughts, but de figgers bodder me."

"Goodness! Have you had another tooth pulled?"
"Yes. I have a regular drawing account at the dentist's."

Lady—"Well, I'll take a pound of those sausages. Are they British?"
Butcher—"Yes, madam—the good old bulldog breed."

"That's the second time today I've seen that man following that woman in another car, yelling at her all the time."
"Yes, that's old Johnson. He's teaching his wife to drive, but he's not taking any risks himself."

The defendant in a case tried in a Western court had been duly convicted of theft, when it was seen, on "proving convictions," that he had actually been in prison at the time the theft was committed.
"Why didn't you say so?" angrily demanded the judge of the prisoner.
"Your honor," said the man apologetically. "I was afraid of prejudicing the jury against me."

Plausible Tramp (in suburbs): "Lady, I ain't beggin', but can I hang around till yer dawg's done with that 'er bone?"

Druggist: "How's your wife?"
Customer: "Oh, she can't complain."
Druggist: "I didn't know she was as bad as that."

Typist: "Do you know what time I have to get up to be here by nine?"
Boss: "No. Why not get here by nine and find out?"

"My fiance lost all his money in the Stock Exchange crash."
"I bet you feel sorry for him?"
"Yes, he'll miss me."

Lawyer: "You say your husband is a finisher; what does he finish?"
Witness: "Well, just now he's finishing his third term in prison."

"Now, Henry, give me a kiss and you shall have a penny."
"No good to me," said Henry with disdain. "I can get twopence for taking castor oil."

Villager (proudly displaying parent to a visitor): "Aye, she's goin' to live to be a centipede, bain't you, Mother?"
Mother: "Oh, go on with you. You wouldn't say so if you 'ad my feet."

Boots (in Irish hotel): "I've forgotten, captain, whether you wanted to be called at six or seven."
Voice from within: "What time is it now?"
Boots: "Eight, yer honor."

"Senator, I wish you would give me a job as your private secretary."
"Oh, my boy," responded the oily Senator, "don't get mixed up with the Government service. Nothing to it. Ruins a young man. Besides, I have promised that position to my son."

Enemy at the Manoeuvres—"You are my prisoner."
Sergeant Binks—"Nonsense! How did you get here?"
Enemy—"Over the bridge."
Sergeant Binks—"Then, my dear fellow, you are drowned. We blew up that bridge yesterday!"

Mother: "Oh, Freddie, I thought we had all agreed to economize, and here I find you eating bread with both jam and butter on it."
Freddie: "Why, of course, Mother; one slice of bread does for both."

"I used to tell my son that if he was a good boy I'd take him to the circus."
"Is he too old for that?"
"Rather. Now he intimates that if I succeed in keeping in his good graces he may get me a ticket to see him play football."

Our Work Must Go On!

Our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, Must be Supported.

Our Mission in China Must be Developed.

SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY

has ordained 22 Priests since its opening less than 11 years ago. Nearly 50 students are now preparing for ordination at the Seminary. Altogether, 77 persons (priests and students), depend on the readers of "CHINA" for their support and for the upkeep of the Seminary, as well as for the development of the mission of Chuchow in China confided to the Seminary for evangelization. A large amount of money is required for these purposes. The only revenue received is what comes through the mail day by day. Our needs are many, and so once again we ask YOU, dear reader, to send us a little help if you can possibly afford it. Won't you put a cheque or a money order in the mail for us to-day, please?

Give your gift for the love of God, and you will give a gift that is worth while, no matter how small it is.

ALL TOGETHER, NOW! LET'S HELP THE MISSIONS!

St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario

Very Rev. John E. McRae, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT. JULY AUGUST 1935

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.

2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.

3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.

4. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press
263 Adelaide St. West Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.

2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.

3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.

4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.

5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 25,400

Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XVI. JULY-AUGUST, 1935 No. 7

MISSION ESCAPES FIRE

From time to time we have reassured our readers that our Canadian Missionaries in Chuchow are singularly free from the activities of the much-publicized "Chinese bandits". The province in which Chuchow is located, Chekiang, being on the sea coast, is highly developed and well patrolled, and does not offer security to any maurauding bands such as play havoc in places inland which are not sufficiently protected by the authorities. With the exception of a "Red invasion" some ten years ago, our mission has been left undisturbed, and happily continues so. Letters received some time ago told of a mild bandit raid in the parish of Lungchuan (where Fathers Venini and Stringer are stationed), but the mission property was in no danger. The only damage done was the capture and summary execution of three prominent and supposedly wealthy citizens.

A new danger faced our mission property at headquarters in the early hours of May 21st, as a letter from Father Gerald Doyle reports. The homes of a dozen families adjoining the Mission Compound were razed by fire supposed to have been caused through a careless cigarette smoker. Just after midnight our priests were roused from sleep to find the houses next door a mass of flames and sparks alighting all over the Compound. No time could be lost if disaster was to be averted, and quickly the priests formed a bucket brigade and saturated the front of the residence. Fortunately, the roof was made of tile, and the brick wall of the Compound served as a fire barrier while the projecting roofs of the burning houses were hurriedly forced away from the wall by the use of planks. The roof of the kitchen was destroyed and one of the outhouses caught fire. The city fire brigade was on the scene within half an hour and succeeded in confining the blaze to a dozen houses.

All at the Mission thanked God for His protection, and they felt grateful that there was no wind at the time. It was a very close call.

AT THE SEMINARY

As you read this, the student body of China Mission Seminary is scattered over distant provinces in Canada and in Newfoundland, enjoying (we hope) the long Summer holidays after nine months of hard work and study at the Seminary. Before disbanding for vacation on June 15th, we had the happiness of witnessing the ordination of seven of our young men to the Subdeaconate, and the promotion of nine others to the rank of Clerics and Minor Orders. Following the usual examinations at the close of the term, the Annual Retreat was conducted by Rev. Charles O'Brien, S.J.

We are pleased to report that two of our missionaries who are back from China on health furlough are rapidly regaining their normal good health. Monsignor McGrath is spending the Summer at home in Newfoundland, and Father L. Beal is fast recuperating at his home in Otterville, Ont.

PROSPECTS FOR SEPTEMBER

During the past few years the increase in missionary vocations has made itself so definitely felt that it has presented a problem to the authorities at our Seminary. Despite the current financial depression, two years ago we went ahead and built an addition to the Seminary. It provided only a temporary solution to the problem of housing the many aspirants to the missionary priesthood. Last year, and again this year, we have unfortunately been forced to refuse entrance to our seminary to splendidly-qualified young men just because we had no accommodation for them. Already we have accepted as many new students for September as we have room for, and much against our will, we have had to disappoint some applicants.

While it is something to be proud of that vocations are not lacking, still we are conscious of the fact that the work of bringing souls to Christ in China needs all possible volunteers, and we cannot but regret our inability to take care of all those who wish to devote their young lives to this high purpose. It but serves to emphasize our need for the fullest measure of support for our growing Institution on the part of the clergy and laity throughout Canada and Newfoundland. Our Building Fund could well take care of some liberal donations from our friends.

A LESSON TO CATHOLICS

"An appeal for $25,000 brought a total of $28,115.50 at the People's Church, Bloor Street East. The fund is for the foreign mission work of the church."

The above is a quotation from a Toronto daily paper. We would that Catholics were as generous in giving to the Foreign Missions as non-Catholics are in supporting theirs. Whilst there may not be many readers of "China" able to set aside large sums to help Catholic Missions, yet we know there are some who will want to make the fullest use of their worldly goods. To such we recommend our mission work.

ON THE SPOT

Being a Pleasant Account of a "Social Affair" in Lishui

By

REV. CRAIG STRANG

FEBRUARY 3rd, the last day of the Chinese year—the 22nd year of the New Republic—and all's well; but maybe not so for us—you see we were invited to the time-honoured last meal of the year. Yes, we took until then to break into Lishui social life, and as there were no reporters there to ask us leading questions, we have to take the lead ourselves and send on to the Reverend Editor the answers to the unasked questions.

Of course, we did not weep very much about the three months' delay before we crashed the social page—the different conventions of the two civilizations are not easy to acquire. I know that most of the Christians here would not greatly like our Christmas dinner. I am more certain that all the Christians in Canada would not like the Chinese New Year "sumptuous" repasts. It is a gap that all missionaries must fill if they want any contact with the people at all, and so during this new year we new priests took advantage of several invitations that were offered to us. The first was on New Year's eve, as I mentioned above, and as it did not greatly differ from the others, I will confine my few remarks to that one.

Mr. Mo, one of our teachers, was our host. He conducted us to his house about five o'clock in the afternoon—Fathers MacGillivray, McGettigan, Doyle, and myself. Father MacGillivray was an old hand at this, and we depended upon him a lot, both as to what to eat and how to eat, what to say and how to act. A very able instructor is Father Jim. Well, we were asked into his "most abject abode", and saying we were not worthy of such an honor, we groped our way in. I say "groped" because it was quite dark inside, but everything was cleared away and we found our way to seats against the wall in perfect safety. So far very good. In the center of the room was the Chinese square table—like a card table, only it isn't collapsible. Generally, eight sit around it—we were just five. Our host spent some time talking to us, telling us that his food was awful tripe and that he was ashamed to offer it to us. We said that we were sure it was not, and hoped for the best. Between sentences he went to the kitchen and brought in dishes, mostly in bowl shape, and placed them on the table—fifteen in all, and lastly came the chopsticks and wine cups. We were asked to sit in, and having said grace, he filled our cups with hot wine. It has taken us some time to get onto the wine, and taken hot, it is not too bad; that night it was a life-saver, for it aided the swallowing immensely.

It was hard for us to make out the contents of the dishes; in one there was chicken—that was all right—it was boiled (they boil everything here), and if it tasted a bit oily, it was not too bad. The chicken was hard to handle with the chopsticks, but with the help of the bare fingers we managed each to get a share. There were several other kinds of meat—the least objectionable was the ham, and that bowl was a favourite of ours. As for vegetables—there were several bowls of stringy concoction which does not taste worse than grass, and some of which had some flavour. There was fish, too, but we only had one try at that—even though two of us were Newfoundlanders. Some other dishes contained food which we cannot name; they were mixtures of various edibles—bamboo shoots, sharks' fins, etc. A little of that was all we dared. In one large bowl was what looked like sliced Christmas pudding covered with sauce; it turned out to be some kind of a rubber concoction, "sweetened, I think," said Father Jim, "with glue," for it was very hard to grasp with the stick—even the host found that difficulty; unfortunately, they were all large portions, and we had to take more than we cared to. All the while our wine cups were being kept filled and kept hot, which was a blessing.

Father Hugh McGettigan, of St. John's, Nfld., with a group of converts whom he had the happiness to baptize last Easter Saturday at Lishui.

Then came my Waterloo. I was getting on as bravely as I could till they served me the dough-ball they call der vu. Maybe others would like it—I know of none of the priests who do; it is made of bean curd and meat beaten into a pulp to form a very soggy ball—something like the dumplings served with pea-soup which I used to like so well at home. In my zeal I put a whole one in my mouth—I did not finish it, but it finished me. From then on my interest lagged most perceptibly. Our host every now and then would remark how tasteless and insipid his banquet was, and we always came back with remarks that informed him we thought it delicious and a triumph in the culinary art, but when he mentioned it again when I had the taste of the der vu in my mouth, I did not have the courage to contradict. It was, I thought, too much of a demand upon my politeness.

There was, besides this, stringy "mien", something like maccaroni, as hard to swallow as to get to the mouth with the chopsticks. There were puffed rice flakes that looked like large white corn flakes —that was all right—what there was of it, and there was plenty of it, such as it was. Later on we had sliced orange peanuts and watermelon seeds and cigarettes. That was the beginning of the end; it was then that we put serious objections to the invitations of "Chi-chi, eat more, eat more", and we took our last pick at the dishes, and politely told our host that we were full to the chin. He liked that, but said we did not eat much because it was all so miserable. We let that pass.

All during the meal, whilst we used our bit of Chinese with the host (Father Jim was most fluent), we held unbridled conversation amongst ourselves and had great fun at it—of course, we had to speak fast, as our host knew a little English—he was a Seminarian once, but had to leave on account of ill health.

Eventually we rose from the table and found our way home just in time for the fire crackers which were set off to celebrate the advent of the new year, which was but a few hours away. The sacristans presented to us a little feast—biscuits, etc., and Chinese tea, at which we, who had just eaten, merely sipped.

Well, we have had our first break into Chinese eating. The above account may seem very terrible; it is so mainly because it is like nothing to which we are used; in itself it is wholesome enough, and as soon as we get our palate seasoned to it, it will not be so bad. Still, a beefsteak would be very welcome any time, and if the sacrifice we make in not having it, and in taking ver du, will in any way forward our work, it is all worth while.

EX-PRIME MINISTER OF CHINA ORDAINED PRIEST

Story of Remarkable Life; Diplomat Who Served in St. Petersburg, Versailles and Locarno; After Wife's Death Entered Monastery.

BRUGES, Belgium, June 29.—A former Chinese noble and high official to-day completed an extraordinary soul-journey. It had led him from the religious cult of his native land, where he had served as Premier and diplomat under the old imperial dynasty and the new republic, through marriage to a Catholic wife, conversion to the Catholic faith, and finally to profession in the Benedictine Order and ordination as a Catholic priest.

The ordination took place to-day at St. Andrew's Benedictine Abbey, near here. In the ceremony, His Excellency the Most Rev. Celso Costantini, former Ap. Delegate to China, administered the Sacrament of Holy Orders to Mr. Lou Tseng Tsiang, former Premier, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Ambassador of China, who now becomes Father Peter Celestin Lou, a priest of the Catholic Church.

Present at the ordination ceremony were numerous friends and admirers, nearly all of whom were non-Catholics and acquaintances of his diplomatic days.

Dom Peter Celestin Lou, O.S.B., the former Lou Tseng Tsiang, is 65 years old. He began his diplomatic career in 1891 as secretary of the Chinese Embassy at St. Petersburg. In 1911, he became Chinese Ambassador to Russia. In that same year, foreseeing events at Peking, he warned the Chinese Emperor of the revolutionary peril in his native country and pressed His Majesty to give up the Crown.

When the Chinese Republic was proclaimed, Mr. Lou was appointed Minister for Foreign Affairs. Later he was named Prime Minister of China and was conspicuous for his efforts to create a Legation of China at the Holy See.

In 1899, Mr. Lou married Mlle. Bertha Bovy, a Belgian, at St. Petersburg. The diplomat's bride was a Catholic and in 1911 he himself embraced Catholicism. It was the Ambassador's greatest sorrow that the marriage was childless.

Mr. Lou headed the delegation from China at the Versailles Peace Conference, and refused to sign the treaty by which China was to meet liabilities for the future

Mrs. Lou's health becoming undermined by the Chinese climate, he asked his government for the Legation in Switzerland, a request which was granted. From 1922 to 1927 he resided at Locarno on Lake Majeur, where Mrs. Lou died in 1927. Mr. Lou resigned his diplomatic post and entered St. Andrew's Abbey on October 4 of that year. He made his religious profession in 1929.

Dom Peter Celestin's conversion and entry into the religious life has made a great impression upon his countrymen in China. His contributions to the well-known "Le Bulletin des Missions", published at St. Andrew's Abbey, have created considerable attention. His statement at the Missionary Week at Louvain in 1929, on the obstacles to the propagation of the Faith in China, published in the "Bulletin", is regarded as a necessary guide for all missionaries, travellers, officials and the like, who have anything to do with China.

Notwithstanding the severe life of the monks and the hardships of study, Dom Peter Celestin declares that he "is the happiest man in the world".

JOTTINGS

By

REV. GERALD DOYLE

Lishui, May, 1935.

EAST MEETS WEST in a conglomeration of nationalities and customs in that most cosmopolitan of cities, Shanghai. The result is beguiling, almost escaping explanation. Perhaps each lends something of itself to the other, but gives nothing. Where necessary, each adapts itself but at the same time holds fast to its own enshrined traditions. The few exceptions are singular and do but make the rule more evident.

Europeans, some of them born in China, while making their homes in this city still consider that their real home is beyond the waters, in England, France, Germany, Portugal, Russia, America, or elsewhere, and to that real home they strive to make periodical visits, to offset a subtle influence of the East which slowly but almost inevitably subdues or changes something inside them. From these visits home they return refreshed, unconquered, and better able to carry on their work in the Orient, no matter what it may be.

* * *

Through this great city flows the immense wealth of the rich Yangtze Valley. In Shanghai there is to be seen the greatest luxury and comfort and also the direst poverty and misery. But he who knows only Shanghai knows not the real China.

In this cosmopolitan, fascinating city, overflowing with wealth and poverty, with its millions striving for existence, money, power or pleasure, are there some who know and acknowledge the God who created them, who pray to the God who is seemingly forgotten in this pagan city?

How many there are who remember their Creator I do not know, but there are some. Among whom are some fine old Catholic families which frequent the several churches in Shanghai, and then there are the convents and other religious houses, but there is one place which left a lasting impression on my mind: the chapel of the Franciscan Missionaries of Mary attached to the General Hospital.

* * *

In this devotional chapel, beautiful in its simplicity, the Eucharistic Lord is enthroned each day from five-thirty in the morning until late in the afternoon, while white-robed missionary Sisters are constantly on adoration. By their acts of reparation and supplication the balance is levelled, nay, weighed down, against the neglect which Our Lord receives from those who have forgotten Him or who know Him not. Throughout the day many others find their way to this little chapel situated in the International Settlement. There may be seen a young woman during her tiffin hour, a couple of Sisters from another convent who came for a visit, a priest, or perhaps a layman who has dropped into the chapel for a few minutes silent communion with the King of Kings. Especially at four o'clock is the chapel well filled when there is Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, and the singing of the Sisters is an aid to devotion.

* * *

In the hospital, the Shanghai General Hospital, nearly all the boys (the Chinese assistant nurses and servants) are Catholics, although the hospital is non-sectarian. Each day there is prayer in common in the chapel for the Catholic boys, who also receive instruction from time to time. When new boys are employed no direct effort is made to convert them, but with very few exceptions they are converted by the good example of the Sisters and the Catholic boys. Soon they are going to the chapel with the others and then they ask to receive special instruction. The good spirit among the boys is evident to any visitor.

* * *

It is to this hospital that some of our priests have gone from time to time for treatment, and needless to say, the Sisters have done everything possible for them. At the present writing the hard-working pastor of Sungyang, Father Lawrence Beal, is there beginning his convalescence following a serious operation. (Father Beal has since returned to his home in Canada.)

* * *

FORTY li up the river from headquarters here at Lishui is a flourishing mission outpost of the Catholic Church under the spiritual guidance of Father Bernard Boudreau, the active pastor of Pi-Wu-Ka. A substantial little church, dedicated to the Canadian Martyrs, stands as a monument to the pastor's energy. Devoid of special decoration inside, the plain white walls and pillars give a simplicity to the church which is in keeping with the simple faith of the Christians, although as an aid to devotion Father Boudreau hopes to have a large picture of the martyrs to place over the altar.

* * *

It was to this mission outpost at Pi-Wu-Ka that I went to assist during Holy Week. Leaving the mission here at Lishui early in the afternoon of Wednesday I went to the bus station. There I remained for four hours and changed busses three times, but never went beyond the confines of the station. Finally when the shadows of evening were drawing over I was told that there would be no travel service that day, the busses being commandeered to transport soldiers to Lungchuan. So I returned to the mission in time to be late for supper. Later I was told that a bus loaded with soldiers turned over near Pi-Wu-Ka, many being injured.

White-robed Franciscan Missionaries of Mary on adoration before the Blessed Sacrament exposed in the chapel of their convent attached to the General Hospital, Shanghai.

Avenue Edward VII, Shanghai, which is the dividing line between the French Concession and the International Settlement.

At break of day, Thursday, the bus service being uncertain, I left by chair for Pi-Wu-Ka. The carriers were good men, and in the cool of the early morning they made very good time, resting only every ten li and then only for a couple of minutes, as at each stop I got out and walked ahead for about half a mile.

* * *

It was necessary to cross the river twice by ferry, as Pi-Wu-Ka is on the same side of the river as Lishui. The logical location for the motor road was on this side of the river, thereby avoiding the crossings, but that would mean that many rice fields would be destroyed and the gentry in Pi-Wu-Ka were influential enough to have the route changed to the other side of the river, thus saving many fields. For the building of a road here in China the property is seized by the authorities and no compensation given to the owners.

* * *

After the second crossing of the river I was carried through the city to the gate of the mission. Father Boudreau was in the church hearing Confessions, but within a short time Mass commenced and together we carried out the ceremonies for Holy Thursday. The Repository was erected under the tower and throughout the day the Christians remained on adoration, taking turns, and until midnight they could be heard praying aloud before the nicely decorated Repository.

* * *

Not only the Christians and catechumens of the city were present for the Holy Week ceremonies, but several men had come from villages sixty and seventy li away. One woman had walked sixty li, and that with small feet, that is, feet that were bound when she was a child. The young girls to-day in China do not have bound feet, except, perhaps, in some remote country places.

* * *

An amusing illustration of the slowing-down effect of small feet is found in an incident related here recently. The Sisters were leaving the convent when an old woman at the gate asked them, with customary Chinese politeness, where they were going.

"We are walking to the North Gate," the Sisters replied.

"Oh!" exclaimed the old woman, "you will not be able to return before dark."

"Why certainly we can, we have plenty of time."

"Ah, yes," the old woman observed slowly and perhaps sadly as she glanced at her own bound feet. "You have big feet and can walk quickly."

* * *

Returning to the story of Holy Week at Pi-Wu-Ka: the Christians assisted very devoutly on Good Friday and Holy Saturday. Going into the church late Saturday evening I found several making a quiet visit to the Blessed Sacrament in the darkened church, a good indication of the faith of the people. On Easter Sunday Father Boudreau said the early Mass and preached, while I said the second Mass. The church was well filled, to the delight of the pastor, who explained that it was the time for transplanting the rice and therefore difficult for some to come in from the country.

* * *

Recently the pastor at Pi-Wu-Ka was preaching on "Faith", and to make an illustration he pointed to a crack in the wall of the church. "What caused that crack in the wall?" he asked, and in the pause before answering his own question, an intent listener jumped up and said: "The mud in the foundation was not pounded enough." Immediately surprised glances from his neighbors forced the eager man into silence, but Father Boudreau hurriedly seized upon the unexpected situation and said: "Exactly, and unless you have a good foundation in Doctrine and are faithful to your duties, you, too . . . etc." Father Boudreau is doing magnificent work here in China. Besides the church at Pi-Wu-Ka he has three mission chapels and one hundred and five villages under his care.

* * *

At Lishui the Holy Week ceremonies were carried out as solemnly as possible. Father McGillivray assisted at Sungyang, and Father Strang went to Lungchuan for Easter. Father Gignac remained over at Tsingtien.

* * *

Just as I was finishing pounding this typewriter one of the sacristans came in. He had just returned from Kinhwa, where he had been sent on business, and reported that Monsignor Fraser was well and sent his best regards. Monsignor is busy now building a girl's school.

* * *

A very welcome visitor here at Lishui is Father Prost, C.M., of Wenchow, who is spending a few days with us. Father Prost has been very kind to all our priests passing through Wenchow and we have in him a real friend.

BAPTISMAL CEREMONY LASTS MORE THAN FIVE HOURS

Kinhwa, Chekiang.—On January 6th, Feast of the Epiphany, 79 persons of the village of Siao Kao Tsu were baptized by Father Ly, assistant to Mgr. J. M. Fraser, founder of the St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary of Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, Canada. The ceremony took five and a half hours.

Previous to conferring the baptisms, Father Ly had remained six weeks in the village, preaching daily and with two catechists teaching the catechism and prayers. He is to return there shortly to prepare the neophytes for Confirmation, which will be administered by H. E. Bishop Paul Faveau, Vicar Apostolic of Hangchow, some time in March.

FATHER LAWRENCE LY

There was previously neither priest, catechist, church nor chapel in Siao Kao Tsu, which is about 150 li from Kinhwa, and not one of the villagers is gaining any temporal advantage through entering the Church. This makes the conversion of the village the more remarkable.—Lumen.

Prisoner for a Year

The Thrilling Story of a Missionary's Captivity Among the Reds

AT the end of February, thirteen months after his capture by the Communists in Fukien, Fr. Cyprian Bravo, O.P., walked unexpectedly into the Vincentian Fathers' Mission Station at Sinfeng, in Kiangsi.

"The good fathers must have been surprised to see you," a friend said, when he arrived in Hong Kong on St. Patrick's Day.

"I suppose they were," Fr. Bravo replied, "but they were not half as surprised as I was to find myself amongst them. I never expected to be a free man again."

It was on January 25th of last year that Fr. Bravo was captured. A native of Palencia in Spain, twenty-eight years of age, he had come to China three years before, and had worked in the Foochow mission, one of the three sections of the province of Fukien which is under the care of the Spanish Dominicans. Towards the end of 1933, when serious political trouble occurred in Fukien, the Communist leaders took advantage of the situation and opened an energetic campaign. An announcement was made by the various foreign consuls, pointing out the danger and recommending the missionaries to leave their districts. Fr. Bravo did not leave.

This was no foolhardy decision. He was in the walled town of Shahsien, he talked the matter over with some of the important men of the town, and they came to the conclusion that they were safe from attack. He was particularly anxious not to leave, because the mission there was a young one, the number of Catholics was small and he did not wish to desert them.

Attack on Shahsien

In due time the Communist army came. It battered at the city walls, but its attack was feeble and it seemed as if hopes were going to be fulfilled, and the town would escape capture. Then tunnelling began. Approaches were made from various points, and mines laid. At last through a long tunnel a coffin filled with a great amount of explosives was placed under the wall and fired by a lengthy fuse. The mine and the method of firing it were primitive, but the aim of the besiegers was attained. A huge breach was made in the wall and the city was entered.

Then began one of those scenes of carnage and horror to which Fr. Bravo was soon to become accustomed. The eastern section of the city received the brunt of the assault. It was surrounded, a large part of it was razed to the ground, and all in it were at the mercy of the Communists. Before evening, Fr. Bravo was a prisoner with a rope around his neck and his hands tied behind his back. Next day he was untied, but for some time he was kept in close confinement. In the beginning he was given over to the sport of the soldiers. He was not maltreated, but was subjected to jeers and ridicule, and was given lurid accounts of his future fate.

Held to Ransom

From the beginning he was threatened with death. He was told that he would be spared, and released, only if a large ransom was paid. Many others were likewise held to ransom. In making prisoners, the one object of the Red army was to get money. The rich men, or those that they believed to be rich, were their first victims. Pillage was a matter of course, and no effort was spared to root out hidden treasure. Anyone who was considered likely to have money or valuables was tortured until he spoke—or died. There was utter disregard of human life. Mere suspicion was enough to cause execution without a trial. Blood flowed freely during the fortnight that the army chiefs remained in Shahsien. Then they moved on, bringing with them over a hundred prisoners among whom was Fr. Bravo.

FR. CYPRIAN BRAVO, O.P.
Photo taken three weeks after his release from captivity.

A long march followed, nearly two hundred miles, to Siukin. There the prisoner remained for several months, spending the hot summer months there, and moving on only when winter was at hand. Short halts were made at other towns, including a terrible ten days at Itu where about twenty "official" executions took place every day. While he was in Sinkong, the town was bombed by the aeroplanes of the National army. The last four months of captivity were spent in rapid marches by night, and short halts at various places, only a few days being spent at any one spot. When the time of release came Fr. Bravo found himself near the frontier of Kiangsi.

A Captive's Life

During all these long months Fr. Bravo was never allowed to forget that he was a prisoner. He complains of no ill-treatment, but his life was rough and hard. The food which he received was the same as that given to the soldiers, eight ounces of rice twice a day, with sometimes a few vegetables placed on it. The rice was coarse and unwashed. Each person had a small cloth bag for his rice. For each meal his allowance was placed in this and all were then placed in a pot to be boiled. When meal-time came each one got his bag. The meal was over in five minutes. Occasionally there was tea for those who were thirsty; more often there was hot water; usually there was nothing.

The lack of clothing caused the greatest hardship. The only possible clothes or shoes which the prisoners could get were those which the soldiers threw away as useless. The thin Chinese shoes do not last long in marching, but if soles were broken and the prisoners' feet were bleeding no one cared. There was no rest on these hard marches. If one were exhausted and lagged behind, he was pushed on, and threatened. The extremes of heat and cold, too, caused considerable suffering. When rest came, it was taken on the ground. There was no shelter in heat or cold or rain. After the first days, surveillance was not rigid, but escape was an impossibility. All the districts in the hands of the Reds were ringed about with guards, and without a written order no one could pass.

The Red Army

The number of soldiers operating in that part of Fukien seemed to be about 30,000. They were in good control and received all their orders from Mao Chu Tung—the Dictator. The officers and men were not unfriendly to Fr. Bravo, in fact the officers seemed quite well-disposed, but they made it clear that his fate or fortune did not rest with them. The army was ill-equipped. It possessed one aeroplane, the gift of a general who co-operated for a time with the Reds during the Fukien Rebellion in 1933. For guns and ammunition it depended on what it captured from the Government forces. There were very few pieces of artillery and comparatively few muskets, many of the soldiers were armed with old-fashioned spears. The gunners manufactured for themselves a kind of gunpowder, of which the chief ingredient was powdered camphor-wood.

When the army captured a town or district it immediately took complete control. Every thing of value was seized in the name of the people, and then an attempt at ordered government was set up, a governor being put in charge at once. Every effort was made to win over the civil population. Propaganda was carried on extensively and skilfully. Meetings were held to explain the principles of Communism, and in addition to the speeches there was music, and sometimes there were plays. The army brought with it a band of Chinese musicians and a troupe of actors. Special newspapers were published and widely circulated, and posters giving the latest bulletins were posted on the walls. The news was uniformly optimistic. Brilliant successes of the Red armies in Kiangsi, Szechwan and other places were reported. Half of the island of Hainan was said to be in the hands of the Communists. Maps of China were published with the places held by the Communists colored red. They showed most of the country as red.

Though no effort was spared to create an atmosphere of enthusiasm the effort was not successful. The people remained, for the most part, just terrified. All who could flee before the advancing army did so. Those who remained endured considerable poverty. Business was all practically suspended. There was no work going on in the fields in all the areas through which the prisoners passed. The Communists had their own currency, and prices were fabulous. Salt, for instance, was $16 a pound. All the people had to co-operate with the Communists if they wished to live. Doctors, for example, were compelled to put all their services at the disposal of the army. The army had its own Red Cross corps, but Fr. Bravo never saw them with any wounded after their many battles, and there was certainly no provision for wounded prisoners. But the doctors tended the sick. They cared for Fr. Bravo when he was laid up, and gave him quinine injections.

Ruthlessness

The Communists realized that in trying to carry out their programme they had a hard task to accomplish, and they were ruthless in their methods. All hindrances were swept aside. The weak and old were slaughtered, the slightest resistance meant death. One of the officers pointed out to Fr. Bravo the absence of beggars, claiming this as a triumph of Communism. In the next town that was entered there were some beggars. That evening Fr. Bravo saw them roped together and led to the hills, accompanied by the executioners. Next day there were no beggars.

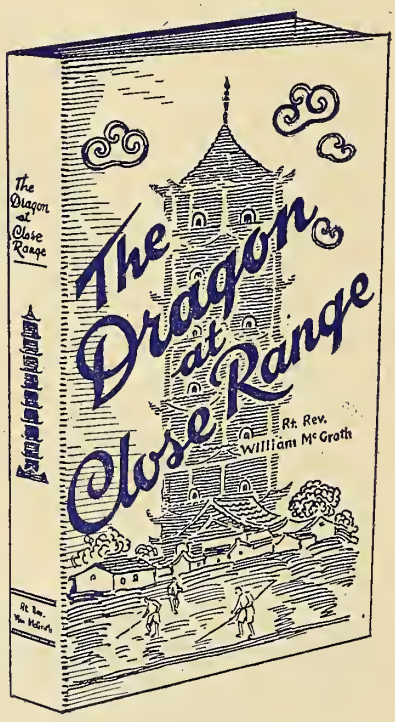
Torture was applied as a matter of course, and it was ingenious in its brutality. Unfortunate victims were placed kneeling on rods with heavy weights on the soles of their feet. Then the rods were rolled, causing untold agony. The hands of others were racked and crushed, while the mouths of the victims were gagged to stifle their cries. There was no secrecy about either the executions or the torture. Fr. Bravo had to be a spectator to both as a daily occurrence. Several times he was assured that his own turn had come. More than once when a messenger arrived, he was told that it related to him and that it had been finally decided to execute him. And he waited from hour to hour in expectation of the end.

During the last months, when the position was constantly being changed, and the sound of gunfire was heard in the distance, it was quite clear that the Red army was being pressed, but no hint of failure was ever given. Fr. Bravo had ceased to regard the success or failure of the Communist movement as having any reference to himself. He knew that a sudden

(Continued on page 110)

There's not much space wasted on a Chinese ferry.

Canadian Literature



A REVIEW

By

HENRY SOMERVILLE M.A.

in the "Catholic Register", Toronto.

This book, "The Dragon at Close Range", by Rt. Rev. W. McGrath, has been modestly advertised as a "first contribution to Canadian missionary literature". It is recommendation enough to bespeak a kindly welcome from Catholic readers in Canada. A country which gives tariff protection to its manufactures and subsidies to its coal and has preferences for its tobacco, should surely be able to indulge a little favoritism towards its native literature. A young country is handicapped in its literary production by its youth; it is doubly handicapped by proximity to a much larger country, with the same language, able to swamp the market. Yet a country, if it is to count as a nation, and not merely as territory for economic exploitation, needs a literature more than it needs any of its bolstered industries. Coal and tobacco can be imported if need be, and the labor and capital diverted from those fields can be applied to others. But there is no substitute for a national literature. We may share in the heritage of a wider community than our own, in the classics of Greece and Rome, and especially in the unsurpassed treasures which are English Literature, but there remain certain tasks of culture that we can perform only for ourselves. Writing is the least universal of the arts, it is the expression of a limited group consciousness, not only because of the differences of language, but because its subject matter is the experiences of limited human units. Even if we had some universal language in Latin or Esperanto, the Canadian could not adequately communicate his mind to the Turk. The two races inhabit different thought-worlds. The Canadian thought-world is not quite the same as the English, not quite the same as the American, though it has many affinities with each.

A literature, as Newman said, is the voice of a particular nation. Our own writers, using our particular idiom, interpreting our particular experiences, are indispensable to our growth as a nation, not in a statistical sense, which is no sense at all, but in the spiritual sense, which is the only real sense.

Any contribution to native literature, therefore, is to be indulgently received. But to recommend it on this ground is open to misconstruction. There is a suspicion of its nakedness being wrapped in the national flag because it has too little attractiveness of its own. And to speak of "missionary" literature is perhaps also to add to the suggestion of apologetic. Now this book of Msgr. McGrath's has certainly no need to be apologetic. It is a piece of extraordinarily good writing. It can be called emphatically an enrichment of the national literature. And it is authentically literature produced by Canada, not in the mere sense that it was written by a Canadian (Msgr. McGrath, we believe, is a Newfoundlander) or written in Canada (for it was written in China), but in the sense that its style is one which tends to be cultivated under present Canadian conditions, and which in this case, we imagine, has been adopted to appeal to the popular taste.

When the present Prefect Apostolic of Chuchow became a priest the newspapers of this country, and this continent, lost a most brilliant reporter. The style of writing here exemplified

ORDER BLANK

178 Pages 55 Photographic Illustrations

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR, POSTPAID

ST. F. X. SEMINARY,
Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Dear Fathers:
Enclosed please find $..... for ..... copies of Monsignor McGrath's book, "The Dragon at Close Range". Mail the book to

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

.....

may not be the loftiest, but it is the most popular, it is the style that appeals to the majority of readers, and therefore commands the front pages and the high salaries. The qualities of this style are liveliness, ease, boldness, pictorialness and humor. The language is familiar, colloquial, even slangy. The aim is more to present concrete images than to communicate abstract ideas. When it is well done, the style is so piquant that it pleases even those of classic tastes, for it is fresh and intensely alive. It is seldom well done. A writer who has the gift under commercialized newspaper conditions is driven to write himself out in a few years, even a few months. Thereafter he lives on his name, but is a mere caricature of his better and earlier self. His forced humor becomes vulgarity, his familiarity descends to flippancy, and his descriptions lose all value because they become sheer fabrications, inserted because it is thought the words will read well, though they have no correspondence with the object alleged to be described, and therefore no truth.

Msgr. McGrath has been fortunate in the assignment he received as a reporter. He went all the way to China, far off the beaten track, and had crowds of virginal subjects for his thumbnail sketches, and he was never under the temptation of padding, for the shorter his articles on missionary topics the more chance of Catholic editors receiving them hospitably.

The discerning reader who knows something of the craft of writing can easily imagine how the missionary in China came to try his hand at this literary genre which has hardly as yet received the hallmark of the academies. He wanted to attract reluctant attention, to arrest the multitude, to overcome the tendency of readers to skip missionary appeals. Therefore he used the artifices of the tabloid press and the publicity experts. He made himself a consummate master of the technique. If Directors of Schools of Journalism get hold of this book they will use its cameos as models for their neophytes. The discerning reader can guess also that Msgr. McGrath's work must often have been done under arduous conditions, when travelling, and with accommodation that did not provide for literary occupations. For example, there is a story beginning "Up by candlelight at 4 a.m." which insinuates the lack of amenities:

Up by candlelight at 4 a.m. As we said Mass we couldn't but contrast this awful shed with the many churches and chapels we know so well at home. Below in the kitchen the old lady was preparing our breakfast of rice and a special treat of bean-curd (no ordinary dish for the poor), and as there was no chimney, the smoke just poured up through the open hole leading to the chapel (sic) above. Got away by 6.30.

At noon we stopped for dinner at Daw Joe, the half-way house of today's trip and the only place en route which boasts of a restaurant. Honest to goodness, you should see that restaurant! Today's special was rice and tea. If you are so fastidious or so wealthy as to be able to afford meat for your daily meal, then you must just run down to the butcher shop for a few ounces of pork—when they have it—bring it back and cook it yourself. The mud stove is available for the use of the passing traveller who drops in for a meal.

So, while we recited the office, the boy scoured the town for a piece of pork, but in vain. He was successful, however, in securing some peanuts for dessert. Not everybody can have peanuts for dessert. In fact, the crowd of hungry-eyed boys who surrounded us as we began to eat looked as if they had never before seen a half pound of these delectable dainties on the table at one time.

Msgr. McGrath's study of popular journalistic features is sometimes evident in his lines as well as between them. He has one article headed "Believe It or Not" apropos a visit of Mr. Ripley to China at the time of writing. Monsignor would have enjoyed a Ripley visit to his own location up country, and the following paragraph shows how accurately the missionary catches the note of the cartoonist:

"Had Mr. Ripley come here we could have shown him a few things, human-faced crabs: towns with lifeboats instead of fire stations, because the greatest danger is from flood; a photograph of an old man (now dead) whose finger nails were two feet long, and a place along the river bank where a chapel was burned down by a flood. Perhaps our readers can figure that out for themselves."

The quotations we have given from Msgr. McGrath are good, but they have been selected merely to illustrate particular points, not to give away his juiciest plums. The prize for the richest fun we might give to "A Chinese Banquet". As a thrilling epic we would select "The Red Siege of Kanchow". Rudyard Kipling is not more tersely enthralling. In an anthology of the world's best short stories we would put "The Good Thief of Chusan". The human interest stories, quaint and touching, are too numerous to specify.

We would do a grave injustice to Msgr. McGrath if we left any impression of him as a mere literary craftsman. He is a theologian, and some of his pages on theology reach sublimity. But above all he is the missionary, and in his lightest as in his gravest moods the cry that comes from his heart, so that the reader can almost hear it, is the cry of the great Apostle of the East, St. Francis Xavier: Da mihi animas. Give me souls!

OUR COVER

Two little Chinese maids seem quite pleased to have their picture taken with "Bobby". Here's what Msgr. McGrath says about "Bobby" in his book which is reviewed on this page. Under the title of "A Dog's Life" a little article reads: "Do you think China a tough place for a missionary? You don't know the half of it, says Bobby, our thoroughbred setter, assigned to what he considers the disgraceful role of watch dog in the Lishui Mission Compound of the Grey Sisters from Pembroke, Ont.

"Watching isn't Bobby's long suit. He'd far prefer the tang of the crisp November air on the partridge barrens. But a fellow can't indulge such expensive tastes these days because 'twould cost too much to go home.

" 'Don't talk to me about China,' he says, 'Those crazy firecrackers are the only things you ever hear resembling the sound of a gun, and as for birds, nothing but those miserable chickens running all over the place. Yes, it's a dog's life'."

OF YOUR CHARITY

please pray for the repose of the souls of

Rt. Rev. Monsignor Morris
Rev. Dr. M. J. Ryan
Sister M. Sophia Burke
Sister M. Clement Culhane

These, and all our deceased benefactors, share in the spiritual benefits enumerated on page 98.

R.I.P.

CONSECRATION OF BISHOP MISNER

(The following account of the consecration of Bishop Misner, C.M., D.D., as Vicar-Apostolic of Yu Kiang, Kiangsi Province, was written at Yu Kiang by Father Beal, and sent to us from the Shanghai General Hospital, where Father Beal was a patient. The write-up came too late for publication in our June issue.)

OUR Chuchow Mission was represented at the Consecration of Bishop Misner by Fathers Morrison, McGillivray and Beal. The first lap of the journey to Yu Kiang (from Lishui to Kinhwa) was covered in record time, just four hours. At Kinhwa we were cordially received by Monsignor Fraser who showed us about town after "tiffin" (lunch), and pointed out the places of interest and the possibilities of future expansion in this striving city. From Kinhwa we entrained for Yu Shan (Jade Mountain), some four hundred li distant. The best accommodations we could secure were third class day coaches, but even these were to be preferred to the busses we later used going from Yu Shan to Hokow. At noon a steward attired in a white gown came along to take our orders for lunch, and in short time we satisfied our appetites with plates of steaming rice and meat boullion.

As one enters the Province of Kiangsi, Yu Shan is the first mission encountered that has a resident priest. This station is being ably cared for by Fathers Poizart and Lloyd. Besides the school they conduct a dispensary where hundreds of patients are daily cared for, and much fruit is being reaped from their efforts to bring solace to the many sufferers who call on them for "foreign" medicine.

In a downpour of rain we left the following morning for Hokow, a distance of about 200 li. The roads throughout this section of the Province are fairly good, but the noted Kiangsi red clay causes the bus drivers no little worry, especially on a rainy day. We arrived at 11.30, and were greeted by Fathers Sageder and Ma. The former has been there for thirty-five years, and five years ago he was outside the Vicariate for the first time. He has suffered much from the Reds who on occasions have occupied his residence and caused thousands of dollars' worth of damage to his compound. It was most interesting to hear him recall the hectic days of the Red invasion, and tell of the occasion when he lay concealed in a house while all around him the blood-thirsty hounds of Lenin were searching meticulously for the foreign priests. One terribly hot day he had to hide under the roof of a house, and he doesn't know yet how he escaped prostration from the heat.

We left Father Sageder's the next morning en route to Yu Kiang. This time we travelled in much better busses. For speed and comfort they left nothing to be desired; they were really first class. The rain had not abated in the least, giving us actual experience of the inherent sticky quality of the Kiangsi red clay. Before reaching the ferry boat, Father Morrison was much embarrassed when he slipped over an embankment. He sustained a sprained wrist, but Father Dunker and the doctor soon had it strapped and painted with iodine. Father Smith was patrolling the river bank on the lookout for arrivals to direct them to the east gate where chairs were in readiness to take them to the mission.

Although the day was cold and rainy it did not impair the hearty welcome given us by Bishop Misner, Father Lewis and the other Fathers who had gathered there to make this the most outstanding event in the history of the Vicariate. We found the new Bishop to be a most lovable character, possessing those qualities and virtues which will make him an admirable Spiritual Ruler in his vast vineyard of Kiangsi.

In our talks with him, what I appreciated and noticed was his frankness in speaking of the difficulties which faced him in his new position. The trials and hardships he has already endured for love of souls will not likely be lessened, but rather increased. Some of the difficulties we meet with in our own Chuchow Prefecture seem trifling when compared with those which have been the lot of Bishop Misner. His Vicariate has suffered untold losses materially at the hands of the Reds. Many of the mission compounds in his district have been occupied by both Reds and Government troops.

Many of the exploits of the late lamented Bishop Sheehan (whose successor Bishop Misner is) were recalled in our conversations. On one occasion, in a single week, Bishop Sheehan was forced to spend eight hundred dollars on telegrams, etc., to effect the evacuation of some of his mission properties. The stories I have heard of the trials experienced in this section of the Chinese Missions have given me a new appreciation of what some missionaries are called on to endure in their labours for souls. They have been veritable heroes, martyrs in spirit if not in deed. Nobly have they borne up under their hardships for years, while in some cases death has been the reward of their valour.

H. E. BISHOP PAUL MISNER, C.M., Vicar Apostolic of Yukiang.

By Sunday evening ten different nationalities were represented in the Residence, coming from various Missions and Vicariates. The most distant point represented was Peiping, by His Excellency Bishop Montaigne, C.M., a very jovial and likeable man, an honor to the Hierarchy of China. Bishop O'Shea was the consecrating Prelate, assisted by their Excellencies Dummond and Defebvre as Co-consecrators. Assisting in the sanctuary were Bishops Montaigne, Espelage, O.F.M., of Wuchang, and Msgr. Cleary, Prefect-Apostolic of the Irish Missions. Father Piggott, V.G., represented Bishop Galvin of Hangyang Vicariate.

At 8.30 Monday morning, Feast of the Annunciation, the grand procession moved slowly up the aisle

(Continued on page 110)

The Sacrament of Confirmation was solemnly administered by Very Rev. Ramon Serra at Lishui at Easter time. The two top pictures show the groups then confirmed. The bottom picture shows the Grey Sisters of the Immaculate Conception with their school girls. Father Serra, who snapped these pictures, happily reports that only six of these pupils in the Lishui Girls' School are yet unbaptized. The Sisters, in addition to caring for these girls, also conduct a dispensary, and their fame as nurses and teachers has attracted many pagans to the study of Catholic doctrine. Our readers are requested to pray that the work of our missionaries in Chuchow Prefecture may continue to bear abundant fruit.

CATHOLICS IN CHINA

The Catholic population of China at the end of June, 1934, was 2,702,468, according to statistics just published in the 1935 Year-book of the Bureau Sinologique, Zikawei, Shanghai.

The total number of conversions for the year was 82,145. As compared with 69,547 for the previous year, this represents an increase of 18 per cent.

The net growth, taking the various losses into account, was 78,908, the largest on record for more than ten years and thirty per cent. greater than the net augmentation of the preceding year, which was 60,818.

The comparative numbers of personnel for the last two years is as follows:

	1933	1934
Bishops	88	89
Priests (Chinese) ..	1,595	1,647
Priests (Foreign) ..	2,303	2,367
Brothers (Chinese).	469	607
Brothers (Foreign).	462	541
Sisters (Chinese) ..	3,319	3,419
Sisters (Foreign) ..	1,693	1,831

—Lumen.

THE ROMAN MISSAL IN CHINESE

A complete translation of the Roman Missal in Chinese has been published by the Nazareth Press, Hongkong. The work is in one handy volume of nearly 1,300 pages, and is conveniently divided into five sections.

It may come as a surprise to learn that this is by no means the first translation of the Roman Missal into Chinese. As long ago as 1670 a complete version, done in the classic style by Fr. Louis Buglio, S.J., was printed in Peking. So far as is known, only three specimens of this ancient text, remarkable for its clarity as well as conciseness, are still extant.

Fr. Buglio, who has been styled "a perfect Chinese scholar", also published Chinese versions of other liturgical works, notably, of the Roman Ritual (1675) and a large part of the Roman breviary (1647).—Lumen.

Father Hugh Sharkey has published a Volume of Poems, "The Anvil of the Cross", copies of which may be secured from the author. The price is one dollar, and the proceeds from the sale of his poems go to help maintain his Chinese Mission in Vancouver. Address your order to Rev. H. Sharkey, 572 East Georgia Street, Vancouver, B.C.

PRISONER FOR A YEAR

(Continued from page 105)

victory or defeat would not alter the decision in regard to him. Now and then he was able to communicate with his religious superiors, but these messages could be of only a very general character, for they would be seen by his captors.

Necromancy?

The strangest thing that Fr. Bravo had to tell of his captivity was of the kind of spiritualistic séances that were held. When an invocation had been made he heard voices speak that he knew did not belong to any of those present. Stranger still, while the influence remained he heard officers speak fluent Spanish, though he knew them to be ignorant of that language. They even spoke in it to him on some of those occasions telling him of Spaniards whom he knew, and imitating to perfection their particular provincial accents. Must it be attributed to diabolical influence? Fr. Bravo does not claim to give any explanation. Strangest of all was the fact that he was told that it was due to a message given in one of these seances that he was set free. They told him that it was through this means that they communicated with Mao Chu Tung, and that a message was given that he was to be released. It was replied that he did not believe in Communism, but was opposed to it, and that all who opposed it should be killed. But the message insisted that he should not be killed but released. Then it was objected that he did not believe in the truth of their spiritualistic communications and was opposed to them, but still it was insisted that he should be released. Again Fr. Bravo makes no comment on what he was told, but simply states what was said to him.

He was brought before the commanding officer and told that he would be set free. The officer asked him to let people know that he had not been ill-used, but had been treated as well as possible in the conditions of a campaign. He was given a signed paper which would assure him a passage through the lines. He was told where he was to go, and was given recommendations about the best route to take. The directions were excellent, and a five days' journey on foot brought him to safety and freedom in Sinfeng, where he arrived footsore and delapidated on Feb. 27th. He had been captured on Jan. 25th the previous year.

Fr. Bravo's period of captivity has left him somewhat enfeebled in health—though he makes light of it—and completely unimpaired in spirit. His attitude towards his former captors is one of pity rather than of blame. His love of China and its people is as warm as it was before, and his thoughts are with his mission. But everything that he tells of his experiences among the Communists is a further proof of the ghastly character of the menace to civilization that passes under the name of Communism, and of the urgent necessity of eradicating it if peace and prosperity are to flourish in China.

T. F. RYAN, S.J.,
in the "Rock", Hong-Kong.

CONSECRATION OF BISHOP

(Continued from page 108)

of the Cathedral. Father Smith's Cadets formed a Guard of Honor at the various entrances to the Cathedral and near the Sanctuary, and one could see that they were proud of their distinction. I was privileged to be Chaplain to the second Co-consecrating Bishop, Bishop Defebvre of Ningpo. The ceremony was carried out in the solemn manner with which the Church marks such splendid events. It was good just to be even present.

The high esteem in which Bishop Misner is held was evidenced by the large number of the Clergy present for the consecration. I believe it was the greatest gathering of ecclesiastics yet to assemble for a like function in China. Numerous telegrams and gifts marked the occasion for the new Bishop.

As I write this at Yu Kiang we are delayed on the return journey by flood waters. We have two rivers to cross before we reach back to Yu Shan. Then we hope to entrain for Shanghai. On the return journey we shall have the company of Father Moulis, the Superior of the Lazarist Procure in Shanghai, where our priests have always been given the finest hospitality.

Taken all in all, the trip up here has been beneficial. It has been rich with experiences, and has given our Canadian Fathers a fuller insight into the work being done by their co-labourers in the great work of propagating our Holy Faith. I feel sure that readers of "China" will not neglect to offer a little prayer for Bishop Misner, for his zealous priests, and for all the missionaries in China and elsewhere who are doing so much to make God's Kingdom Come.

EIGHT MILLION CHINESE IN FOREIGN LANDS

The committee on Chinese oversea affairs has compiled statistics which show that almost eight million Chinese live abroad.

The Malay Archipelago and the countries of south-eastern Asia have the largest numbers: 2,500,000 in Siam, 381,417 in French Indo-China, 193,598 in Burma, and 15,000 in India. The Chinese population of the Malay States is 1,709,392; in British Borneo it is 75,000 and in the Netherland Indies 1,232,650.

In Hong Kong there are 825,635 Chinese, in Macao 119,875, and in Timor 3,500.

The Philippines have a Chinese population of 110,500; Hawaii has 27,179; Australia, 15,500; New Zealand, 2,854, and South Africa, 4,500.

Chinese in the United States are estimated at 74,950, in Canada 45,100, and in Mexico 25,000. In the countries of Central America there are 9,400 Chinese. Peru has 5,704, Chile 2,700, Brazil 820, Argentina 600, and Venezuela 2,826.

There are 100,000 Chinese in the Japanese Empire, 1,074 in Japan proper, 46,691 in Formosa, and 41,303 in Korea. Soviet Russia has 251,500, and Turkey 7,000.

A relatively small number of Chinese live in Europe. France, which has the largest group, has only 17,000. Great Britain and Holland follow with 8,000 each. Germany has 1,800, Switzerland 149, Portugal 1,200, Denmark 900, Belgium 550, Italy 274, and Poland 139. There are about 100 Chinese in each of the Baltic countries, while in each of the Scandinavian nations there are less than ten Chinese.

There can be no real gratitude for the great benefit of Redemption, if it is not accompanied by an ardent desire to come to the help of those who have not, like we have, the advantage of knowing their Saviour and the indispensable means of salvation brought by Him to this earth. He does not grasp the meaning of Redemption who has no missionary spirit.

A reader in Alton, Ont., wishes publicly to express her gratitude to Saint Rita for a favor received through her intercession.

NONSENSE

"Has your vicar been in this parish long?"
"Yes, sir, he's been the incumbrance here for nearly forty years."

Judge—"How could you swindle people who trusted in you?"
Prisoner—"But, judge, people who don't trust you cannot be swindled."

Mother: "I don't think the man upstairs likes Johnnie to play on his drum."
Father: "Why?"
Mother: "Well, this afternoon he gave Johnnie a knife and asked him if he knew what was inside the drum!"

Man—"How far have you and your wife got with your plan to buy a new car?"
Neighbor—"We've got to the point where we don't speak."

"What are you doing here?" said the woman to the tramp who had got over the wall just in time to escape the bull-dog.
"Madam," he said with dignity, "I did intend to request something to eat; but all I ask now is that, in the interest of humanity, you'll feed that dog."

Cop—"Why didn't you stop when I yelled back there?"
Driver (great presence of mind)—"I thought you said, "Hello, Senator'."
Cop—"Well, you see, Senator, I was going to warn you about going too fast in the next town."

"Well, Mose, how is your better half this morning?"
"She's better, thankee, sah; but, boss, you shore is careless wif your fractions."

Before beginning his sermon one Sunday morning, a minister said that he was sorry to have to complain about the offertories. He felt bound, however, to make a protest and an appeal.
"In last Sunday's collections," he said, "there were no fewer than six buttons. I hope such a thing will not occur again."
Then, turning to the Bible, he announced the text: "Rend your hearts, and not your garments."

Boss: "Well, good-day. Please send one of the other applicants in."
Phyllis: "They haven't waited. They knew they had no chance if you turned me down."

Judge—"Mose, is your wife depending upon you?"
Mose—"She sho is, jedge. If I didn't go out and get de washin' she'd starve plum to death."

Magistrate: "Can't you and your husband live happily together without fighting?"
Mrs. Maloney: "No, your honor; not happily."

A stout elderly lady sat down on a park bench that had been newly painted. A keeper, hastily approaching, said: "You can't sit there, madam, because—"
"Here I sit, and here I stick!" was the defiant answer.

Maurice—"Dad, today teacher said to me: 'Your parents should be proud of having a son like you'."
Dad—"Did she really say that?"
Maurice—"Yes; and then she told me to translate it into French."

Wife: "It's just a little surprise present. A jig-saw puzzle—a hundred pieces."
Husband: "Good! I'm very fond of doing those."
Wife: "Well, it's the vase off the drawing-room mantlepiece. Here's the paste."

She: "I can't bear to think of my thirtieth birthday."
He: "Why, dear, what happened then?"

"Did your wife's father follow you when you eloped?"
"I should say so; he's living with us yet."

Father (who has helped his son with his home work)—"What did the teacher say when you showed her the work?"
Johnny—"She said I was getting more stupid every day."

A parson wrote to the bishop asking him to come and hold a "quiet day". The bishop declined, saying: "Your parish does not need a quiet day; it needs an earthquake."

HOW DO YOU DO?

Some subscribers pay their dues
when due,
Some pay them when past due,
Some never do,
How do you do?

Mrs. Gray—"You're looking very happy this morning. Have you had good news?"
Mrs. Jay—"Wonderful! My husband has broken down and we're going to the seaside for a holiday."

"I haven't much time for meals," said the bus driver, "so I generally have a bite at the wheel."
"That's a bit tough, I should think," said his listener.

Departing Guest—"You've got a pretty place here, Frank, but it looks a bit bare yet."
Host—"Oh, it's because the trees are rather young. I hope they'll have grown to a good size before you'll come again."

A commercial traveller had taken a large order up in Aberdeen, and endeavored to press upon the canny Scot, who had given the order, a box of cigars.
"Naw," he replied, "don't try to bribe a man. I cudna tak' them—and I'm a member o' the kirk."
"Well, then, said the traveller, "suppose I sell you the cigars for—say, sixpence?'
"In that case," replied the Scot, "not liking tae refuse an offer weel meant, I think I'll tak' twa boxes."

"You mean to say you were not at your own daughter's wedding? Where were you?"
"I was looking for a job for the bridegroom."

Little Boy: "Do you keep anything to relieve pain?"
Chemist: "Where is the pain?"
Little Boy: "It hasn't come yet, but father is just reading my school report.

Little Mae: "Mother, I know why little people laugh up their sleeves."
Mother: "Why, dear?"
Little Mae: "Because that's where their funnybone is."

"So he said I was a polished gentleman, did he?"
"Well, yes. It meant the same thing."
"Ah! What was the exact word?"
"He said you were a slippery fellow."

Helen: "Did you ever think seriously of marrying?"
Tony: "Of course I did. So I didn't!"

Our Work Must Go On!

Our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, Must be Supported.

Our Mission in China Must be Developed.

SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY

has ordained 22 Priests since its opening less than 11 years ago. Nearly 50 students are now preparing for ordination at the Seminary. Altogether, 77 persons (priests and students), depend on the readers of "CHINA" for their support and for the upkeep of the Seminary, as well as for the development of the mission of Chuchow in China confided to the Seminary for evangelization. A large amount of money is required for these purposes. The only revenue received is what comes through the mail day by day. Our needs are many, and so once again we ask YOU, dear reader, to send us a little help if you can possibly afford it. Won't you put a cheque or a money order in the mail for us to-day, please?

Give your gift for the love of God, and you will give a gift that is worth while, no matter how small it is.

ALL TOGETHER, NOW! LET'S HELP THE MISSIONS!

St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario

Very Rev. John E. McRae, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS. ONT. SEPTEMBER 1935

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.

2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.

3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.

4. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide 2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.

2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.

3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.

4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.

5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 25,400

Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XVI. SEPTEMBER, 1935 No. 8

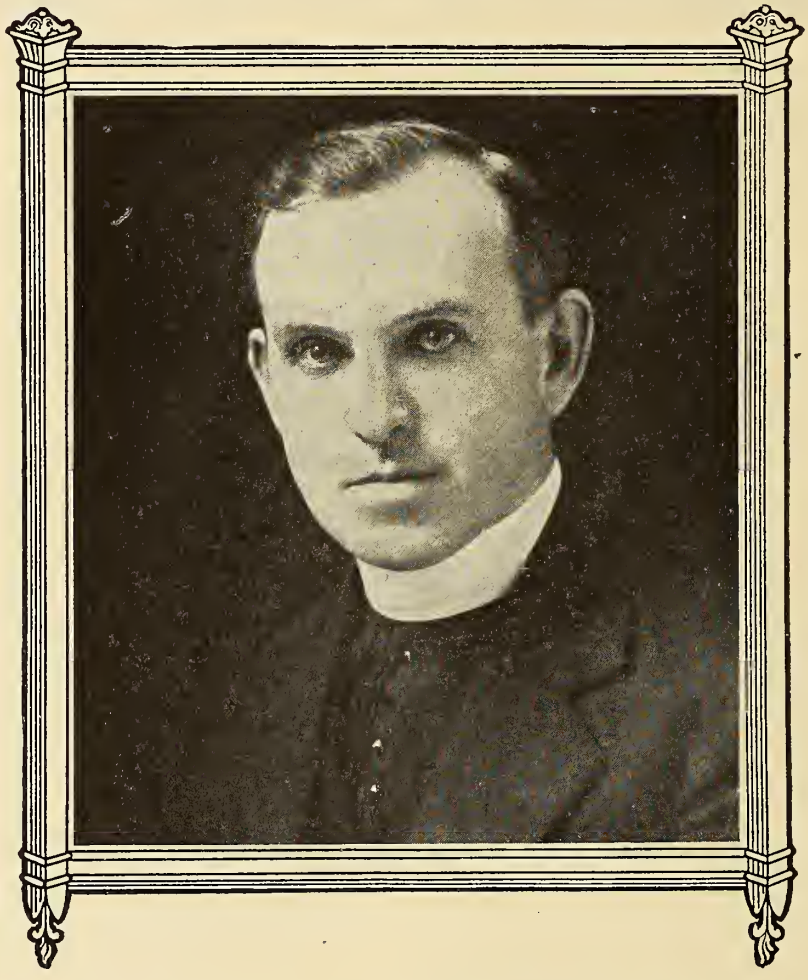
A MISSIONARY PASSES

FOR sixteen years our monthly organ, "China", has gone widespread every month bearing to our friends the news of the doings of our missionaries in China and at home. For the first time, we have the saddening task this month to chronicle for our readers a report on the death of one of our missionaries on active service in Chuchow.

ON the morning of August 6th came a cable from Very Rev. R. Serra, Pro-Vicar of Chuchow Prefecture, bringing the sad intimation that death had called one of our most zealous and most beloved priests, Father James D. McGillivray. We had no previous news of Father McGillivray's illness to help lighten the shock which his sudden passing occasioned. It is difficult even yet to realize that our mission family has been bereaved—that the first link has been broken in the chain of subjects which have been gathered together in a common purpose through the seventeen years since our Mission Institute was first established.

THE details we have so far received from Chuchow record that Father McGillivray died from malignant malaria after an illness of only four days. As the Last Sacraments were administered to him, ten of his brother-missionaries were at his bedside, and the dying priest retained consciousness right to the end. His death has left a void in our mission staff that it will be very hard to fill. A saintly, jovial priest, imbued with the spirit of sacrifice for the cause of Christ in China, he sealed that life of sacrifice by his death among the people for whose salvation he had so gladly and generously spent himself.

FATHER JAMES DUNCAN McGILLIVRAY, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. F. McGillivray, was born at Low Point, N.S., on February 6th, 1897. His early education was received at St. Ann's School, Glace Bay, N.S., where his family now reside. For a period of twelve years (1911-1923) he was employed in the office of the Dominion Coal Company, N.S. An insight into the character of the deceased is gained from the fact that these years of employment were generously undertaken at the sacrifice of his own aspirations in order to assist his brothers secure a university education.



WINNER of a K. of C. Scholarship, James McGillivray entered St. F. X. University, Antigonish, in 1923, and graduated, after a most brilliant course, with a B.A. Degree in 1928. His years at the university marked him as a leader of men. In all departments—Literary, Dramatics, Athletics—he held executive positions, and his managerial ability brought fame to the sporting activities of the university.

IN September, 1928, Father McGillivray became a student at China Mission Seminary, and his years at the Seminary endeared him to every member of our Institute. The two great characteristics that we are told are the desiderata for every missionary—holiness, and a sense of humor—Father Jim possessed in a marked degree. To them he joined a practical and wise discernment on all matters. He was ordained in his own parish at Glace Bay on December 20th, 1931, and went to China, in company with Rev. Wm. McNabb, in October, 1932. Shortly after his arrival in Chuchow he was entrusted by his superiors with the difficult and exacting duties of Mission Procurator, which duties he zealously performed up to the day of his tragic death. Throughout the Maritime Provinces, where the deceased was widely known and extremely popular, there is profound regret over the demise of Father Jim.

TO his parents, his brothers, Basil, Claude and Michael, and to all his relatives, "China" extends sincerest sympathy. Their son and brother has given his life for the Missions. He gave his all—for what more can a man give besides his life—and he gave it in unheroic obscurity, in uncomplaining resignation. May the thought of his heroism, coupled wth the realization of his present happiness, lighten the sorrow that is theirs—and ours.

MAY Father McGillivray's soul rest in peace. May his death be fruitful unto the salvation of the souls for whom he sacrificed his life. We, his missionary associates, earnestly hope and confidently expect that Father Jim will ever be with us and our work; that through God's grace and through his intercession, we may carry on the noble cause for which he sacrificed himself. Our hearts are sad in losing so delightful a companion, so zealous an apostle and so efficient a missionary. His life to us was a source of admiration and a spur to imitation. His death, sad though it be, is to us now an inspiration. God grant that our hearts may be filled with that spirit of cheerful sacrifice which made Father McGillivray face the hardships of life in China so bravely and so willingly. May the greatest of all missionaries, the Divine Saviour Himself, bless our Chuchow Mission now consecrated with the buried remains of our first priest to give his life for the great cause to which we all are dedicated.

In Memoriam

Rev. James Duncan McGillivray

Born, February 6th, 1897
Ordained Priest, December 20th, 1931
Went to China, October, 1932
Died at Lishui, China, August 5th, 1935

The First Member of St. Francis Xavier China Mission Institute to be Called to his Eternal Reward

May his soul rest in peace

NA HO

By
Rev. Hugh M. McGettigan

YOU may, or may not, have heard of the recent fire here at Lishui. It rendered homeless many people, and very nearly turned the Mission property into a vacant lot. The houses concerned in the conflagration touched on our property; many of them, indeed, had as their fourth wall, the wall surrounding the Mission compound.

The fire broke out around midnight, and it was well on towards morning before it had ceased to be a menace. The city fire brigade, made up mostly of volunteers, failed to respond to the first calls sent out. The rumour that the Reds were close by, was no doubt responsible for their seeming disinterestedness. On being assured, however, that the calls were bona fide, they belatedly responded and worked like Trojans to keep the fire from spreading. This was about all they could do, as by this time the houses already affected were too well advanced towards the dying ember stage of illumined dissolution.

Those within the compound were as hard pressed as the bucket brigade outside. To save the buildings, priests and boys were kept busy. Two buildings, the one, the sacristans' sleeping quarters, the other, the kitchen, ignited, but the flames never really had a chance.

The reason for the foregoing preamble is, not so much to advertise the closeness of the call we had; nor to give friends at home a chance to sit back and laugh at the grotesque figures we must have cut wielding water-buckets at that hour of the morning. It is rather to tell a little story which was born in the ashes of the homes destroyed. It may not be considered as exactly thrilling; many, indeed, may consider it as an anti-climax to the introduction; but to the one chiefly concerned, it was by no means trifling. To us witnesses of the deed, it was well-nigh heroic, appealing to Heaven for recognition.

This story has as its basis the giving of a solitary dollar towards the relief of those made homeless by the fire. The gift, if we judge by our own standards, was not great; but, judged by the lowly material standard of the giver, it was munificent, and raised him in our estimation at least, from the status of the ordinary handy-man to that of the true Christian practising heroism in his charity. The deed, taking all things into consideration, gave insight into the faith of one lately recovered from paganism, and with it the consolation of knowing that the work here is not in vain. It also gave palpable evidence that surely, if slowly, Christianity is gradually seeping through the walls of Chinese conservatism and culture.

The hero of the story, if you wish to class him as such, is Na Ho, the general fac-totum around here. He is the "hewer of wood and drawer of water", and does any other job that presents itself. He has been here in this capacity for a year or more. Formerly, he was more or less a beast of burden. This indelicate description of a human being may not be exactly nice, but when one takes into consideration the fact that the unit of power in China is generally "man" rather than "horse", it is the only description that seems apt. Up to the time he came to us permanently, his existence was a most precarious one. A large family coupled with the arduousness of his work and the smallness of his pay kept him continually striving to find sufficient to eat. Oft-times he and his family went hungry. Not every meal was a sure thing; and often a whole day, sometimes longer, elapsed without food. But he was industrious, and sometimes instead of waiting his turn where the carriers congregate, he came here hoping that a little work could be found to augment his meagre wages. If we consider his present condition, we can say that it was fortunate for him that his Union brothers found him out. Trouble ensued, and in a much bruised and battered condition he was summarily ejected from the Union.

Na Ho's work with us nets him a great deal more than he formerly received, yet, taking all in all, and considering the relative immensity of his family obligations, it is small. It is true that now he doesn't go hungry, but he still lives in a hovel, which by the way, is at present in grave danger of collapsing, due to the heavy rains of the past few days. He and his family are still in almost rags. Yet with all this deficiency of worldly goods and comfort, he did that which many better situated would never have considered doing.

The day after the fire, he came forward with his dollar to help those who were in need. As I said before, this contribution may be considered small according to our monetary values, but here in China it was undeniably great. Na Ho gave until the giving hurt. By his act he denied himself and his family, not some luxury, but something that was a real necessity.

That's the whole story, consider it an anti-climax if you will; but if you knew the man and a wee bit about China, you would, perhaps, be led to parallel the case of Na Ho with that of the widow and her mite; and say that there was joy in Heaven when this poor Chinese parted with his dollar in the name of "nobility's true badge".

OUR COVER

The snapshot, from which our cover enlargement was made, came from Father McNabb. It shows a pagan nun praying in a temple outside Lishui. She is holding a club with which she pounds the peculiar-sounding egg-shaped drum on the table in front of her. This drum is beaten repeatedly, sometimes for an hour, while prayers are being chanted. Note the kneeler in front of the table. On the table are a pair of candlesticks, and between them a fancy bowl containing a lighted joss-stick (incense). This particular nun is from Wenchow; she is well advanced in years, and has been attached to this temple for a long period. Father McNabb's letter adds: "She is quite interested in us priests and our Religion, and she is more talkative than these nuns usually are. I was quite attentive to all she had to say. She has a still older companion — more shrivelled even than she—and the two eat their simple fare together. Talk about your penance —but, of course, all the poor in China eat the same meagre fare, and I suppose they do not regard it as penance."

JOTTINGS

By
REV. GERALD DOYLE

BANDITS swarmed over the Chekiang border recently into the Sungyang district of the Prefecture of Chuchow, and soon rumours, stories false and true, put the district into a panic.

At first only 400, they were joined by other bands, so that soon a well-armed and well-trained force of 2,000 terrorized the district.

Near Suichang about 21 of the civil guard were killed, while in another engagement the bandits surrounded the soldiers, who were thus forced to fight their way out, killing 20 bandits, while two soldiers lost their lives. Usually the soldiers and bandits avoid an engagement, and for this the soldiers can hardly be blamed, as they are poorly paid and poorly fed, at least in this district.

* * *

It was at Chiu-Sz-Ka, near Sungyang, that terror reigned. There we have a mission chapel and catechist, but no resident priest. On arrival there the bandits asked if there was a priest in the town and, on learning that there was none, they arrested three rich men. Those three men are now dead, as well as several others. The catechist reports that about a dozen were killed near the mission compound.

Father Wong, who stayed in Sungyang even longer than was wise, eventually arrived in Lishui, and stated that the bandits were moving about very quickly. "They are not only bandits," he stated, "but they are also Reds and wear a red badge on their caps. They practice communism of a sort, giving work to some poor people and paying good wages, but they rob and kill those who have money."

These bandits have been in the Prefecture for several weeks now, and show no signs of leaving. Several days ago they were only eight miles from Lishui, but they must have changed their minds about an attack. Stories, some true and some false, of their doings reach us from time to time, but there is nothing we can do about it, so we do not worry, at least not very much.

* * *

Father Stringer was a victim of the precautions taken against the bandits here at Lishui and, as a result, passed the night in a sampan instead of here at the mission. Arriving from Lungchuan after dark he found the gates of the city shut and endeavored to have one of the small gates opened, but they would not even listen to him. He was wise enough not to go to the big gate, as there was a chance that they would shoot, mistaking him for a bandit. In doubt, the soldiers at the gate would shoot, and they are very often in doubt, especially during the night, when they are fearful of an attack by the bandits.

* * *

BY way of contrast, we have our "little bandits", who are much closer to us. While they do not carry guns or extort money, nevertheless they even more surely and expertly extort their ounce of blood. There are two kinds that make their presence felt, and the dictionary defines the first as: "An insect that leaps with great agility, and whose bite causes itch," but for convenience here we refer to them as "jumpers" or "hoppers". These little creatures have no respect for time, place or person, so if one suddenly makes a dive for his left ankle it causes no surprise and the irritation on his face passes unnoticed, although as the lips move a lip reader might read: "Missed another one!"

* * *

Reaching a slightly higher plane, at least in one respect, we meet our old friend the mosquito. If the whole concern were the irritation caused by the bite, the mosquito would cause little worry here, but because research has proved that a genus of mosquito, the Anopheles, carries the malaria germ, ordinary precautions are taken against all mosquitoes, so a peep into a missionary's room any time from early in April until the end of November will show the bed canopied and curtained with a cheap cotton net.

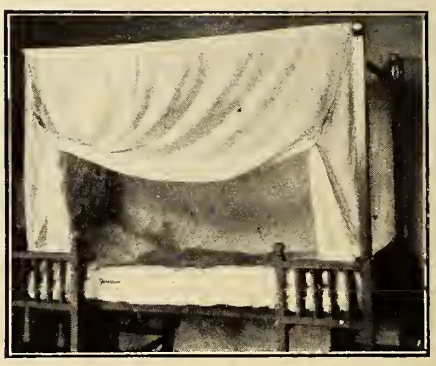
While the net keeps the insects out it may also keep a few inside, so experience strongly advises a careful search after the netting is tucked in. The nightly "hunt" with a flashlight may last from two to twenty minutes. But the wise missionary never omits it, nor does he ever forget to bring his net along when he goes on a mission trip; even though his bed may be only a couple of rough planks in a poor Chinese home, he carefully ties his netting over it. The anti-climax is to awaken in the morning and find half a dozen surfeited mosquitoes inside the net.

* * *

Every year the dread malaria saps the strength of some of our priests in spite of all the precautions taken. The treatment our missionaries receive against malaria is a daily dose of quinine of forty-five grains and a liquid diet for three days, and then a daily dose of ten grains of quinine for eight weeks. It requires great patience and will power to complete the treatment. Thank God I have so far been spared from an attack.

* * *

RAIN! Monotonous hours, days of steady downpour.



Perhaps it is a blessing in order to dampen the spirits of the bandits in the vicinity and send them in another direction, but there is certainly danger of a serious flood if the river continues to rise. It is now the highest it has been since our priests first came here ten years ago, and it looks treacherous as the muddy waters go swirling by. Vegetation is carried along, and even a cow was seen in the swiftly moving water.

Below the city, on the road to Tsingtien, the first bridge is covered and there is a square mile of land inundated.

The water has risen and entered at two of the gates, and a sampan is now floating in one of the streets.

Four young girls at Lishui who were made very happy recently when their long period of catechetical instruction was crowned by the reception of Baptism.

"A peep into a missionary's room will show the bed canopied and curtained with a cheap cotton net".

Last night there was water in the convent garden and the Sisters brought a supply of potatoes and fire-wood up to the first floor. A canal in the city overflowed and some streets were covered with water to a height of five and a half feet.

Transportation is stopped, the busses are idle at the station and the boatmen hug the shore with ropes keeping their boats close to the city wall, ever ready to take in slack or let out rope as the river rises or falls.

The bus company reports $80,000 damage to the roads, including a large concrete bridge, which was swept away by the flood.

* * *

There is no water in the Mission as yet, but if the rain keeps up it will be necessary for us to abandon the ground floor.

* * *

It rains, but spiritual sunshine is not lacking as Father Aaron Gignac quietly preaches the annual retreat to the Catechists, and Father Morrison announces the number baptized during the year and states that there was a big increase in the number of Communions received.

Spiritual progress, the only progress worth while, is being made in this Canadian Mission in China.

(Editor's note: Word has since been received from Lishui that the heavy downpour stopped, just in time, and the water receded from the flooded streets, leaving them dirtier than ever. Had the rain continued for only a few hours more serious damage might have resulted.)

TSINGTIEN is going modern—as witness the residence (one of several) erected in that city last year. A letter from Father William McNabb (stationed there) says that "since the advent of the motor-bus the local mayor has ordered the widening of the city streets. This is being done now in most large centres. I noticed this particularly during my last visit to Wenchow. Every new building must be set back from the old roadway—far enough to leave room for an ordinary roadway and two sidewalks. The building of new roads has increased the number of bicycles immensely. This form of locomotion is becoming more common here every day. The old steps of our mission residence protruded outside our mission compound wall. The new edict of the mayor necessitated the removal of the steps inside the wall. We hired two or three men to do the work. It included the use of a rope to lift and carry the stones. I was amused to see how often the stones slipped out of the rope. It was but another example of the unlimited patience of the Chinese workman. Not a word of vexation escaped them over the repeated mishaps, and I remarked this to Father Amyot, who happened to be here at the time. He told me that he, too, had noticed that the Chinese rarely curse or swear when something goes wrong with anything inanimate, but let a person make a mistake and then watch out for words good and hot. A much saner attitude towards things inanimate, I think, than shown by the 'Westerner' who blackens and poisons the air with his exclamations when something goes wrong with the car or the fountain pen runs dry."

FOR THE EDUCATION OF PRIESTS

A BURSE is an invested fund of five thousand dollars from which the interest is available for the support of a student for the Holy Priesthood. It provides for the education of priests in perpetuity. Some years ago, Rev. Donald MacPherson, Parish Priest of Port Hood, N.S., began to build up a Burse Fund in aid of our Seminary. This zealous priest has continued to solicit contributions for us, and we most gratefully acknowledge receipt of the following gifts recently made to the "MacPherson Burse".

Sister St. Ita, $10; Mrs. MacDonald, $1; Mrs. Angus McPhee, $1; Mrs. Donald Beaton, $2; Donald Beaton, $1; Mrs. Angus A. MacDonald, $1; Mrs. Angus MacEachern, $1; John Beaton, $6; Mrs. Edward McNeil, $2; Mrs. A. D. H. MacKinnon, $2; Donald Chisholm, $2; John A. McNeil, $2; Alex. M. MacDonald, $1; Mrs. Donald MacEachern, $5; Miss Josephine Gillies, $2; Mrs. John MacKinnon, $1; Mrs. Chris. MacInnis, $10; John A. MacIsaac, $1; Mrs. MacMaster, $10; Mrs. Dan. C. MacDonald, $1; Mrs. Gillies, $1; Sister St. Eliza, $1; Mrs. John Beaton, $5; Glencoe School, River Centre, $1.41; Finlay Beaton, $2; Pete Gillies, $1; Archie Campbell, $2; Hugh Gillies, $5; Finlay Beaton, $2; Genevieve Gillies, $1; Mrs. John S. Campbell, $5; Mrs. Flora MacKillop, $1; Mrs. Dougall MacKinnon, $1; Miss Sarah A. Livingstone, $1; Mrs. John D. Burke, $1; Alex. Beaton, $2; Alex. M. MacDonald, $3; J. Albert MacDonell, $20; Mrs. D. Martin MacDonald, $1; Mrs. John Rankin, $1; John Beaton, $5; Miss Catherine MacDonald, $10; Archie Campbell, $4; Mrs. Angus MacDonald, $10; Dougald A. MacDonell, $2; Mrs. John MacDonell, $1.

We will gladly welcome further contributions to help complete the "MacPherson Burse". Send your offering to Father MacPherson, Port Hood, N.S., or to the Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.

OF YOUR CHARITY

please pray for the repose of the souls of

Sister M. St. Edmund Prinderville

Mr. Thomas Maurice

Mr. Maurice, who died in Ingersoll, Ont., on August 12th, is the father of Rev. John Maurice of this year's Ordination Class at China Mission Seminary.

All our deceased benefactors share in the spiritual benefits enumerated on page 114.

R.I.P.

A TRIUMPHANT CELEBRATION

The first great public demonstration of Catholic faith in Chuchow

By REV. CRAIG STRANG

IT has been written, and by no less an authority than Father Faber, that the feast of Corpus Christi is essentially a feast of triumph. Of triumph rather than even of joy. It is a day of power, of fearlessness, of public profession of Faith. And even though we cannot express our sentiments as beautifully and as impressively as Father Faber, still our feelings and our thoughts and our whole being are wrapped up and stirred to their greatest depths by this the greatest feast—by this the greatest triumph. We know what triumph it is—it is God's triumph as well as ours—it is His RATHER than ours.

But even to such a feast so triumphantly celebrated all the world over, I think our own celebrations here on the feast of Corpus Christi added an EXTRA note of triumph. It was that of a fresh conquest. You see, it was the first time we had our own outdoor procession of the Blessed Sacrament.

Our Christians triumphed; God, their God, had deigned to come to them, to even physically mix with them, to be part and cause of joyous festivities with them. Our priests triumphed. The greatest gift God had given them they have brought to others, and triumphantly they joined with the others and took part in the Chinese procession, even as they did formerly in the processions in their homeland. The Church triumphed. The Church, the kingdom of God on earth, has widened its domain and begins to flourish in a new dominion. God triumphed. It was for Him a new conquest. His boundless Love once more won for Him adoration and honor where before He was so little known or loved.

So our feast and our procession had a triumph all their own, and as I set to describe them now, using words that probably would suit any such function anywhere, I would like to keep the reader's attention drawn to the fact that most of the Christians in the procession were one time pagans and often took part in superstitious processions and idolatrous ceremonies; that never before in our district had God been surrounded with such external pomp and grandeur; that it was a wonderful pageant of Faith in this land of paganism, comparable to another "first Palm Sunday".

Corpus Christi is naturally a day of processions, for processions (sometimes we call them parades) are natural expressions of triumph. And how thrilling they can be—how thrilling they must be when the Eternal, Incomprehensible, Almighty Word is carried in them. And how very thrilling, then, was our own first procession.

Most noticeable about the feast this year was that it came in the midst of three weeks of the heaviest rain in these parts for many, many years. And the feast-day itself was the one day that was not wet, but fine and clear. We know that this was in direct answer to all our prayers and we like to think God set aside His day and encircled it with the rainbow of His desire for love and glory from men. Also it was the closing day of the school year. For nine months the boys and girls were hard at their books and at their prayers and at Holy Mass, and this day certainly was a most fitting conclusion to all their efforts of the year.

The deluge (for deluge it was) retarded all outside preparations until the morning of the feast, but inside many hands were busy. New and tasty bunting beautified the Church and altar; for the procession a canopy and many banners were made and white veils and floral crowns for the girls. The choir boys were dressed in soutanes and surplices; the rest of the school boys and the Christians were attired in their new summer clothes, which were, very fittingly, white. Flowers and candles and incense were all in readiness.

WHEN the feast dawned all the Christians went to early Mass and Holy Communion, and shortly afterwards returned for Sunday prayers, doctrine and sermon. Then followed solemn High Mass celebrated by Father Morrison, the pastor, and assisted by Fathers Kam and McGettigan as deacon and sub-deacon. At the Consecration, firecrackers were set off to announce God's coming, and at the end of the Mass the Blessed Sacrament was exposed at the High Altar.

All during the morning and until Benediction in the afternoon there was a constant stream of adorers, all the school children taking turns The setting was just like the ones we liked to think were taking place at home at the same time; the altar with its flowers and candles was the same as the thousands of other altars from which God was so anxious to give His blessings on that day; but the Church was not silent as at home—that was about the only difference, for the Christians chanted their prayers aloud in unison

Benediction with Father Serra as celebrant, and with the same deacon and sub-deacon as in the morning, was given at mid-afternoon from three altars, two of which had been erected in the grounds outside the Church. As the choir broke into the strains of "Pange Lingua" the procession, already formed, proceeded from the main altar to the first one outside, turning to the right, passing by the tennis court till it came to the boys' play ground. Preceded by cross and acolyte candles the school boys led the procession, after whom came the school girls and then the choir, singing Latin and Chinese hymns. Immediately in front of the canopy were the Sisters, priests and torch-bearers. The canopy-bearers were four of the leading catechists (for all the catechists and teachers, by happy co-incidence, were in

The page-spread of pictures opposite gives us a glimpse of the Corpus Christi celebrations at Lishui, the headquarters of our Mission in China. The large group was taken as Benediction was imparted from one of the two outdoor altars by Very Rev. R. Serra. Some of the priests are easily recognizable in the foreground; Father Venadam stands bowed at the right amongst his choristers. The centre inset shows Sister Angela of the Grey Nuns with some of her youthful processionists. The interior of the Church at Lishui is shown in right inset, and a close-up of the Main Altar during Exposition is shown in left inset. Beautiful banners and costumed boys and girls added dignity and attractiveness to this first public procession of the Blessed Sacrament in Chuchow Prefecture.

Lishui in preparation for their annual retreat; the Christians brought up the rear, altogether forming a beautiful and impressive sight.

At the Altar the stanzas "Tantum Ergo" and "Genitori" were sung and the blessing given as bells rang and firecrackers exploded. The procession then proceeded to the second altar, passing behind the church and in front of the priests' residence, where the same ceremony was performed. The singing, both during the Benedictions and in the Procession, was of a very high order, for Father Venadam had gone to great pains to make his choir's last appearance for the year culminate in a glorious triumph. The procession returned to the Church for the third and final Benediction. Afterwards the Christians had much to comment about the ceremonies, saying how pleased they were with the order and how thrilled they were with the solemnity, and it was not until late that they dispersed to their respective homes.

Some months ago there was a big procession through all the city streets, but instead of our Lord being carried in it, big and ferocious-looking Buddas were borne in large and heavy chairs. Instead of people honouring God they were clamoring to Budda to give them a big harvest; stops were made at the many city shrines, and the people, all arrayed in their best attire or in grotesque costumes, set off firecrackers as they danced before Budda, and kneeling down in the streets, they adored him.

O Lord, our God, as yet we cannot prepare so big a celebration for You, nor as yet can we stop these, Thy people, from their idolatory, but even as You commanded us, we try. We did our very best, dear Lord, last Corpus Christi, but it was so small in comparison to what You should get—to what Budda was given. But bless us, O Lord, in our efforts, and those working for us at home, and those that have not yet helped us, bless them, too, so that they may also have the honour, the privilege of helping. Lastly, Lord, bless Thy people here—Thy flock and our flock—they have to try so hard to be good Christians, and as a result of these blessings may our Corpus Christi procession each year grow bigger and bigger, and more and more triumphant for You, O Lord, for You.

Wedding Bells

WHEN it comes to getting "all dressed up" for the wedding and having a big time, Chinese are no different than their Western brethren. In the pictures above, the camera has brought to us a view of three happy couples married by our Missionaries in Chuchow district. At the left is Catherine Ying, a shy young girl of sixteen years, who became the wife of Joseph Liu at Sui Ping, in the Parish of Sungyang. Father Beal (who, by the way, is now in Canada on a health furlough) was invited to the home of the groom following the ceremony. Try as he would, he could not get the shy Mrs. Liu to have her picture taken. Finally, he did, but his best persuasions were in vain to have her move closer to her better half for the picture. The centre picture shows last year's teacher in the Girls' School, Lishui, who married a Christian husband residing in Lishui, the marriage being solemnized by Father Morrison. At the right we see the "happy ending" to the story which received such publicity some months ago in "China" and many secular papers. The bride is none other than Yu Shan, the young maiden, for the preservation of whose rights as a Christian, Father John MacDonald fought so valiantly in Tsingtien parish. Readers may remember the incident and how several appearances in civil court finally won for Yu Shan freedom from a betrothal contract to a pagan, the contract having been made in her childhood by her parents. Her husband is Kue-Ling, an exemplary Catholic, and for some years the Sacristan of the Church at Lishui. In sending us the snapshot, Father Serra explained that the nuptial dress and crown seldom belong to the wearer, but are rented at one dollar a day; the bride is expected to wear this wedding outfit at least three days. It is traditional with Chinese brides to weep and be sad (whether they really are or not) on their wedding day, owing to the impending separation from their parents, but Yu Shan shed no tears. Her relatives begrudgingly allowed her to be married with the ceremonies of the Church, and were quite displeased when she refused to follow the pagan custom of adoring her ancestors. Fr. Venadam officiated at the marriage.

THE APPEAL OF YOUNG CHINA

Among all the beautiful things in China there is nothing so beautiful as a child. This is no mere truism that may be repeated indiscriminately about any country, it is the verdict of all those strangers who have come, one after another, to live in China, who have grown to love the land and its people, who have become ardent admirers of all its beauties, but have never outgrown the wonder and fascination with which they first looked on the young children of China. There is something in those little faces that makes them quite unlike any other children. It is not merely the ivory clearness of the complexion, nor the velvety darkness of the eyes, nor the unrufiled calm of the features, nor the expectant trustfulness of the expression—it is something of all these, with much else added, solemnity, patience, and a touch of wistfulness that is a child's share of the mystery of the East. Even those who have never learned to love China make an exception when they speak of its children; those who love China love its children most of all.

Yet the thought of the children of China is a saddening one, for so many of them suffer. Child mortality in China is alarmingly high. In all countries infant death rate is proportionate to the lowness of the parents' income, and in China the incomes of many of the families are so low as to be incredible to those of Western nations. Where there is poverty children always suffer, and there is terrible poverty in China. With poverty come illness and disease, and of the children that survive child-birth in China many are already doomed and many others will never know the full blessings of health. Among the millions of those tiny Chinese children with their wondering eyes and inborn patience who can tell how much there is of suffering, the bitter fruit of disease and want!

"Even those who have never learned to love China make an exception when they speak of its children; those who love China love its children most of all." It is a big trial for a missionary when he finds adults unresponsive to his pleadings and his teachings, but it is the missionary's great consolation to be able to gather around him the children yet unspoiled by paganism's blithing contact. The hope for the church's future lies with the children who come under the care of the good priests and sisters in China. If you love children why not aid our missionaries in their care for the children of China?

Happily, the nation that has the capacity to endure so much is not willing to endure any longer the suffering of its children. Throughout the whole country there is no movement more strong than that which seeks to make childhood a happier thing, to remove pain and disease as far as is possible, and to relieve suffering whenever it comes to the young. This is a movement naturally dear to the Catholic Church, ever the lover of children, which has always kept the care of sick and abandoned in the forefront of its work in China. In addition to more than a thousand general hospitals and dispensaries, where a large proportion of those who receive medical attention are children, there are actually 392 Catholic institutions for poor and suffering children in China, where over 97,000 children are tended every year. Following on the usual practice of the Catholic Church to place work for the children of each nation as far as possible in the hands of those who belong to the nation, we find a great many Chinese institutes of female religious with a total membership of 3,319, who devote themselves, as the main part of their work, to the care of poor and sick children. —"The Rock."

The Dragon at Close Range

178 Pages

55 Photographic Illustrations

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR, POSTPAID

ST. F. X. SEMINARY,
Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Dear Fathers:

Enclosed please find $..... for ..... copies of Monsignor McGrath's book, "The Dragon at Close Range". Mail the book to

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

.....

GAIN and LOSS

By

REV. JOSEPH VENINI

"EAST is East and West is West, and ne'er the twain shall meet." That much-hackneyed poetic exuberance, like most everything else in this vale of tears, is decidedly Einsteinian. If one should choose to doubt the fact, that disciple of Thomas is invited to come to this Celestial Republic and attempt to enumerate the telephone and telegraph poles that go marching up and down and across our fair fields and valleys: or let him try to evaluate the thousands of acres of land that have been confiscated to build highways for the time-and-space-eliminating "air-cars"; or reckon how many tons of rice the next crop will be short, thanks to the seizure of so many rice-paddies to lay out landing fields for future, possible, almond-eyed Lindbergs.

As the coupes and the sport models go clattering by, as the "Spirit of Pekin" whizzes overhead, Mencius, Confucius, et al, not only must be shifting in their tombs, they certainlly do be turning complete somersaults — cutting up terrible capers. There is no doubt whatsoever that the Orient and the Occident have appointed a rendezvous And the quicker to get there, motor roads are the order of the day.

The Yellow Dragon is not only having his tail trod on. He is being hanged, drawn and quartered. Entombed. The present straits (and crookedness) of the erstwhile cobble-paths, that up to now constituted the Lincoln highway of hereabouts, are rather symbolical of the writhings of the Dragon in the throes of his death agony. As a general rule, the new motor road follows the route of the feet-martyrizing paths it is to supersede. This is a compliment to the skill of the original road builders. Without the aid of transits or other surveying instruments, they were able to find the shortest line between two points, though this line did not always—hardly ever —follow the axiom laid down by Euclid. A great deal of competence was not, however, an absolute requisite, as in this mountainous region the majority of the roads simply followed a creek course as the easiest pass offered through the hills. So in many places the new motor road has completely covered its venerable forerunner. In others, the former right of way is left high and dry on the hillside as its supplanter cuts through on a lower level. In still other places the two rivals have parted company entirely. Sheer mountain sides, the creek waters bathing their feet, forced the wayfarers of old to take to the hills. This was quite all right where nothing greater than leg-power was required. But vehicles propelled by equine vim buck at such steep grades. So the modernists they use powder and blast a way along the creek. In vain, however, they try to keep the two antagonists apart. They are engaged in silent mortal struggle. Not even the death of one of the adversaries will separate them. Glorying in its hoary record of service, the ancient path bitterly resents being thus ruthlessly cast aside and trampled on. It seeks to free itself from its overpowering oppressor, and escapes, now to the right, now to the left. Seen from an elevated distance, this gargantuan contest gives the impression of a monstrous reptile, the Yellow Dragon, striving to elude being buried. Here's hoping it does not succeed. And the blisters adorning my pedal extremities, to a vesicle, they respond, "We second that hope".

"PROGRESS, that's the thing!" "We want Progress!" "Avanti!" Those are the present-day slogans of everyone. Everyone, that is, with the exception of three hundred and ninety-nine millions and more, out of the four hundred million constituents of the yellow peril. And these exceptionists, have they no slogans?

"Rice!" "We want Rice!" "And work!", they answer; "those are our slogans."

"All right; let's build motor roads, airdromes. Won't that provide plenty of work?"

"Yes. But they don't pay us for our work."

"And when the roads are open, won't rice and other things be plentiful and cheap?"

"Maybe. But we won't have any money to buy them with, even if they are cheap. And what about the land you have taken from us?

"Won't the land that is left you be enhanced in value by the improvements?"

"What improvements? You can't grow rice under a pile of earth five feet high. And how are we to get water into our paddies if you build a dyke through them?"

So they argue, these bronzed backbones of the nation, and the haberdashers' mannequins. But the road is built. A fait accompli. The busses will soon be chugging. Utopia is just around the next bend in the road. Courage, Citizens! Tighten up your belts another notch! Hope on! And once more Barnum is being vindicated.

But what about the unfortunate one who awakes one morning and finds the surveyor's little red flag fluttering on his doorstep?

"The Communists, they have arrived?" he queries.

"Non," replies the youthful transit man from Hangchow, habilitated a l'Americaine (but where, oh where, in America or anywhere else, do they wear their shirt outside their pants), "non, but we find there is just room enough for the bus to pass between your kitchen stove and the bedroom."

"So?"

In many cases Progress demands that the front of the house be knocked down. In others, the rear needs must be demolished. Again, the whole works must go. Woe to the inhabitants of a town who find their domiciles built on the river edge, the mountain in their back yard. It is just too bad for them, that's all. Progress is not to be said nay. The devotees of Mercury insist that it is much quicker and easier to destroy a row of shacks than to blast through solid rock. The staunch adherers of Buddha must perforce accede to their wishes. Several towns that found themselves in that position know well "what price Progress!" The topography of the haunts of childhood has been considerably altered. Where once hide-and-seek was the game, tag is now played. Houses! Temples! Idols! Walls! Bridges! The magic little red flag waves at them once and says "Begone!" I wonder what the once-upon-a-time owners of those things have left to be enhanced? Can memories be enhanced?

MANY high dignitaries, 'tis rumoured, will be attendant on the opening of the new road. It is to be feared that a high mortality rate will also be attendant. One sad day Mrs. Wong will step back from her rice pots and find herself impaled on the radiator cap of a Chevrolet. And I just hate to think what is going to happen to these ponderous porkers. They who for the last six thousand years — or six million for that matter, it's all the same—have had undisputed right of way. Red lights, green lights, no lights at all. It was all one and the same to them. Did you ever have the joy of seeing what happens to Farmer Brown's grey mare when the circus calliope, all stops wide open, comes callioping down the street? That, mutatis mutandis, is what is going to happen when our placid Lungchuan water-buffaloes are introduced for the first time (and the second, third, etc., etc.) to the results of Ford's inventive imagination. As for the rising generation of Chiang-Kai-Sheks, there aint no life insurance company in the whole wide world that will permit their names to be enrolled on their registers, no matter how high the premium offered. And whatever are the advertisers going to do? Athletic foot? Miss China will have simply to take one dainty step from her boudoir right into the waiting Whippet. But I do hope the advent of the busses won't have the same effect on the local fowl as had the premier flight of an airplane over our backyard. The hens, they may not have been frightened out of their wits, but they were sure scared out of their eggs. Nary a one did they deposit for several days afterwards. I'll bet they are still cackling about that hawk.

MASS CONVERSION IN VILLAGE OF KINHWA DISTRICT

A LETTER received from Monsignor Fraser, Kinhwa, states:

"All who have devoted their lives to China, but especially the faculty, missionaries and students of China Mission Seminary, will be delighted with this group of converts recently baptized in the village of Siao Kao Tsu. A year ago they were all pagans; and not only in this village, but the whole county of Yungkang, remained intensely pagan. All of a sudden 80 persons of this village enrolled themselves as catechumens. A catechist was sent to instruct them, and towards the end of 1934 Father Ly (seated at the left of Bishop Faveau) spent six weeks, giving them final instruction before Baptism. In two groups he baptized 150 persons, and on March 10th Bishop Faveau made a special trip to the village to confer Confirmation. This picture was taken on that occasion. Father Kiang, another of Monsignor Fraser's assistants, is seated at the Bishop's right. As there is no house or room half big enough to contain the congregation, a church must be built without delay. A piece of property has been purchased for the purpose. The village is about 50 miles from Kinhwa city—40 miles by motor bus and 10 miles on foot. It is only a short distance from the confines of the Chuchow Prefecture Apostolic. Here is a fervent congregation; as yet they have neither church nor chapel, priest nor catechist; and many surrounding villages are manifesting a desire to enter the Church. May this picture be an incentive not only for our students to persevere in their vocation, but also induce many others to dedicate their lives to the conversion of China. Within a few years we have every reason to expect that there will be at least a thousand Christians in Siao Kao Tsu and neighborhood. Say a little prayer for this young Christian community.

"Note how haystacks are made in China; the straw is securely fastened to trees, so that it may not be carried away with the wind, and above the reach of cattle."

MISSIONARIES AND THE NEW LIFE MOVEMENT

During a recent visit to Chungking, General Chiang Kai-Shek called a meeting of all the Missionaries in the city, Catholic and Protestant, and asked them to help him in his program of putting new life into China. The Commander-in-Chief of China's land, sea and air forces, and virtual head of the Nanking Government, arrived in Szechwan several weeks ago to take personal command of the drive against the Communists and to begin the reorganization of the province. He told the Missionaries that only Christian faith and morals could effectively restore the country.

"To succeed in my work," he said, "I must be helped by Missions and Missionaries; in fact, only Christian teaching can be of effective help in realizing my plan of recovery because it alone contains and can communicate the moral force needed to bring about the desired reformation in the spirit of the people and to put new life into our poor countrymen."

A Protestant minister replied in English, and then Bishop Louis G. Jantzen, of the Paris Foreign Missions, Vicar Apostolic of Chungking, spoke to the Generalissimo in Chinese telling him that his Missionaries had the welfare of the Chinese people at heart and that they would give him their full moral support.

Chiang Kai-Shek's action is especially interesting for those who recall the troublesome days of 1927 when he led the Southern Army against the North. At that time he was advised by the Russian General Borodine and he followed a strictly anti-foreign and anti-Christian policy. His aim, as he said at the time, was to suppress foreign imperialism and to drive out the Missionaries, its agents, and to destroy religion as the opium of the people. Many chapels and Mission buildings were destroyed by the Southern Army, and two Jesuits were killed when Nanking was taken.

When he came into power, however, he saw that Communism was not for China. Borodine returned to Russia, and the fight against the Bolsheviks began. Today the Chief of the New Life Movement realizes the danger of having a people without religion and without morals and he wishes, so it seems, to make Christian doctrine the foundation of the new China. (Fides).

THE MYSTIC THREE

There are three words, the sweetest words,
In all human speech—
More sweet than all songs of birds
Or pages poets preach,

This life may be a vale of tears,
A sad and dreary thing—
Three words and trouble disappears,
And birds begin to sing.

Three words, and all the roses bloom,
The sun begins to shine;
Three words will dissipate the gloom
And water turn to wine.

Three words will cheer the saddest days—
"I love you?" Wrong, by heck!
It is another sweeter phrase,
"Enclosed-find-cheque."

These verses are cheerfully dedicated to those readers who have been "thinking" about paying up their overdue subscriptions to "CHINA," or of sending a donation to help the work of our Seminary. Please write the three mystic words, make your enclosure, mail it to Scarboro Bluffs, Ont., and we'll do the rest.

FOR AN EDITOR

Editors are usually said to be a melancholy sort, convinced that nobody loves them and that their work and worry are all wasted effort in the world. So we, editorially speaking, rejoiced to read the following glowing account in a recent issue of "Light".

Editors who may have shared the common feeling of their clan that no one loves the editor, can be assured now that that feeling is just so much nonsense. We have been informed how an editor was recently presented with a handsome bouquet of flowers by a group of his fellow-citizens. On that occasion a quartette sang a few songs, and a clergyman gave a little talk. After the talk six husky men carried the editor on their shoulders and placed him in a 1935 sedan, and the whole town formed a parade. The appreciative crowd returned to their homes, serene in the thought of having provided one bright day for their beloved news purveyor.

P.S. — We forgot to mention that the editor was dead. — "The Wanderer", Aug. 8.

New students, and old, are reminded that China Mission Seminary reopens on the evening of Monday, September 16th.

A summer resort at Mokanshan, Che., where Fr. McNabb has been for a short holiday. The beautiful church and residence were built mostly by gifts from wealthy Shanghai visitors.

NONSENSE

Smith: "I've just been hearing from old Boreleigh all about his ancestors. It seems that they go back to the Flood."

Jones: "Well, that's nothing to shout about. Everyone was in the swim then."

"Oh, doctor," moaned the young man, "I feel awful. I can't eat, can't sleep, can't concentrate on play of any kind, and work's a positive nightmare. What do you prescribe?"

"Propose to the girl and get it over," was the reply.

Pat was relating his war-time experiences to an admiring crowd in the "local".

"Shure," he said, pointing towards his heart, "it was here where I was struck by the enemy's bullets——"

"But, Pat," protested one of his audience, "if you had been shot through the heart ye'd have been killed entoirely."

Pat shook his head. "Begorra, an' ye're wrong, me lad," he replied. "At the toime I was shot me heart was in me mouth."

Visitor in Museum: "Say! don't start looking at things or we'll never get around!"

"What's the matter up at Tom's 'ouse?"

"They're taking 'im away in the ambulance for beatin' 'is missus."

Londoner: "I went bald, so I spent a small fortune on hair restorer."

Aberdonian: "When I went bald I sold my brush and comb."

"Tom's letter is very short, dear."

"So is Tom," said his father, "or he wouldn't have written at all."

Parent: "Do you find that Jack works hard?"

Teacher: "He likes doing nothing better."

"How long you in jail fo' Mose."

"Two weeks."

"What am de cha'ge?"

"No cha'ge; everything am free."

Fair Client—"Should I marry a man who lies to me?"

Fortune Teller — "Lady, do you want to be an old maid?"

Mother to son sliding down banisters: "What are you doing there, Cyril?"

Cyril: "Making trousers for poor orphan boys, mummy."

"Tell me candidly, doc., do you think I'll pull through?" asked the patient.

"Oh, you're bound to get well," replied the doctor. "You can't help yourself. Statistics prove that out of 100 cases like yours 1 per cent. invariably recovers. I've treated ninety-nine cases and every one of them died. Why, man alive, you can't die if you try!"

The teacher had been reading to the class about the great forests of America.

"And now, boys," he announced, "which one of you can tell me the pine that has the longest and sharpest needles?"

Up went a hand in the front row.

"Well, Tommy?"

"The porcu!"

At the conclusion of the afternoon Scripture lesson, teacher said, "Now, then, stand up all those children who wish to go to Heaven."

All the scholars rose—with the exception of Tommy Brown.

"But, surely, Tommy," teacher said, surprised, "you want to go to Heaven?"

"Oh, yes, miss," Tommy said, "but mother said I was to be sure and go straight home from school!"

Briggs was discussing the ups and downs of life with Brown.

"My brother never met with a disappointment in his life," he said.

"That seems almost incredible," said Brown, "seeing that he led a pretty full life."

Briggs smiled.

"It was easy in his case," he explained. "He never looked for anything but trouble."

Billy: "Why do the leaves turn red in the autumn?"

John: "I suppose they're blushing to think how green they've been all the summer."

"Don't you ever change your mind about anything?"

"Not often, now. I've found that I am just as liable to be wrong the second time as the first."

"I'll never ask another woman to marry me as long as I live."

"What? Refused again?"

"No. Accepted."

"Say to Mr. Smith that Professor Pietrov Mikilaviskykoff wishes ta spik mit him."

"I'll try, mister."

Employer: "Rather strange, Fred, that your grandfather should be buried on the day that the ball game is in town."

Fred: "Yes, good old grandpa—a sportsman to the end."

Green—"You must be keen on the talkies, old boy, to go twice a week."

Howarth—"It's not that, exactly. You see, if I don't go regularly I can't understand what my children are saying."

Four workmen were playing cards. "I knew you were going to play a spade, Bill," said one.

"'Ow?" asked Bill.

"Because," said the first man, "I saw yer spit on yer 'and."

Young Lawyer: "The Judge assigned me to defend a man who was so poor he could not afford to pay any fee. The Judge said that a young lawyer could afford to do this as it might lead to future business."

Friend: "Yes, that sounds reasonable. How did the case turn out?"

Lawyer: "I'll have to wait a long time for any future business from that man, as the Judge sent him up for twenty years."

A Scottish local train had made its last stop before branching off the Aberdeen line in another direction. At the junction a porter went along the platform asking: "Any here for Aberdeen?"

When the train had re-started an old lady, obviously unaccustomed to railway travel, leant across to her neighbor and confided: "I was for Aberdeen mysel', but I was'na going to tell yon spearin' body."

A Scotsman and an Irishman tied in a shooting competition. The first award was a silver cup, the second $25, and both wanted the money. They went to shoot off for the prize. Each fired ten shots and then the Scot rose with beaming face.

"That's done you," he said. "I've put all my shots into the bank."

"I thought ye would," chortled the Irishman, "so I put all mine on your target. The cup's yours and ye'll oblidge the company by filling it."

Schultz: "Your opening sale has closed. What now?"

Schwartz: "Our closing sale opens."

Mrs. A.: "Shall I ask the cook for references?"

Mr. A: "No, get her to submit samples."

Leaving for China!

OUR seventeen priests now in Chuchow, China, are to have reinforcements this Fall. The Departure Ceremony for our 1935 Mission Band is to take place in St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto, on Sunday evening, October 6th. Our Missionaries will sail from Vancouver aboard the "Empress of Asia" on Saturday, October 19th.

This annual Departure of Missionaries for China is a most encouraging evidence of the progress of our work, and we know our readers rejoice with us in this.

At the present moment we are not in a position to finance the journey of our priests to Chuchow, and we trust our kind friends will be the instruments of Providence to help us send our Mission Band on the way to the land of their choice. The coming year will be a heavy one for us, financially. We appeal to YOU now to help us bear the cost of our missionaries' journey to China in October.

WILL YOU HELP?

Please cut this out and mail with donation—to-day

Enclosed please find $....., my donation to help in the sending of your 1935 Mission Band to China.

Name ..... Address .....

.....

Kindly make cheques and money orders payable to:

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT. OCTOBER 1935

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.

2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.

3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.

4. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press
263 Adelaide St. West Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.

2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.

3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.

4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.

5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 25,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XVI. OCTOBER, 1935 No. 9

PRAYING FOR THE MISSIONS

NINETEEN centuries ago the Salvation of the world was purchased by the sufferings and death of Christ. Today whole continents are still almost ignorant of the Saviour's Name. Some one thousand million souls lie outside the True Fold. The number of pagans in the world is a challenge to every baptized soul. Can we believe that the fewness of the actual labourers is the sole cause why so vast a multitude remains unregenerated? No, for God can raise up labourers from every race and rank as of old He called forth Saul of Tarsus. Something else is needed. Our Holy Father tells us what this is: "Even though the missionaries labour zealously; though they work and toil and even lay down their lives in leading the pagans to the Catholic religion; though they employ all industry and diligence and all human means, still all this shall be of no avail, all their efforts shall go to naught unless God touches the hearts of the pagans to soften them and to draw them to Him." (Rerum Ecclesiae).

* * *

WHY does not God do so? One principal reason, the reason which concerns every child of Holy Church, clerical and lay, is that He has willed to make the spread of the Faith dependent on the labours of the faithful. The Church which Christ founded was one. It is the Mystical Body of Christ. And as Christ gave Himself wholly to the work of our Redemption, so the whole Church must labour as one body in continuing His work.

* * *

THIS is the great principle which each and every Catholic must grasp today. "None of the faithful can claim exemption from this duty" (Pius XI). No soul has ever received the Faith except through human help. This is true from the time when the God-Man gave the Faith to His Apostles to this very day. The work of spreading the Fruits of the Redemption is not the duty only of priests and missioners. It is a work wholly impossible without the genuine co-operation of the faithful. Priests and missioners are indeed the "light of the world", but the grand current which gives them all their brilliance is that of Christ's merits and power flowing through His Church. But each member of the Church has a part in the passing along of this current.

* * *

FREQUENTLY enough the statement is made: "I'm so sorry I'm not in a position to help the missions". Yet, if one stops to analyze the situation, absolutely no one is in a position which renders it impossible to help. For all can pray. Young and old, rich and poor —all, all can beg the Divine favour for the work of the missions.

* * *

WE must think well on what our duty is in this. God asks all to pray; and it is from Christ we must learn to pray. It is not a thing of mere words; it is a matter for heart and will. God knows how poor in mere money is the multitude today, but He wants them to pray.

* * *

THE month of October is a month rich in opportunities of prayer for the missions. During this Month of the Holy Rosary as we weave our garland of Hail Mary's with our various intentions, we should remember that it is being offered to a Queen who, among her many titles, bears that of Queen of the Missions. With only a slight, sincere request from us she will shower abundant aid on all the missions in the world. If the Queen is so gracious in giving help to her missions when we ask it, we may expect the same of the King of Heaven, whose feast we will celebrate on the last Sunday of October. Each time we receive Him in Holy Communion we should ask Him to bestow His aid on His missions, just as our Queen does, so that the hundreds and thousands of souls still not converted by our missionaries, may also know and love the King and Queen of Heaven.

GOING TO CHUCHOW

Since the September "China" came off the press, plans have been changed with regard to the Departure Ceremony for our 1935 Mission Band. Word received from headquarters in Lishui made it advisable to postpone the sailing of our missionaries, originally scheduled for October 19th. Circumstances have arisen in China which necessitate the presence of quite a number of our missionaries at the central residence in Lishui, with consequent lack of accommodation for the new priests who were due to go over in October. At present it is uncertain when Fathers McFarlane and Moore will leave for China, but it is planned to have a group of our missionaries sail from Vancouver on November 30th. Included in this group will be Monsignor McGrath and Father Beal, both returning to active service after a health furlough at home, and Father Leo Curtin, former Pastor of Mayo, in the Archdiocese of Ottawa, who is now going to Chuchow Prefecture.

JOTTINGS

By

REV. GERALD DOYLE

"NOBODY slept in Sungyang during the last two nights, as the Reds were very close to the city," Father Wong stated in a recent letter. Indirect information has since informed us that, while the bandits are still in the Sungyang district, they have not attacked the city, so Father Wong is still safe.

The bandits are not only in the Sungyang district; all over the Prefecture are wandering bands, seemingly well organized and under a central direction. Father Stringer, who was here in Lishui for a few days, was on the point of returning to Lungchuan when Father Venini sent word advising him not to come, as the bandits were on all sides of the city and had taken a town only twenty miles away. Father Venini had distributed the goods of the mission among the Christians to be hidden in their homes, while he himself was prepared for any emergency. He says that, although his bicycle is in good condition, it will not climb mountains.

During the past several weeks the bandits have not been reported closer than eight miles from Lishui, but a few days ago several spies were arrested here in the city; they knew where all the rich people lived.

* * *

Usually the most hardened robbers give the choice of: "Your money or your life," but many Chinese in this district have recently had the misfortune of having their money extorted and then being killed by the bandits. So for some it has been a case of: "Money and your life."

* * *

A few Protestant missionaries have recently come to Lishui from outside points, feeling that here it is at least more secure than in the smaller towns. The big worry of some of them is not for themselves, but for "the wife and the children".

* * *

"Would you like to be a rich man?" was the question I put to one of the sacristans recently.

"No," he replied. "If I had a lot of money the bandits would know it and they might capture me and not only extort my money, but also kill me. So it is better to have just enough money to live on." Quite a sensible bit of philosophy, you will agree.

* * *

WEARING a big smile, the gate-keeper carried a basket of eggs, dyed a brilliant scarlet, into the refectory during dinner a few days ago. Father Morrison explained that they had been sent by Mr. Mo, one of the teachers, to announce a "big joy", the birth of a baby boy.

"What would the birth of a baby girl be?" someone asked.

"Oh, that would be a 'little joy'," the pastor responded.

On the afternoon of the same day I was studying Chinese with a young man from the city, a pagan. A picture of the Dionne quintuplets was on my desk. I told him of the happy event of five baby girls. His interest was polite, but I felt certain that in his estimation five "small joys" did not make even one "big joy", but that the joy became smaller and smaller.

I hesitate to think what might happen if five baby girls were born into a poor Chinese pagan family at the same time.

* * *

The missionary Sisters like all babies, but sick babies in danger of death seem to have a special attraction for them. When they hear of a baby dying, they will use almost any subterfuge to visit it, and if there is no hope for it, they will quietly baptize it; pretending to give it medicine, they will pour the water on the head, and then they will return to the convent overflowing with smiles of joy.

Sometimes it happens, although rarely, that the baby does not die, and then a careful record of the baptism is kept and every effort is made to have the child instructed when the age of reason is reached. One little girl (whose picture is on this page), who was privately baptized when a baby, recovered and is now at the mission school. When she is a little older and better instructed, the ceremonies of baptism will be supplied for her. It is hoped that these privately baptized babies living in pagan families will be remembered in your prayers.

* * *

MENTIONING prayer reminds me that this will probably be read during the month of October, the month of Our Lady of the Holy Rosary, Queen of Apostles, so remember that those on the mission field expect a remembrance during this month.

On the third of this month is celebrated the feast of the Patroness of Missions and Missioners, the Little Flower. Only God knows how powerful has been the intercession of the Little Flower, Little Mary attends the Mission School at Lishui. A few years ago she was privately baptized when it was feared she was dying.

Sisters Angela and Genevieve with a young helper on a visitation of the sick in Lishui. On this particular occasion these Sisters treated sixteen patients and baptized a dying infant.

what wonders she has worked in mission fields; yet she never went on the missions.

Recently I received a letter in which the writer mentioned having been interested by an article in a Catholic magazine: "It was a petition to imitate the Little Flower in her missionary work. It suggested choosing a missionary priest for whom you would set aside one day of each week, and if possible give him Mass and Holy Communion in the morning and a share in all your works during the day for the success of his work."

Here in China there are many missionary priests and Sisters who need your prayers. While continuing to pray for the missions in general, it would probably be an incentive to devotion to pray for one, or more, particular missionaries. If doubtful which to select, ask the Little Flower to make the choice for you, and leave the matter in her hands. Be assured that the missionary will pray for the spiritual benefactor, even though unknown, my method being that each morning at Mass I pray for "All those who pray for me."

* * *

It was a case of black smallpox in the last stages that the Sisters were called to attend. Of course, there was no hope for the body, but they did what they could to ease the pain. On the next visit, Father Aaron Gignac accompanied them and instructed the young man who was soon disposed to become a Catholic. Father Gignac baptized him, and soon after the young man died. The stepfather was present all the time, and made no objection to the ceremony. The stepfather is a Mohamedan priest.

* * *

THE vigorous footstep above that shook my room is but a memory, and during the last few days I have heard only the soft step of the nursing Sisters, and the periodical moaning as Father McGillivray strove to relieve his disordered stomach. With the fever ever high, pernicious malaria is merciless; large doses of quinine was the only hope, but the stomach suffered. At last the fever won, but God permitted a death that was a joy rather than a sorrow. His "life is changed, not taken away."

ORDINATIONS

THE Scholastic Year of the Seminary began on September 16th, with a Retreat preached by Rev. Father MacDonald, C.SS.R., of London, Ont.

FR. MATTE

Rev. William J. Matte, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Matte, Gogama, Ont., was ordained Deacon on September 8th, at Little Current, Ont., and received ordination to the Holy Priesthood at Sudbury, Ont., on Sunday, September 15th. His Excellency, Bishop R. H. Dignan, of Sault Ste. Marie, conferred the Holy Orders. Father Matte is the first to be ordained from this year's Class.

The following students were ordained to the Diaconate by Archbishop McGuigan on September 21st, and they will be elevated to the Holy Priesthood before Christmas: Rev. L. Hudswell (Tweed, Ont.); Rev. J. Leonard (Toronto); Rev. L. McAuliffe (Peterboro, Ont.); Rev. H. Murphy (Kingston, Ont.); Rev. J. Maurice (Ingersoll, Ont.); Rev. R. Reeves (London, Ont.).

The Minor Orders of Exorcist and Acolyte were conferred by Archbishop McGuigan on: Leo Burke, Edward Moriarity, Allan McRae, James McCann, Gerard McKernan, Alexander MacIntosh, Gordon Stringer, Harvey Steele, and Kenneth Turner.

Always on a high spiritual level, his kindness, charity, consideration and understanding were noteworthy characteristics. In our young society he was one of the priests who could be least spared, but the Divine Gardener looked down and saw a flower in full bloom, a perfect flower, and He gathered it to Himself.

Father McGillivray is gone, but yet he lives on. His life was a sermon, and his death will prove an even more powerful sermon. May his soul rest in peace.

Mass Intentions are badly needed by our priests in China. Send your intentions to the Seminary and they will be cabled to our missionaries in Chuchow.

SUCCESSFUL SOCIAL AFFAIR FOR THE MISSIONS

During the past few years, social affairs in aid of our Seminary have been very few. We suppose it must be attributed to the "Depression" that such has been the case. All the more welcome, then, was the generous action of Rev. Father McGrand, Pastor of St. Anthony's Church, Toronto, in suggesting the holding of a Bridge and Euchre Party in aid of our Seminary. The Parish Hall was placed at the disposal of his parishioners for the event, and a substantial sum was realized on the night of September 20th.

"China" heartily thanks all those who made this affair such a big success socially and financially, and takes this opportunity to express gratitude to Father McGrand and his priests at St. Anthony's for their splendid cooperation.

In passing, we may say that the Seminary would welcome any efforts to help our work by similar social affairs organized by parishes or by private individuals. We shall be only too pleased to give publicity to such functions organized on behalf of the Missions.

CONGRATULATIONS

"China" extends heartiest congratulations to the Catholic Foreign Mission Society of Maryknoll, N.Y., on the elevation to the Episcopate of Most Rev. Francis X. Ford, M.M., Vicar-Apostolic of Kaying, South China. One of the original group of students when Maryknoll was founded, the new Vicar-Apostolic is the third Maryknoller to become a Bishop. His consecration took place on September 21st. We join with Maryknoll's "The Field Afar" in praying that God may continue to grant Bishop Ford the answer to a prayer composed by him in the early days of his apostolate to the Chinese:

"Grant us, O Lord, to be the doorstep by which the multitudes may come to worship Thee. And if, in the saving of their souls, we are ground underfoot and spat upon and worn out, at least we shall have served Thee in some small way in helping pagan souls and we shall have become the King's Highway in pathless China."

AN APPRECIATION

From the Sisters in Lishui

Lishui, Che., Aug. 9th, 1935.

Very Rev. Dr. John E. McRae,
Rector,
St. Francis Xavier Seminary,
Scarboro Bluffs,
Ont., Canada.

Rev. and Dear Dr. McRae:

While sorrowing over the sudden loss of our beloved Father McGillivray, we must not forget to extend to you in particular and to the Society in general, our deep and sincere sympathy in this your bereavement.

We who have had the privilege of being so personally acquainted with Father McGillivray, thank God for the example of holiness and greatness that ever characterized our dealings with him. You know, of course, that he was our Confessor—what a privilege was ours to have such a one as he. It was in this sacred office that we could see the beauty and strength of his great soul. His counsels and direction will never be effaced from our minds and hearts. We do not exaggerate when we admit that the death of one of our loved ones could not affect us more—he was everything to us. His happy, jovial disposition was an inspiration to us all, and how often it helped to carry us through those little trials that must necessarily come to all. His deep, hearty laugh — how we miss it. His interest in us was that of a tender father—daily he came over to see what more he could do to make things easier for us. Temporarily and spiritually he was a father to us, and as a tenderly loved father do we keenly feel his absence.

His life was an inspiration—no less was his saintly death. It was our special privilege to kneel at his dying bedside in the Presence of the Blessed Sacrament with his ten sorrowing brother priests. We saw him receive our Divine Lord for the last time shortly before death claimed him. We saw him, conscious to the last moment, unable to speak, yet audibly acknowledging the ejaculations which one of his loved brother priests said over him. We witnessed the beautiful heavenly smile that played on his face and illuminated his eyes as he so softly raised them in a last look of expectation and sweet serenity. We witnessed his lips moving in the effort he made to say his last words on earth: "My God, I love Thee"—a beautiful closing of a beautiful life.

We need no souvenirs by which to remember him, his so oft repeated examples of self-sacrifice, of greatness of soul and heart, are the treasured mementoes which enshrine him in our hearts, now and for always. Nevertheless, a monument to him we have. In our Convent garden stands a beautiful statue of our Immaculate Mother enshrined by our beloved Father in the Grotto which he designed and financed. This was one of his last undertakings, and one worthy of him. He constantly encouraged trust and more trust in our Blessed Mother —he solidified this counsel in enthroning her in our midst. Daily do we kneel at her feet praying for our dear Father.

Dear Rev. Dr. McRae, the words we have written above do not do justice to Father McGillivray. We have made an attempt to express our feelings, but find that it is only in the intimacy of our hearts that the truth can be laid bare.

We feel at a loss to express to you, dear Rev. Father, our gratitude for the kindness which you and your worthy priests lavish on us. We owe an eternal debt of gratitude to your Society for the wonderful example of the exemplary priests with whom it is our privilege to work. Their lives are an inspiration to us of all that is Christ-like and worthy of imitation.

In our community prayers we do not forget your interests—the interests of Scarboro as well as those of Canada-in-China are most dear to us.

Assuring you, dear Rev. Dr. McRae, of our sincere sympathy, we remain,

Yours most respectfully,
The Grey Sisters of the Immaculate Conception,
at Lishui.

The Grotto in the Convent Garden at Lishui

A THOUGHT FOR OCTOBER 20th

DUE soon is MISSION SUNDAY (on the 3rd Sunday of October, to be precise!). Its approach makes us think of one thing in particular: the total needs of all Catholic missions. Oh yes! We do hear much from many quarters of how much a few cents can do in the mission field (and too much of the tin foil and old stamp category!) or again, of the need of some missioner in Ceylon or Tanganyika, who needs a chapel, a new roof, or any one of a dozen needs. But seldom, if ever, do we hear of the total needs of all Catholic missioners the world over!

Said a certain well-known American in opening a campaign for a charitable cause: "Tell us what all your needs are. Then we'll see how much we can get." We do just the reverse. We never tell what all our real needs are. Therefore, what we collect never even approaches the total we really need.

Many became too enthusiastic recently when the Propagation of the Faith returns last year from all Christian countries amounted to $3,600,000. They wondered "how all that money could be spent!" Yes, they did wonder, but really, they shouldn't. Because that $3,600,000 was just $21,400,000 short of the total neeeded as a bare minimum for all Catholic missions! They did not realize that it costs about $3,600,000 to maintain one fair-sized diocese in the United States for one year.

This "misplaced" wonder is but one more proof that we have been most neglectful in not stressing this particular point: what the total needs of all Catholic missions are! We blame ourselves. Because, after all, to aid all missioners is our business!

NOW, what is the total need of all Catholic missions? Giving the lowest minimum—and one that can be readily understood, let us start off with the $1.00 a day standard for each missioner. That is not only for his living expenses (food, clothing, a place to live, a means of travel, medicine, etc.), but for his work as well (the maintenance of a chapel, a school, the support of one or more catechists, of the poor, of the orphans, aid to native priests and sisters)! Multiply this "many-sided" $1.00 a day by 65,000 missioners (and there are more than that now!). Every "3rd-grader" knows that spells $65,000 a day. Unfortunately, years have a habit of having 365 days of that kind in them, which runs the total in a year up to $23,725,000. Or, put it roughly at $25,000,000 a year as a bare minimum needed to cover the total needs of all Catholic missions. (A fair-sized battleship costs more, you know!)

Now besides the $25,000,000, put the $3,600,000 raised last year by the Propagation of the Faith. See the contrast! In other words, last year, of every $25 essential, the Propagation of the Faith gave only $3.60. Left, therefore, to be raised by the missioner (or begged by his society) is the necessary balance of $21,400,000! The missioner can't do both. If he spends his time begging, he simply has to neglect his real work as a missioner. Others can collect. He alone can evangelize.

WHAT is the solution? Remember the aim of the Propagation of the Faith: to relieve the missioner (or his mission-society) of the task of collecting so that he can do the work for which he has given his life. Why is it not doing it? Why can not the Propagation of the Faith give the missioner more than $3.60 for every $25 he must have? Because . . . Well, you know! We have not won enough members to the Propagation of the Faith. Ponder that between now and MISSION SUNDAY. To win a few members at least to the Propagation of the Faith! Make that your mission for MISSION SUNDAY.—"Catholic Missions."

FORTY-NINE STUDENTS

Back with us again, and now hard at their class work, are forty-four of last year's students. Five young men have come to begin their Seminary course, making our total registration for this year forty-nine. We have endeavoured to accept as many candidates for the missions as our accommodation circumstances allow. From as far west as Calgary, and as far east as Newfound, we have gathered subjects. Naturally, a large percentage of our students come from families who cannot afford to pay full tuition at the Seminary, which is two hundred and fifty dollars a year. Here is an opportunity for our benefactors and friends to lend these boys a helping hand. Any amount will be gratefully accepted and acknowledged by us. If you are interested in "adopting" a student at China Mission Seminary and defraying the expense of his tuition, either for a year, or for his whole course, we shall be glad to hear from you.

"The Little Flower's Rose Garden"

Our Junior Readers, and many adult readers as well, will be pleased to know that next month "Father Jim" will continue in "China" the publication of the "Rose Garden" which was such a popular feature of our magazine for several years.

SUBSCRIPTION CAMPAIGN

During the Summer months many of our seminarians were usefully employed in furthering the work to which they have given their lives by their efforts to collect subscriptions to "China". We sincerely thank the many friends who responded to their appeal to renew their subscriptions. The campaign by the seminarians was most successful. However, there were many sections of Canada and Newfoundland not visited by our willing campaigners, and to our subscribers in these sections we make the request that they renew their subscriptions to "China" via the mail. Nobody will ever seriously miss the fifty cents which will renew your subscription for one year. All you have to do is write a cheque or get a post office money order and mail it with your name and address to St. Francis Xavier Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ont. There is a convenient form printed for you on page 143. If your subscription expiry date (shown on your address label) needs a little boost, won't you please ACT NOW.

IN the present dispensation it is peculiar to the missionaries of our Institution that they have very little ministerial duties for at least two years after their ordination. Indomitable zeal to be at the work to which they have dedicated their lives is at its best during these the first few years of the sacred ministry; all the ambitions of youth, all the fervour of Seminary days and the great grace of the Sacrament of Holy Orders all combine to make the outlook on life most optimistic, to make every issue appear ever so clear, to make every obstacle, however insurmountable it may seem, just a step onward in the road that leads to the biggest things in life. The young priest mentally has already conquered worlds for Christ, and counted not the cost.

But instead of immediately going forth and preaching the Gospel and all it means, we have, as it were, to "lie low" for a while. Of necessity it is so. You see we first have to complete our theological studies, which takes all of a year, and that year also turns out to be one of blessed quietude in which we can best learn to appreciate the holiness and dignity of our sacred office. And even after that year, class work is not over. We have our last summer holidays, and we have our departure ceremony, and within six months of our last class at the Seminary we find ourselves at last in China wanting very much to do what we came here to do. But comes first more class and more study; not much ministerial work can be done if we do not know the language of those we have come to serve, and to get a working knowledge of it we need at least twelve months. Three of us have just completed that year, and it is the features of it that I wish now reminiscently to describe.

* * *

I REMEMBER very clearly my first letters home. You see everything was strange, and we felt we were great discoverers of phenomena hitherto unknown in the West, and that everybody should know of our discoveries. Every detail of Oriental life as we saw it we felt was sure to "go over big", and we took notes and we told our friends all about them, and we even felt our description would make the same impression upon our readers as did the facts upon us. Oh, at first we wrote a lot of letters—and received a lot of answers, too. How much looked-for were these answers! And how welcome! But the writing and the receiving have dropped somewhat. Even in one year. But that seems to be the accepted order of things, and I do not presume to disturb it; everything like that has a reason, and I dare say some day I'll know the answer to this one.

But even as we related these happenings, suffixed with so many exclamation marks, we became used to them, so much so that now it takes an effort on our part to find something interesting to write about. We even became converted to many of the ways that at first seemed so strange. We used chop-sticks at first just for the novelty; we have since felt their necessity. We remarked about the style of clothes, and even while commenting what a sensation they would make on a Yonge Street or a Water Street we found ourselves donning these very clothes. And even some of our habits went through the same change; we would find ourselves saying "Ai Yia" for "Oh My"; "Wo Tien" for "Oh, heavens", and "Can catch" for "Okay", and believe it or not, our manners improved a degree or two, for "la

LETTER FROM THE VATICAN

SEGRETERIA DI STATO
DI SVA SANTITA

DAL VATICANO, July 2, 1935.

N° 146316
DA CITARSI NELLA RISPOSTA

Right Reverend dear Monsignor,

I am charged by the Holy Father to acknowledge receipt of an autographed copy of your recent book "The Dragon at Close Range" which you presented in homage to Him recently.

His Holiness was deeply pleased and appreciative of this act of filial homage. It is His hope that your work will have the good effect of making the Missions better known among English-speaking peoples because enthusiastic support can be expected only from those who have a sympathetic understanding of the problems faced by the missionary out in the field.

From His heart, the Holy Father sends to you and to your devoted missionary priests and sisters His paternal Apostolic Benediction.

With sentiments of deep esteem and of religious devotion, I am, my dear Monsignor McGrath,

Sincerely yours in Christ,

E. Card. Pacelli

The Right Rev. Monsignor William C. McGrath,
Prefect Apostolic of Chuchow,

LISHUI.

OUR F

By RE

T YEAR

STRANG

politesse oblige" is a standing and ever imperative law with our new friends. Which reminds me of Pa's "honourable" butler featured in the comic strip, "Polly and Her Pals"—but don't stretch the comparison too far, you know. And then in true Chinese fashion we find ourselves, when offering a cigarette to each other, taking one out of the package and handing it over. That is something we would never get away with before. But there were plenty of things in which we were inflexible—in which we did not give in an inch. For instance, we still open our books in the front, contrary to the prevailing custom here, and we still shake each other's hands when meeting instead of our own. We do not get our heads shaved, no matter how warm it is, and on the bus, if necessity demands, we still give our place to a lady.

And after having noticed the features that make the words EAST and WEST so strongly opposed to each other, we set about seeing how the religion that makes no distinction between these terms was finding a place amongst the Orientals even as it did centuries ago in the far West. And without seeing in the inner workings and missing many of the details, we could notice the same outward effects, and they can be summed up in the very trite utterance: "Men came to Church." There were Confessions and Communions, Mass and Benediction, Rosary and Stations of the Cross—all the same as we had been used to. It did not take us long to get over the strangeness of always having the prayers chanted and lead by the catechist, and the women bareheaded and the men wearing caps in Church. And then again it was really thrilling to see all the essentials and so many of the additional touches that makes the Catholic Church so beautiful and so glorious still unimpaired. The singing today, for instance (I am writing this on the feast of the Assumption), was really angelic. The "Virgo Dei Genitrix" and the "Magnificat" had all the pathos and all the beauty and all the sincere love as at home. That the singing is not up to so high a mark in the other churches of our district is not so discouraging—it is consoling to know we still have it, and it is grand to know that we are giving it to others.

WE had our turns on the missions, too. These were the only occasions in which we could consider ourselves useful. At the big feasts the Fathers are always glad to have someone there to help them, and we fitted in as best we could, which was principally preparing for and celebrat-

(Continued on page 139)

Dated August 30th, a letter came from Monsignor Fraser, Kinhwa, in which he says:

"I have just returned from the Railway Station to which I accompanied the four little boys in the picture. They are now speeding north on their journey (their first ride on a train) to the big city of Hangchow to enter the Preparatory Seminary and begin their long course of studies for the priesthood. If everything goes well they will be ordained fourteen years from now! Say a prayer for their perseverance. This makes thirteen in all sent to the Seminary from the Kinhwa district during the past three years.

"We have been very successful during the past twelve months. A hundred and fifty persons were baptized in one village, and a church, dedicated to The Little Flower, has been erected. The famine in Pukiang has been a blessing in disguise. A thousand persons have asked to be instructed in the Faith, and several hundred of them have been received into the Church. A spacious church, dedicated to the Queen of Apostles, has been built to accommodate them. Here at headquarters so many little pagan girls wanted to be educated by the Catholic Sisters I had to build a new school—three rooms downstairs and dormitory for the girls and Sisters upstairs."

MARY, THE HOPE OF CHINA

Courtesy, "The Field At Home"

ONCE there was a rich king who loved the poor and needy. He loved to help them in every way possible. Day after day the poor would come to his palace to obtain food and other necessities. But the king felt that his own greatness and dignity might keep some timid people from coming to ask his help. So what did the king do? He had his sweet and gentle mother come to his storerooms every day, and from her gentle hands the people received the gifts of the king.

This is just a feeble picture of what takes place in the Catholic Church. That Church is the palace of Christ the King. His greatness and His dignity are the greatness and dignity of God Himself, for Christ is God. Lest His sovereign majesty keep timid souls away, He has arranged to distribute His graces by the hands of His Mother Mary.

Mary is the sweetest, the gentlest, the kindest mother that God ever fashioned. Earthly mothers are wonderful creatures. Their golden hearts of love reflect something of the goodness of God. But all the goodness that ever was in all the hearts of all good mothers is found in its highest and best form crystallized in the Immaculate Heart of Mary. Her Heart is next in perfection to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. She shares in the riches of her divine Son, and dispenses these riches to her children. We receive God's gifts "through the medium of a woman's tenderness". What a treasure we have in Mary, the Mediatrix of all graces!

Hence it is not surprising that the Catholic Church looks upon Mary as a great influence for good, and invites her children to approach her with the utmost confidence. "Never was it heard that anyone who fled to her protection was left unaided."

Mary is no mere accident in the Redemption of the world. She is rather an essential factor according to the plan of God. It was she who gave us the Saviour at Bethlehem, and in giving Him to us she crushed the serpent's head, as foretold in Genesis. Mary was ever with Jesus in His hidden life at Nazareth; she shared all His joys and sorrows; she was united with Him in His prayers. She was always with Him in His public life, at least in spirit. And when the climax came in the week of His passion, she was at His side, sharing His anguish. Thus Mary became the co-redemptrix of the human race.

Nineteen hundred years ago Christ died for us. He died and redeemed the world but once. To-day we are enjoying the fruits, the effects, of that Redemption, in which Mary played so noble a part. The whole work of the Church since the Saviour's death is to apply the fruits of the Redemption. Particularly in the Mass we see the effects of the death of Christ, for the Mass is the very renewal of His sacrifice on Calvary. As Mary shared in the Redemption itself, so she also shares in the application of its fruits.

Let us see what influence Mary can have in the work of the Church in the missions.

To establish and spread the Church in pagan lands, such as China, means to apply the fruits of the life and death of Christ. It means washing men's souls from the stain of sin by Baptism and Penance; it means nourishing them with the Bread of Life and the Bread of the Word of God. In short, it means the ministry of grace, given us by Jesus Christ, at the hands of His Mother.

In the Collect of the beautiful Mass of Portiuncula, we pray: "O God, who didst will that all good things be distributed to men by thy holy Mother." She gave us Christ, the author of all grace; Christ gives us His grace by the hands of Mary. Christ is our King, Mary is our Mother and Queen. What a happy privilege to be a Catholic!

Besides the graces that come to us through Mary, we have the added inspiration of her beautiful life. She was a perfect creature: model of Virgins, model of Mothers, model of every virtue. The ennobling influence of her example has been felt wherever the Christian religion has been preached.

Even non-Catholic writers have paid tribute to this influence. To quote the words of Lecky, who died some thirty years ago: "The world is governed by ideals, and seldom or never has there been one which has exercised a more salutary influence than the mediaeval conception of the Virgin . . . All that was best in Europe clustered around it, and it is the origin of many of the purest elements of civilization." (Lecky, "Rationalism in Europe".)

And Ruskin, English art critic and famous author, pays this glowing tribute to the Catholic idea of the Virgin: "I am persuaded that the worship of the Madonna has been one of the noblest and most vital graces of Catholicism, and has never been otherwise than productive of true holiness of life and purity of character . . . There has probably not been an innocent cottage throughout the length and breadth of Europe in which the imagined presence of the Madonna has not given sanctity to the humblest duties and comfort to the sorest trials of the lives of women." (Ruskin, "Fors Clavigera".)

What the loving ideal of the Madonna has done for the civilization of Europe, it can also do for the civilization of China. The attitude of a people toward womanhood can almost be considered an index to greatness or inferiority. In a pagan culture, woman is little more than a slave. The fact that our Holy Infancies are crowded is really no credit to the ideals of this people.

Only by inculcating Christian principles, only by teaching the charming life of Mary, the paragon of women, can we hope to change the low views that linger in a pagan culture. For this reason the missionary and those associated with him in his work regard Mary as a patroness to be invoked, an ideal to be followed. Her humility, her purity, her sincerity, her retirement—all preach an eloquent sermon to the people of this vast nation.

It is gratifying to see how kindly the Chinese children take to this devotion to our Blessed Mother. They really love to invoke her as their patroness, their model and guide. We may fondly hope that these children will, in later life, spread the ideals of Mary among the members of their own families.

I have always been impressed by the beautiful practice in vogue at San Dao Middle School. The girls sing a hymn to our Blessed Mother every day after the Mass. The hymns are sung in Chinese and are set to the sweet Blessed Virgin melodies so familiar to Catholics back home. (In the February issue of "China" Father Strang wrote feelingly of the beautiful custom of the Lishui schoolboys who, at the close of each day sing the beautiful "Salve Regina" in the Church after night prayers.)

OF YOUR CHARITY

please pray for the repose of the souls of

William McGoey
Raymond Larkin
Alfred Diemert
Maurice Walsh

The above named deceased, three of whom met sudden deaths through accidents in September, are brothers of Seminarians. To the bereaved families "China" extends sincere condolences.

R.I.P.

The devotion of the Chinese to our Mother Mary is a hopeful sign. Mary will be to them their life, their sweetness and their hope. Through Mary they will learn to know and love her divine Son who is the Saviour of the world. To Jesus through Mary! May this be their motto as well as ours, and may "Our Lady of China" draw the teeming millions to the feet of Christ the King.

—"Franciscans in China."

OUR FIRST YEAR

(Continued from page 137)

ing the ceremonies. It was at these times we got our first actual experience of how the greater part of the work here is carried on.

But most of our time we spent here at Lishui at our books, and when we started at that we were all for telling everybody the novel construction of the language and its manifold tongue-twisters. To give you some examples of it now is only a temptation which I can easily wave aside. I will content myself with saying that with "An Idiom a Day" we paved the way, at one time picking it up from a conversation, working on it as we would on a riddle, and at another time puzzling it out from its concealment in the characters.

And thus went the year in more or less routine fashion until this month—the second last of our year, we have met with an incident that will mean more to us than all the other happenings with their difficulties and strangeness. I refer to the sudden but most beautiful death of Father McGillivray. In him we found an ideal, and an ideal means very much at any time. Not only exemplary was he, but heroic, with a heroism so unassuming that we can all imitate. We are sure he is still helping us here as he enjoys his well merited reward in Heaven, and his beautiful life will always be before us as an inspiration. The life of a missionary is glorious—there is nothing more glorious on earth; the death of a missionary is most glorious—there is nothing more glorious in Heaven or earth. And as we breathe a benediction for our first priest in Heaven we pray that his wonderful spirit remain with us.

* * *

AND thus our first year is ended. We are not yet quite ready to take our turns at sermons, and we have quite a bit to learn before attempting to hear confessions. But we have passed that second year of what I might call inactivity. On October 21st last, when we docked at Shanghai, we said: "China, here we come." So far China has only come to us. I hope that in a few short months we will be really arrived. What a second year in China does to one I have yet to experience, but if this time next year I am in a reminiscent mood (and I fear I shall be), I'll do my best to let you know. Please pray for all our missionaries, but remember especially the three who now are closing their first year in Chuchow and entering upon that second year which will bring them the responsibilities of active mission labour with all its problems. And our thanks are given at the Altar to all those friends of ours who have done so much to fill our first year in China with many pleasant memories.

HOW TO PUT CHINA IN YOUR WILL

Form of Bequest

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY THE SUM OF ..... DOLLARS".

$250 will support a student in China Mission Seminary for a year.
$1,500 will pay for a student's entire course at China Mission Seminary.
$5,000 will found a PERPETUAL BURSE on which, not one, but a chain of students will be educated for China—the MONUMENT of MONUMENTS to leave to your own or your dear ones' memory.

The SPEED CRAZE

MERCURY versus BUDDHA

By

REV. JOSEPH VENINI

Last month, Father Venini wrote about the effect that modern Progress has had on the ordinary everyday life of the average Chinese peasant, and told us of the somewhat mystified alarm with which he views the fast-moving new era. On this page the missionary author muses on "Speed"—and says some delightfully humorous things.

I WONDER who it was that started this craze to get going? And then get going a little faster? The fellow that invented the wheel, I imagine, would be the responsible party. But that doesn't get us any further.

I wonder again who the fellow was? Adam and Eve, it seems, were quite content to "go WALKING at the evening air," so I guess they are to be exonerated. The Old Boy himself took disguise under the form of one of the slowest-moving of creatures. I guess that let's him out. Cain, however, didn't have a very good reputation; and besides, he was a farmer, and a pretty large landholder at that, and no doubt he would find a few wheels right handy round the old homestead. So I guess we can place the blame on his doorstep. Yes, I know that makes a lot of guesses, mais, que voulez-vous? We have no documents to consult. You couldn't very reasonably expect Noah to find room in the Ark for the files of the patent office. If it really was Cain who excogitated the wheel, he sure started things rolling, didn't he? It was a big idea, all right, and a big thing. Though I hardly think he cashed in on any royalties from his invention. Like most big things it appears to have been mighty hard to get it started. And now it's getting hard to get it stopped. But that's common to big things, too. He seems to have had difficulty in getting it under way because it 'pears most all the folks were quite happy to keep right on tramping. They tell us there were only three coaches in the whole of France in the year 1550, and that's a powerful long time after Lamech put an end to Cain's wheelwright business. Of course, there were a few sporadic attempts made to speed things up. Elias' chariot wasn't under the control of the patent office, so his records can hardly be considered. Then there was Simon the Magician. He turned out an aeroplane much less complicated than the DO X. But St. Peter proved to everyone's satisfaction that it was by no means crash-proof. You would think that Solomon would set the pace ahead a little. But I surmise that after the beginning of the 11th Chapter of the Third Book of Kings he didn't have much time at his disposal. So the folks, they just kept trudging; or hopped aboard an occasional barge when there was a good wind blowing; or straddled the odd horse. Right down to the 18th century they were happy doing this; then the speed bug got awfully excited.

Here's a typical "view" of what the passenger in a sedan-chair sees as he is carried over the miserable paths which constitute the highroads of inland China.

I figure Stephenson, he comes about first. He and his tea-pot. It was all fine till he started putting his kettle on wheels, and sending it on its iron way. Then the folks did their darndest to maintain their inviolable rights to be left strictly pedestrian. "Furthermore," they argued, "with those volcanoes tearing across the country, vomiting all that smoke, our crops will be ruined." And perhaps they were right at that, considering the number of cords of wood consumed to produce ten m.p.h. "And our cows," they continued, "will be so frightened they won't give any milk."

Then comes Fulton, the speed bug still buzzing in his bonnet. He thinks things over and figures he can overcome all the contra-Stephenson objections by taking to the water. So he launches the trusty "Clermont". And right proudly she paddles her seven knots for every round of the clock. It's a wonder, though, they didn't take out an injunction against Fulton on the grounds that he would frighten the fishes. But I guess the folks had finally become resigned to their fate and decided to give up walking.

But while all this speeding-up process was going on, the folks inside the Great Wall were satisfied with their springless, cushionless, comfortless wheelbarrows. And where even these were not available, St. Francis' ass never failed them. But Mercury is insatiable. He blows the "Empress of Japan" across the Pacific in some eight days instead of sixteen. Her hold he jams full of Chryslers, Buicks, and Fords, dumps them on the dock at Shanghai, and two of them have already bumped their way over the unfinished road to Lungchuan. In a few weeks the passenger busses will be running from Chuchow to Lungchuan. Three days on foot have been reduced to almost as few hours. Will the god of speed be surfeited? Hardly. Like Alexander, he is forever sighing for new records to beat. Shanghai—Lungchuan. Walking, two weeks. Bus, two and one-half days. Aeroplane, three hours.

OUR PRIESTS PAY TRIBUTE

Indicative of the sense of loss that all our priests have expressed in their letters following the death of Father James McGillivray in Lishui early in August, is the following paragraph in a letter which came from Monsignor Fraser, Kinhwa:

"It will be a consolation to his friends and an edification to our students to read the following sentiments expressed about Father McGillivray in Father Boudreau's letter to me.

"Father McGillivray was anointed Tuesday evening, and passed away shortly afterwards. His death was most edifying. He was vested and laid in the parlour downstairs. Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated Wednesday. Presently he is buried beneath the sacrisity until a permanent burial place is decided on.

"The shock was tremendous to us all. He had many friends among the laity here. He was loved by all. The priests are all feeling very bad. I myself have lost a most cherished friend. Even now I can hardly believe it. He was only three days sick. He looked so beautiful in death that he seemed not dead, but sleeping. Yes, there were great things in store for him. But his work must have been finished here below, for God called him back Home. Maybe, after all, we were in need of one of our own in Heaven. It is my hope that I die the way he did. He left behind him example and model. He was a good man, and left nothing but good behind him. May his spirit remain always with us!"

CO-OPERATION

ON the Pacific Coast in the cities of Vanucouver and Victoria the Oriental problem is to the fore. "A little bit" of China and Japan is to be found in these two Western ports. That our apostolate should extend its great beneficial influences to those sons of the Orient living within our gates is but natural. The Church owes Herself to all nations.

The Sisters of Service are privileged to be of a little help to this problem. During the year we have placed at the disposal of Father Sharkey our "St. George's Van." Driven by a Chinese chauffeur, it is being used to gather the Chinese children and bring them to the "Catholic Mission School" in care of the Grey Nuns of Pembroke, in Vancouver. As our Sisters only make use of the Van during the summer months for catechetical work in the country, its usefulness during the balance of the year is very much appreciated by the Chinese Mission.

—"The Field at Home"

Very much reduced in size, the above is a copy of the "Death Notice" apprising the Christians in Chuchow of the passing of Father McGillivray in August.

A PUBLIC TRIBUTE

On the day of Father McGillivray's death in Lishui, the following news item appeared in "The Catholic Review", published in China. It is an account of a public tribute paid to the missionary who, a few days afterwards, was to be called so suddenly from the midst of those who best appreciated the worth of his character.

"On the Vigil of the feast of St. James the Apostle, which fell on July 25th, the Reverend Fathers, the Catechists, teachers and pupils of the Catholic Mission, Lishui, Chekiang, assembled in the parlor of the residence to wish the Rev. James D. McGillivrey, their Procurator, a very happy feast day.

"The place was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and the table covered with all sorts of good things in true Chinese fashion. Mr. Wang, the senior catechist, opened the programme by pointing out the leading events in the life of St. James the Apostle. His remarks were supplemented by Rev. Ramon Serra, the Vicar Delegate, with additional events which occurred during the saint's sojourn in Spain. Remarks also were made by the other fathers present, after which the assembly broke up with everybody expressing good wishes to the Rev. Father on his feast day.

"The honoured missionary is a member of the band of Canadian missionaries who came to China in 1932, and during his stay here he has made remarkable progress in the Chinese language and literature, and is held in high esteem by Christians and Pagans alike."

SELL THIS BOOK AND WE SELL THE MISSIONS

The Dragon at Close Range. By Rt. Rev. William McGrath. St. Francis Xavier Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ont. Price $1.00 postpaid.

The title does not belie the contents nor the contents the title, for the Rt. Reverend Author gives the reader a closeup of life in the Land of the Dragon, which is interesting beyond the ordinary and both in its format and subject matter is chock-full of unique and precious bits of information, palatably prepared and dispensed in a style which, if adopted by missionaries at large, would easily overcome all sales resistance on the part of our non-mission-minded folk. A few samples of the titles treated will illustrate: The Lishui Ferry, Life Begins at 14, The "Overland Limited," From Factory to Convent, Sailor, Beware! "Coolie Chow," A Dog's Life, Music Hath Charms, Banquet Etiquette, The Ten Courts of Hell, The Good Thief of Chusan, A "Foreigner" Makes a Break, What! No Spinach?, They never read the "Ads," The Red Siege of Kanchow, Let's Go Fishin'!, Western Paganism in the East, A Chinese Puzzle, Explaining the Puzzle, The Matchbox Maker, "Way Lee! Way Lee!," The Glory of the Missions. Sell this book and we sell the missions.

—"Jesuit Missions," New York.

NONSENSE

First Caddie: "What's your man like, Charlie?"

Second Caddie: "Left-handed, and keeps his change in his right-hand pocket."

"Look here, Bogus," asked the Colonel. "Do you happen to know where Ink Johnson is just now?"

"Yassah. Sho' does sah!" replied Bogus. "He's asleep dis minute over dar in de shade of de lumberyard looking for a job, sah!"

Two ladies were attending a concert at the Civic Auditorium. Seated in the parquet, they looked about them.

"Nice building," said one lady. "What style of architecture is it?"

"I'm not quite sure," said the other lady, "but I think it's Reminiscence."

On a mid-July afternoon a man in Chicago was grumbling about the heat. Said another who had just returned from a trip through the South: "Hot? Boy, you don't know what hot is. One day this week down in Mississippi I saw a dog chasing a cat and both were walking."

Eight men were once wrecked on a desert island. A year later a ship picked them up. The skipper of the ship noted in his log that:

"The two Irishmen had fought each other twice a day during the whole year.

"The Scotchmen had founded a Caledonian Society.

"The two Englishmen had not spoken because they had never been introduced.

"The two Americans had opened a real estate agency in a palm-leaf hut, with a Kiwanis club, a boosters' league and a hootch-making plant in the cellar."

A man complained to the local postmaster because of the failure to deliver a letter improperly addressed. "Now, suppose," he continued, "I addressed a letter to the 'Biggest Dumbell in Christiandom,' what would you do toward delivering it?"

"I should simply mark it, 'Return to Sender,'" replied the postmaster.

Teacher—"Why were you away from school yesterday?"

Pupil—"My father is a Communist and he teaches me class hatred."

"And when Mrs. Gubbins sez you wasn't no lidy, wot did yar say?" "I sez, 'Two negatives means an infirmary,' and I knocks 'er down. She is now in the 'orspital."

Patient—"Doctor, I feel in a very rundown condition."

Doctor—"How far do you wish to run down?"

Patient—"Well, I was thinking of Florida."

Prisoner—"Judge, I don't know what to do?"

Judge—"Why, how's that?"

Prisoner—"I swore to tell the truth, but every time I try, some lawyer objects."

She—"You'll have to get some new socks, Henry. I'm not going to sit up until midnight darning your old ones."

Husband—"But, my dear, it's never too late to mend, as the old saying goes."

"I'm very careful. I always send my children out of the house before I quarrel with my husband."

"The little dears, they look so healthy from spending their time in the open."

The following notice was posted in a North of England factory:

"Applications for leave of absence on account of influenza, twins, measles, relatives' funerals, etc., must be handed to the foreman not later than 8 a.m. on the day of the match."

Ike—"Why do you call this an enthusiastic stew?"

Mike—"Because the cook put everything he had into it."

Betty—"You'd be a fine dancer but for two things."

Bob—"What are they? Do tell me."

Betty—"Your feet."

"I doot Donald's broken oot again."

"How dae ye think that, Rab?"

"Last nicht he was lecturing tae a crowd at the cross on the evils o' strong drink."

"Am pleased tae hear o' that; it's a guid sign."

"Aye, but ye see there was nae crowd!"

Struggling Artist (being dunned for rent and trying to put a bold front on things): "Let me tell you this—in a few years' time people will look up at this miserable studio and say, 'Cobalt, the artist, used to work there'!"

Landlord: "If you don't pay your rent by tonight, they'll be able to say it tomorrow!"

"What's the matter? Ill?"

"I've been disappointed in love."

"But I thought you married Sylvia."

"I did."

Mother: "Here is a nice book from which I shall read to you."

Little Girl: "What did you bring me that book to be read to out of from for?"

Mrs. Flynn: "This neighborhood seems pretty noisy, Mrs. O'Brien."

Mrs. O'Brien: "Yes, the only time there's any peace here is whin the cars drown the noise."

A very nervous young man called at the house of the Dean. When the butler appeared, he said:

"Excuse me, but is the Bean dizzy to-night?"

"Just why do you want a married man to work for you, rather than a bachelor?" asked the curious chap.

"Well," sighed the boss, "the married men don't get so upset when I yell at them."

"Have you ever been here before, sir?" asked the barber.

"Yes, once."

"I don't seem to remember your face, sir."

"Oh, it's healed up since then."

Hub: "There's no use my giving a cheque, my dear; my bank account is over-drawn."

Wife: "Well, give me one anyway. and make it for $500. I want to pull it out with my handkerchief at the club this afternoon."

Jones: "What do you call a work of art?"

Smith: "Something you don't quite understand, but that costs you a heap of money."

Teacher: "What excuse have you for being so late?"

Johnny (breathlessly): "I ran so fast, teacher, that I—I didn't have time to think of one."

Charwoman (to neighbor with whom she is having a spat)—"What I says is, there is ladies an' ladies—an' you ain't neither."

Admiring Visitor: "My dear Mrs. Strong, these brasses of yours shine beautifully. May I inquire what you use to clean them?"

Mrs. Strong (a determined looking lady): "You may. My husband."

Here's Your Chance to Clip "Coupons"!

GET THE HABIT OF HELPING THE MISSIONS REGULARLY

AT the present moment we are not in a position to finance the journey of our priests to Chuchow, and we trust our kind friends will be the instruments of Providence to help us send our Mission Band on the way to the land of their choice. The coming year will be a heavy one for us, financially. We appeal to YOU now to help us bear the cost of our missionaries' journey to China this Fall.

WILL YOU HELP?

Enclosed please find $ ..... , my donation to help in the sending of your 1935 Mission Band to China.

Name ..... Address .....

EVERY CATHOLIC FAMILY SHOULD SUBSCRIBE TO A MISSION MAGAZINE

Enclosed find $ .....as a subscription to "China" for ..... years.

Name ..... Name .....

Address ..... Address .....

Subscription is Fifty Cents for One Year

(If you have changed your address, please give us the OLD address as well as the NEW one)

"SELL THIS BOOK AND WE SELL THE MISSIONS"

"The Dragon at Close Range"

178 Pages 55 Photographic Illustrations

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR, POSTPAID

Enclosed please find $..... for ..... copies of Monsignor McGrath's book, "The Dragon at Close Range". Mail the book to

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

.....

Kindly make cheques and money orders payable to:

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President

OCTOBER TWENTIETH

IS

MISSION SUNDAY

Throughout the ENTIRE CATHOLIC WORLD

Our Holy Father, the Pope, Invites Catholics Everywhere to Make it a Day of Outstanding Missionary Significance.

Parishes, Schools, Sodalities, Etc., Clergy and Laity, Are Expected on This Day to Remember the Missionary Needs of the Church.

Are you remembering the Missions in your Will? Let those in paganism share the blessings of your Faith. The spread of the Gospel is the primary object of the Church.

St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary
Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.

VERY REV. J. E. McRAE, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT. NOVEMBER 1935

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.

2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.

3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.

4. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide
2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press
263 Adelaide St. West Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.

2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.

3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.

4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.

5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 25,000

Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XVI. NOVEMBER, 1935 No. 10

STUDENTS AND THE MISSIONS

THE Youth of Eastern Canada will gather at Halifax for the Regional Convention of the Catholic Students' Mission Crusade to be held from November 9th to the 11th. China Mission Seminary extends congratulations to the Executive of the Crusaders for their initiative in organizing this demonstration, and wishes the Crusade Units of the Maritime Provinces the fullest measure of success in their Convention activities, a programme of which appears elsewhere in this issue.

Even so recently as ten years ago it would have been difficult to foresee the time when missions would take such a grip of Catholic youth as to warrant a largely-organized Convention for deliberations on the subject. Now it has come to pass. The missions have become a topic of general conversation. No longer have the priests and nuns in pagan lands to struggle along without the sympathy and encouragement of Catholics "at home". This change of attitude is largely due to the influence of the Crusade Movement in Catholic Schools, and in the C.C.S.M.C. we have one of the most consoling manifestations of present-day Catholicism.

His Eminence Cardinal Fumasoni-Biondi, Prefect of the Sacred Congregation of Propaganda in Rome, has written that he is "happy to learn first of all that, thanks to the Crusade, knowledge of the missions, with consequent sympathy for this noble cause, is continually on the increase and that, as one of the results the number of missionaries which Catholics are giving to the Church's apostolate is growing steadily. That is the Crusades' principal purpose."

When properly presented, the work of the Missions has an appeal to youth. The natural spirit of adventure and the admiration for the heroic, which are characteristic of all young people, touch a responsive chord in the hearts of Catholic boys and girls as they learn of the efforts for the salvation of souls by missionary priests and sisters in pagan lands. This awakened interest leads to action. And the action now centered in the Crusade Units in our Catholic Schools is but the prelude to a larger field of action later on as our boys and girls go out into the world as informed members of the Catholic laity. There can be no doubt that a mission-minded laity is the greatest asset on which the Church can count for the spreading of God's Kingdom on earth.

It is impossible to under-estimate the value of the training which the activities of Crusade Units provide for their members. Until quite recently the Catholic missionary movement has suffered owing to lack of knowledge and understanding among the educated and leading circles. Mission propaganda in the Schools is designed to remedy that defect. The leading and guiding personalities of our country rise chiefly from the academic ranks. They may, if animated by a true missionary spirit, render most important services to the mission cause, but, if not, do immeasurable harm by their lack of interest and understanding of the mission problem. Zeal for and understanding of the missions are by no means infused virtues, but must be acquired by study and practice. To instruct Youth in an understanding of missions is one of the highest purposes of the Student Crusade Movement. The results will not be long delayed. We can look forward with confidence to the day when Catholic Missions will have their rightful place in the thoughts and the lives of every adult Catholic from one end of the country to the other. The achievement of that purpose, and the hastening of that day, will be one of the fruits of the Maritime Crusade Convention.

OUR COVER

FATHER JAMES McGILLIVRAY, of Glace Bay, N.S., was the first member of our Institute to be lost to us through death. It is coincident, though sadly so, that the first pictures of his funeral at Lishui, China, should reach us in time for publication in this issue for November, the Month of the Dead. The cover picture shows the scene in the Church at Lishui as the Last Absolution was pronounced over the remains of our deceased missionary. The celebrant of the funeral Mass was Very Rev. R. Serra, Pro-Vicar of Chuchow Prefecture; Father Morrison (P.E.I.) acted as Deacon; Father John MacDonald (Windsor, N.S.) was Subdeacon. To his right, in surplice, stands Father Stringer (Ottawa). The Sisters (clad in white) are seen in the left foreground.

JOTTINGS

By

REV. GERALD DOYLE

BREAKING a hole through the high stone wall that enclosed the mission compound here at Lishui, robbers recently paid a midnight visit to us with the best intentions of doing justice to their calling. They stole some clothing, belonging to a sacristan, and then concentrated on entering the house. Father Venadam's room was the objective, but they made too much noise in forcing the window with the result that Father Venadam awakened and flashed his light on the window. The robbers took fright and ran away. Father Venadam figured that it was useless to pursue them. The only loss was the clothing.

The next morning the hole by which they entered was easily discovered, and the picture on this page shows Father McGettingan examining it before the masons filled it in. Father McGettigan desires me to say that he did not jump out of bed and rush down at the first break of dawn, umbrella in hand, to see the hole; but that the picture was taken later in the morning and that he is attired in a Chinese gown, a costume adopted by some of the priests during the hot summer months.

* * *

Breaking a hole through the wall is a traditional Chinese manner of forcing an entrance to a property, and usually the robber puts his feet through the hole first in case the owner is awaiting him on the inside. The story is told of an apprentice robber who went in head first and to his dismay had his head seized by the owner. He let out a cry that he was caught. The master robber outside called out: "I hope he has not hold of your nose!"

At once the owner let go his hold on the head and grabbed the nose with the result that the master quickly pulled the apprentice to safety.

* * *

The night following the attempted robbery two of the priests wanted to give Father Venadam another thrill and pretended to be forcing his window, but they spoilt things by laughing at the wrong time.

* * *

At noon three days ago Father Bernard Boudreau pulled himself through the mission gate, went to bed and called for the nursing Sisters. By evening it was evident that he had pernicious malaria. He had been running a high fever in Pi Wu Ka for two days and realizing that he was seriously sick he came to Lishui in a small river boat, and fortunately arrived safely at the mission.

Then began the fight to save a life. For two days his temperature remained high, and when the stomach refused to retain the necessary heavy doses of quinine it was given by injection; the outcome was very uncertain, but today it is evident that prayer, good nursing, a good constitution and a strong heart won the battle. So now we are grateful that Father Boudreau is on the road to complete recovery.

* * *

If the doctor has advised you to stay away from tobacco you may be interested in the pipe of Mr. Cheng, our guest master, who sits at the mission gate smoking when he is not showing chance visitors through the church and explaining the doctrine to them. This pipe is forty-four inches long and holds just a pinch of tobacco. It is interesting to see him light it, as the pipe is much longer than his arm. He has many plans but the most usual one is to take a live coal in a pair of tongs and hold it over the bowl of his pipe. Other plans include sticking a match into the bowl and letting it burn down into the tobacco, putting a lighted match against his shoe, or having a friend hold the match. I have yet to see him hold the match himself and have a friend take the first few puffs, but perhaps he does that sometimes.

* * *

During the next several days all the priests of the Prefecture will come straggling into headquarters here at Lishui in order to be here for the fifteenth of September, the opening day of our annual retreat. The retreat master will be Father Denis Nugent, an Irish Vincentian from Ningpo, where he is rector of the grand seminary. Although Father Nugent has been many years in China he still holds unto his Irish brogue and his love for a good story. When he first came to China he grew a beard and he himself tells the story of how he was persuaded to shave. Several years ago he visited his brother in Boston, but was deaf to all entreaties to give up his whiskers until one day, when passing a school, a little lad stopped and looked up at him in amazement, and then exclaimed: "Uncle Sam!"

It was the last straw. Since that day Father Nugent and whiskers are strangers.

* * *

We are told that the poor we will have always with us and it seems that here in China "bandits"

Father Hugh McGettigan, of St. John's, Nfld., attired in Chinese gown, examines the damage done by robbers to the wall of the Lishui Mission Compound.

Mr. Cheng and his 44-inch pipe. How does he light it? Read Father Doyle's explanation.

should be added to that. For what would China be without her bandits? Although Father Kam states that those we have in our district prefer to be called Reds, and are insulted if referred to as bandits. At the present moment the situation is quiet, although recently the Reds and the provincial soldiers had an engagement and many on both sides were wounded. It is reported that more soldiers are to be sent into the district in an effort to drive the Reds out of the province.

So while the bandits are a constant menace it is most probable that with very few exceptions all the missionaries in China will eventually die of some disease peculiar to the climate, ordinary sickness, an accident or old age.

The appearance of the camera at the end of the weekly manual labor period brings smiles all round. Top right: "I'm telling you!" says Allan to Jim—but it can't be very serious this time.

Our five new students who began their Seminary course in September.

The fourth year Theologians welcome Father Matte (centre) after his ordination. The six others in the group will be ordained Priests this month.

Lots of water goes under this bridge, and lots of students pass over it on the way to classes at St. Augustine's — so it needs must be kept in repair.

•

Cliff - climbing is a popular activity with many of the students after 4 p.m. Good preparation for the hill-climbing in Chekiang later on.

THE MISSIONARY SPIRIT

"TO be solicitous for all the Churches" remains the test and the manifestation of the true missionary spirit. This solicitude presupposes that broad, Catholic vision which carries the soul beyond the narrow confines of our parish. The Church indeed then is not only that handful of faithful, that church or that diocese with whom our every-day life is associated. Wherever there is a priest to celebrate the Mass, to preach the gospel, wherever exists a baptized soul, a soul in communion with God through the Faith of Christ, be it in the African jungle, or amid the snows and ice of the Arctic . . . there the Church of God is.

Solicitude is more a matter of the heart than of the mind. It implies a certain unrestfulness prompted by an impending evil or by a desire of some good we eagerly wish for, We are solicitous, because we love. Therefore, a genuine love of Mother Church means solicitude for Her welfare. Our heart goes out to Her in Her troubles and persecutions, in Her poverty and need. We suffer with Her in Russia, Mexico and Spain. The nearer Her trials are to our own home, the greater should be our solicitude for Her welfare.

Solicitude suggests readiness and promptness to help. Who, therefore, can see the dire poverty of our struggling missions and not be ready and willing to extend to them a helping hand? If we are really solicitous for all churches, we will gladly and generously levy on our income, no matter how small it may be, the "mission tax." Our prayers will accompany our missionaries who now blaze the trail which one day will become "The King's Highway" upon earth. By these efforts of ours we shall be, like St. Paul, showing ourselves "solicitous for all the Churches."

G. Daly, C.SS.R., in "The Field at Home"

A temple to Confucius, covering an area of 80,000 square feet, is being erected in Hongkong, the result of a campaign carried on for some years by wealthy Chinese scholars who believe that damage has been done to the morality of Chinese youth by the destruction of Confucian temples—Fides.

On August 8th, Father James McGillivray, our first missionary to die in China, was buried at Lishui. Here is the funeral procession going from the rectory to the church. Father Morrison, Pastor of Lishui, carries the crucifix. Behind him we see Fathers Boudreau, Gignac, Venadam, Stringer, and the celebrant of the funeral mass, Very Rev. R. Serra, Pro-Vicar of Chuchow Prefecture. The Grey Nuns follow the coffin.

A CLASSMATE'S TRIBUTE

(The "Xaverian", Antigonish)

IN the vestibule of the Somers chapel there rests a bronze plaque, mute testimony to those heroic sons of St. Francis Xavier College who well nigh twenty years ago bravely sacrificed their lives for the sake of their King and Country. In far off China, today, there rises a small mound of earth, silent homage to the sacrifice of one of the finest souls that ever entered the portals of this institution, a mound that marks the mortal remains of the first missionary of this college who died in China. It is somewhat significant that St. Francis Xavier's College should give St. Francis Xavier's China Mission that missionary who will head the list of its casualties in the propagation of the Faith.

The Reverend James MacGillivray who made the supreme sacrifice that heathens might live, lies today far from earthly friends and home, but near to God. Not for the honors of the present, nor for the fame of the future did Jim MacGillivray deny himself the plaudits of a world that promised to worship his manifest talents. A born leader of men he could have achieved worldly prestige, but he chose the mundane ignominy of a Chinese missionary, prefering to offer himself as a holocaust for the cause of Christ. "Greater love than this no man hath that he lay down his life for his friends," and surely his love was an exemplification of this divine adage.

In his death he has thrown the men of St. F. X. a challenge, the daring challenge of renunciation, the folly of the Cross of Christ. He has flung to us the torch of sacrifice that we might keep its embers glowing. The magnanimity with which he carried that torch makes our puerile efforts pale into sicklied insignificance, but may we have the grace to carry on the spirit of the first of our brothers to die in pagan China.

DEATH TAKE TWO GREAT FRIENDS OF MISSIONS

ON Monday, October 14th, Mrs. Theresa Small died at her home in Toronto after a lengthy illness. Her death removes one of Canada's outstanding Catholic women. For many years she had been active in promoting the welfare of multitudinous Catholic endeavours. God blessed her with an abundance of wordly possessions and she used these gifts for the honor and glory of God and the development of Catholic Action in many fields. The Foreign Missions claimed her interest, and China Mission Seminary on many occasions became indebted to her for large favours. She furnished several rooms at our Seminary, and often helped us financially through the years. In 1928 she donated a church to our Missions in China, and this church will stand for long years as a memorial to this exemplary Catholic lady.

At Saint John, N.B., on October 11th, Miss Mary E. O'Brien passed away after a few months' illness. The deceased had been a school teacher for more than forty years. Ever since our Seminary was established, Miss O'Brien has been one of our most regular contributors to every appeal we have made. She took a special delight in personal correspondence with some of our missionaries, and in supplying them with articles for the furnishing of their little chapels in China. In her capacity as teacher she made known to thousands of youthful souls the needs of the missions, and from the schools where she taught so diligently came regular aid for the missions.

In offering our sincere sympathy to the relatives of these deceased benefactresses, we, at the same time assure them that in the Masses and prayers of our priests and students our dear dead friends will long be remembered with gratitude.

OF YOUR CHARITY

please pray for the repose of the souls of

Sister M. Camilla Cass
Mrs. T. Small
Clement Arenth
Charles Mangold
Barbara Schoy
Mary E. O'Brien
Mr. Culligan

All our deceased benefactors share in the spiritual benefits enumerated on page 146.

R.I.P.

Regional Convention of the Canadian Catholic Students' Mission Crusade at Halifax in November

Open To All Catholic Institutions of Learning In The Maritime Provinces —The Programme—Missionary Exhibit Also.

THE Regional Convention of the Canadian Catholic Students' Mission Crusade will be held at Halifax, November 9 to 11, open to all Catholic institutions of learning in the Maritime Provinces, with the endorsation of Their Excellencies the Archbishop of Halifax, N.S., and the Bishops of Antigonish, N.S., Charlottetown, P.E.I. and Chatham, N.B., and the Vicar Capitular of the Diocese of Saint John, N.B. The following is the proposed programme for the three days:

Saturday, November 9.

General Communion in all the churches for the success of the Convention. Registration of Delegates. Business Meeting—Presentation of Mission Activities Reports—Appointment of Committees. Refreshments. Registration and Business Meeting to be held at the Convent of the Sacred Heart, beginning at 10 a.m. Saturday afternoon at 3—Mount St. Vincent Mission Play. Afternoon Tea. Saturday evening—Open evening—Private parties entertained by local Crusaders.

Sunday, November 10.

Morning—Solemn High Mass at St. Joseph's for Delegates, at 11.00. Afternoon—Crusade Rally at St. Patrick's Church at 3.00. Afternoon Tea at St. Patrick's Girls' High School. Evening —Special reunion for young men and High School and College boys at Holy Heart Seminary, at 7.30. Presentation of a series of Tableaux depicting the aims and objects of the Congregations of the Sacred Heart, the Sisters of Charity, the Religious of Good Shepherd, the Sisters of Martha, Filles de Jesus, Hotel Dieu Nuns, the Congregation of Notre Dame and the Sisters of Service at the Convent of the Sacred Heart—Reunion to begin at 7.30 and for the benefit of the Girl Crusaders.

Monday, November 11.

9.30 — Pontifical High Mass at St. Mary's Cathedral — Mass reunion of all local Crusaders and Visiting Delegates. 11.15—Business Meeting at the Convent of the Sacred Heart. 1 p.m.—Luncheon at the Halifax Hotel. 3 p.m.—Automobile Drive. Afternoon Tea at St. Mary's College. 8 p.m.—Mass Meeting open to the general public in Nelson Hall. Distinguished speakers, clerical and lay, will present the aims and objects of the Missionary Movement.

Running conjointly with the Crusade Convention, a Missionary Exhibition will be held at the Convent of the Sacred Heart.

The Convention is open to all Catholic Institutions of learning in the Maritime Provinces.

The joy of the Grey Sisters are these little Chinese girls who took part in the Corpus Christi procession at Lishui this year. Don't you think they're cute?

HE GOT HIS BEAM!

Being a builder in some parts of China is not at all an easy task, as you will learn from the following extract from Father Bernard Boudreau's letter. It was Father Boudreau who supervised the erection of the school at Chuchow, and he here tells us of the trouble he had in securing a necessary twenty-eight-foot beam for the building. A tremendous lot of "bargaining" was first required before there could be found a dependable and honest contractor who could satisfy the conditions of delivery of the material at the Mission. But at last arrangements were made, and—but read Father Boudreau's description:

"Four months after came the first beam. What a sight. The tree was from a mountain village ten li from Shihtang. It had taken one month to arrange for buying it, three weeks in which to shape it, and actually two weeks to move it to where I wanted it here at the Mission. The moving of it was a ceremony in itself. The beam had been cut high up on the mountain side. It weighed more than two thousand pounds, being of a peculiarly hard type of wood of unusual wearing qualities. Because of its weight, it could not be lifted more than a few inches from the ground, and thirty-five men were employed to get it down the narrow, slippery, and winding mountain path.

"If a small rock was in the way, all had to stop till the boss came and removed the rock. A mountain path little more than two feet wide in places, with a gorge on one side, was not the most favourable route for the carrying of a heavy beam, itself 14 inches wide, with seventeen men supporting it on either side. Yet, one-third of a mile was covered the first day. On one day the groups of carriers were changed three times. The boss was in a cold sweat all the time. He saw his precious beam, his men, the narrow path, the gorge below, and some place ahead a bad hairpin curve. What to do? If they dropped his beam, the fall of such a heavy log meant ruin. With no complimentary remarks, he kept yelling various directions about keeping in step, etc., etc., and threatening to put in jail any who caused him loss by failure to get the beam delivered according to contract. His chief and only concern was for his beam. The men ought to know better than miss their step. And then came the curve. It took three hours to get around it. Trees were cut down and a bridge made. Everybody was screeching and yelling orders at the same time. They could not get across. The boss had by this time almost yelled himself speechless. Off they go, but on the bridge the men in front let down without any warning to those behind. Curses galore and more wild screeches. One poor fellow had a pound or so of meat scraped off his left leg; the calf was almost ripped right off. Well, too bad for him. They just got along without him; he was bawled out for being careless and sent home. And eventually I got my beam."

HAVE PITY ON ME

HAVE pity on me, at least you, my friends! Thus does the Church interpret the cry of the Souls in Purgatory. If you wish to have Holy Mass offered for your deceased relatives we shall be glad to receive the Intentions at our Seminary.

"THE ANVIL of the CROSS"

By

Rev. Hugh F. X. Sharkey

●

A Book of Catholic Poetry

●

Father Sharkey, in his own particular style, has put into verse the doctrines, devotions and desires that fill the life of the true Catholic. The author, in a strikingly simple and beautiful form, has given us a glimpse of the Church Militant—our struggle against the world, the flesh and the devil; the Church Suffering—how by our devotions we can assist the suffering souls in Purgatory; the Church Triumphant—the fulfilment of that Hope that glows in each Christian Soul.

A copy of this book should be in every home.

Price $1.00

The Proceeds from the sale of this volume of Poems go to aid the St. Francis Xavier Chinese Catholic Mission, 572 Georgia Street East, Vancouver, B.C.

Send your order direct to the above address in Vancouver.

COMMUNIS

In view of the activities the United States, and present day, this outlin in China should pro

IN these days when each copy of the newspaper brings some new details of movements of military against bandits, or bandits against military, in the old Red centres of China, an account of the actual operations could succeed merely in repeating the press reports accessible to all in the daily papers. A slight attempt at co-ordinating a few remarks about the movement as a whole may not, however, be altogether without interest, especially in view of the current attitude of Europeans who take the restless state of China for granted, and pass over tales of ruthless massacres of thousands as though such things did not really matter.

It would be futile to attempt a description of the growth of banditry in China, for here, as in most countries in the world, there has always been a part of the population who found armed methods a more successful means of acquiring wealth than that practised by their more peace-loving brethren. Banditry, however, with a policy, the policy of Communism, is less frequently met with, and a word about its history in China may not be out of place.

When, after the treaty of Versailles, China found fulfilled to the letter the prophecy of Dr. Sun Yat Sen that the Great War would in no way better the position of China, and realized that the high-sounding protestations of the diplomats only cloaked self-centered greed, she turned in disgust to the only country that seemed ready to assist her. That country, too, was looking towards the East. The West seemed unready for the great experiment. So, China asked Russia for help, and Russia turned towards China hoping to find there a fertile seedplot for revolution. Of course, at first both sides compromised and united in opposing what they termed "Imperialism". Borodin arrived in Canton and Dr. Sun set about reorganizing the Kuomintang with Russian aid. They say it is dangerous to trust a bear. This time a dragon was trying to be friendly with one. The question posed from the start was which of the two would be swallowed up.

At first all went well. Back as early as 1919 Virtinsky had arrived to encourage the wild ideas of the hot-headed groups in Peking and Shanghai. and in June, 1922, at the second Congress of the Chinese Communist Party, the official delegate of the Comintern proposed alliance with the Kuomintang in order to present a "united democratic front". Dr. Sun at first was adverse to the proposal. Communism, he realized, was not for China with its close-knit social system and its lack of class stratification. "The Communist order or even the Soviet system cannot be actually introduced into China, because there do not exist here the conditions for the successful establishment of either Communism or Sovietism", he declared in his 1923 agreement with Joffe of the U.S.S.R. in Shanghai. And his

Some of the folks in Tsingtien. Left to right: The local catechist; the former health inspector for the city; the two sacristans, and the catechist's little daughter. Father McNabb tells us that some of the health inspector's duties include vigilance that pork sold came from pigs that were KILLED, and not merely pigs that just DIED; he also sees to it that the front doorsteps are swept off every day.

IN CHINA

ınunists in Canada and over the world at the ınmunistic endeavours ɛsting to our readers agreement with a further Russian envoy, Karakhan, later the same year made it quite clear that while he accepted Red assistance he was determined to prevent Red domination.

Dr. Sun had not intended to rely solely on Russian assistance, but all his attempt to get assistance from other Western powers had failed. Canada and the United States had turned a deaf ear to the representations of his aide-de-camp, Morris A. Cohen; Eugene Chen had failed to interest the British authorities at Hongkong and London; and Dr. Sun himself had been equally unsuccessful in Germany. As Mgr. Guebriant said at Lyons in 1927:—"The Chinese nation sought to find some support in order to realize its aspirations. Nobody dreamed of offering it any. Only one hand was outstretched to find it in the darkness, and by dint of supple patience in the end clasped it. With undeniable cunning it gave up groping in the North and came to set fire to the South, where it felt the tinder lay."

Fathers McNabb and Strang have their pictures taken with the caretaker of a temple just outside Lishui. Father McNabb was not sure whether the caretaker was a monk or not. "Guess he prays a little and caretakes the rest of the time", is the way he puts it. And our two missionaries were treated to tea in regular style by their caretaker friend.

And so, to Canton came Borodin, and was immediately named High Counsellor of the Canton Government.

"I have come to put myself at the disposal of the Chinese National Revolution", said Borodin to Dr. Sun. "Your aim is to fight foreign Imperialism which is also our aim. As to Communism, China is not in a position to discuss it, as conditions are not suitable. In the West, in Europe and America, one is justified in propagating the idea of Communism and in preaching the necessity of the class war. In the Orient, notably in China, however, our policy is to promote the National Revolution, and we have instructed the Chinese Communist Party to concentrate on this rather than on Communism. We have also considered the question whether the success of the Chinese National Revolution would mean the success of Chinese Communism and have come to the conclusion that, since the Kuomintang in its Third Principle of Livelihood is opposed to Capitalism, the ultimate aims of the Kuomintang and the Third International are not in conflict. As to the methods to be adopted, we must be careful to think out only those which are suitable to the social conditions of China."

It was a clear statement of policy. The only reason for not advancing the Red cause was the inopportuneness of the moment. Obviously the implication was that the Communists would avail themselves of the first suitable opportunity to advance their cause. And so for a while the bear lay down with the dragon.

That neither side would limit its activities to the vague programme of opposing Imperialism was clear from the start. The better elements in the Kuomintang were out for a more positive policy than this. Opposition to foreign power was only to be a means of establishing the autonomy of a reborn China. The Revolution was to be for China's advantage, leading the

(Continued on next page)

"The DRAGON AT CLOSE RANGE"

By

Right Rev. W. C. McGrath

●

Hailed by the Catholic Press as a distinct contribution to Catholic Mission Literature.

"This book is a series of short, attractive articles featuring events and observations gleaned from years of missionary activity. It makes us see and feel what the missionaries themselves see and feel. There are many humorous as well as inspiring passages . . . everything is bright and cheerful."
NORTH-WEST REVIEW

"This book assuredly offers interesting and highly instructive reading."
PRAIRIE MESSENGER

"Get this book and many thrills are yours. Have your easy chair ready, and several long to be remembered evenings will be enjoyed as you travel the Chuchow missions with zealous missionaries in China."
"The ANNALS"

"Perhaps the most attractive feature of this interesting book is its variety."
CANADIAN MESSENGER

There's an Order Blank for Your Convenience on Page 159.

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR
Postpaid

COMMUNISM IN CHINA

(Continued from page 153)

people of China to a better political and economic order. In the eyes of Russia, however, China was merely a pawn to be used in the game of World Revolution; the welfare of the country itself was a matter of quite secondary consideration. Strife and disorder were to be the two great weapons for the furtherance of the Red ideal. White Imperialism was to be superseded by Red domination. Dr. Sun was too far-seeing a politician not to realize from the start that Russian help was more or less of a gamble—hence his reluctance at first—but in desperation he decided to stake the fortunes of China on the throw and tried to weight the dice in its favor from the beginning. Had he lived he might have regretted his rashness.

So from January, 1924, to June, 1927, Communism was treated as a guest in China. The guest, however, decided to make himself at home and set about gaining control of his host's establishment. By fair means and foul the Communists tried to win over the Kuomintang to their way of thinking. The Kuomintang became restless. Communist power must be restrained. At the Second National Congress of the Party, held at Canton in January, 1926, it was decided to take definite steps to limit Communist influence. Moscow retaliated by urging a speeding up of the work of the Third International, and in Hunan and Hupeh Communist leaders pushed ahead their policy of confiscating farm lands. For this Borodin was taken to task by Mr. Wang Ching Wei. Borodin denied responsibility and shifted the blame on to M. N. Roy, an Indian Communist. Things went from bad to worse and the anti-Communist riots at Changsha, the capital of Hunan, in May, 1927, showed that the time had come to declare openly the incompatibility of Communist teachings and Kuomintang aspirations.

The action of M. N. Roy in showing to Mr. Wang Ching Wei a telegram from Stalin sealed the fate of the Communists. The telegram revealed that the protestations of Joffe in 1923 were no longer being respected. The Chinese Communist Party was instructed to push forward the policy of land seizure all over the Wuhan territories and on no condition to give way to the Kuomintang on the agrarian question. Furthermore, they were to strive to strengthen their position and build up a Communist army. To Roy's representations Mr. Wang replied invoking the earlier agreement that had never been abrogated. Borodin was naturally greatly annoyed at the diplomatic blunder of Roy, but the harm was done. On July the 15th, 1927, the Communist members were formally expelled from the Kuomintang. Borodin resigned and went back to Russia.

As has been seen, the Communist Party did not neglect the army and by this time large sections of it were contaminated with Red doctrines. The work of purging it of its Communist members was now pushed on with all speed, but in certain sections this much-needed work came too late. On the 30th of this eventful month of July, the Twentieth Army, under Ho Lung, and one of the divisions of the Eleventh Army, under Yeh Ting, withdrew to Nanchang, in Kiangsi, and declared their independence in the name of a Revolutionary Committee. Thus was born the Communist army which for so many years has been a great ugly sore in the side of the nation, a sore that has healed in some places only to break out afresh in others and that even to-day, after a treatment prolonged over many years, still remains draining away the strength of a long-enfeebled China.

The first Red venture in Nanchang was short-lived, being more or less suppressed about August the 5th, and the Communists fled southwards. An attempt to secure control of Swatow having failed, they set about establishing local Soviet Governments in different parts of the country. Perhaps the most notorious were at Hoi Fung and Luk Fung. In May of that year a slight attempt was made to establish Red domination, then in September the Communists secured power, and in that month and in November terror reigned throughout the district. It is said that 8,000 perished there in those and the following months.

Then came the savage outburst in Canton under the direction of Hassis, the U.S.S.R. Consul in that city, Heinz Neumann of the German Communist Party, and Huang Ping, a member of the Chinese Communist Party. On December the 11th it started an orgy of killing and robbing that lasted for three days. Government troops retook the city on December the 14th. The brief outburst had cost the lives of more than 15,000. What kind things men do when they try to replan the world, leaving out God!

From this on, the Government went definitely into the field against the Reds. In February, 1928, they were driven from Hoi Fung and Luk Fung. But in February, too, came orders and encouragement from the Comintern advising the Chinese Communists to adopt new tactics, and in September the 6th World Congress of the Communist International at Moscow stressed the need of pushing ahead the agrarian revolution and organizing a well-equipped Red National Army in China.

For more than two years the National Government was busy with internal difficulties and nothing effective was done to deal with the Red question. Then at the 4th Plenary Conference of the Kuomintang at Nanking, from November 12th to November 18th, 1930, it was decided to suppress both Communists and bandits completely, and to despatch Government forces against the Red Army in order to exterminate it and recover Sovietised areas. . . . But in the spirit of Communism there is no blood. The Government is fortunately beginning to realize that guns are not sufficient to oust Communism; until the condition of the awakening peasant class, ground down by centuries of extortion and mal-administration, is improved, the menace of Bolshevism will remain like a gloomy cloud over the length and breadth of China.—Rev. J. Garland, S.J., in the Hong-Kong "Rock".

(To be continued)

HOW TO PUT CHINA IN YOUR WILL

Form of Bequest

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY THE SUM OF ..... DOLLARS".

$250 will support a student in China Mission Seminary for a year.

$1,500 will pay for a student's entire course at China Mission Seminary.

$5,000 will found a PERPETUAL BURSE on which, not one, but a chain of students will be educated for China—the MONUMENT of MONUMENTS to leave to your own or your dear ones' memory.

YOU'RE NEXT, SIR!

And then the fun (?) begins

By REV. DESMOND STRINGER

THAT some phases of our Western civilization are going to the heads of the Chinese is evident from the gradual introduction of what we call the Barber Shop. Here it used to be just a room in the barber's home where you would come to have your head shaved, your eyebrows plucked, and your ears cleaned. There were (and, of course, there still are) many itinerant barbers who travelled about in search of heads. There were standard coiffures — whole shave, half shave, quarter shave—but somewhere from ear to ear a tuft was left to gratify the vanity that is innate in man. In summer the prevailing mode is a complete and entire shave, so that if as a beginner you distinguished a man by his hair-cut, you were left entirely at sea until you learned to read his bumps.

Now the Barber Shop is getting to be quite a salon! The old room has been whitewashed or covered with white paper, the walls adorned with pictures of China's modern feminine pulchritude telling you to smoke "Rats" or "My Dear" and the like. And, in not a few, large mirrors have been attached to the wall, which insures the customer absolute certainty that not a hair will be misplaced when the operation is over.

But today it is rather cold, so we'll call in the barber instead of visiting his shop. As he enters we exchange the usual greetings, sit down in a chair while he deposits his tool kit on a bench near at hand. Taking a towel, he wraps it around your neck and then takes out a large white sheet with red trimmings (the colour scheme at first makes one feel edgy—just a trifle!) and drapes this around you. Then taking a comb, he proceeds to arrange your part with meticulous care, and not a little pressure, so that at first you wonder whether he is going to pluck or cut. But no; he goes for his clippers and comb and commences the forty-five-minute operation. Some use clippers throughout; others, more modern, use scissors and comb when they go over the top. Here I just remembered something, to omit which would have been an egregious blunder. After he gets you sheeted he takes out a box of powder and a puff (my stars!) and just about smothers you as he dabs hither and yon over your forehead, behind your ears and down your neck. To continue. As he cuts, more than the usual amount of hair tries to worm its way down your neck—a most uncomfortable feeling. So every once in a while he blows it away. Until you get used to it, the sound he makes sucking in air and blowing it out in a veritable little twister makes you jump no end. This art is best demonstrated by the tailor. To dampen cloth he takes a mouthful of water and with one blast it comes out again in its constituent parts of hydrogen and oxygen, reuniting as they hit the air in so fine a form as to make a Scotch mist look like a cloud-burst! So for the barber this same knack of blowing out air makes a fan a useless expenditure.

The cutting finished, he prepares to shave temples and neck by damping them with a toothbrush. Then comes the fine-tooth comb, which he uses to comb out the tangles; when he's finished with it there isn't a living thing left on your head! Finally the operation is completed; you pay him and he goes. Getting the ears cleaned by the barber is something still outside my experience, but it's on the card for anyone who wishes it.

One Barber Shop I saw in Shanghai beats anything of the like at home. Going in, an attendant takes your hat, parcels, and anything else you care to give him, waves you to a seat and places the latest magazine in your hands. Your turn comes, and he escorts you to a chair, where two barbers are ready to work on you. One is an assistant and hands the required tools to the operator. As soon as he is finished electrocuting your hair, his work is over and the assistant finishes up. Hung from the ceiling is a large roll-shaped brush with stiff bristles. He pulls this contraption down, presses a button and proceeds to give your head such a brushing as it never had (and never will have again!). Before this revolving onslaught everything flees; the hair that remains, you may be certain, is in no need of any tonic! If you wish, you can have your nails done, your shoes shined and your head washed all at the same time. This modern age!!

So you see we are not at all backward over here. In the interior the bobbed hair is slowly becoming the style especially among the girls. But the vast majority of women still wear the hair tightly pulled back and copiously greased, which makes it "stay put" for weeks. Now that winter approaches, the barber knows that until the spring he will have plenty of spare time.

CHINA NOW HAS EIGHTY-NINE BISHOPS

PEKIN. — Statistics appended to the chapter on the present state of the Catholic Church in China, in the "China Christian Year-Book" shows that there are now 89 Catholic Bishops in China 14 of whom are Chinese. There are now 4,014 Catholic priests in China; 1,647 are Chinese. Of the 1,148 Brothers in the country, more than one half are Chinese. There are 3,319 Chinese and 1,831 foreign Sisters. The present Catholic population of China is 2,702,468.—Fides.

CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP

The only conditions of membership in the Rose Garden are: (1) To say every day the Prayer for the Conversion of China; (2) To go to Holy Communion once a month for the Intention of Missionary Vocations. Certificates will be sent to all members.

TO ALL THE BOYS AND GIRLS WHO READ "CHINA"!

I HAVE good reason to think that from one end of Canada to the other, and away down in Newfoundland, too, there are thousands of boys and girls (and not a few grown-ups) who will be glad to see our "Rose Garden" pages appear in print again. It may not be a bad idea to make this new start by outlining the "history" of our Mission Club for Junior Readers of "CHINA".

It was first published in September, 1928. At that time the Director of the Club announced that "the publishers of 'CHINA' have found out that they cannot get along without a reading public among the younger set". The new Club was placed under the Patronage of St. Therese, the "Little Flower", Patroness of Catholic Missions. The workers in the Club were to be the Catholic boys and girls throughout Canada and Newfoundland, producing "roses" of good deeds to help the Missions. For a convenient form of address, the Rose-Garden members became known as "Buds"—for do not roses develop from buds?

The Club met with instant favour, and, with few exceptions, during six years every edition of "CHINA" devoted space to the mission activities of its younger readers. In November, 1929, definite conditions for membership were laid down, and Certificates and Badges were given to every new member. At the top of this page you will see mentioned the only two rules necessary to become a "Bud" in our Rose Garden. There are no fees. The principal object is to enlist the aid of the prayers and Holy Communion of boys and girls for the progress of the Missions.

The fact that our Club has not been featured in "CHINA" for a whole year past was a real test of its popularity. It is a surprising thing to say, but one of the reasons why our "Rose Garden" ceased publication was that it became too popular. The Director became overwhelmed with work, and to get a "breathing spell" to enable him to keep the "Garden" correspondence up to date he omitted publication for a few consecutive months. He waited to see if the enthusiasm of members would keep up in spite of all. It did. Hence he is forced to give attention once again to the interests of his thousands of "buds". One would hardly believe the universal interest in the "Rose Garden" exhibited by readers of "CHINA". Throughout the past year there have been hundreds of letters come to Father Jim asking the reason for "cutting out" the Rose Garden, and urging its reintroduction. Father Jim can hold out no longer against such a demand, and from now on he is prepared to keep matters up-to-date, and to do all in his power to let "CHINA" readers know what youthful missionaries are doing to help the cause of Catholic Missions.

Here, briefly, is what I want new members to remember. (1) They must resolve to keep the two rules of daily prayer and monthly Holy Communion. (2) They must write to Father Jim asking to be made members of the "Rose Garden". When you do write, make your letters as newsy as possible, telling me what you or your schoolmates are doing for the Missions. (3) To those who write individual letters of application a beautiful certificate of membership will be sent to their home address. If your name comes among a list of new members from your School Class, a Certificate will be sent ONLY to the Class as a whole. (4) I want as many as possible to end pictures of themselves, or of their School Class.

To those who have become members of our Club during the past seven years I want to say that I have enjoyed immensely my relations with them, and I hope to hear frequently from them in the future. "Once a Member, always a Member"—that's our idea of keeping in contact with old members as well as new ones. Finally, may I say that this Club is yours, boys and girls, and I want your help to make it as interesting as possible. To that end I will gladly receive suggestions, and I will be grateful for anything you may send me suitable for publication in our pages.

I invite the co-operation of parents and teachers in securing members for our "Rose Garden", and I feel sure that we can continue to aid the Missions spiritually and materially if we succeed in getting the young generation to take an active interest in our Mission Club.

Yours for the Missions,

FATHER JIM.

A Prayer for the Conversion of China

(To be said daily by the members of the "Rose Garden")

O LORD JESUS CHRIST, who didst come on earth to save the souls of men, open now Thy most Sacred Heart in mercy to the people of China, who still sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, and shower Thy graces on them, that they may come to the knowledge of Thy Gospel. Bless also and protect Thy missionaries, and make their work fruitful for Thee of countless souls. —Amen.

(300 days' Indulgence)

With Ecclesiastical Approbation

The October "CHINA" carried a notice about the "Rose Garden" being started again. No sooner had Anna M. Culligan, of Douglas, Ont., read it than she wrote Father Jim a nice letter. Anna became a member several years ago, and has always been a faithful correspondent. I was glad to hear from you, Anna, and from several others who, like yourself, hailed with joy the continuation of our Club. Will our Buds please remember in their prayers the soul of Anna's father who died on October 4th?

* * *

From the Children of Miscouche Parish, P.E.I., taught by the Sisters of Notre Dame, made a generous offering to the Missions early in October. Many thanks to our young friends.

* * *

Lois McCabe, Secretary of the Junior Crusaders at St. Mary's School, Owen Sound, Ont., makes inquiry about the saving of used stamps for the Missions. For the benefit of our Club members I wish to say that we no longer conduct a Stamp Dept. at China Mission Seminary, but any cancelled stamps that do come to us are given to some other mission organization.

* * *

From a teacher in St. John, N.B., came a letter stating that ten pupils in her class were anxious to secure copies of "CHINA" each month. An arrangement made by many teachers provides for the reception of a definite number of "CHINA'S" every month, and these are then sold to the pupils at five cents a copy. Any who wish to thus make known our publication should communicate with us and we will gladly supply "CHINA" to them. It is a convenient way of doing something for the Missions.

* * *

I received several letters from teachers and from Club members extending sympathy on the death of our first missionary in China, Fr. James McGillivray. Some of them thought they had lost "Father Jim" of the Rose Garden. Although the deceased priest always showed an interest in the doings of the Rose Garden he was not the "mysterious" person who directed the Club as "Father Jim".

* * *

If you want a sample of what some boys and girls are doing for the Missions, just read this letter from Corpus Christi School, Toronto:

"We have had a little contest between the boys and girls of the different rooms in our school to raise a little donation for the missions in China, and also a subscription to 'CHINA' for each of the ten rooms.

"Some pupils suggested the ransom of Chinese babies, and others became interested in the proposition; so much so, that one room, No. 4, collected five dollars for the ransom of a little pagan boy to be baptized 'Christopher'. Their example was followed by others, so we are sending you now twenty-five dollars for the ransom of five babies to be christened Stanislaus, Philip, Mary, Teresa, and Christopher."

* * *

And if you would like to read of another School where big things are done for the Missions we present College Street School, Halifax. The Religious of the Sacred Heart have always been amongst the foremost in helping the Foreign Missions, and their pupils in Halifax have contributed large sums towards completion of a Burse for the education of missionary priests. In September came fifty dollars from College Street School, with the promise of another generous gift at Christmas. I hope to receive a group picture of the nine Grades at this School, and then the Rose Garden members will see some real enthusiastic young missionaries.

* * *

To make a great Trio of Schools active in helping us, and whose contributions have come within recent date, add to the two above the name of St. Aloysius School, Sudbury, Ontario. Our Rose Garden has very often featured their mission doings, and here's the latest account, a letter from Margaret McNevin, President of the Crusade Unit there. Margaret writes:

"Greetings from our friends of the 'Nickel City'! ! No doubt you will be pleased to know that the Senior IV Crusade Unit has reorganized and taken the field for action under the banner of Christ the King.

"Would you like to know what our objective was for the first part of the year? Since His Excellency Bishop Dignan favoured our parish in a very special way by administering the Sacrament of Holy Orders to a young man destined to labour in the China Mission Field we were naturally inspired to work for this great cause. To stimulate our zeal still further, Father Lacey, our new curate, entertained us with some thrilling tales of the China Missions, illustrated with skilful blackboard sketches both serious and comic, which were to serve as reminders to pray for the Missions every time we recalled them.

"You will find enclosed a treasury which is the result of our efforts to give spiritual assistance. We enclose also a contribution, returns of the cake and candy sale which went over with a bang on October 3rd, the Feast of the Little Flower. Just as the sale opened, who came in but Father Salini, our other curate. He gave us his smiling approval and a substantial donation. After that all went well, but to our dismay every morsel was sold out with three classes still unserved. The following day the boys picked up the good work the girls had begun, and the sale closed with the net result of fifteen dollars, which we herewith enclose."

BUDS FROM SACRED HEART SCHOOL, SAULT STE. MARIE, ONT.

This cut was made just a year ago, and the little members of the "Rose Garden" here shown are now that much older. We are happy to introduce them now in the first group of pictures since the "Rose Garden" was discontinued over a year ago. We can keep on showing pictures of our members if YOU send us yours. Don't forget, Buds, to send a good snap of yourself or your classmates to Father Jim. Looking from top left we see Constance Nault, Hanlan Hinsperger and his little brother Billy, Kaireen Kelly, Maxine McBurney, little Joseph Jewell, Rita Hoyt, and Betty Wilson. Betty is about 9 years old now.

PRAYER

O Saint Thérèse of the Child Jesus, who hast merited the title of Patroness of the catholic missions throughout the entire world, be mindful of the ardent desire thou didst manifest while on earth to plant the Cross of Jesus Christ in every land and to proclaim the Gospel till the end of time: we beseech thee, according to thy promise, help Priests, Missionaries, the whole Church.

300 days Indulgence

O Saint Thérèse of the Child Jesus, Patroness of the Missions, pray for us.

(100 days Indulgence)

Pius PP. xi

(Bref. Ap. July 9, 1928)

Eloping Girl: "Papa is going to be completely unstrung."

Groom: "That's all right, dearest; we'll wire him at once."

"No, Henry, I don't think a manicurist should marry a dentist."

"And why not?"

"If we fought it would be tooth and nail."

"Will you still love me when my hair is grey?"

"Well, darling, I've stuck to you through brown, black, red, gold, and platinum, haven't I?"

"Some folks uses big words de same as a turkey spreads his tail feathers," said Uncle Eben. "Dey makes an elegant impression, but dey don't represent no real meat."

Judge—"What is your age, madame?"

Fair Witness—"Twenty-two years and some months."

Judge—"Just how many months? You know you are on oath."

Witness—"A hundred and twenty."

Two Scots were having a drink in a bar. Said one seriously: "What's yer great ambition, Jock? Is there any one thing in the world you'd like better than another." "No," said Jock, hopefully, "another would just suit me fine."

A hatter, in a thriving town, stuck the following notice on his window:

"Our felt hats fit so well that they are not felt."

Not to be outdone, the man across the way produced the following gem: "Our carpets are sold by the yard, but are not worn by the feet."

Employer — "Now, don't be inquisitive. I discharged my last boy for that."

New Boy — "Yes, sir; wot was his name and wot did you pay him and wot was he inquisitive about?"

Footpad—"And now I'll trouble you to take off that suit of clothes."

Jones—"Thanks awfully. Only for you my wife would have made me wear it for two years more."

"A party platform is a mighty important consideration," said one statesman.

"Yes," replied the other, "a party platform in politics is a good deal like a bunker in golf. The rules require it but you show your skill in avoiding it."

Lady Pupil — "Is there any sure method of distinguishing mushrooms from toadstools?"

Domestic Science Teacher — "Yes; serve them to your husband first and then wait a few hours."

Alice—"Why did you marry Dick?"

Mae—"I got so tired having him around all the time."

Jim: "What is college bred, father?"

Father, with son in college: "They make college bred, my boy, from the flour of youth and the dough of old age."

She: "My little brother will tell if he sees you kissing me."

He: "But I'm not kissing you."

She: "Well, I thought I'd tell you anyway."

"Young Rose 'Awkins is goin' abaht sayin' you're in love with 'er, 'Arry. Is that right?"

"Garn! Don't take no notice of 'er. I might 'ave give 'er a clip or two over the ear, but that's all there is in it."

Cleaver the butcher was rather surprised when a slim young woman entered the shop and asked for twenty-five pounds of beef. All the same, he cut off the joint, and put it on the scales.

"Will you take it with you, or shall I send it to your home?" he asked.

"Oh," she murmured, blushing prettily, "I don't want to buy it. You see, the doctor said I had lost twenty-five pounds, and I wanted to see what it looked like in a lump."

A stern, hatchet-faced woman entered the office and inquired for the head of the firm. The junior clerk informed the great man that a lady wished to see him.

"Is she good-looking?" asked the boss.

"Yes, sir, very beautiful," was the reply.

"Show her up."

After the lady's departure, the head remarked to the junior. "A nice judge of beauty you are."

"Well," returned the youth. "I thought she might be your wife, sir!"

"So she is!" dryly replied his employer.

Mistress: "Sarah, I see a spider web in that corner! To what do you attribute that?"

Maid: "To a spider, ma'am."

Ross—"I've just had an argument with my wife. Women think they know everything."

Joss—"Well, there is one thing my wife admits she doesn't know."

Ross—"Really, and what can that be?"

Joss—"Why, she married me."

A school inspector began by putting a few questions to the small girls.

"Now," he said, "if all the good people were white, and all the bad people were black, what color would you be?"

Some of the children said white and others black, but little Gloria, who had remained silent until the others replied, said, "Please, sir, I'd be streaky."

A political leader in the Middle West completed a full course of study in veterinary surgery, but never practised. He branched out into politics.

During a campaign his political enemies referred to him with mingled sarcasm and scorn as the "Vet", and one day at a heated debate one of them asked, "Are you really a veterinary surgeon?"

"Why do you ask?" queried the politician. "Are you ill?"

"Wot I say is, the man should have all the say in the home; that's wot I say."

"I say the same—only I don't say it."

"Who was Shylock, Dad?" asked Willie.

"What!" said his parent. "You go to Sunday School, and you don't know that?"

Young Wife: "Pierre is perfectly wonderful to me, mother. He gives me everything I ask for."

Mother: "That merely shows, my dear, that you are not asking for enough."

Mrs. Figg: "Does your husband ever pay you compliments?"

Mrs. Fagg: "Well, sometimes he says, 'You're a nice one!' "

A farmer visited his son's college. Watching students in a chemistry class, he was told they were looking for a universal solvent.

"What's that?" asked the farmer.

"A liquid that will dissolve anything."

"That a great idea," agreed the farmer. "When you find it, what are you going to keep it in?"

Here's Your Chance to Clip "Coupons"!

GET THE HABIT OF HELPING THE MISSIONS REGULARLY

AT the present moment we are not in a position to finance the journey of our priests to Chuchow, and we trust our kind friends will be the instruments of Providence to help us send our Mission Band on the way to the land of their choice. The coming year will be a heavy one for us, financially. We appeal to YOU now to help us bear the cost of our missionaries' journey to China this Fall.

WILL YOU HELP?

Enclosed please find $..... , my donation to help in the sending of your 1935 Mission Band to China.

Name ..... Address .....

EVERY CATHOLIC FAMILY SHOULD SUBSCRIBE TO A MISSION MAGAZINE

Enclosed find $ .....as a subscription to "China" for ..... years.

Name ..... Name .....

Address ..... Address .....

Subscription is Fifty Cents for One Year

(If you have changed your address, please give us the OLD address as well as the NEW one)

"SELL THIS BOOK AND WE SELL THE MISSIONS"

"The Dragon at Close Range"

178 Pages 55 Photographic Illustrations

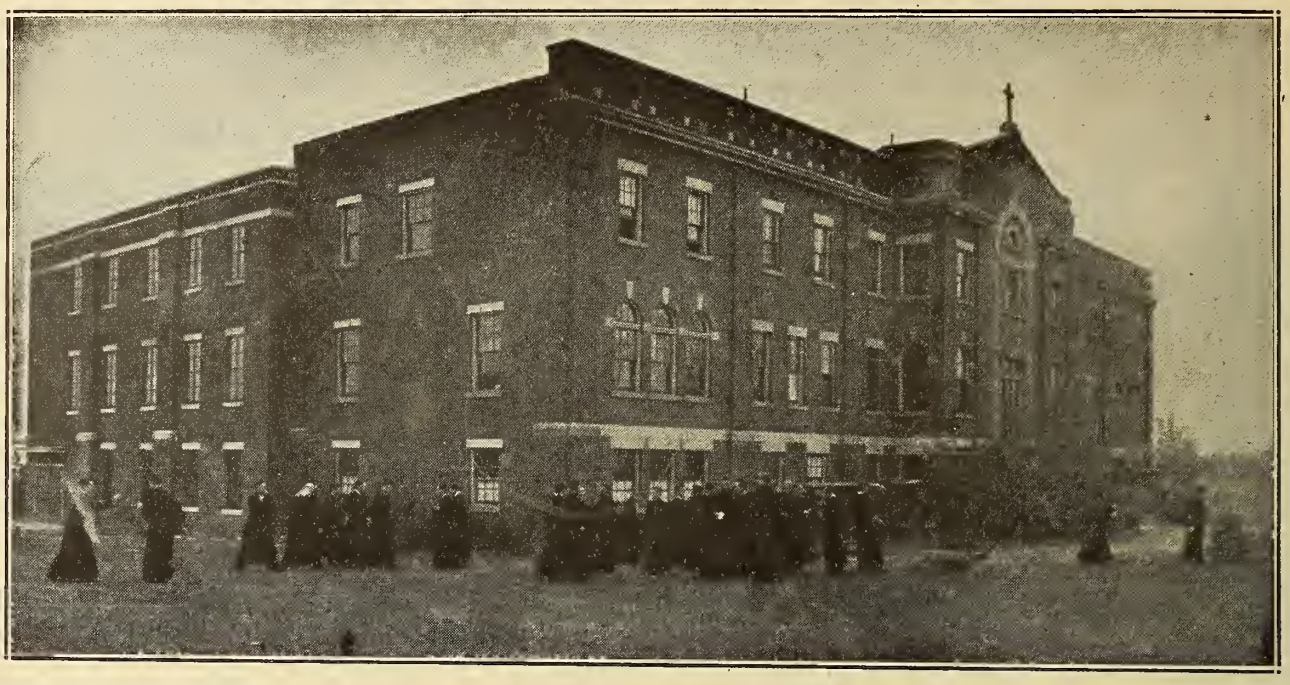
PRICE, ONE DOLLAR, POSTPAID

Enclosed please find $..... for ..... copies of Monsignor McGrath's book, "The Dragon at Close Range". Mail the book to

NAME .....



ADDRESS .....

.....

Kindly make cheques and money orders payable to:

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President

IF we had sufficient donations to our BURSE FUND our Seminary would become SELF-SUPPORTING

BURSES—What are they?

A BURSE is the sum of $5,000 given to the Seminary, at one time or in instalments, which, being securely invested, produces sufficient revenue to support a student. The capital is not touched, but remain intact. Year after year the revenue from a single Burse would be used to educate a student. When he is ordained and goes to China as a missionary, another student would be educated, and then another, and so on indefinitely.

Those blessed with an abundance of this world's goods could spend to no better advantage than by becoming the Founder of a Burse for China Mission Seminary.

A Burse is absolutely the most worthwhile monument to leave behind to your memory. What greater good can you do with your money than guarantee a succession of missionary priests perpetually?

Even small donations will be gratefully received to help complete any of our present incomplete Burses. In memory of your dear deceased why not send us a contribution to the Holy Souls Burse during November.

Help us by sending donations to our BURSES, either to the Seminary or in care of the "CATHOLIC RECORD", London, Ont.

Remember China in making or re-making your WILL!

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

Rev. John E. McRae, Rector

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS. ONT. DECEMBER 1935

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.

2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.

3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.

4. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

QUALITY PRINTERS

ADelaide 2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press
263 Adelaide St. West Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutor Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John. 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.

2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.

3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.

4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.

5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 25,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1934

Vol. XVI. DECEMBER, 1935 No. 11

WHY THEY GO TO CHINA

WE HAD previously announced that the departure of our priests for China would take place on November 30th, but circumstances beyond our control made it necessary to defer the event. The "Empress of Canada" out of Vancouver on December 28th will have as passengers our 1935 Mission Band. Three of the four priests going to Chuchow have already passed some years in China: Monsignor McGrath, Father Beal and Father Sharkey. Father Curtin goes to the Missions for the first time.

* * * * * * *

IT IS typical of missionary self-sacrifice that at this season of the year we have to speak of "going away from home" rather than of "home-coming". When all over the world people are making preparations to spend the Christmas days among their families and friends, it is significant that our missionaries are doing the very opposite. They are leaving home and friends and going off to a far land where they will have practically nothing in common with the pagans save humanity and its weaknesses.

* * * * * * *

CONSIDERING the stark reality of the fact that young men willingly welcome the hardships of missionary life, we are forced to say that there must be some tremendous motive power actuating them which many Catholics do not know or at least do not appreciate.

Briefly, the reason why the missionary goes to a foreign land is that the Church founded by Christ, in Whose Name he goes, is Catholic. Neither would he have been called by Christ for foreign mission work, nor would he have been sent to do that work by Christ's Vicar on earth were not the church Catholic. The catholicity of the Church was proclaimed by the angels on the morning they sang out our Saviour's first message to the world: "Peace on earth to men of good-will", regardless of nationality. No qualification was placed for men who were willing to hear. The first message of Christ was an invitation for the whole world to come; His last message, according to St. Matthew, was a command to His apostles to go to the whole world to spread the news of the salvation offered to all men: "Going therefore teach ye all nations: baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Because the Church is supernational, and in fulfilment of Christ's orders, missionaries go to China.

THE millions of Catholics who spend their lives within the boundaries of the Diocese where they were born have yet an interest that must reach out to and embrace their fellow-men no matter where on earth they plod their weary way. All who have their "home" within the bosom of the Church Catholic are bound by strong ties one to another without any distinction of race, nation, tribe, or family. Some there are who receive the Divine vocation to become couriers of Christ in distant lands; all others are bound to support by their prayers and their help those who go afar in order to bring the joyful tidings of Redemption to their less fortunate brethren.

* * * * * * *

THE CHINESE MISSION IN VANCOUVER

ORDAINED in May, 1929, Father Sharkey went to China in October of that year, but three years later he was recalled from Chuchow to establish a Mission among the Chinese in Vancouver at the request of His Excellency Archbishop Duke. For the past three years Father Sharkey has laboured incessantly and with extraordinary zeal to promote the interests of the Catholic Church among the thousands of Orientals in Vancouver. As in every kind of pioneer work, so in his, the difficulties were many and great, but the situation was met with energetic efforts which ultimately bore fruit in the foundation of a promising work. With the loyal and enthusiastic assistance of three Sisters of the Immaculate Conception, a Kindergarten was established and is now functioning well with an enrolment of about fifty pupils. Nearly fifty converts have been received into the Church, and the average attendance at Sunday School is eighty-five.

* * * * * * *

UPWARDS of fifty thousand Orientals reside in the Province of British Columbia, the majority of them under Archbishop Duke's jurisdiction. In bringing to the notice of these people the claims of the Catholic Church a good beginning has been made. Father Sharkey has done his work well. Now he returns to Chuchow, and the care of the Chinese Mission in Vancouver has been confided to Rev. Roland Roberts, another of our youthful missionaries. We offer to Father Sharkey our congratulations on the results he has achieved. To his successor, Father Roberts, we extend our best wishes for a most fruitful apostolate, and we beg the prayers of our readers that this work for souls among the Chinese in Vancouver may prosper and progress.

To All Our Readers — A Happy Christmas

JOTTINGS

By REV. GERALD DOYLE

THERE are several advantages to be found in the Mission waterworks system here in Lishui, although they are negative advantages. There is no danger of a pipe freezing in the winter, or springing a leak at an embarrassing moment, nor is there danger of the bath-tub overflowing; for the waterworks system here finds pipes and such things unnecessary and the main cog in the system is Lin Noh, a stolid Chinese who, all day long, carries heavy buckets of water from one of the city wells into the Mission. Usually his feet are bare and an apron made from a flour bag forms a major part of his costume.

Good water is a boon here in China, but as we have not our own well we must depend on a public well near the mission. The water intended for drinking must be boiled and then filtered. Away from the Mission only tea is drunk as the water would not be safe.

Saying that we have not our own well is not exactly true as in front of the house is a well dug in the time of the French Fathers, before we came to China, but it does not give water. After sinking the well more than forty feet the Fathers fearing that the walls would fall in would not let the workmen continue. So now our "well" is just a deep hole with a little seepage, but it is far from being useless as it serves as a refrigerator of sorts in the summer when bottles of drinking water are lowered to the bottom, so that if our water is not cold it is at least cool.

* * *

THE ferry was crowded as Father Gignac and myself settled into seats on the edge of the boat. Leaving shore we could see the women washing clothing in the national laundry tub—the river, while next to us was a farmer with an ugly looking infected hand around which was wrapped a rather futile bandage. Father Gignac asked why he did not go to the Mission dispensary and have the Sisters treat his hand. Immediately an old woman suggested the same procedure and said that the Sisters would take the poison out of the hand. Her confidence in the Sisters was unlimited.

The man was silent for awhile and then asked: "Will I have to pay anything?"

"No," replied the old woman, "you do not have to give any money. Of course, after your hand is better you can if you like, give a basket of eggs, but it is not necessary."

I believe the man went to the dispensary and had the hand treated, but whether he brought the eggs or not I do not know, but some do bring eggs while others wait until the eggs hatch and the chickens grow up and then bring them along. Naturally the poor pagans do not know if it is Sunday or not, on which day the dispensary is closed, so if during the Sunday Mass we hear chickens cackling at the back of the church we know that a little presentation awaits the Sisters at the end of the Mass.

* * *

VARIOUS stories of the activities of the bandits come to us, but it is difficult to know for certain where the bandits are or what they are doing. Today they are in one place and the next day miles away. So far no mission property has been touched and as the National government is sending soldiers into the district there is hope that the bandits will be driven out before they do any more harm. It is said that there are at least sixty-five thousand soldiers in the district, fifteeen thousand near Sungyang and fifty thousand near Lungchuan (where Father Venini is stationed).

Some observers doubt very much that these soldiers have been brought here only to rid the district of bandits, but think that General Chiang Kai-Shek is preparing for a possible war with the army of southern China. The only certainty is that there is no certainty here in China. In the meantime, things are going along as usual, Father Morrison is now (I am writing this on Oct. 12) making the missions, visiting Pi-Wu-Ka (as Father Boudreau is in the hospital in Shanghai recovering from his attack of malaria), Shih-t'ang and Yun-ho.

* * *

IN the minds of small children in Canada toys are very necessary at Christmas, but here in China it is a different story. Last year Father Venadam asked his choir boys what they would like at Christmas, to see what they would say.

"Would you like an aeroplane?" he asked.

"Could we fly in it?" they inquired.

"Oh, no, it would be just a toy."

"That would be no use," they replied, and like answers were given when he suggested other toys. The

"Leaving shore we could see the women washing clothing in the national laundry tub —the river."

The Lishui "waterworks" would be a flop without Lin Noh and his sturdy buckets.

struggle for existence was evident in their replies, the most important thing to them was to have something to eat and clothes to wear, with food being the more important.

In Shanghai after last Christmas I remember seeing many Christmas trees for sale at greatly reduced prices, and I suppose the Chinese merchants wondered why there was no sale for them once Christmas was over.

Some doubtless wonder how we in China spend Christmas. By no stretch of the imagination is it the same as back home, but just the same we do very well. Some will be here at headquarters to help carry out the ceremonies, while others will go out to the mission chapels in order that as many Christians as possible will be able to properly celebrate the great feast. Those who are thus afield live more or less Chinese fashion, but they are very happy in the knowledge that they are bringing the new-born Christ to the simple Chinese Christians.

* * *

DURING these days many are gathered at Hangchow to celebrate the silver jubilee of the episcopal consecration of Bishop Paul Faveau, Vicar-Apostolic of Hangchow. The celebration also includes the golden jubilee of His Excellency's ordination to the priesthood, the anniversary being anticipated by a year or so. Our prefecture borders on the Vicariate of Hangchow. We extend to His Excellency the most sincere congratulations and every best wish for the future.

(On behalf of the missionaries at China Mission Seminary in Canada "China" joins with our missionaries in Chuchow in offering to His Excellency Bishop Faveau warmest greetings and felicitations on his Episcopal and Sacerdotal Jubilees.)

BIG BUSINESS

By REV. J. VENINI

BIG BUSINESS? China must be the big business man's dream paradise. Just think of it. Four hundred million potential buyers. Eighty million families, say. With everything yet to buy. But with nothing to buy everything with. Certain it is, that if ever the standard of living of the Chinese people is raised to the point where they can afford to own motor cars, Ford will forget about his philanthropic eight-hour day, five-day week. The forgotten man will be forgotten more in the mad rush to replenish the depleted wallets.

I wonder if the living standard of the people of the East ever will even approximate European or American standards. The ukases of Nankin reply emphatically in the affirmative. The history of the Chinese, and the present condition of the people, would appear to return a decided negative. But if the change should come, the raising of the Chinese standards of living will call for the razing of practically every existing institution and custom.

Take their housing conditions, for example. Forty thousand Chinese will live, or at least exist, on an area that would hardly suffice for a population of ten thousand in America where separate dwellings for individual families is the custom. Enlarge the cities, you say. Good. But that would eat up thousands of acres of valuable rice fields. There are no great open spaces going to waste here. Or it would necessitate the undertaking of gigantic engineering feats. Reclaiming flood lands. Levelling mountains. Build sky-scraping tenement houses, you suggest. Very good, also. But landlords expect regular dividends on their investments, and the Chinese tenant could not afford to pay sufficient rent to supply these dividends. The problem of Progress in China seems well-nigh hopeless. In America or Europe the people had to be educated, more or less gradually, to accept, and then demand, the conveniences of modern life. But above all they had to be provided with the means to purchase these conveniences. The Chinese would like to have the same conveniences and luxuries. They want them. They are only human. But they can't afford to pay for them. Therefore, they can't have them. The big business men—and the little ones—are human, too.

The November "China" reaches the Seminary. The first readers each month are the Seminarians, and, of course, they do try to improve on the joke page.

ORDINATION
CLASS 1935
REV. JAMES LEONARD
REV. WILLIAM MATTE
REV. LEONARD HUDSWELL
REV. HAROLD MURPHY
REV. JOHN MAURICE
REV. RONALD REEVES
REV. LAWRENCE McAULIFFE

Letter of the Mother of a Newly Ordained Priest

I BEG you, my dear Friend, to help me to thank God. What a happiness is mine! I am the mother of a priest!

Well do you remember, I am sure, how twenty-five years ago, after his birth, I announced the good news to you. You were the first to share in my happiness. Oh, how happy I was then!

He was my firstborn and, as I placed my hand on his baby head, touched him in his cradle to make sure my treasure was there, I rejoiced that he for whom I had so long waited, had come. But now what a holier, deeper joy fills my heart: I am the mother of a priest!

Those tiny hands that I kissed so lovingly twenty-five years ago, are now consecrated. This very morning they held the body of our Lord. That young mind which I tried to guide, is today by grace and study, more enlightened than my own. It is wholly dedicated to God. That little body of which I took such tender care, watching tearfully day and night by his bedside when sickness prostrated him, today that same body is at the service of his priestly soul. It must bear fatigue, nay, perhaps exhaust its strength in instructing the ignorant and helping sinners to rise to a new life.

That heart which has sought no other love than his mother's, is now consecrated. Oh, my son, full well do I know the charity of that heart apparently indifferent. It is not so; and if by chance God permits some wayward, troubled or stray soul to appeal to him, I feel sure it will find the needed sympathy in his priestly heart to enter once more and walk unfalteringly in the right path. Yes, he will do good, my son. He will, I hope, prove a true priest according to the heart of God.

I am then the mother of a priest, a real priest! A heavenly joy is mine on beholding our Lord come down to earth at his word and to adore Him in my son's hands. What sweet joy! What a happiness!

This morning when for the first time he offered the holy Sacrifice, I was there, near the altar, motionless, my senses as it were suspended. Suddenly, I saw him kneel, then rise, and I beheld the sacred Host lifted up above his head. I did not pray but gazed in an ecstasy, murmuring: "My God, I thank Thee. How happy I am! This priest is my own son, or rather he is Thine, my God. I love him because he is my child, but I reverence him as Thy minister."

When the moment of Communion came, I rose and went toward the altar. Turning around he lifted his hand to bless me, and it seemed to me I heard his suppressed sobs. Then taking the ciborium, he came to me. He held the sacred Host and laid It on my tongue. Oh, what a Communion! Our Lord uniting Himself to me by the hands of my son.

Did I pray? I cannot tell. An indefinable peace filled my heart, and I burst into tears. They were tears of love and gratitude. I could utter only two words: "My God! my son!"

Great is my happiness, my dear Friend, and I wish you to taste the same. There have been happy, happy days in my life, but none to be compared with this. It is the happiest, because things of earth have little or no part in it. Like Simeon I can now sing my Nunc dimittis. He was ready to bid adieu to this world because his eyes had seen his Redeemer, and I experience the same consolation, or rather a greater, since I behold my Lord become incarnate in my son's hands.

I must now close as my tears are falling fast over this letter, but they are tears of joy. Adieu, dear Friend, adieu. —La Revue Eucharistique.

THIS year's Ordination Class (whose pictures appear on opposite page) is the largest in the history of St. Francis Xavier's Seminary. On the Feast of St. Andrew, Saturday, November 30th, at 9.30 a.m., His Excellency, Archbishop J. C. McGuigan, D.D., of Toronto, will raise six young men to the dignity of the Holy Priesthood at Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Toronto. On Sunday, December 1st, the new priests will celebrate their first solemn masses in their respective home parishes, as follows:

Father Leonard, Our Lady of Lourdes Church, Toronto.

Father Hudswell, St. Cartagh's Church, Tweed, Ont.

STUDENT SUPPORT

YOU can give a priest to the work of the missions by founding or contributing to a burse, which is an invested sum of $5,000, the interest from which pays for the perpetual education of a seminarian for the Priesthood. You can help by paying for a year's scholarship for a student—$250. You can help by sending an offering, no matter how small, towards the work of supporting and educating boys for the missionary Priesthood. God is giving us vocations in good numbers. Will you help by giving us the means in ample sums? There are many ways you can help. If you are interested, write to us.

Father Reeves, St. Patrick's Church, London, Ont.

Father Maurice, Sacred Heart Church, Ingersoll, Ont.

Father Murphy, Cathedral of the Immaculate Conception, Kingston, Ont.

Father McAuliffe, St. Martin's Church, Ennismore, Ont.

Father Matte was ordained in September by Bishop Dignan, at Sudbury, Ont.

These young priests will continue their studies at China Mission Seminary until June next, and they will then be ready to join their fellow-missionaries in China. This ordination brings the number of our priests to 34. Forty-three students are preparing for ordination at the Seminary.

Rev. Dr. Charles Curran, Pastor of St. Joseph's Church, Halifax, the energetic Executive Director of the Maritime C.C.S.M.C. Units, whose initiative and ability were mainly responsible for the grand success of the recent Convention.

PRE
These pictures, taken on the steps of St. Patrick's Ch
W. C. McGrath, Prefect-Apostolic of Chuchow. In t

CRUSADERS ASSEMBLED OUTSIDE ST. PATRICK'S CHUR

Student Delegates from the following colleges, academies and schools: St. Mary's College, Halifax; St. F. X. University, Antigonish; St. Du Academy of the Sacred Heart, Halifax; St. Patrick's Boys' High School, Halifax; St. Patrick's Girls' High School, Halifax; Holy Angels' Con
Heart School, Sydney; St. John's Academy, New Glasgow; St. Joseph's High School, Reserve, N.S.; Notre Dame School, Pictou; Morrison
New Waterford; Our Lady of Mt. Carmel

.CH DIGNITARIES ADD COLOR AND SOLEMNITY TO THE CONVENTION
ring the Sunday afternoon rally, show (at left): Monsignor Curran, of Halifax; Bishop Morrison, of Antigonish; Monsignor is shown His Excellency Archbishop O'Donnell, of Halifax, who was Host to the Convention, with priests who assisted him.

FTER RALLY, SUNDAY AFTERNOON, NOVEMBER 10th, 1935
town; St. Anne's College, Church Point, N.S.; Mt. St. Bernard, Antigonish; Mt. St. Vincent, Halifax; St. Thomas' College, Chatham, N.B.; Anne's High School, Glace Bay; Sacred Heart Academy, Meteghan; Holy Redeemer School, Sydney; Mt. St. Joseph, North Sydney; Sacred h; St. Peter's Convent, Port Hood; St. John's School, New Aberdeen; Mt. Carmel High School, New Waterford; St. Agnes High School, Our Lady's Assumption Convent, Arichat.

THE C.C.S.M.C. CONVENTION AT HALIFAX

NOVEMBER 9th, 10th and 11th, were days which witnessed a spectacle in Halifax, N.S., that was a source of encouragement and of inspiration to all those who have the interests of the Missions at heart. The First Regional Convention of the Maritime Units of the Canadian Catholic Students' Mission Crusade, held under the patronage of His Excellency Archbishop O'Donnell, of Halifax, has established the fact that the Missions of the Church, when properly presented, have power to stir up within our Catholic people a sympathetic interest and an unbounded enthusiasm. Two of our priests, Monsignor McGrath and Father Sharkey, were privileged to take an active part in the Crusade Convention and they have reported to us that they were thrilled beyond words at the demonstration on behalf of the Missions, so well organized and so successfully carried out in the Maritimes. They are unstinted in their praises and commendations of the inspirational leadership of Rev. Dr. C. Curran, the Maritime Executive Director of Crusade Mission activities. To his untiring efforts, more than those of any other individual, was due the impressive success of the whole undertaking.

It is certain that the recent Convention will have a marked influence on Mission work at home and in foreign fields. If the enthusiasm displayed by one thousand young men and women, boys and girls, did naught but awaken a livelier interest within the city of Halifax alone, it would be abundantly fruitful. But those delegates from the three Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Prince Edward Island, along with the Clergy, Sisters, Brothers and prominent laymen who attended, as well as the distinguished Missionaries who graced the Convention by their presence, will return to their different fields with a renewed zeal that cannot but result in a harvest of souls.

We regret that space limitations preclude the possibility of referring in detail to the various gatherings, or of mentioning nominatim all those who played major parts in the triumphant success of the Convention. On the two centre pages we have pictured scenes from the Convention, and these speak more eloquently than words of the magnitude and solemnity of the events. To all who took part, to the Most Reverend Ordinaries of the Maritime Dioceses, to the Clergy, members of Religious Communities, and the Delegates from all the Units "CHINA" offers most sincere congratulations, and hopes that the interest manifested will long continue to make the Catholic people of the Maritime Provinces, and of all Canada, more devoted than ever to the great cause of Catholic Missions.

A feature of the Crusade Convention in Halifax was the Missionary Exposition at Sacred Heart Convent, where displays were shown by various mission communities and organizations. Above is a view of the mission booth furnished by our Seminary.

IT WAS AT CHRISTMAS

By
REV. CRAIG STRANG

IT is one of the consolations of every priest to have a very busy Christmas. Christmas night brings real joy to every missionary as he rests from a very busy day and a rather strenuous week; a week not given to last-minute shopping and checking lists for presents and greeting cards; a day not spent in examining presents and leisurely enjoying the gathering of loved ones. These things, of course, are not incompatible with a well-spent Christmas—but here they are just out of the question.

Readers of "China" are familiar with the missionary's way of passing Christmas. Such accounts usually reach the editor back home in time to make the February issue. But here is one in the December issue, and not at all like the writer would wish to be describing. Like his fellow-missionaries he would love to recount journeys to outlying missions—to tell of reconciliations to the Church on the part of fallen-away Christians—to describe the reception of new converts and the faith and devotion evidenced among the faithful, and humbly feel that he had been the instrument chosen by Divine Providence for such results among souls.

Taken more than a year ago, this picture shows our last year's Mission Band on board ship nearing Shanghai. Father McGettigan (left) had been ill recently, but a sea trip to Manila, P.I., has done him much good. Father Doyle (centre) is still at Lishui, and Father Strang has gone to his first mission at Tsingtien. "China" readers have enjoyed the regular literary contributions from these young missionaries.

But for the first few years such zealous activity at Christmas on the part of a new missionary is held in bounds by a multitude of circumstances, and so he must be content to look on and seek inspiration from the people and the young folks who come from he knows not where to be ministered to by the older and more experienced priests.

And so the missionary of one year has to be content to take a hand in fittingly decorating the church, and to watch with curious interest the servants putting up the exterior distinctly Chinese decorations. And then he watches the Christians, and many pagans, assemble in the church at eight o'clock on Christmas Eve night; he listens to them as they chant their prayers for half an hour; then he hears (without understanding the words very much) the apologetical sermon prepared especially for the benefit of the numerous pagans in the congregation. He harkens back in memory to his first Christmas in Lishui, and the first words he understood of a sermon preached in Chinese: "Tien Chu tse shui" —"Who is God?" He picked out the phrase several times as the preacher, Father Venadam, repeated the question with greater emphasis. Then followed more prayers, after which the choir boys sang their Christmas carols in Latin and in Chinese, and the writer dared join them.

Somewhere around ten o'clock there came an intermission, and the "newcomer" mixed with the Christians as they walked about the grounds and drank tea. Again, back to the church, more prayers, and then the Christmas sermon preached by Father Morrison, Pastor of Lishui. Not a word registers on the new missionary, but he knows the topic and can follow for himself the message of the sermon, the good tidings of Him Who came on earth to redeem souls.

And then comes the preparation for the Solemn High Mass. In this he can, and does, assist. The familiar scene in thousands of churches at that very hour is enacted right here; the same sweet hymns are being sung, and once again the newcomer "fits in" and his strangeness wears off as he views the Christians approach to receive Holy Communion.

Afterwards, outside, the people may not be saying "Happy Christmas"—but their sentiments are the same and the hub-bub of talking is drowned by the noise of exploding firecrackers.

In the later morning he says his Masses and sees the Christians return for feast-day prayers. Many of them assist at his own Mass, and all of them are present later for the second High Mass at 9.30 a.m. A repetition of last night, right up to the firecrackers, except, of course, that there are not so many for Holy Communion.

Well, he figures, these poor people certainly are spending a holy happy Christmas, and mentally he compares it to Christmases he has himself spent at home. But devotions are not yet ended—Solemn Benediction is given at two o'clock with the customary prayers to the Sacred

The door of the Lishui Mission Compound is gaily decorated for Christmas. At night, lighted candles are placed inside the columns and make a very pleasing effect.

Heart, the Blessed Virgin and St. Joseph. And at the end of it the whole congregation joins in singing the Chinese "Alleluia," and that was really thrilling to hear. Then the people disperse, those who had come from a distance hastening to reach home before overtaken by night. Yes, there was inspiration and edification, plenty of it, to stand him in good stead later on when the time would come for himself to take a more active part in bringing God with His Peace to men of good will.

And what about the priests? Are there no celebrations for them? Of course there are. When all is over, the missionaries themselves partake of the nearest they can get in China to a real Christmas dinner—and not a bad substitute was it.

In the late afternoon the schoolboys come forward with a question the new missionary had early learned to understand: "Kick leather ball, go not go?" Of course! A game of football!

The football game did not last long—the boys had to return because the choir members were being given a banquet through the courtesy of Father Venadam, their zealous director, as a reward for their year's fine work. It was quite a jolly affair as the happy shouts of the boys showed when the caterer appeared with each new "course". It was also enlivened with happy jests and by the singing of solos and choruses, and Chinese songs. The writer remembers that Father Venadam asked him to sing a stanza from some hymn so that the boys could judge whether it was good or not. He obliged (with his usual shyness?), and it was only the innate politeness of the gathering and the good humor of the season that prevented him from being thrown out on his ear (not his ear for music, either!).

And before retiring to bed the new missionary could look back at the past twenty-four hours and feel satisfied that his first Christmas in China had been really very, very happy, and now, almost a year later, he looks forward to the Christmases to come with the hope that they may be equally as pleasant, and more so because shared in by some who will come to know the real meaning of Christmas through his missionary labours.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER AND ALEXANDER THE GREAT

A Study in Conquerors

THIS article might well have been entitled "A study in distances," only that it is the conquering of vast regions, not covering them, that makes history. While hardy adventurers like Vasco da Gama have, in times gone by, hazarded enterprises that might seem to outdistance the subjects of our study, still such perilous journeying was more a flight, an escape, than a triumphal way. They might well go far, seeing that the further they went the nearer home they were approaching. But Xavier and Alexander are alike outstanding in their superhuman ability to stretch forward ever, like eagles that can build their eyrie no matter how inaccessible the place to ordinary beings. Xavier had a kingdom within him wherever he was: Alexander was the capital of his own empire.

St. Francis Xavier, a Spiritual Conqueror, Patron of Catholic Missions. Feastday, December 3rd.

Alexander was twenty in 336 B.C. when he succeeded to the throne of Macedon. After campaigns in Greece and Northwards against the Danube Celts, he invaded the Persian Empire in 334 B.C. That is, he crossed the Dardanelles with 30,000 foot and 5,000 horse, with perhaps no more specific intention than to recover the Greek colonies of Asia Minor, then satrapies to the "Great King." It is of use to try to see his real motives for the campaign of conquest he actually did engage on, because there is a remarkable likeness therein to St. Francis Xavier's campaigns in the Far East.

First, his invasion was the result of a frame of mind. It was part of his nature, his education, that he should attack the immense Persian Empire when possible. It was a heritage of purpose from his father Philip of Macedon. Similarly, Xavier's action was the result of an attitude of mind, a heritage of purpose from Ignatius, to conquer and go forward. Both probably never reasoned, or looked for reasons. They simply accepted their duty towards the hereditary enemy of all they loved.

Like men climbing a mountain, as their vision extended, so did the grasp of their desires. To both alike it was useless to say "enough." That divine discontent that was the most Godlike part of the deified Alexander is the great spur of Xavier, whose natural character was probably very much like Alexander's, though the objects of its exercise were through circumstances different. Put Xavier at the head of the army that broke the Persian lines at Arbela, and he will weep like Alexander when his army refuses to go further east of the Indus.

Both were unsparing of themselves. It is a bye-word that Alexander led his charges in person, was the first in pursuit, again and again was the first to scale a fortified place. One quotation will illustrate the ordinary authenticated manner of his leadership:

"The Indians (of East Punjaub) retired to the citadel; the Macedonians hung back and Alexander seized a storming-ladder and went up the wall himself, followed by his shield-bearers Peucestas and Leonnatus; Abreas a corporal mounted another ladder. Then both ladders broke,

(Continued on page 173)

Monsignor Fraser sent us this picture of a new church dedicated to the "Queen of Apostles" at Pukiang, Kinhwa District, China. The cornerstone was laid on June 2nd, and the building was finished in October. Its dimensions are 78 x 40 feet; a very substantial building with stone foundation, brick walls, and plastered interior. It cost only one thousand dollars, Canadian money, and the church has a seating capacity of about 500. In the City of Pukiang, which is distant from Kinhwa City three hours by train and 1½ hours by bus, many conversions have been made recently; the church is filled on Sundays. For 30 years a Chinese house has served as chapel and residence for catechists. The catechist, with his two little daughters, is seen in the picture. The workmen are building the surrounding wall. Monsignor Fraser's assistant, Father Tcheng, has now transferred his residence from Tungyang to Pukiang, and he has a new curate to assist him. The work in his part of the Kinhwa District has become very heavy, with 2,271 Catholics and 829 Catechumens, scattered over three counties. According to latest statistics in the whole of Kinhwa District (eight counties), there are 4,628 Catholics and 1,588 Catechumens. This is most satisfactory, but on the other hand an immense work remains to be done—there are still over two million pagans to be gathered into the One True Church. May the Queen of Apostles inspire generous souls to help the missions, and many young hearts to dedicate their lives to the work of the conversion of pagan souls in China.

REV. ROLAND ROBERTS

At his home parish, Victoria, B.C., Fr. Roberts was ordained in September, 1933. Illness prevented him from sailing for China a year later. For the past few months he has been at the Chinese Catholic Mission, 572 E. Georgia St., Vancouver, and he now is in charge of the work among the Chinese of that city, in succession to Rev. Hugh Sharkey, who returns to Chuchow.

REV. ANDREW McARDLE

One of the best friends of our Chuchow missionaries is Father McArdle, of Huchow, Che., who preached their Retreat in 1933. We had the pleasure of a visit from this veteran missionary in November, and will long remember his inspirational lecture to our students. He was the first priest from Scotland to go to China, 22 years ago. He is now en route to Glasgow.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER AND ALEXANDER THE GREAT

(Continued from page 172)

leaving the four on the wall. Alexander leaped down into the citadel and fought single-handed. . . . They kept the enemy off till the army broke in. . . . "

Of such a character we have a parallel in Xavier. His adventuring among the head hunters of Borneo is instance enough.

To compare the achievement of Xavier, we may quote the Encyclopedia Britannica, not a noted friend of Catholics:

"The work which Xavier accomplished was enormous; he inaugurated new missionary enterprises from Goa to Japan and the Malay Archipelago, leaving an organized Christian community wherever he preached . . . "

Both made singularly useful dispositions of their lieutenants; both had singularly attractive personalities: both were fighters and organizers of remarkable power. Comparisons such as the one we have made can be valuable to Catholicism. It is by completely stressing the power and vigour and merely natural bigness of our Saint's achievement that we can get men interested in them, make them realize that Catholicism can produce not merely supernatural men, but superhuman men, that we can compete with the world in its own stadium and show them heroes as great as their greatest. Then perhaps we might get men interested, even if a little, in our Cause.

To us the apparent fruitlessness in permanent continuity of Xavier's efforts has yet its message; if all he went through had but sufficed to convert one soul, and leave no further trace, it was little enough to do for an end so great.

The message that the lives of Xavier and Alexander chiefly seems to bear is perhaps thus summed up—it is better to burn out than never to be on fire. Death comes either way; but in the first case there is less for it to destroy.

Rev. K. Smyth, S.J., in "St. Joseph's Sheaf," Dublin.

Mass Intentions are badly needed by our priests in China. Send your intentions to the Seminary and they will be cabled to our missionaries in Chuchow.

St. Thérèse's Christmas Tree

A TRUE STORY

(Written for the "Little Flower's Rose Garden" by Miss J. C., Toronto)

TO a casual observer it was only a small photograph in a simple wooden frame. The pictured face smiling shyly from it might have been any little school-girl with a wealth of bright waving hair, great, luminous grey eyes and a small wistful mouth. A second less casual look revealed that here was no ordinary face, but one remarkable for the innocence and purity mirrored in its every line.

It stood alone on a little table in a corner of the living room and many a visitor to the M—— home came with the hope of seeing it. To those who enquired half-unbelievingly concerning its identity, Mrs. M—— was wont to explain:

"Yes, it is an original photograph of the Little Flower, taken when she was only ten. My Aunt Margaret who lives in Lisieux, France, is a friend of the sisters of the Little Flower, and of Pauline, especially. Pauline has given her several precious relics of Saint Therese and she was kind enough to send us this picture. We are all very fond of it and feel that through it, she is present here in our home."

Christmas Eve five years ago found Hilda M——— and her chum Josephine R——— busily tacking up gay decorations throughout the living-room in preparation for the most joyful event of the year. Outside a soft blanket of snow covered the street, transforming it into a new world of dazzling purity. Hilda, fastening a holly wreath in the window, paused to gaze out for a moment. She turned to her companion and remarked:

"The Little Flower would love to be here now: she was so very fond of the snow," Josephine nodded.

"It is especially appropriate tonight," she added. "The Feast of the Infant Jesus is her feast, too." Hilda crossed to the little table and took the photograph in her hand.

"You can see, I know," she said to the pictured childish face "how Catholics all over the world are offering acts of gratitude to the Infant Jesus. I'm sure you must be particularly happy on His birthday, because you love Him so much."

As Josephine listened to her friend a happy thought suggested itself to her.

"Couldn't we include Saint Therese in some way in our celebrations?" she asked. Hilda's eyes lighted in anticipation.

"That's a splendid idea!" she exclaimed, "but what can we do?" She glanced anxiously around the room.

St. Thérèse with her mother.

The most conspicuous object was the Christmas tree standing in festive splendour beside the fire-place and aglow with numerous lights and twinkling ornaments.

"We could have a tree for her!" she cried. Elated with their idea the two little girls sped into the kitchen where Mrs. M——— was engaged in icing an immense Christmas cake. She immediately fell in with their plan and the three commenced a search for a suitable tree. Finally an old rose-bush which had died an untimely frost-bitten death the preceding spring was unearthed from the cellar.

They fitted it into a little stand and decorated it gaily. When they had finished they stood back and surveyed their handiwork.

"The Little Flower will surely be pleased," said Josephine, and indeed the face of the little saint seemed to smile happily.

Christmas day came and went and Christmas week with its round of merry gatherings flew by on wings.

At length the New Year climaxed and ended the holiday season. When they had dismantled the large tree, Hilda sighed.

"I suppose we had better take down St. Therese's tree," she said, and began to remove the ornaments. Her eyes opened wide in astonishment as she gazed at the bush; it had burst into full green leaf.

"You dear Little Flower," she exclaimed, "Why, you could even make it bloom if you wished!" She looked carefully, but could find no trace of a bud.

"We'll leave it here with her," Mrs. M——— decided. "Saint Therese must have been pleased with your little tree."

"Oh, do you think she really was?" gasped Hilda. "It doesn't seem possible that a great saint like she is would be bothered with a little thing like a Christmas tree."

Her mother replied gravely: "The Little Flower always loved the simple, little things of this world; perhaps she appreciated your thoughtfulness in including her in a special way in your Christmas; and remember, too, Hilda, roses are her favorite flower and a sign of special favour from her."

Hilda asked, wide-eyed "Shall we water it, mother?"

"No, the Little Flower is taking Heavenly care of it; we will just watch and be grateful for such a loving little miracle."

Hilda's first thought on returning from school the next day was for the rose-bush. Her cry of delighted surprise brought her mother quickly to the scene. The bush, only yesterday devoid of bloom was covered with tiny, pink buds.

"It seems too wonderful to be true," the little girl said. She picked up the picture and kissed it tenderly.

"It must have been the touch of your little hand that caused it to blossom, Saint Therese. I do thank you for letting such a beautiful miracle take place in our home. It is your gift from the Infant Jesus to us. We are grateful to Him and to you; help us to love Him as you do and pray for us so we may all say 'Thank you' in Heaven."

Five years have come and gone. The little rose-bush is still blooming; its deep pink blossoms throw a fragrance akin to the fragrance of the Little Flower herself. The beloved girl saint looks with no greater sweetness from her place on the altars of a thousand shrines and churches than from the little picture before a miraculous rose-bush.

"The Dragon at Close Range"
By
Msgr. W. McGrath
PRICE, $1.00

FOR XMAS GIFTS
why not give
MISSION BOOKS

"The Anvil of the Cross"
A VOLUME OF POEMS
by
REV. HUGH SHARKEY
PRICE, $1.00

Wife (trying on Christmas present of fur coat): "Really, one cannot help feeling sorry for the poor thing that was skinned for this."

Husband (feelingly): "Thanks!"

Smith: "Poor old Jones next door had a windfall on Christmas morning."

Brown: "A windfall? Why do you say 'Poor old Jones'?"

"Well, you see, he's an airman."

Bobby: "How are you going to keep Christmas Day?"

Tommy: "Dunno. Is there any way to keep it so that it will last till the next one comes?"

Modern Youth (aged six, talking in his sleep): "Now, if the effect of eighty volts of electricity is equal in applied force to——"

Santa Claus: "Good gracious! Is this the youngster that I brought a yellow monkey on a red stick for?"

"Why are you crying, Elsie?" "I have got a new tooth, but it is a white one, and I wanted a gold one like Uncle Jack."

Mistress: "Mary, I want you to polish the silver so that I can see my face in it."

Maid (fed up): "Why?"

"So you're married! Did you have a honeymoon, Malinda?"

"Ah suppose ye might call it dat, ma'am—Ephraim done helped me wid de washin' de first week."

Hee: "Sorry, old chap, but I'm looking for a little financial succour again."

Haw: "You'll have to hunt farther. I'm not the little financial sucker I used to be."

"Oh! Mrs. Jones, you—you know your Harold's neck."

"Yes—what?"

"We—well, he's fell in the river up to it."

"What's the matter with Brown? He looks glum?"

"He's been contesting his wife's will."

"I didn't know she was dead."

"That's just it. She isn't."

Small boy (to his friend): "Fancy Gran'pa actually wanted to play Red Indians with me last night!"

"Aw," said his little friend, "an' anybody can see he's been scalped already."

Irate Passenger (as train is moving off): "Why the—didn't you put my luggage in as I told you—you old—"

Porter: "E-h, man! yer baggage is na sic a fule as yerself. Ye're i' the wrang train!"

A colored boy was strolling through a cemetery reading the inscriptions on the tombstones. He came to one which read, "Not dead, but sleeping."

Scratching his head, the negro remarked:

"He sho' ain't foolin' nobody but hisself."

Rastus—"Say, Sambo, what time in yo' life does yo' think yo' wuz scared de worst?"

Sambo—"Once when Ah wuz cailin' on a henhouse an' de farmer come in an' ketch me. Boy, wuz Ah scared!"

Rastus—"How am yo' suah dat was de worstest yo' evah bin scared?"

Sambo—"Cause de farmer grabs me by de shoulder an' he say: 'White boy, whut yo' doin' here?' "

Tommy—"The dentist has given my daddy two new rows of teeth."

Johnnie—"Has he really. What will he do with the old ones?"

Tommy (thoughtfully) "They'll be cut down for me, I suppose."

Friend—"Why do you have such misspelled words and such bad grammar on the signs in your windows?"

Storekeeper—"People think I'm a fool and they come in expecting to get the best of me. Business is the best I've had in years."

Mr. Hobbs had acted for many years as secretary of one of the welfare clubs. It was suggested on his retirement that he be given an honorarium from the club.

"Ridiculous," said one of Mr. Hobbs' pals. "I know old Bill and all his family. Not one of them would know how to play the thing if they got it."

An old gentleman saw a group of small boys in an English park and asked one of the number what game they were going to play.

"Cricket," said the youngster. "We're going to play a game of England versus the West Indies."

"Are some of you going to black your faces, then?" asked the old gentleman.

"Oh, no!" said the youngster, very seriously. "Some of us are going to wash them."

"How did they teach McPherson to swim?"

"They pinned a five-dollar bill on his bathing suit and threw him into the water."

Husband: "What possessed you to choose lemon color for your new gown?"

Wife: "It was because I had such a job squeezing it out of you."

"It's a long journey, Mac," said the Englishman, wearily, as he gazed out of the window of the train.

"And so it ought to be," replied the Scot, "considering the railway fare."

He (chattily): "When I was a small boy I remember I always wanted to be a clown when I grew up."

She: "It must be nice to realize your ambition."

"Some men thirst after fame, some after love, and some after money."

"I know something they all thirst after."

"What's that?"

"Salted almonds."

A Scotsman was stripping wallpaper from the walls of his house, when a friend called to see him.

"Well, Sandy," said the visitor, "are ye' goin' to have a new paper?"

"Na, na," replied Sandy. "Ah'm just movin' into another house."

A clergyman, travelling in a railway compartment, had for company a group of navvies whose language was hardly of the kind that a reverend gentleman is supposed to hear.

One of them seemed to realize this, for turning to the clergyman, he said: "You must excuse us, guv'nor, but, yer knows, we're just plain-speakin' blokes as allus calls a spade a spade."

"Is that so?" said the clergyman. "I should have thought that would have been about the last thing you would call it."

"Is your wife economical, old boy?"

"Oh, very. We do without practically everything I need."

Boy—"What's dignity, daddy?"

Father—"Dignity, my son, is what you think you have until the boss says: 'What's the meaning of this?' "

"What's the idea of that cross-eyed man for a store detective?"

"Well, look at him. Can you tell whom he is watching?"

When Christmas Comes

and you think of GIFT-GIVING won't you please remember to send a little gift to aid the missions

There is so much to be done —if we only had the means. A Christmas Gift from YOU we humbly beg.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

VERY REV. J. E. McRAE, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT. JANUARY 1936

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.

2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.

3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.

4. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Quality Printers

ADelaide
2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West - Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutator Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.

2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.

3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.

4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.

5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 24,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XVII. JANUARY, 1936 No. 1

JUST LOOKING THINGS OVER

IN this first issue of our magazine for the New Year of 1936, it is only right that our first words be those of thanks and gratitude to Almighty God for the blessings and favours bestowed on our Mission enterprise during the year just passed. True, it has been a difficult year, but we have learned to thrive against difficulties and they have the effect of making us all the more earnest in following out our ideals.

* * *

Under God, the fact that we have been able to keep our Seminary and our missions in China going at full speed during the past year is due to the support we have received from our friends, and we now want those friends to know how very much we appreciate what they have done for us.

* * *

Speaking for ourselves (and we suppose all mission institutions can say the same thing) we can say that the keynote of our progress during 1935 may be expressed in the one word, Sacrifice. Our daily mail is the only barometer by which we can judge the attitude of our Catholic people towards our work, and not a day has passed but we have had reason to know that people have made sacrifices for us. From the homes of the poor especially we have been the recipients of offerings in aid of our work, and we understand quite well that the "mites" sent us have a value far exceeding the mere monetary.

* * *

1935 was the first year which witnessed the return of any of our missionaries from China broken in health. Early in January, Monsignor McGrath came back to the Seminary, and a few months later Father Beal was obliged to return. In August we suffered a great loss in the death of Father McGillivray at Lishui. More than ever before, the events of the past year have made us realize what a tremendous physical strain is exacted from our priests labouring on the missions.

* * *

Seven new priests, the largest of our ordination classes to date, were added to our numbers in November, and one new missioner set out for China in company with others returning to active service. The Seminary has kept its capacity enrolment of students during the year.

* * *

Month after month we have been presenting to our reading public appeals to meet our needs here at China Mission Seminary. Naturally, a large institution with a personnel of some eighty people, has many and varied needs, so we offer here a brief outline of the most important ones. Please keep them in mind during the year when you may be in a position to help us.

* * *

Burse Funds. To support our students we have a fund known as a Burse Fund. This is in the nature of an Endowment, the interest from which is available to pay the tuition of students whose families are not able to meet that expense. Some 26 Burses are established and in course of completion under the patronage of some Saint, etc. Details are given on page 8.

* * *

General Donations. Perhaps better designated as "Stringless Gifts". It is by this method we have to secure the means necessary to conduct the Seminary and to pay current expenses as they are incurred. And it requires many thousands of dollars each year to keep from going in debt too badly. In fact our annual revenue through donations is altogether inadequate to meet our general needs, but once in a while we are helped considerably by Legacies from friends who, in making their last Will, were thoughtful of the Missions. If you have worldly possessions to dispose of testamentarily, we commend our work to your attention.

* * *

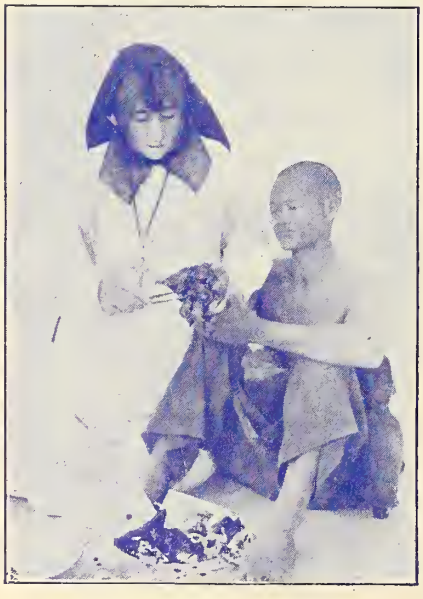
Mass Intentions. Practically the only means of support for our missionaries in the field is their Mass stipends. Could we give each of our missionaries a daily Mass stipend it would make things so much easier for them. To do this in the coming year will require an increase of about 60% in the number of Intentions received at the Seminary in the past few years.

* * *

Subscriptions. Were it not for the people who know of our work through reading "CHINA", it would be impossible to carry on at all. We mail more than 24,000 copies of our magazine each month, and we are anxious to increase this number. The more subscribers we have the more friends we make for the Missions. There is scarcely a Catholic family in Canada and Newfoundland but could afford the half dollar necessary to secure "CHINA" for one year. Please renew your own subscription for 1936 and try to influence your friends to become subscribers.

* * *

Those who help our work in any way share in the large spiritual benefits of the Holy Masses and prayers of our students and priests. To each and every one of our benefactors we extend our sincere wishes for their success and happiness throughout 1936.



JOTTINGS

By REV. GERALD DOYLE

ALL DAY LONG Mr. Farmer toiled in his field beneath a hot sun, and during the night wild pigs and other animals came and rooted up his plants. Something had to be done about it. The "something" was to prepare a home-made bomb to be planted in his field which would explode when the animals started to eat the plants. But home-made bombs sometimes behave badly, as Mr. Farmer found out, and it exploded in his hand. After recovering from the shock he made the trip to Lishui, forty li away, and when the Sisters at the Mission dispensary saw the injury it was no longer a hand but just a shapeless mass of congealed blood and bits of flesh. The Sisters dressed his hand, as shown in the picture below, to prevent further loss of blood, and the Mission sent the man to the hospital in Wenchow where the doctor amputated the hand. The man is now recovering but how he will work in the fields without a right hand is a problem.

* * *

Another patient from afar (the man walked 150 li—50 miles—with his wife and two children) was a man suffering from dropsy. The Chinese doctors could do nothing for him, but the Sisters gave him relief several times, although they knew that he would not live long. Being very poor he found the stay in Lishui difficult, so to help matters on one of the children, a baby girl, was sold. The man frequently visited the church and in his last sickness he received a little instruction and was baptized. As he lingered for a few days Father Morrison confirmed him. He died in the dispensary and the next morning a funeral Mass was celebrated for him in the church, and then the coffin was carried away and buried in the side of a mountain.

SISTER MARY CATHERINE, one of the Grey Sisters at Lishui, dressing a "bombed" hand. (See story above).

* * *

BUT ALL is not sadness; on the contrary there is much joy here for the Missionary. Just recently one of the sacristans, Fon Sz, had a big joy presented to him, his first baby boy. I baptized the child and just before asking for the name I noticed Father Kam trying to smother a smile. Evidently he was in on some plot. My puzzlement was cleared up when I was told, with an insinuating smile, that the child was to be baptized "Gerald". In a certain way I was a victim, as the Christian name is seldom used among the Chinese and it does not make much difference to them what name they receive, and in this case the baptismal name will probably be recalled only on opportune occasions, anniversaries, etc., as the Chinese, while remembering spiritual things do not lose sight of things material. But, to be honest, I was also pleased at the choice of the name, and did my best not to disappoint the proud father. On this page you will see the picture of the younger Gerald with his proud father and equally proud grandmother. It was probably the first time the grandmother had her picture taken.

* * *

The Lishui Mandarin had his own way of celebrating the twenty-fourth birthday of the Chinese Republic. He organized and led a procession through the city, each person carrying a broom, striving to impress upon the citizens the necessity of keeping the city clean. The results are yet to be seen, at least lasting results, although during the procession the streets were cleared of pigs and refuse. But the idea meets with the hearty approval of the Missionaries.

* * *

THE BANDITS are still active but the consoling feature is that the authorities are making a real effort to drive them out, or back to their farms, as some of them are just farmers who want to get rich quickly. Almost daily some bandits are executed and a recent report stated that their treasurer had been captured. The bandits have been driven into the mountains and soon they will have eaten all the food available so they will have to choose between disbanding or starving. Fathers Amyot and King are now back at Huang T'an. The bandits passed through the village but did not visit the mission, although they took some mail that was in the post office. Of course, in China there seems to be little certainty but the bandit situation at present in this district appears to be better than it has been in several months. They hinder mission work in as much as their activity from time to time makes the visit to some mission station imprudent, but, in spite of all, the work of the missions is going forward.

* * *

TSINGTIEN, which means Green Fields, now numbers me on its staff of three priests. I arrived here in October. At present, November 10th, I am here alone, while Fathers Stringer and Strang are visiting several mission stations. Being the sole priest in a mission in China, even though it be only for a few weeks, is an experience which furnishes certain sensations. All around are Chinese, many of whom look on the missionary merely as a foreigner, an unknown quantity, a person to be avoided if possible. Some claim that it is only natural that the

(Continued on page 13)

Three generations in the Convent Garden, Lishui.

LITTLE FLOWER'S FEAST IN LANCHI

Monsignor Fraser, in sending the above picture, says in his letter: "Lanchi is a city of 100,000 inhabitants in the district of Kinhwa, three-quarters of an hour by train from Kinhwa city. There is a chapel and residence, but unfortunately no priest yet. The Christian community, which numbers over 500 in and around the city, is badly in need of a resident pastor. Recently, Father Ly, my assistant, gave a mission there. It ended on the Feast of the Little Flower, October 3rd. This picture shows part of the congregation, ninety-four of whom were baptized that very morning. The two native Sisters in the centre of the group and the three little girls seated below them went specially from our convent to play the organ and sing High Mass. Father Ly is seen at their right hand, and to his right is seated Father Kiang, who after saying Mass here in Kinhwa city took train to Lanchi. Beside him is the Catechist of Lanchi. It was certainly a busy week for Father Ly. He was so hoarse from preaching day and night, hearing confessions and baptizing that he could hardly speak for a fortnight. All in the picture are wearing roses blessed on the occasion. One of the converts was a Protestant Catechist, who has come over to us with his whole family. They were all baptized that morning; and his son, now a daily communicant, is at my school in Kinhwa. Lanchi is certainly a promising mission, and I envy the missionary who, in the designs of Providence, will at some future time be placed over it. This pious congregation is moving Heaven and earth to obtain a resident priest. A few days ago, being all alone in Kinhwa, I had to go there by train on a sick call, taking the Blessed Sacrament with me, and returned the same day. On that occasion I also gave Confirmation to the Catechist's four-year-old son, who was in danger of death. During Father Ly's mission, a branch of the Catholic Action, the first in Kinhwa district, was established. Over forty members were enrolled. I ask the readers of 'China' to say a little prayer to the Little Flower for the complete conversion of Lanchi. Father Ly is very devout to her, and ascribes his success there to her intercession."

FOR THE COMMUNIST CAUSE!

The rifles of a military firing squad or the swing of the executioner's axe, was the penalty decreed for fifteen girls in China. They were Communist spies. For the cause of Communism, they worked unselfishly and tirelessly, living the life of a spy. Hourly they apprehended the death of a spy! All over the world, thousands like them are enthusiastically working for this same cause. Risking everything they hold dear, for this same purpose — the spread of Communism!

We may be horrified at the idea of fifteen young girls being shot. We may consider the sacrifice of their lives futile waste. But, their fervour of spirit we cannot ignore. However misplaced we think this zeal, it should make us ponder our efforts for what we know is the Truth.—"Catholic Missions."

NEWS OF NEWS

A new press service throughout China for Catholic publications has been recently established by an American missioner, Father Frederick C. Dietz, M.M. To have a mission correspondent in each of the 120 eccelesiastical jurisdictions of China is the plan now in progress of this AGENTIA LUMEN. Two services are issued—one in Chinese and the other in both English and French. Some releases contain all three languages! Written in reality for the Catholic press, still these releases reach the Chinese secular papers and the English, Spanish, French, Latin and Italian papers published in China. The results therefore are incalculable! Working as director, editor, and business manager, Father Dietz provides news that is comprehensive and interesting. LUMEN is a boon to the Catholic press in China, as well as to his attentive audiences in Europe and America.

—"Catholic Missions."

CHINA'S CURRENCY

The new law, which came as a surprise to many, nationalizes the silver currency of China. Henceforth, banknotes of the approved banks become legal tender. The circumstances of the inaugurating of the new law hitch China's currency to the star of England's sterling. As a result of the nationalization of silver, the farmers are beginning to save coppers, and a considerable rise in the price of copper was registered in November.

—"China Light."

MONSIGNOR McGRATH TELLS OF MISSION WORK IN CHINA

Fifty-three Priests and Sisters Killed by Bandits There in Past Twenty Years — A Great Work Carried on Amid Many Difficulties and Dangers

THE missionary work of the Catholic Church in China was the subject of an address given before the Canadian Catholic Students' Mission Crusade, at Halifax, Nov. 10th, by Rt. Rev. Msgr. McGrath, Prefect Apostolic of Chuchow, China. Taking as his text "The Kingdom of the World for Its King and Lord", Monsignor McGrath said:

"I deem it a very special privilege on the eve of my departure once more for China to be present at Halifax for this inspiring demonstration of love and loyalty for Christ, on the part of our Maritime Crusaders. In the name of our Missionary Priests and Sisters in China it is my purpose to tell you something of the work we are trying to do in that vast land where there are still five hundred million people sunk in the darkness of paganism.

"When we think of China, the first fact that comes to our minds is of those teeming millions that still wait in darkness, in the shadow of death. A thought that occurred to me today as the procession was coming into the Church, was of a certain possible procession that may give you some idea of the number in China who have never heard of God. Supposing that the pagan population of China should pass, one every second—one every tick of the clock, if they were passing the Church it would take sixteen years from the time the first passed the door until the last passed. That is not merely an imaginary picture, there is a procession like this going on since forty thousand die daily unbaptized in China. Forty thousand souls who were made to know, love and serve God, pass on in one day, strangers to the God who created them. They did not know Him. They could not love Him Whom they did not know. They knew Him for the first time when they were face to face with Him in judgment. We could not take the time today to try to peer behind the mystical veil that hides the designs of Providence. Ask where they are going—that vast procession of unbaptized Chinese. All down through the ages, these have been passing into Eternity. It is a fascinating theme. It is not my purpose to delve into that awful mystery today. One or two little stories of actual mission experiences in China will suffice.

"One instance of all the Mission experiences of four years' time in China stands out in my mind—a tiny village in Chekiang, Wousan, known as the Sorrowful Road Mountain or the Chinese Dolorosa. Nobody passes there except on very important business. We found ourselves on what we thought to be very important business, ten thousand miles away from Canada, trying to bring the knowledge of God into Wousan at eight o'clock in the evening. There was an old lady of about ninety years of age, who was the proprietress of the Wousan Inn. Two Priests and six servants as prospective customers pleased her and she went to a statue of Buddha and took out an old tin lying there, and lighting a joss stick, gave a thank offering that these eight people came to spend a night in her inn. Buddha had been neglected for years but this unexpected windfall of favor was welcome. Two beds of straw in a vermin-infected room were ours for the night. Then the foreigners were announced. The pagans found us out and the Chinese Catechist got this mass of pagans around him. They had never heard of God. I watched the Chinese speaker telling of God and of His love for men in the flickering light. One old Chinese of seventy-five was nodding a vigorous approval of the Catechist's teaching. He came after it was

A PARTING WORD

ON the eve of our return to China our first thought is one of profound gratitude to a kindly Providence for the truly miraculous growth of our mission work during the past few years. Twelve years ago we had no seminary, no priests in China, and but seven students in a small house in Scarboro. Today in China we number twenty-one, and in our efforts over there we are ably assisted by a devoted little Community of seven Grey Sisters from Pembroke. In our splendid seminary at Scarboro Bluffs there are fifty young men preparing to devote their lives to the work of the conversion of China, and we know that these are but the vanguard of a missionary army that will cross the seas in ever-increasing numbers as the years go by.

The future is in God's hands. But it will surely witness a glorious and triumphant effort on the part of youthful missionaries from Canada and Newfoundland to help wrest from the tyranny of Satan countless souls for whom Christ died. "Diligentibus Deum omnia cooperantur in bonum."—Wm. C. McGrath.

over and said that it was the most beautiful doctrine he had ever heard, but he could not believe it. 'You say there is a place where there is peace, where the devil has no power. I have lived for seventy-five years and have had no peace and never found a place where the devil had no power. I would join your people tomorrow if there were such a place.' In due course it was explained to him and God's grace began to work in his soul, perhaps because you Crusaders have said a few prayers or made a sacrifice. The old man came with tears in his eyes. 'I do believe that there is such a place, such a God over Whom the devil has no power.' He became a Christian and died soon after. It did not seem too much to assume that there was a place where there is eternal life. The poor old man who had spent so much time in darkness has reached the place of his reward.

"I could tell of many other instances. In one place there are one hundred and fifty towns and villages and there is not a single Christian in any one of them. There is plenty of work for the twenty-one young Priests and seven young Sisters in our Chuchow Mission.

"One more little story that concerns the work of the Sisters: I take my hat off to the young Grey Sisters of China. We are fairly free to indulge in active work, but the Sisters have but four gray walls. They have a dispensary and every day is spent among the most hideous of diseases, surrounded by Chinese. Just now it is a quarter past three tomorrow in China. They have not as yet begun their work, but a little later the Chinese will come with their children asking for the Mo-Mo medicine. Oftentimes they are called to attend to a little Chinese baby and they get into a rickshaw and go into terrible places. Bandits come for the Mo-Mo medicine after their struggles. These little Sisters have won their way into the hearts of the people and can go everywhere without protection. They always carry a little container with water and sponge. They can tell almost infallibly when the child is about to die and they suggest to the mother that they should wash the little head, thus baptizing the baby. Hundreds are baptized in this way by the Sisters. Is it any wonder that those Grey Sisters in spite of the prospect of an early grave on the mountainside are the happiest people I have ever known. Their reputation has gone abroad even to the bandits.

"One day three of these Sisters were coming up in a sampan. The boatman was a bandit in disguise. A Chinese lady was in charge of the Sisters. She heard the bandit saying that he was going to the 'Big Chief' because he could collect $50,000 ransom for the Sisters. The Chief refused him. He heard that they were the Mo-Mo Sisters, Christians. Only last week twenty-five of his men were looked after by those Sisters. He said 'If any of my men harm those Priests or Sisters, I will cut off their heads.' Even the Chinese bandits are not as black as they are painted.

"I could tell many stories about China, tragic, humorous, pathetic, if time permitted, to you generous Crusaders whose hearts are on fire for the Missions. There are many men and women who say, 'I can't see this Mission business anyway. I can't see why those people go to China when there is China enough at home.' When travelling from China on the Empress of Russia, I was introduced as a Missionary from China to a lady passenger. Her remark was: 'You are one of those men who go to China to make bad Christians out of good pagans'. There are many who can't see our motive.

"Let me ask you 'Why do we go to China?' Do we go to China because there are five hundred million there or do I believe that my life or death in China will make any impression in China? Do I imagine that any little cog in the wheel will change the destiny? It may be God's will to grant us numerous conversions in China. Some people discuss this as if it had not been decided nineteen hundred years ago, when Christ said: 'Go ye forth and teach all nations.' That command settled the question forever as far as we are concerned. The love of human hearts is the only thing that He does not command. Wherever they are they are human hearts and we know that the Omnipotent God will not force the love of those hearts. There is the answer, because we know that we can at least try to give Him back some of those who are sunk in the awful darkness of paganism. We know that the love of Christ is the driving force of Christianity.

"Fifty three Priests and Sisters have been killed by bandits within the last twenty years. Today, ten thousand miles from here on a lonely bank in China lies the body of Father James McGillivray of Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, one of the noblest, most zealous missioners of Canada, who died for this cause. He has thrown down a challenge to follow his example and die even as he died, for love of Christ and souls."

The missionaries who left for Chuchow on December 28th will probably reach Lishui by bus from Shanghai. Last year, Fathers Doyle, McGettigan and Strang came up the river. Father Venadam is easily discerned in the above picture showing the crowd gathered at the river bank to greet the new missionaries of last year.

A WORD OF FAREWELL

from FATHER BEAL

SIX months ago when I landed in Vancouver I felt like a stranger in my own country. I had become used to the customs of the Orient, to the slow placid stroll of the Chinese, and it all seemed to change instantly as I was conscious of being whisked rapidly away from the pier in a powerful motor car. My first feeling was one of loss as I missed my faithful Chinese "boy". Seven years in China makes one a good deal dependent on one's "boy." During the months I spent here in Canada I often had occasion to wish he was with me. He was my general factotum for all external and internal affairs. How many times I thought of him when I was preparing to make a trip somewhere, and when I got to the end of my journey I sadly reflected that I had nobody to blame but myself when I lacked an article of clothing, etc.

I have thoroughly enjoyed the months back home, and as the hour approaches for departure to China I want to say a word of appreciation to all the good friends who so greatly aided me and my Mission. During my visits to many parishes in London Diocese and elsewhere I learned how to better appreciate the intense interest shown by our Catholic people in the work of the Foreign Missions. I realized that, although burdened with obligations to their own parishes, they were ready and willing to make sacrifices for the extension of God's Kingdom in the East. I was deeply touched by their lively faith and their keen sympathy for their missionary priests and sisters working in Fields Afar. It was a source of consolation to have so many interested inquiries about our mission efforts in China.

There is an old saying to the effect that "One seeing is worth a hundred hearings". This came often to my mind as I realized how utterly inadequate on many occasions must have been my descriptions of actual living and social conditions among the Chinese. While I was in China I frequently thought over the possible effect on Canadian readers of the presentation of our problems on the missions. I often pondered whether or not our people ever could get to see things as they really are in China; whether or not they ever considered the necessity which prompted many of our appeals for assistance in one way or another. "If they only knew"—even as we knew from experience—then I felt sure their sympathy and aid would come to us. Humbly have I tried to present the case for the foreign missions to Catholic people in the past few months, and I am grateful for the attention they have given me.

Two contacts that gave me much encouragement, and which I feel sure will prove of great benefit to my work in China, were my meetings with Diocesan Directors of the Propagation of the Faith Society, and with Executive Members of the Catholic Women's League. The former merit praise for their ceaseless efforts to keep before our people the cause so dear to the heart of Our Holy Father. It was my privilege to address the Catholic Women's League in Convention at Windsor during October, and I sincerely appreciate their willingness to aid our Canadian missions. A gift of a Medical Mission Kit from Father Garesche, S.J., is going to prove of inestimable value to my Mission, and I thank sincerely my good friend Father Garesche. I had the opportunity to visit his office in New York during the past Summer and I could see that this missionary priest in his own quiet way is doing wonders for the Missions through his Medical Mission Bureau. His work is worthy of the support of every Catholic who even faintly realizes how much the winning of souls in China depends on the care and curing of diseased bodies.

In saying "good-bye" to my friends once again through the medium of "China", I must state that I return to Chuchow with a heart full of gratitude to Almighty God for my speedy return to good health, and with the determination to give the best that is in me to the great work which I was forced to abandon for a while owing to my poor physical condition. I carry back with me to my Mission the inspiration I have gained by my contacts with people "at home" who have assured me of their continued interest in our doings in far-off China.—J. L. Beal.

BURSES TO EDUCATE PRIESTS FOR CHINA

A BURSE is a sum of $5,000 (FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS) which, being securely invested, produces sufficient revenue to educate a student for the missionary priesthood. The capital is not touched, but remains intact. The Seminary would have the use of the ANNUAL INTEREST from each FIVE THOUSAND DOLLAR FUND to educate young men for the priesthood in PERPETUITY.

\+ +

SEVERAL of our Burses already completed have been outright gifts from individuals, but the others have been built up over a period of years by the large and small offerings of our faithful friends. We invite contributions to any of our Incomplete Burses. Even the smallest offering will move some Burse nearer to completion, and we certainly have need of such help now. We could never finance the education of all our students on the interest of our Burses as they now stand.

\+ +

THOSE blessed with an abundance of this world's goods could spend to no better advantage than by becoming the Founder of a Burse for China Mission Seminary. It would be absolutely the most worthwhile monument to leave behind to your memory.

\+ +

YOUR DONATION for our BURSE FUND may be sent either to the Seminary or in care of the "Catholic Record", London, Ont.

FORMER MAYO PASTOR GOES TO CHINA

"Into Thy vineyard I come in haste,
Eleven sounds from its ancient tower,
So many years have gone to waste,
What can I do in a single hour?"

GLADLY do I accede to Father Editor's request to write a few words to the readers of "China" before I leave for Chuchow, and I begin by quoting the above lines from the title page of John L. Stoddard's well-known book, "Rebuilding a Lost Faith", because they seem to epitomize my own feelings at the moment. I hasten to add that the "years gone to waste" refer only to the time that has gone by when circumstances made it impossible for me to be sharing the work with our Canadian missionaries in China as I have so ardently longed to do. I have spent twelve years as a priest in the Archdiocese of Ottawa. Twelve happy, busy, and, I trust, fruitful years. So far my contribution to the conversion of China has consisted of the daily "memento" in Holy Mass, and the poor prayers of one who has been all these years an admirer of the missionary and his work.

During the fifteen months that have elapsed since I joined China Mission Institute, months which have now such pleasant memories for me, I was in a position to learn much concerning the attitude of our Canadian people in general towards the foreign Missions, and from what I have learned I am convinced that ours is a work in which we have the whole-souled co-operation and sympathy of those people. There can be no doubt but priests and laity alike are with us in our efforts to bring the Light of the Gospel to the poor pagan Chinese.

The conversion of a nation is the work of God. Missionary priests and sisters are but the human instruments used by Him to accomplish that end. St. Paul, the greatest missionary the Church has ever known, expressed that truth when he wrote: "I planted; Apollo watered; but God giveth the increase". Poor human effort, unaided by the Grace of God, will amount to nothing; but when our reliance is in Him then indeed can we labour confidently. And we have reason for our confidence, because the success that has attended the efforts of China Mission Seminary from the very outset leaves no room for doubt but that the hand of God is here. It gives us hope for the future, and we are strengthened by the knowledge that our efforts are supported by the prayers of our friends throughout the country.

FATHER CURTIN

I am looking forward in happy anticipation to the days that lie ahead of me in China. I have come to value and esteem the companionship of the priests and students at China Mission Seminary in Scarboro Bluffs. The natural regret one feels at leaving them is somewhat compensated for by the thought that we will be together again in the near future in Chuchow. Even when I arrive in China I will not be as a stranger, for it is my good fortune to know personally a number of the missionaries already gone over from Canada.

I happen to be the only "new" man among this year's Mission Band, but the experience of those with whom I travel is going to make it easy for me to "break in" and find my way around after we reach Shanghai. One last request I have to make of all those who read this, and it is a request for your prayers. Ask God's blessing on my missionary labours that, through His aid, I may be an instrument in bringing souls to Him. And, finally, I wish to make use of this opportunity to express my sincere thanks to all those who have encouraged and aided me in my preparation for this eagerly-awaited event — departure for China.—M. L. Curtin.

MISSIONER—KNIGHT ERRANT

All kinds of roles is a missioner ready to assume. And what is more telling, he often assumes them. Witness, for example, the "bravery under fire" of this veritable soldier of the Church. A Chinese baby girl had been sold by her parents in infancy, as a prospective wife. Her brother, who was a Catholic, saw that she was baptized, and sent her to the Mission School. But when she came of marriageable age, as is only customary, her purchaser came to claim her as his wife. Her father, who had sold her, was now himself a Catholic, so he brought the case into court. After a lengthy suit, he won the freedom of his daughter. So angered was the would-be bridegroom, that he sent a gang of twenty bandits, equipped with knives and sticks to capture the girl. The missioner went to her rescue, but he was himself captured. Breaking loose, he fought the bandits with his fists and staved them off until help arrived. The girl was then sent to Tsingtien where she could be protected by the police. And our missioner-knight-errant was left with a few bruises and a sense of well-being.

—"Catholic Missions."

DIFFERENT METHODS

Opium smokers in China risk instant death from now on, the Chinese Government declares. By 1940, there will be no more opium smoking, it says. Now, certain districts only may be used for growing the poppy. Distribution will be in the hands of authorized government agents, the supply gradually decreasing. Eventually there will be no more opium in China! And for the opium addict, clinics for his cure are being founded throughout the country. Many have taken the cure already (about 50% voluntarily!). Those who have completed the cure are tattooed. To return to opium will be to sign their death warrant! Obviously, China is determined to abolish the evil of opium smoking. To do away with the crime, if necessary, she will abolish the evil doer.

This is a most noteworthy attempt at reform on the part of the Chinese Government. (Please don't mistake our attitude!) But we are struck by one thing. The entirely different angles from which paganism and Catholicity approach the same problem! One punishes the offender—the other seeks to change his essential point of view.

—"Catholic Missions."

"On the Feast of Christ the King took place here in Kinhwa, the blessing of the new girls' school. A procession of our pupils, boys and girls, about 200 in number, with banners, cross and acolytes, and sanctuary boys in red soutanes and surplices, was formed at the church, and amidst the ringing of the church bell and singing hymns as they walked, wended its way through the narrow alleys to the convent, followed by yours truly, the celebrant.

"The new building, which was made necessary by the increase in the number of the pupils, measures 60 x 28 ft.; it has two classrooms and reception room downstairs, and two dormitories, one for the Sisters and one for the girls, upstairs. The back and side walls are of brick; the front of stucco; the roof of tile; it took three months to build, and cost $500 Canadian money.

"Three native nuns teach the girls, most of whom are day scholars belonging to pagan families; but they are all being instructed in Christian doctrine, learn prayers and assist at religious service. Say a prayer for the conversion of their families, without which it will be difficult to confer on them the sacrament of Baptism which they so much desire. A number of the girls in the picture board at the convent assist at Mass and receive Communion daily. There are a few little boys in the picture, being too small to be taught at our boys' school attached to the priests' residence."

—(Rt. Rev.) J. M. FRASER.

MAN DISCOVERS MEANING OF PRECIOUS HEIRLOOM AFTER THIRTY YEARS

Fushun, Manchuria.—How a non-Christian workman wore a small crucifix for 30 years without knowing what it signified is told in a story from Chiaotou, a mission in this Prefecture. The Fathers at Chiaotou have a bulletin board on the wall of their compound. Finding on this board among the pictures of Catholic life displayed there an object resembling the one he wore suspended from his neck for many years, a passer-by asked one of the priests what it meant. From the story this man then told it became evident that his father had been a Christian and had been killed by the Boxers in 1900. Before his death he gave the crucifix to his son, a mere child at the time, and bade him wear it always. Upon learning the meaning of the cross, the workman expressed a desire to know more about the religion of his father. He has since studied Christian doctrine and was recently baptized.—(Lumen-Fides.)

A despatch in "China Light", issue of November 17th, reports that His Excellency Archbishop Zanin, Apostolic Delegate to China, concluded his visitation of Chekiang Province in November. Leaving Ningpo, en route to Haimen, he was accompanied by Bishop Joseph Hou, C.M., Vicar-Apostolic of Taichow. The voyage was not without its thrill. A cargo boat a short distance ahead of the ship on which His Excellency was travelling was attacked by pirates and sought safety in approaching the latter vessel. As a consequence, the shots from the pirates menaced both ships. After a short engagement the pirates withdrew.

PRIEST, ONCE TORTURED BY CHINA REDS, AT CLEVELAND CONGRESS

Cleveland.—Almost unnoticed among the hundreds of clergy who attended the Seventh National Eucharistic Congress was a missioner who experienced the tortures of captivity at the hands of Communists as he sought to demonstrate his faith in Christ and to teach it to others in the Vicariate of Wuchang, Province of Hupeh, China.

With eyes that had witnessed a convert die "a thousand deaths" and that were dimmed at the sight of whole villages being pillaged, the missioner, the Rev. Ulrich Kreutzen, O.F.M., marveled at the joyous scenes of the Congress.

In the midst of a flow of superlatives with which he described his reactions to the events here, Father Kreutzen paused and reflected. His thoughts, he admitted, went back to restless, tense days in China when Communists ran rampant through the country. He remembered the band of 400 which swarmed down on his village, November 8th, 1929, and carried him away prisoner to a pagan temple in the mountains. He chose to pass lightly over mention of the sufferings he endured for 23 days before he was released. But he did have a word to say about the Communists in China and in the United States.

They are not to be laughed at nor are their actions to be easily dismissed, he said. What he and many others have suffered in China will, preposterous though it may seem, he said, be the fate of other priests and people "even in the United States" unless the "lessons and the solidarity so evident at the Eucharistic Congress are constantly kept in mind. But after witnessing the demonstration of faith here, the missioner said, he is only too eager to be back to China, "even though it will take the combined efforts of the world powers" to rid that nation of the Reds.

A native of Calumet, Mich., he has been a missioner for 28 years. In his days in China he saw one of his flock cut piece by piece by Communists to "die a thousand deaths". That scene, too, came back to him here as he witnessed the "easy price that is paid for the faith in America." He also recalled the slaying by government troops of 33 Reds at his church door while his congregation prayed for their souls.

Motoring Through Chekiang

READERS of "China" have become familiar with the name "Chekiang" as it is the province in which lies our mission district of Chuchow. Writing in a recent issue of the "North-China Herald", Ruth Hill Barr describes in detail a motor trip from Shanghai through picturesque Chekiang Province, which she calls the "garden spot of China".

The following passages from her article will be of interest since they deal with our own mission territory:

"Then came the most beautiful part of our trip, the drive from Wenchow to Lishui (Beautiful Water), 75 miles on a road built out of the mountain sides, high above the river. The water was crystal clear and green with the reflection of the high hills on the other side. The tiny boats dotting the surface looked like a camp of small tents with white sails flying.

Curves at 10 m.p.h.

We marvelled at the feat accomplished in the building of that road, curve after curve round one hill after another. In many places solid rock has been cut away; in others bridges span the gaps over ravines. The road bed is good, but it is narrow, and careful driving is essential. The curves we had to take at ten miles an hour, slowly enough to come to a dead stop on a moment's notice. We met several trucks and buses but no private cars.

The beauty along that river road made us exclaim. We recalled similar drives in other parts of the world: the Columbia River Highway, the Amalfi Drive, the Hudson River Road. We stopped for lunch at one high point, not realizing that Shihmengtung (Stone Gate Cave) was only a few miles further on. It is reputed to be one of the interesting spots of Chekiang.

At Lishui we turned north and for another 25 miles wound along a river. The road there was wider and the curves less treacherous, so we could make better time than in the morning when it took four hours to traverse 50 miles and cross two ferries. Accounts of trips made by others invariably have said: "Allow time for ferries." We wondered how much time. Now we know that ferry crossings take anything from 10 minutes, which is exceptional, to 24 hours, if you have to wait for tide or repairs.

Picturesque Names

There is poetry in the picturesque place names on a mountain in China. In passing we saw the Purple Cloud Monastery, the Merciful Light Temple, the Beginning to Believe Peak. We climbed the Be Careful Slope, descended the Hundred Step Ladder, went through the Devil's Pass, crossed the Fairy Bridge and stepped over the Gate to Heaven Doorstep.

We three travelled exactly 1,300 miles and the ferry crossings numbered thirteen. On every strip of road we covered buses are in use. Living expenses for each person amounted to $31.11. This included lodging, food, rickshaws where needed, carriers for luggage and incidentals. The total car expense was $140.64, including gas, oil, minor repairs, two greasings, garage where available, and ferry fees ($20).

Essentials for the Trip

Experience has taught us that cards with name and address in Chinese as well as passports properly vised, and car and driver's licences are essential. It is wise to carry your own brand of oil and to take a five-gallon tin of gasoline for emergency. Gas can be bought at all the important bus stations, the price being about 40 cents a gallon higher than in Shanghai. Two spare tires are advisable for a long trip, especially if the car does not have puncture-proof tubes. The Chekiang Tourist Bureau recently published a set of attractive folders in English which give pictures and facts about places of interest in Chekiang. We bought for 20 cents from their agency in Hangchow a reliable road map which we found indispensable. It would be difficult for a person who cannot read signs and ask questions in Chinese to make an extended trip. If he were fortified with a map having Chinese characters, that would help. Usually there is at least one person who can read in the crowd that gathers.

If you are hungering for beauty in the out-of-doors, our advice is, "Go find the Mountains of China". Along with the hills you will discover the bamboo groves, the waterfalls, the temples, the terraced valleys, and the blue distance."

CONGRATULATIONS!

PRESIDENT OF ST. AUGUSTINE'S SEMINARY APPOINTED BISHOP OF CALGARY
St. Francis Xavier's Seminary extends heartiest congratulations to Right Reverend Francis P. Carroll, whose appointment as Bishop of Calgary was announced by the Holy See shortly before Christmas. Having brought lustre and fame to the Toronto seminary by his ability as a Professor and his executive talent as President, he now adds honor to St. Augustine's by being its first alumnus to attain the dignity of the Episcopacy. The new Bishop is a remarkably talented man, and his going to Calgary removes from Toronto Archdiocese one of its best-known and best-beloved priests. The prayers of his legions of friends will go with him to his new field of endeavour. "China" wishes Bishop Carroll length of happy days and every blessing. Monsignor John M. Fraser, founder of China Mission Seminary, is an uncle of the new Bishop.

"THE ANVIL of the CROSS"

By

Rev. Hugh F. X. Sharkey

●

A Book of Catholic Poetry

●

Father Sharkey, in his own particular style, has put into verse the doctrines, devotions and desires that fill the life of the true Catholic. The author, in a strikingly simple and beautiful form, has given us a glimpse of the Church Militant—our struggle against the world, the flesh and the devil; the Church Suffering—how by our devotions we can assist the suffering souls in Purgatory; the Church Triumphant—the fulfilment of that Hope that glows in each Christian Soul.

A copy of this book should be in every home.

Price $1.00

The Proceeds from the sale of this volume of Poems go to aid the St. Francis Xavier Chinese Catholic Mission, 572 Georgia Street East, Vancouver, B.C.

Send your order direct to the above address in Vancouver.

LIKING CHINA

By REV. CRAIG STRANG

IT is well, they say, to keep first impressions of China to one's self; it is better, they allege, to keep watching and noting, saying little at all times and ever being ready for anything, for things are so different and customs so very strange that if we begin forming judgments and saying China is like this, and the Chinese are like that, we will be forever changing our ideas and contradicting former statements.

And so I prudently follow the advice of my elders and predicate nothing general of the Chinese. But I do not think we are barred from saying just what China is to us and what it does to us even if we are here only one year. True, we may not have much to say, but the business of getting down to like China —or perhaps, to be more exact, to like living in China, whatever it is and come what may, is a big step in helping us in our mission work.

The thought has come to me frequently since my recent coming to Tsingtien, my first appointment. And in a peculiar way did it come. You see, I often caught myself referring to Lishui, our headquarters, as "the Seminary". It is quite a petty slip of the tongue, but in figuring out just why the slip came, I find that Lishui has meant something to me as the Seminary did—and I did like the Seminary. Just as when at the Seminary I confused it often with college, and my college days meant a lot to me; just as when at college I thought of it often in reference to my high school, and my high school days were indeed very happy days. Each in its turn I came to like and to fondly cherish. And now, linked with all these rather sacred associations comes China.

What could be in Lishui that makes the likeness? Is it just because there we newcomers met the same band of wonderful priests whom we were so quick to like as students some seven years ago? Yes, probably that accounts for a lot of it. Yet, not all. Such companionship, both at the Seminary and at Lishui, must be associated with the work to answer my self-imposed question. I find I must bring in China and the Chinese.

A missionary is not here long before he becomes acquainted, and intimately so, with the personnel of the mission. And such acquaintance is quite pleasant and a very easy step into things Chinese. The Christians we met were most agreeable and we became friends with them and counted on them during the day and missed them when they were absent.

To come down to details we find the difference in conventions and mode of living is, in this way, overcome as easily as can be expected, and when our new friends understand, and understanding, help us, well, we come to like them. They will tell us what is to be expected on such an occasion and what is good for us to do in certain exigencies and what we should or should not eat; and they are nice about it if our attempts are awkward or imperfect and they are quick to overlook them and afterwards kindly correct us.

But as we were striking up these friendships we heard stories of others whose acquaintance would not be so agreeable. We heard of those who were nice for what they themselves could get out of it or for as long as it was convenient for them—of those who would at times deceive us either to "save face" on account of some error or neglect of their work or for some convenience to themselves; we heard of those who would do their task only as long as they were watched and checked up; of those who, out of personal grievance, would "desert" and, as sometimes happened, persuade others to follow them. But more often we heard stories of the luke-warm—of those to whom the grace of conversion did not seem so much—either the seed of faith had fallen on stony ground or amongst the brambles, and after a while they fell away.

These stories coming to us during our first months did away with any delusions we may have had of always finding people eager to hear us and willing to help. And it is people whom these stories portray we will be meeting this year—working and pleading with—but as we get into the work and as we mix with those like to the good soil which brings forth fruit a hundredfold, then maybe Tsingtien will be to us what Lishui was—and our other places of training.

Communism in China

(Concluded from a previous issue)

The first military expedition against the Reds was a failure, and the next attempt, in February, 1931, achieved but little. Then Chiang Kai Shek was given control, and against the Reds in Kiangsi his efforts met with considerable success until the invasion of Manchuria in September, 1931, distracted the Government's attention. The Reds promptly recaptured most of the positions they had lost.

Followed two years when nothing serious was done against the Communists. In the autumn of 1933 the campaign was restarted and, with only a slight break owing to the Fukien incident, that campaign has continued up to the present time. Road building and air-scouting have done much to lay open the hidden fastnesses of the Reds. Block-houses have been built to hold captured positions and defend lines of communication. The country-folk have been trained to defend themselves and assist the regular armies in territory recovered from Communist control. Attempts have been made to remedy local abuses which have been largely responsible for the spread of Communism. As Dr. Sherwood Eddy said recently in Canton, the spread of Communism is not by propaganda, but by poverty, injustice, despair and the privations of the people, and the best cure is by removing the causes.

The question remains how much of the Government's policy is sincere and being sincerely carried out, and how much of it is the usual bluff indulged in by almost all countries nowadays to blind foreign countries to the real state of things at home. It does seem that a real effort has been made to suppress the Communists, but then, if the Government successes have really been so great as they are stated to be, how is it that the Red Army is still so large? And if the attempt at suppression has really been so sincere, how is it that the Red Army has not been destroyed but has merely shifted from one province to another? Is it once more a question of graft—who can tell?

Then, too, with regard to the Government's agrarian policy, whither does it lead? Is there only a difference of speed between the Red policy and the policy outlined by Chiang Kai Shek in his pronouncement of December, 1933, the ultimate goal being the same?

Superficially, at least, the only difference between the two policies is that the former would "confiscate" land, while the latter would merely corner it by judicious buying and out-bidding.

Whatever about these misgivings, the fact remains that much has been done by the present Government to remedy the state of home affairs in China. If only a concerted drive could be made against the remaining Reds in Kweichow and Szechuen and the Red menace ended once and for all, China could look forward with more hopefulness to positive achievements in its gigantic task of national reconstruction.

J. GARLAND, S.J.
in the Hong-Kong "Rock".

JOTTINGS

(Continued from page 4)

Chinese look upon us in somewhat the same way Chinese are looked upon in Canada. A greeting to a child in the street is often met by an embarrassed look and silence, although sometimes a smile and perseverance brushes aside the fear and the child breaks into smiles and is ready to return future greetings. One great advantage of being alone, although some may differ, is the necessity of speaking Chinese all the time thus making better progress in the language, which is absolutely necessary if real missionary work is to be done. But even so I shall be ready with a real welcome when Fathers Stringer and Strang return.

MASS INTENTIONS

Mass Intentions are badly needed by our priests in China. Send your intentions to the Seminary and they will be cabled to our missionaries in Chuchow.

"The DRAGON AT CLOSE RANGE"

By

Right Rev. W. C. McGrath

●

Hailed by the Catholic Press as a distinct contribution to Catholic Mission Literature.

"This book is a series of short, attractive articles featuring events and observations gleaned from years of missionary activity. It makes us see and feel what the missionaries themselves see and feel. There are many humorous as well as inspiring passages . . . everything is bright and cheerful."
NORTH-WEST REVIEW

"This book assuredly offers interesting and highly instructive reading."
PRAIRIE MESSENGER

"Get this book and many thrills are yours. Have your easy chair ready, and several long to be remembered evenings will be enjoyed as you travel the Chuchow missions with zealous missionaries in China."
"The ANNALS"

"Perhaps the most attractive feature of this interesting book is its variety."
CANADIAN MESSENGER

This Book will give you a new appreciation of the Missions.

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR
Postpaid

(Send your order to the Seminary)

NONSENSE

"IF YOU DON'T LAUGH AT THE JOKES OF THE AGE, THEN LAUGH AT THE AGE OF THE JOKES"

"I hear you're friendly with Mary Jones."

"Nonsense! We're married!"

Visitor: "Who is that gentleman?"

Host: "Ah, that's a great man! He's one of the 10,000 foremost writers of our day."

Prospective Buyer: "The rooms seem to be very small."

House Agent: "But you can always use thinner wallpaper, sir."

Distracted Hubby: "Bills, bills, bills! I can't face them."

Extravagant Wife: "I don't want you to, my dear. I merely want you to foot them."

"Weel, Janet, ah hear ye've started slimming."

"Aye, Maggie. Ma aunt's died, and she's left me a dress, but she was a very wee body."

Neighbour: "Is this your ball, Tommy?"

Tommy: "Are there any windows broken?"

Neighbour: 'No."

Tommy: "Yes, that's my ball."

Landlady: "I see your cup of tea on a chair, Mr. Boarder. A peculiar place to put it!"

Mr. Boarder: "Not at all. It's so weak I put it there to rest."

"If it hadn't been for his wife, Sourbrash would have squandered his entire fortune."

"What did she do?"

"She beat him to it."

Smith. "Have you noticed that old Jollyboy has the habit of talking to himself?"

Jones. "Yes, and so has young Boreleigh, but he doesn't realize it. He thinks we are listening."

"Why is it that you fat men are always good-natured?" somebody once asked President Taft.

Mr. Taft replied: "We have to be good-natured, seeing that we can neither fight nor run."

It was at the seaside, and Sandy had just stretched himself on the beach when Mac came up.

"Will you come for a sail, Sandy?" he asked.

"No, I've just had a guid dinner for two-and-saxpence and I'm no takin' the risk."

Boss (to Pat)—"So you want to leave the works. Are your wages insufficient?"

Pat—"The wages are all right, sur, but I'm afraid I'm doin' a horse out of a job."

Head Warder—"Ten prisoners have broken out, sir."

Governor—"Have you given the alarm?"

Head Warder—"I sent for the doctor. He thinks it's measles."

Sharp Youngster—"Can you tell me where all the pins go to?"

Another Sharp Youngster—"Well. it's hard to say. You see they're pointed in one direction and headed in another."

"Mose, you lazy rascal, do you think it right to leave your wife at the washtub while you spend your time fishing?"

"Oh, yassuh, mah wife doan need no watchin'. She'll wuk jest as hard as if'n I wuz dere."

"I 'ear you've 'ad a slight argument with yer missus, Mrs. 'Iggins."

"Yes, indeed, Mrs. Wiggins. The missus says ter me, 'Mrs. 'Iggins'," she says. 'You've forgot to clean the top step again. You really must try to remember wot I tells yer.' So then I ups and says, 'Begin' your parding, mum, but there's so many things wot I must remember not ter forget anyow, that sometimes I 'ave ter remember not to forget, so as ter remember likewise,' I says, after which we hunderstands each other more clearly."

"A party platform is a mighty important consideration," said one statesman.

"Yes," replied the other, "a party platform in politics is a good deal like a bunker in golf. The rules require it, but you show your skill in avoiding it."

Instructor: "Lay the ball on the tee and hit hard."

She: "Is that the tee? It looks like ground."

Instructor: "Of course, it's ground, but they call it a tee in golf."

She: "Well, why don't they call it coffee? It's ground."

"We never realize the full value of anything until we lose it," said the vicar, consolingly.

"No, sir," replied the widow, "'e weren't insured."

Woman Shopper (to assistant)—"I say, young man, there's a ladder in these stockings."

Exasperated Assistant — "Well, what do you expect for 60 cents—a marble staircase?"

Note from Teacher: "Johnny has been very mischievous in school. I think I will drop in and see his father."

Mother promptly sent a reply: "Dear Teacher: If you can't handle Johnny, you'd better not tackle his father!"

Mrs. Murphy—"I've just asked Mrs. Smith 'ow 'er ole man's gettin' on, and all 'er said woz, ''E's out of order.' Does 'er mean 'e's bad?"

Mrs. Jones—"No 'e ain't bad. She's got that sayin' off them broken slot misheens. It's swank, an' means 'e won't work."

The Wholesaler—"You promised to tell the truth in your credit statement and we find that you've lied shamelessly."

The Retailer—"My dear sir, I supose you know that 'truth' is merely one of our trade terms, and we have it graded as 'truth,' 'strict truth,' 'absolute truth', and 'guaranteed truth.' "

Negro Woman (applying for a position as cook)—"I seen yo advuhtisement in de newspaper, lady."

Lady (interrupting)—"But, I advertised for a Scandinavian."

Negro Woman—"I knows dat, lady. But jess so a pusson can cook, what difference does religion make?"

Isaac—"Abraham, Abraham, vy did you go and tell my wife that I stole the shilling you lost?"

Abraham—"Isaac, you make a terrible mistake. I only said that if you had not helped me to look for it, surely I would have found it."

Isaac—"Then, Abraham, we still are old pals. Shake hands."

Clerk—"These are especially strong shirts, madam. They simply laugh at the laundry."

Customer—"I know that kind; I had some which came back with their sides split."

Visitor—"And who is that red-faced man over there?"

Yokel—"That be the squire. A powerful excitable man, 'e be, too. They say as 'ow 'e once burst a blood-vessel watching a chess match."

CHINA

SUBSCRIBERS ARE REQUESTED TO READ THE FOLLOWING VERY CAREFULLY

The subscription price to CHINA is fifty cents a year. Subscribers who do not receive the magazine regularly will confer a favor by notifying us.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS
Do not fail to inform us promptly if at any time you change your address. In doing so, please send us your old as well as your new address.

DUPLICATE COPIES
If you are receiving two copies of CHINA, and have subscribed for only one, kindly let us know.

SENDING SUBSCRIPTIONS
In sending your subscription to CHINA, be sure to state WHETHER IT IS A RENEWAL OR A NEW SUBSCRIPTION.

MRS. OR MISS
Very often we do not know which to put on our stencil, as there is nothing to indicate which it should be. Will our lady friends kindly make this clear.

ATTENTION TO THE ABOVE DETAILS WILL BE GREATLY APPRECIATED

REMITTANCES
Money should be sent by Post Office or Express Money Orders, Drafts or Registered Letters to ensure safe delivery. All such orders may be made payable to:

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

Passionist Missionaries Try "Campaigning for Christ" In China

Yuanling, Hunan.—15,000 non-Christians, it is estimated, have formed a passing acquaintance with the Catholic Church as a result of a two-months' tour conducted this fall by two American Passionist priests in the mission of Supu, in this vicariate. At the same time approximately 3,000 received medical aid. In many places the missionaries were invited and even urged to return at a later date.

The two Fathers who have been conducting this systematic campaign to bring their district into touch with Christ are the Rev. Raphael Vance and the Rev. Dominic Langenbacher. They visited 24 important localities, in each of which they spent two or more days. Every help was given them by the authorities, who, in some instances, even dispatched town-criers to inform the people of the time and place of the meetings.

The missionaries were accompanied by catechists specially trained for the work. As the missionaries and catechists in turn addressed the crowds assembled in market-place or public square, others of the catechists mingled with the auditors to offer objections and propound questions. In this manner the interest of the populace was stimulated to a high degree and many sincere inquiries resulted.—Lumen.

There seems to be a peculiar significance in the fact that St. Francis Xavier and St. Theresa, the Little Flower of Jesus, are associated as the patron and patroness respectively of the Missions. The Little Flower is the most outstanding example in our own day of one who has attained the heights of sanctity through perfection in little things. St. Francis Xavier is perhaps the greatest example of one who has accomplished mighty works for God in far-flung regions. Do we not see a connection between these two things? Is it not the little prayers, the little aids, given by those at home that make possible the mighty deeds of the foreign missionaries?

—E. B.

DEATH will not be so hard if you do now what you will then wish you had done.

One of the regrets most of us will have in that critical time will be that we did not serve God more faithfully. While all are not called to serve God as priests, brothers, or nuns, all can help and should help, those who have consecrated their lives to God—you can share in their labors and sacrifices.

Be a missioner by proxy. If you cannot go yourself, help those who can go.

MULTIPLE ROLES PLAYED BY MISSIONER

"The missioner is at all times the spiritual father who ministers to the needs of souls, bringing to his spiritual children the Bread of Life and the wisdom of the Gospels. He baptizes their children, marries their sons and daughters, and buries their dead. He is always ready to comfort in times of spiritual and temporal trial. But more than this: today he is a 'doctor' to alleviate some pain of body; tomorrow he is a 'veterinarian' to help save, with some simple remedy he knows, a cow or a calf, a dog or cat, that threatens to die. In the morning he may serve as an 'architect' to help determine the best place for the new house, or the place for a door in the new wall. In the afternoon he is a 'matchmaker', seeking a wife for a son or a husband for a daughter of one of his Christians. Later on in the day he may be a 'lawyer' advising on a situation that threatens to go to the Mandarin. From morning until night, he is many and all sorts of things to his people, simply because it is to 'Father' the people turn in any matter, be it ever so private. And if baby gets a new tooth, Father has to bring out the camera and turn photographer. So it is that a missioner is always busy in these ever pleasant relations with his people.—"Catholic Missions."

The C.P.R. "Empress of Canada", on which our 1935 Mission Band sailed from Vancouver on December 28th. We thank those friends who answered our appeals for funds to defray expenses of the journey to Chuchow. Letters to any of our missionaries in China may be addressed to Catholic Mission, Lishui, Chekiang. (Postage on a letter to China is five cents).

All Together, Now!

LET'S HELP THE MISSIONS!

WE wish to remind all our readers that the financial burden of St. Francis Xavier's Seminary is becoming heavier as the number of our priests in China and students at home increases, and if we are to be able to support our growing institutions here and in China we shall need much more financial assistance than has come to us through the day-to-day donations during 1935. We know that "times are hard" with many. We certainly are amongst the number ourselves, and so we appeal to Catholic wage-earners, young and old, to sometimes make a little sacrifice and send a gift to aid our mission work. Those who do give to the missions find joy in the giving, and are none the poorer for their sacrifices. Begin the New Year well by joining with those faithful friends of the Missions who give us a helping hand regularly. If you have never given to the Missions, why not begin now? Giving to the Missions ought to be a habit with every Catholic family.

HOLY SCRIPTURE SAYS:

"If thou have much, give abundantly: If thou have little, take care even so to bestow willingly a little. For thus thou storest up to thyself a good reward for the day of necessity."

(Tobias IV: 9, 10.)

Give your gift for the love of God, and you will give a gift that is worth while, no matter how small it is.

LET'S HELP THE MISSIONS!

St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario

Very Rev. John E. McRae, President

CHINA

ARBORO BLUFFS, ONT. FEBRUARY 1936

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.

2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.

3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.

4. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Quality Printers

ADelaide 2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West - Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutator Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.

2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.

3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.

4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.

5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE
CHINA
PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 24,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XVII. FEBRUARY, 1936 No. 2

THE MISSION PARTNERSHIP

A CONTRIBUTED EDITORIAL

By Rev. Desmond Stringer, Tsingtien, China

THERE is sweeping over the Christian world of today an arid devastating blast which is commonly termed Neo-paganism, and rightly so since it has all the vices and few of the virtues of the old. From the inception of the Christian era there has been, almost continuously, a controversy over what to think of God, in what manner to worship Him, and by what means this might be effected. For that long space of time the Church has consistently shown His will on the matter, and today thunders forth the same Message with livelier vigor than ever—much to the chagrin of the false prophets, but not to their conversion.

BUT we are witnessing something much worse now—the relentless fight between those who still believe in supernatural religion and those who don't; between God and Godlessness; between Catholicity and Chaos. Some four hundred years ago a large portion of the then Christian world, protesting against the way God was worshipped, left His pre-ordained manner to seek its own; and now we see it arrived at the state where it is protesting against worshipping Him at all. And because of this the times we are living in may be described as the worst since the coming of Christ. The disintegration of Protestantism has left thousands wandering in a daze of uncertainty, suitable pupils for the teachers of Neo-paganism and their atheistic propaganda which they spread about with a fixedness of purpose, vitality, zeal and enthusiasm that amazes one.

FATHER STRINGER

THOUGH the end is but one, the means to achieve it are multiple and even diametrically opposed. For some it is the doing away with God to undermine the moral law which stands in the way of complete and individual self-indulgence. For others it is the doing away with God and His moral law which stands in the way of a supreme state where individualism is lost. To the first class belong those who seek the abandon of decadent Rome; to the second, those who seek the vigor of Bolshevism. These might at first appear separate ends, but they are not. The end is but one—the destruction of souls.

PERHAPS the most difficult thing to understand in man's long history is his inability to learn from experiences or to benefit from examples of past errors. I mean this with regard to doctrines and moral practices. The heathenism of China's millions contains for the Neo-pagan a lesson of greatest importance. The ethical system of Confucius is so far superior to the hodge-podge of Neo-paganism as to make comparison odious. Yet Confucianism failed to preserve those who professed it from the degradation of superstition, and it failed for one reason, because it taught, "no one is more mistaken than he who seeks in this life to assure his happiness in the next". Every system but the one established by Christ wrecks itself on the same rock—the failure to understand the nature of man. For sane, wholesome living he needs a combination, a fusing of spiritual and physical happiness delicately balanced. Tamper with its poise and the result is disorder. Take away the supernatural and you have chaos. Deprive man of spiritual beauty and he seeks that which is material; divest him of spiritual joys and he turns to those of the senses; dispossess him of Divine love and he feeds on that which is human. And the sad fact is that when human love ceases to mirror the Divine it droops and withers when physical attraction dies as it must, and that very shortly.

BECAUSE in the maelstrom of Neo-paganism there is no charity human love fails in being the beautiful help God intended it should be. Life is a classroom and we are here to learn how to love—for our eternal destiny is simply one endless act of love. This is the great lesson mankind is ever learning, ever forgetting. This is the reason why we are in China as missionaries. And in the light of it how very thoughtless seems the sentiment, "There's China enough at home!" That after two thousand years approximately two-thirds of the world is still outside the fold of the Catholic Church is a fact that the thinking Catholic may well ponder. Let him sit down and quietly try to picture himself stripped of every doctrine, devotion, and practice he holds sacred; try to feel in his soul something of the desolating misery of such a state and he will rise from his meditation filled with a deeper affection for all his Faith means to him and a corresponding desire to share it with all others without distinction of race or colour.

IN giving this sketch of conditions in the West outside the Catholic Church my motive has been twofold: first to direct your attention to what living without God really embraces; and then, secondly, to point out that these atheistic forces also are at work in China. The tenets of Bolshevism are essentially atheistic. Its self-appointed task is to create a State where there will be no class distinctions; where every member will have opportunity to develop himself in such a way as the whole may benefit; where each may have a roof over his head and a larder sufficient for his needs. These are quite laudable aspirings and millions of starved and half-starved Chinese (or any others for that matter) in their quest for decent livelihood are not going to bother their heads much about the spiritual side of their nature which, for the real Bolshevist, doesn't exist.

THE fact that for the inhabitants of this heathen country spirituality spells bondage of a most degrading and craven nature—a constant fear of evil spirits—is but an added help towards the Utopia heralded by Bolshevism. And thus the work of the missionary is rendered more difficult than ever. And if there should be any lingering doubt as to the necessity of urgent and concentrated action on the part of Catholics to battle this new antagonist; if there should be remaining in you a tendency to belittle the seriousness of the situation, surely to dispel any such hesitancy it should be sufficient to reflect for a moment on the many and insistent counsels and commands urged on us by His Holiness Pope Pius XI. His message is to each and every individual Catholic. To rest passively or but feebly active in the knowledge that the Church is divine and "the gates of hell shall not prevail against her" is to avoid the issue.

SOMETIMES it seems the very strength of this dogma is a sort of stumbling block for many, hindering their efforts, or the continuity of them, in Catholic Action. It is a dogma from which, while fighting, we can sustain our efforts, our courage, because we know the end is victory; and not a sort of fortress behind which we may lounge in safety watching the futile attempts of Her enemies to batter down the Church. On earth the Church is described as militant. You and I and all Her children are soldiers. From the dawn of reason until the night of death our task is twofold—the knowing what we are fighting for and the bringing of that knowledge to others; the using of the means to win and the teaching of them to others. Thus and only thus are we fulfiling our duty of being each of us a missionary; and missionary each of us must be if we are truly Catholic. The best defensive is an offensive; and the surest way to keep one's Faith alive and vigorous is by striving to share it with others.

BUT how are you to share it with China's millions? You cannot come personally and tell them of the wonderful happiness that is yours in possessing and being possessed by your Faith. But you can give the service you will to give and still remain at home. You can help prepare an ambassador who will bring your message to them for you. You can aid in supplying the means necessary to this end. When you give what is called "financial assistance" you are giving the equivalent of so much active service. Look at it that way, for it maintains a more buoyant interest and a greater sense of personal duty performed. It destroys that false mentality which would describe our appeals as begging. This work of preaching the Gospel is as vitally your concern as it is that of any missionary on the field, the difference existing only in the manner of its being discharged. Whether you give five dollars or five cents, you are actively participating in the task of spreading the Gospel. When you forego some pleasure, little or great, in order to send a more substantial sum of money to those who are acting for you, realize that it is your own personal service you are giving by means of another. It costs twenty dollars a month to keep a Catechist going in a Mission. When you send that amount or a part of it, see yourself as doing the work in his person. Isn't it a much more active state of mind; doesn't it produce a greater sense of a duty well performed, than merely to think of your donation in an impersonal way? Isn't the reaction healthier for us both when I say "Lend me a hand" than if I said "Lend me a dollar"?

DON'T let this work of yours and mine suffer. Don't let it lag, or worse, retrograde. And another thing, do never let yourself think or imagine the Church at home may fail or proceed more slowly because of the hours you spend labouring here. Your interest in parochial activities and the welfare of your parish will be all the more sustained and promoted because your Faith, in constant touch with the spiritual misery of so many millions, will fire you with a greater appreciation and love for all the beauties of our Catholic religion. From over here we call to you, "Do lend us a hand!"

"The Dragon at Close Range"
By
Msgr. W. McGrath
PRICE, $1.00

You will enjoy reading these TWO BOOKS written by missionaries
—●—
(Send Your Order to the Seminary)

"The Anvil of the Cross"
A VOLUME OF POEMS
by
REV. HUGH SHARKEY
PRICE, $1.00

JOTTINGS

By

REV. GERALD DOYLE

IT was a raw afternoon in Lishui several weeks ago that I went to the home of a poor old sick woman and baptized her. The Sisters had been visiting her daily for two months, giving her some relief, but they knew that it was just a matter of time before the woman died, so naturally they were more concerned about her soul than her body. They told her about God Who was born for her and Who died for her, and explained that if she gave up the worship of the devil and was baptized she could go to Heaven when she died. The woman knew she was soon to die, but she was loath to give up her pagan worship, but after a time the prayers and perseverance of the Sisters bore fruit and the woman asked for Baptism. She received some instruction and soon afterwards I baptized her. I well remember that walk along a cobbled street, through a narrow lane, and into a yard strewn with refuse. I was about to pass what I thought was a pig pen when the sacristan turned towards it and entered by a low door.

I followed him into the house, which was no more than a small room cluttered with a couple of pigs, a table, a bench, a chair, a smoking stove without a chimney and, at the end, hardly discernible through the smoke, was a bed and the sick woman.

Two Sisters, who had followed at a distance, stood at the door, as there was no room inside. The catechist gave the woman a final exhortation and there in the smoky gloom I poured the cleansing water over the wrinkled bald head; the former devil-worshipper was now a child of God and an heir to the Kingdom of Heaven. Her body was far from being beautiful, but her soul was radiant in the sight of God.

A recent picture of Father Doyle, the author of these clever, interesting and newsy "jottings" which appear every month. Fr. Doyle is now stationed at Tsingtien.

This little girl attends the Sisters' School at Lishui. We are indebted to Father Doyle for the beautiful picture on our cover this month, showing another of the Lishui schoolgirls.

Leaving the poor home I paused for a few words with the Sisters. Sister Mary Catherine, who had charge of the case, told how happy she was that the woman was baptized. She then added that this was one of the worst houses she had seen in China, while Sister St. Martin said that she could hardly see me during the baptism on account of the smoke.

During the days that followed I hoped her death would not be delayed as the poor woman was in a pagan environment and would have many temptations to fight against. My hopes were not in vain, as a letter just received tells of her death and Christian burial.

Her name was Mary.

* * *

Another woman I baptized, this time in the church, held her infant in her arms to be baptized also at the same time. Their picture is on this page. The child was named Paul.

* * *

Reference above to the "worst" home brings to mind that Mrs. Roosevelt is endeavoring to demolish slum districts in the United States. If she tried to do the same thing here, the majority of the towns and villages, at least in this district of China, would have to be rebuilt. Some of the "worst" dwellings in the slums of American cities would be considered respectable homes if placed over here.

* * *

WITH cold weather setting in and central heating merely a system read about, small iron stoves are placed in the rooms of the priests and a supply of wood is bought, so during the winter on the colder days the fire is lit for a few hours and the chill taken off the room, but in the chapel there is no heat, so it is necessary to wear plenty of clothes. Of course, during Mass the fingers of the upraised hands of the priests become numb with the cold, but that is to be expected. And with the cold weather come thoughts of Christmas approaching (I am writing in December), when the missions will be remembered by a few friends, and to them we are grateful, as the work of the missions in this district is entirely dependent upon those at home. The poor Chinese here cannot contribute to the upkeep of the chapels,

(Continued on page 29)

Little Paul and his mother were baptized together.

The Yellow Man Looks On

ON his last Sunday in Toronto, before leaving for China, Monsignor McGrath took the place of Rev. Charles Lanphier, Director of the Radio League of St. Michael, and broadcasted the following address on Canada's Catholic Radio Hour from St. Michael's Cathedral. In the absence of Father Lanphier through illness, Very Rev. A. T. Lellis, National Director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, assisted in the broadcast as interlocutor.

Father Lellis — Ladies and gentlemen, it is a pleasure indeed to help hold the fort for Father Lanphier during his regretted illness—especially so, since the speaker to-day is one known and admired throughout our country. Our people love the foreign missions but they have a special place in their hearts for the missions of China—and naturally so, since the only foreign mission seminary in English-speaking Catholic Canada is St. Francis Xavier Mission Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ont. From that institution have gone forth the young men who are laboring in the prefecture of Chuchow, and there, too, many others are preparing to follow them. From that seminary Mgr. McGrath went forth four years ago to lead the Church's forces on that distant battle-line. Last spring he returned, his health impaired. Now, his health improved, he is eager and ready to take up his missionary duties once again. You will recall that when he arrived in Toronto last spring he was interviewed over this station by Father Lanphier. The result so pleased the air-audience that we have decided to use the same "question and answer" method to-day in treating the subject—"The Yellow Man Looks On".

Question: "Monsignor, is the average Canadian prejudiced against the Chinese?"

Monsignor: Somewhat prejudiced, yes, Father, through lack of knowledge of a kindly, hospitable, lovable people. What do we know about the Chinese? Three things, chiefly. (1) They work in laundries; (2) they provide fairly edible fish and chips in cafes; (3) they all look alike—at least to us, which reminds me of the story of a somewhat bewildered British Tommy on sentry duty in Shanghai. His commanding officer asked him if anybody had passed his pillbox during the evening.

"Yes, sir," he replied, "there were thirty Chinamen, or maybe, sir, it was the same Chinaman thirty times."

Those of us who read the papers cannot fail to have noticed that the Orient is news these days. Men don't have to bite dogs any more. China can crash the front pages almost any old time. A missionary kidnapped; a Communist defeat; a squadron of Japanese destroyers in the China Sea and the world knows it next day.

"Well, Monsignor, to what do you attribute this growing interest in things Oriental?"

It seems to be based on a feeling of apprehension. We're not quite as sure of ourselves as we used to be. We're wondering and talking about the stability of our own civilization. We're discovering new things, disquieting possibilities about China and Japan. Drop into the club, or the hotel these December evenings. What are men talking about? Italy, Ethiopia, world war. "Nobody knows what's going to happen," they say, or "It's the end of our civilization," "or Japan mistress of the world," "Christianity has failed us," or "If those 500 million Chinese ever get armed and organized." Well, they are getting armed, 2½ millions of them are under arms already.

Yes, my friends, the Orient is beginning to intrigue and fascinate us. We hear that Japan is selling bottled beer in Germany for less than the Germans pay for empty bottles. And selling cotton goods in England for less than the raw material costs in Lancashire; and rayon silk for 10 cents a yard at special sales on Water Street, St. John's. "You know we can't compete with these people," say the merchants. A sort of economic yellow peril to the western world.

And in China — the great Dragon is stirring after his sleep of the centuries; not yet fully awake but beginning to stretch himself; becoming pleasantly aware of a sense of power. Five hundred million people! Two and one-half millions under arms! Universal conscription in force! Five hundred fighting planes! They could lose 20,000 men a day and keep up a fight forever.

"The Orient, then, seems to be growing stronger, more aggressive. What shall we say of the West? The White Man, for centuries, has been rather smug, I fancy, haughty—even contemptuous. Is he as sure of himself to-day as formerly?"

No, he is becoming afraid of himself. Piling up armaments that may one day blast himself and his civilization sky-high! Talking of world war, which will be civilization's suicide. Feverishly watching the dawn that is breaking over Africa, a dawn coming up like thunder, but this time not out of China 'cross the bay.

AND THE YELLOW MAN LOOKS ON; smiles over his teacups; watches with satisfaction as white prestige is on the wane; envisions the day—the glorious day—when white dominations may end—forever.

For decades now the Yellow Man has been looking on. Let us sum up briefly to what extent he has witnessed the decline of the white man's power.

1. About 35 years ago the Kaiser of Germany addressed his soldiers. There had been trouble in China, Boxer uprisings, murder of whites. These Germans were going to join the allied force that occupied Pekin. "So treat the Chinese," said His Imperial German Majesty, "that no Chinaman will dare look a German in the face for 1,000 years to come."

Well, they did dare. Less than 20 years later they looked into the faces of German soldiers who had been defeated by the Japs at Tsingtao and the Chinese were the soldiers this time, and the Germans the prisoners of war.

2. The Yellow Man looked on while their own soldiers boarded German ships at Shanghai. They brusquely ordered German captains off their ships, to be interned. They even forgot their Chinese politeness, for it was a big moment. They had never dared do this to a white man before.

3. THE YELLOW MAN LOOKED ON. 170,000 Coolies looked on in the World War. They saw how white men prayed and swore and slaughtered one another. With their slant Oriental eyes they saw Christians become barbarians and the sights they saw weren't pretty. And some of them went back to China and told how those Christians loved one another.

4. THEY LOOKED ON WHEN RUSSIA WENT MAD. They saw pitiful white Russians who had crossed Siberia, fleeing before death and the ghastly Red Terror. Half starved, half mad, men, women and children straggled into Harbin and Tientsin. Disowned by the Soviets, they knew no foreign protection. And they were handled none too gently by the Chinese police. They pushed on—to Shanghai—some of those white outcasts. Penniless, starving, almost in rags they stood on the sidewalks of the foreign concession and begged coppers of Chinese passers-by. White men they were and almost in the gutter.

But there were worse refugees from Russia's attempt to uproot humanity. White Russian girls, pathetic victims of a social cataclysm, more sinned against than sinning, went from bad to worse. Till to-day, in Shanghai, the words "Russian girl" and "Woman of the streets" are almost synonymous terms.

5. In Shanghai and other large cities the Chinese looked on at moving pictures of the white man. Looked on till Nanking's censors—inaugurating a legion of decency all their own—banned a large percentage of pictures from Hollywood. They were too demoralizing, they said, for the Chinese people. And the Chinese who saw them told themselves that that was how the white man lived.

"I would imagine that this spectacle of Occidental decline must react upon mission work. If you have correctly stated the condition of the so-called Christian world, surely the Chinaman will hesitate to accept Christianity. What does he make of it all?"

The Yellow Man watched, mildly interested, while missionaries came in almost every ship that docked. "We come," they said, "to preach a gospel of peace, peace on earth to men of goodwill". There were cultured and refined men and women of many Christian denominations. They went to the remotest parts of war-torn China and opened schools and cared for the sick and braved death from typhus and cholera and Communist bandits. And not all escaped; many succumbed to disease—among them one of the best friends I had in the world—who now lies buried on a hillside in distant Chekiang; 53 priests that I know of have been murdered by bandits during the past 20 years in China. And the whole world has heard the tragic but edifying and heroic story of Mr. and Mrs. Stamm, missionaries of the United Church, who died as the bravest of God's heroes die.

AND THE YELLOW MAN LOOKED ON. "These," they said, "are good people. These men and women came thousands of miles across the ocean to help the people of China. They follow a leader called Christ. Perhaps there would be peace and happiness in foreign lands if they all followed Him."

"Do you mean, Monsignor, that Christian people, in Christian lands, have not followed the teachings of the gentle Christ?"

My friends, the pathetic tragedy of it all! For in foreign lands they had not hearkened to the gentle Prince of Peace. In lands called Christian strong men were despairing. In lands called Christian mothers starved and little children grew wan and pale.

Food there was aplenty, but not for them! Food to be destroyed. God's precious gifts of bounteous harvest thrown back into the face of a kindly Providence! Burning coffee, burning wheat, slaughtered cattle! While millions cried for bread and there was none to break it unto them. And the men who grew wealthy were the men who made the guns and the shells and the poison gas and the liquid fire. Vulture-like munition makers saw their dividends skyrocketed; higher and

(Continued on page 29)

FATHER SHARKEY REMAINS IN VANCOUVER

Taken on the pier at Vancouver, with the portholes of the "Empress of Canada" showing in the background, this picture shows missionaries who are engaged in three different spheres of our work: at the Seminary, in Chuchow, and at the Vancouver Mission. From left to right, they are: Rev. Roland Roberts, assistant at the Vancouver Chinese Mission; Rev. Leo Curtin, who sailed for China on December 28th; Rev. Hugh Sharkey, in charge of the Mission in Vancouver. He was scheduled to go to China in December, but at the last minute it was decided to let him carry on with his great work in Canada; Monsignor McGrath, Prefect-Apostolic of Chuchow, who has returned to China; Very Rev. John E. McRae, President of the Seminary, who accompanied the departing missionaries to the Pacific Coast and visited the Mission among the Chinese in Vancouver; Rev. Lawrence Beal, returned to China.

ON THE MISSI

By REV

Here is an interesting account set out from their central sta Divine Master, they "go about d discomforts and hardships. W Strang and Father Stringer c missions". Read this and see wh

IN THE stillness of night the sounds of this typewriter re-echo through a dark and dingy room of a very old and dilapidated house in one of the small villages which stud the banks of the big river which gives to this Chinese Province its name—Chekiang (Crooked River). The river provides a livelihood for numberless millers and boatmen; it starts many miles away, high up in the mountains, but it does not trickle very far before it is augmented by many tributaries, and it plunges on with increasing force between the mountains on its way to the sea and the loving tide which checks its passage with an impetuous embrace many miles further down stream.

The story that my noisy typewriter records this night in this dark and dingy room is the story of how these Chinese millers and boatmen on the river, and the farmers who till the soil along its banks, are told about their God and how they listen to the telling. The Fall Missions are being conducted in this Parish of Tsingtien (Green-Fields) by Father Stringer and myself—and I am endeavouring to give you an account of what that means.

It is November 4th. A late date to be starting on the rounds of our Missions. But it is the first opportunity we have had since Father Stringer came to Tsingtien as pastor in September, and I as his assistant in what is, for me, my first assignment to an outside mission. Father Gerald Doyle came down here a week ago, and he has been left in charge at Tsingtien during our absence on visitation of all the villages and hamlets in our parish where Christians reside. When we set out from Tsingtien Father Joe King was with Father Doyle, waiting hourly for word from Father Amyot at Huang T'An as to the condition of that village which was infested with bandits when Father King left there.

I had cherished the hope of proceeding to Lei-Zhih, the first mission, by bicycle, as it is along the bus road. But unfortunately the day we left Tsingtien it was raining hard.

IMMEDIATELY after dinner on Monday, November 4th, we set out, taking with us four pieces of baggage; our Mass kit which contained practically everything but the altar; the bedding, nets, blankets and sheets, rolled up in canvas; a valise containing travelling necessities and catechisms, prayer-books, etc., for the use of the Christians; and lastly, the portable typewriter which would come in handy in recording the activities of our mission trip for the benefit of readers of "China".

Lei-Zhih is not a bus stop, so we had to go two miles beyond this place, wait in a shed until the rain abated somewhat, and then we hired a man to take our baggage back the two miles to Lei-Zhih. The carrier was a Christian, small of stature, but nevertheless he managed famously as he balanced the baggage on a pole across his shoulder and trotted along (carriers always seem to be trotting) quite contentedly. On arrival, we were greeted by Mr. Chiu the catechist, and conducted to the mission quarters. We were shown into the catechists's own room. It was to be our "office and residence" for a week. The small capacity of this room was taxed by two tables and two beds. A small opening crossed with iron bars let in a little light in the far corner. The mud walls were bare of paper and ornaments and pictures, save for some small scraps of paper containing Chinese written characters of no special significance as far as I know.

As I pound away at my typewriter this first night here, Father Stringer and I are seated at a table with the lamp between us. We succeeded in banishing the smoke from the lamp which was very unpleasant at first, and now we are providing our own smoke—of a more pleasant and soothing nature. I with my trusty pipe and Father Stringer with some gift cigars. It may be of interest, in passing, to say that the cigars were presented to Father Stinger by M. Coiffard of the French Consulate in appreciation for courtesies shown him and Dr. Palmgren, Curator of the Prince of Sweden's Collections, during their tour of the Province last Easter.

AS SOON as the formalities of greeting were over we set about fixing up the room, making our beds and arranging the tables to best advantage and read Office by the light of the small lamp and then we were called to supper which was served in a room at the back of the chapel. The repast was a sumptuous one as Chinese repasts go, and, to tell the honest truth, we did justice to it. One or two dubious dishes we refrained from, as well as those which experience taught us

Requiescat in Pace

CATHOLIC Canada mourns the loss of one of her outstanding figures in the death of Most Rev. Thomas O'Donnell, Archbishop of Halifax, who died Monday, January 13th. Death came to the 61-year-old Prelate after a brief, sudden illness. Toronto was the scene of his priestly labours as Pastor of St. Ann's Parish, Editor of the "Catholic Register", and President of the Catholic Church Extension Society. He was appointed Bishop of Victoria in 1924, and five years later became Coadjutor to Archbishop McCarthy of Halifax, succeeding to the Archbishopric of Halifax in 1931.

The Mission spirit has flourished in the Archdiocese of the deceased Prelate. One of the last official functions attended by Archbishop O'Donnell was the Convention of the Crusaders in November, and during that gathering he himself spoke on several occasions, urging both priests and people to a greater appreciation of missionary problems.

For Archbishop O'Donnell's soul we breathe a fervent prayer and beg the prayers of our readers for his eternal repose.

S IN TSINGTIEN

STRANG

es place when our missionaries outlying missions. Like their heerfully enduring the incidental ve further reports from Father eir experiences in "making the naries are doing—on your behalf.

always to refuse. But, it being an opening meal, there was plenty to choose from—bananas, boiled eggs, boiled meat and tasteless beans, and in a corner, as innocent looking as if it was a delicious fruit salad, was the sickening Der-vu, or bean-curd. As we ate, all the Christians in the house (twenty or more, for each house has several families within its precincts) gathered around to see how we could handle the chopsticks and to watch all our strange foreign ways. Conversation therefore was not easy for we always had to be explaining something to them. A chief feature was the presentation of babies, at whom we were supposed to Koo-a-doole-loo, ask how old, and how many others there were, and we always asked about their baptism. The babies don't seem to mind this sort of thing and everybody else seemed to like it; we just fall in stride and work up, I suppose, a big reputation as baby lovers, even as the politicians before election time.

After the peanuts were served, and we were lighting our cigarettes, we unofficially outlined the program for the following week, and receiving no objection to it we retired to our room and prepared for the opening lecture. Before the opening, however, Father Stringer visited Yu Shan who was sick in bed upstairs. Readers may remember her as the girl for whose safety Father MacDonald had to fight, both in law and with fists, this time last year, and who in consequence has crashed the columns of Canadian and even American papers. She has since been married to Fu K'uei Ling, a sacristan at Lishui. The room she lies sick in is anything but conducive to health; the smoke from the Chinese stove in the room below vitiates the little fresh air that is allowed through an aperture which answers for a window.

At seven-thirty the bell rang and the Christians gathered in the small room which serves as a chapel. An altar, a confessional, and ten benches for pews comprise all the furniture. Innocent of dirt at least, the room is quite bare. Some forty Christians were present for the opening conference and the mission was formally opened with the recitation of the "Asperges" and the sprinkling of holy water. After the prayer to the Holy Ghost, Father Stringer impressed upon the gathering the necessity of the visitation, using very simple words and homely illustrations. He also outlined the order of the mission, urging them not to let ordinary duties interfere with their attending all the exercises.

And so we came to the end of our first day on the Missions. We retired to bed, prepared to let the rats scurry about to their hearts' content so long as they keep outside our bed netting.

* * *

Tuesday, November 5th

A LITTLE after six we arose; it is still raining and Father Stringer wonders why rain is inseparately connected with most of his visitations. But we feel refreshed in spite of the hard board and the multitude of rats that gamboled about in the room and even on the net frame over our beds. A little after seven all the Christians had assembled and Mass was begun at which two received Holy Communion. Immediately after Mass the catechist preached the morning conference, basing his exhortations on the person of God and on creation. He spoke for thirty minutes, after which the second Mass began and all the Christians stayed for it.

Breakfast was served at half-past nine, but Chinese food, whatever appeal it may have at noon or night, has very little to recommend it in the morning. So we necessarily ate sparingly, enough to last us through the morning. Hard-boiled eggs saved the day—rather the morning—for us.

After breakfast we tidied our room and called all the children to examine them in their catechism. And they recited the answers quite well enough, but, not unlike all other children, the meaning of many of the characters is still unknown to them. How many of us understood what "The sovereign Lord of Heaven and Earth" meant when first we rattled it off for the school master? So, too, these kiddies, and they have the further disadvantage that the catechism and all prayers are recited in the mandarin dialect of the district and not in the local ones. It is only in after years that they come to understand it—after they have had repeated explanations of it and have come to read characters well.

PERHAPS, before the New Year is too far spent, you may be won. To this—to make the resolution to give YOURSELF in some way to help the missions. Don't base your decision on a feeling of "Well, I suppose I must!" But let it be founded on gratitude. On a deep thanksgiving for the gift of Faith that was freely given to you . . . .

Few Catholics act upon that idea. We accept the fact that we are Catholics without remembering HOW. It slips our mind that all of us, through the generosity of others, received our own Faith. We go merrily ahead. Not doing any harm, necessarily—but not doing any good, either! Often our one objective is to amuse ourselves, to please ourselves. Rather futile, isn't it? Like "playing with blocks"! For real accomplishment, we must make some personal contribution ourselves. As others did for us! Or we should not be Catholics today. Let us have a different New Year this year. One characterized by our desire to forsake futility, to do something worth while for the missions!

—"Catholic Missions"

It was the same with the women in the afternoon—they do not read but memorize the characters, and in this case even the memorizing was a bit slack. With the men in the evening it was a bit better. They came one by one into our room and we had them recite their prayers for us and answer catechism questions. And really, like grown-up school boys they were—reciting incomprehensibly fast when they knew, slurring over doubtful answers, and twiddling with their hats when they did not know. And all the while we could hear the others outside studying their doctrine and helping each other. The conference and night prayers took place after the examination, and in it they were instructed about confession. All was over at eight-forty-five, and after checking up for the day we had a last cigarette and hopped into bed before nine-thirty.

* * *

Wednesday, November 6th

A LONG recording to-day—to wit, from one a.m. until now, nine p.m. You see, in the darkness of the very early morning a messenger came running into the village, waking up the whole community and waking us last of all. When we became conscious of the hullabaloo, two thoughts immediately presented themselves to us—trouble from bandits or an urgent sick call, neither of which was a pleasant thought at that hour. But the catechist was telling us the story through the thin wall, and we had to hear it twice before we got it right. The runner had come from a village, Shao Yueh, some ten miles up a little stream, with the intelligence of an accident that happened in the chapel there. A very old Christian after night prayers the night before had mistaken a hole in the floor for the floor itself and had fallen and killed himself. There was nothing we could do about it, especially at that hour of the night, and when things quietened down we went off to sleep again, after giving directions about the funeral.

In the morning we had our first round-up—the boys were rounding-up the cows instead of attending the catechism, and we sent their dads after them and called them in. I conducted the class. The afternoon class of the women was a small improvement on yesterday's—I daresay some of the infants they had with them got as much out of it as their mothers, for they had more of their mothers' attention than we had.

They Are Depending On Us

"PRACTICALLY all of us have suffered some material losses. Naturally we try to economize; but it is hoped that in our economy we will not neglect the Missions. That might easily prove disastrous. We all know what happens when an advancing army is cut off from its supplies, when food and ammunition are left far in the rear. It affects the morale; it interrupts the advance of forces; it readily causes a rout and defeat. The missionary movement is but Christ's Army advancing for the salvation of souls. They are depending on us. We are their source of supplies. We must not fail them, for, if we do, we are halting the furtherance of Christ's cause. We can economize on luxuries, we can curtail our pleasures, but we must not fail the missionaries in the field and slacken the progress of the missionary movement by paring down contributions."

(Cardinal Mundelein)

The weather continued dull with scattered showers; however, we managed an evening walk to get some fresh air in our lungs and to clear our heads from the smoke in the house. On the return we met a former Christian who had left the Church and taken to himself another man's wife. He had been hanging around for the two days working up courage to approach us; the meeting served the purpose and we made an appointment to see him right after supper. And right after supper he was in sitting before the priest for the first time in many years. He had brought a large grapefruit as a token of goodwill. Suffice to say that in the interview he expressed his willingness to return and to atone. Before night prayers many of the Christians came to buy medals, books and beads. We charge the cheapest possible price—one copper for a medal with holy picture (a copper is about a ninth of a Canadian cent). There are many advantages in selling them rather than in giving them away, not the least of which is the Christians' own appreciation of them.

Thursday, November 7th

The order much the same as on the previous day, with confessions added. Nearly every one of the Christians came, and thus the big thing of the mission was accomplished. It was a bit finer to-day, too.

* * *

Friday, November 8th

OUR last full day here. All were to Communion at the Mass and the thanksgiving after it took the place of the usual sermon. In the morning I baptised one infant and supplied ceremonies for three others. In the afternoon we visited the house of a catechumen about two miles up the road—in answer to an invitation and to a request that we bless his home. It turned out to be a nice social call, and besides seeing the family we met also many of the neighbors, some of whom are catechumens and some who want to be. Our host was very considerate; he had heard from the catechist that we liked boiled eggs and so these he served us and gave to the catechists their own delectable dish. It was a consideration we appreciated very much, too.

The closing lecture was given by Father Stringer just before night prayers; he summed up the main points of the Mission and reviewed the Doctrine and importance of Confession and Communion. They were also given a rule for the year, stress being laid on the children's coming to Doctrine class every morning. The morning devotion will see the formal conclusion of the Mission, and then we will leave the border of the big river and cut through the mountains and start all over again in the village of Do Lu, which has many more Christians than the other places.

"The traders go for treasure that the worm will take by stealth
And death will come to cheat them of the whole,
But these win prize eternal, seeking out another wealth,
They have guessed the blinding value of a soul.

They are pioneering miners, and they quest the purest gold,
They are merchants seeking naught but pearls unpriced.
In the midst of every region, they're a laughing lonely legion,
Oh! they'd blaze a trail to anywhere for maddening love of Christ."

China Holds First National Catholic Action Congress

Plans Are Set Forth for the Extension of Christ's Kingdom

SHANGHAI — China's first National Catholic Action Congress, held here, closed in a burst of love and veneration for the Eucharistic King after an eight-day series of notable sessions in which the progress of the great Catholic Action Apostolate in China was measured and clerical and lay leaders set forth principles and plans for the extension of Christ's Kingdom in this mission land.

Led by His Excellency the Most Rev. Mario Zanin, Apostolic Delegate to China, who presided at the sessions, Bishops and outstanding members of the laity discussed questions of paramount importance to the Church in China, while reports were heard indicating the course and vitality of Catholic Action throughout the country.

Three thousand persons marched in the Eucharistic procession, which closed the Congress, filing through the streets of the city to St. Ignatius Church, where Solemn Benediction was given.

Messages from His Holiness Pope Pius XI and from Wang Ching-wei, head of the Executive Yuan of the National Government, were received by the Congress. The Holy Father, replying to a message of homage and filial affection, sent his special blessing, while Mr. Wang Ching-wei acknowledged the gathering's pledge of cooperation in the promotion of national reconstruction. His Eminence Pietro Cardinal Fumasoni-Biondi, Prefect of the Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith, sent his blessing and best wishes.

Clergy Hold Conferences

The sessions covered a wide field. Some of the meetings were devoted to special topics, such as youth, the laity, education, sociology and the Catholic Press.

Important among the various meetings were the conferences of clergy. At these gatherings addresses were delivered by Bishops on subjects including "The Rights and Duties of Ecclesiastical Assistants as Regards Catholic Action", "Is Catholic Action Practicable Everywhere at the Present Time?" "The Inner Life of Ecclesiastical Assistants", and "The Theological Bases of Catholic Action". The last subject was discussed by the Apostolic Delegate in Latin.

Education and sociology in the light of Catholic Action were considered at two sessions. Prominent educators, clerical and lay, spoke on "Requirements for a Truly Catholic School" and "School Legislation and Catholic Educational Institutions", while reports were made on the work of several Catholic Educational institutions in China and one on the present state of Catholic educational effort in this country.

Archbishop Zanin, opening the session on sociology, struck the keynote of the Catholic social effort, emphasizing the supernatural motive behind Catholic social activities. Various other addresses at this session dealt with economic and sociological work of the Church in China such as "The Social Formation of Catholic Action Associates", "Peasant Federation in China," and "Medical Work and Catholic Action."

Resolutions Passed

Editors and journalists were heard at the session on the Catholic Press on subjects varying from "A Brief Account of Recent Catholic Publications in China" to "Catholic Action Publications".

One session was devoted to the discussion of cultural and intellectual matters. Distinguished savants considered such topics as "The Mission of Catholic Intellectuals", "The Introduction of Neo - Scholastic Philosophy in China", and "Chinese Christian Art".

Youth came in for extensive treatment, one whole day being given over to that question. In addition to addresses on youth, there was a review of Catholic student bodies of Shanghai, in which approximately 5,000 participated.

Sessions for Catholic young men and women were held, these meetings presenting addresses on "The Place of Women in Catholic Action" and "Catholic Action Associations for Young Women", and one by the Apostolic Delegate in which His Excellency stressed the responsibilities of men, as fathers, in safeguarding the faith of the younger generation from the dangers in the cinema and the press.

Two important resolutions were passed. One recommended the establishment of a Catholic University for Women in this city, while the other urged the sponsoring of a National Catholic Shrine in the capital, in the form of a church dedicated to the Sacred Heart. The latter resolution also called for the erection of a statue of Christ the King.

A few of the fifty Chinese children attending the Kindergarten of St. Francis Xavier Chinese Mission in Vancouver, with their Chinese teacher and a Grey Sister.

MISSION CIRCLES

A FEW months ago we wrote to a large number of lady friends of our Seminary to enlist their aid in securing some financial assistance for the upkeep of the Seminary and the training of our fifty students for the Priesthood. The names of those to whom we sent letters were suggested to us by our students themselves as ones likely to have a particular interest in our work through their acquaintance with our seminarians. We asked those people to accept the responsibility of becoming Promoters of Mission Circles. As Promoters they would agree to approach five other friends of theirs and solicit a monthly offering of twenty-five cents. The Circle would be composed of the Promoter and five others who agreed to make the monthly contribution to the missions, through their Promoter.

We are happy to report now that the plan has met with great success. Mere words are a weak medium with which to express our thanks and appreciation for the prompt and willing co-operation given us by Promoters and Members of these Mission Circles. Our gratitude can best be tendered by a daily remembrance in the Masses and prayers of our priests and students. May God's blessing be with our good friends of our Mission Circles. Let their work continue, and it gives promise of doing much to relieve the Seminary authorities of a great deal of financial worries.

In later issues we hope to make mention of Mission Circle activities, and if possible do something to encourage the spread of the work throughout the country as an easy method for Catholics to do their share for the Missions.

The Yellow Man Looks On

(Continued from page 23)

higher like the piles of shells they made to break the bodies of babies in their mother's arms—lands called Christian!

The Yellow Man has looked upon the West. He has seen things that astound and bewilder him. He has seen things that sicken and disgust him; he has seen heroic things in the lives of missionaries, and he is impressed by their spirit of Christianity in action.

Will we not, then, give him a chance to accept the Christianity which the West rejects as a cure for the ills of the world?

"You seem to imply, Monsignor, that the Chinese should be given a chance to accept a Christianity rejected by the Western World. Is that the theme of your discourse to-day?"

Is that our argument—that alone? Is it upon that consideration that we rest our case for the Foreign Missions? No! It is true, beautifully true, but is it enough?

In other words, my dear friends, must you and I, in this year of grace, 1935, sit and weigh and ponder the evidence, as it were, before giving our approval to the work of the Foreign Missions?

Many Christian people are doing so. Some Canadian people are doing so. And they have turned thumbs down. They tell me that we are wasting our time in China, that there is China enough right here at home.

What do they forget? That this business of the Foreign Missions is not an open question. The issue was settled 1,900 years ago. It was decided by One whose words settled the question forever; who He was you know; His words you know.

"Going, therefore, teach ye all nations"; "Preach the Gospel to every creature."

He who spake died for the soul of the red and the black, and the yellow man, as well as for your soul and mine. He wants the love of their poor human hearts as He wants the love of your heart and mine. And there, if you ask, is and ever has been, the driving force of the Foreign Missions, the burning desire of soldiers of Christ to win for Him the love of souls for whom He died. For the Church has long had its Foreign Legion. And China and India and Africa have their Flanders fields where crosses stretch row upon row; and those who died there have not died but entered upon life eternal.

"Well, Monsignor, our time is almost up. I am sure I speak for each listener-in when I say we are deeply grateful for your kindness in addressing us to-day. We bid you God-speed on your journey to China, and assure you of our prayers for yourself and the heroic young priests who labour with you across the seas in Chuchow, China. Would you like to say a final word?"

My friends, it would be most ungracious on my part did I not avail of this opportunity to bid each of you a fond farewell, and to assure you that as in China our thoughts turn across the Pacific to our native land, so we naturally think of you our friends, and the friends of the Seminary which sends us to China. So, too, may I indulge the hope that you will occasionally remember us in your prayers that God may bless our work for the conversion of souls in pagan China.

Good-bye, my friends, and God bless you!

BURSES TO EDUCATE PRIESTS FOR CHINA

A BURSE is a sum of $5,000 (FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS) which, being securely invested, produces sufficient revenue to educate a student for the missionary priesthood. The capital is not touched, but remains intact. The Seminary would have the use of the ANNUAL INTEREST from each FIVE THOUSAND DOLLAR FUND to educate young men for the priesthood in PERPETUITY.

\+ +

SEVERAL of our Burses already completed have been outright gifts from individuals, but the others have been built up over a period of years by the large and small offerings of our faithful friends. We invite contributions to any of our Incomplete Burses. Even the smallest offering will move some Burse nearer to completion, and we certainly have need of such help now. We could never finance the education of all our students on the interest of our Burses as they now stand.

\+ +

THOSE blessed with an abundance of this world's goods could spend to no better advantage than by becoming the Founder of a Burse for China Mission Seminary. It would be absolutely the most worthwhile monument to leave behind to your memory.

\+ +

YOUR DONATION for our BURSE FUND may be sent either to the Seminary or in care of the "Catholic Record", London, Ont.

JOTTINGS

(Continued from page 21)

to paying the salaries of the catechists and all the other necessary expenses of the mission; in fact, many receive alms from the mission. The poverty here must be seen to be appreciated. But all have souls. Christ was born for them, too. He wants them to be saved, and our work here is handicapped by lack of means. To those who help we are grateful and they are specially remembered in the prayers and works of the missionaries. The Christians, especially the school children, also pray for those who made their conversion possible. On page 21 is a picture of one of the schoolgirls at the convent school in an attitude of prayer.

* * *

A BANDIT scare caused Father Amyot to consume the Blessed Sacrament one afternoon recently and fly to the mountains, but fortunately the bandits did not enter the village of Huang T'An, so Father Amyot and the villagers returned home. Last month I mentioned that the bandits were being starved out of the mountains, but now it seems more probable that the soldiers will be starved out, as they are poorly paid and are short on supplies, while the bandits, when money is low, capture a rich merchant and hold him for a few hundred dollars ransom. Although in China nothing is certain, it seems that the cold weather has brought about a more settled condition, but nevertheless a letter from Father King in Huang T'An adds: "Father Amyot has a ladder leaning against the back wall—to be used in case of necessity. Prudence is a virtue."

* * *

"Baby Expert" is a title that was thrust upon Father Stringer on his recent mission trip to Yeh Du San. The baby was crying lustily and showed no signs of stopping. Finally Father Stringer went over and had the one holding the child hold it face down on outstretched arms. Wonderful to relate the baby immediately stopped crying. Father Stringer has "big face" in Yeh Du San.

THE CHURCH IN CHINA

THE great majority of the teeming millions who inhabit China are pagans. The Church is making progress there, perhaps more than in any section of the vast Orient.

It is interesting to note that of the hundred Bishops in China, twenty are Chinese; of four thousand priests, about seventeen hundred are Chinese; of five thousand nuns, three thousand are Chinese. In some ways that is a very remarkable record. If you are the least bit concerned about the missions; if you ever think about them at all, we believe you must have been surprised at finding there were so many natives engaged in the Apostolate in China.

We like to present these figures, for they show forth the dividends your contributions to the missionary activities of the Church are producing. We think they are extraordinary for the amount invested.

We do not send to the missions in China as much as our good ladies spend on perfume, nor as much as our good gentlemen spend on cigarettes. If the little we have expended on the missions has brought such good returns, what might we not expect if we sent some of our perfume and tobacco money to win souls for Christ?

The filling of the Chinese Hierarchy, priesthood, and sisterhoods manifests very clearly the universality of the Church. Christ did not die for a few nor found His Church for a few, but for all mankind. The winning of the Chinese to Christianity emphasizes the Catholicity of our Church.

No better resolution could be formed for the year 1936 than to make it a mission year as far as each one is concerned personally. In drawing up a budget do not forget the missions.

—Editorial in the "Montreal Beacon".

ANOTHER MYSTERY SOLVED

According to the latest and authentic information the fate of Fr. Estaban, for four years a captive in Communist hands, is finally cleared up. It is now learned that he succumed to ill treatment and other hardships around Christmas of 1933. His remains have been identified without a doubt and have been brought here for burial, nearly four years after his capture.

Though it has long been presumed that Father Esteban was dead, definite information was lacking and his fate remained shrouded in mystery. He was last heard from in the spring of 1933, when he wrote: "I am content to be captive and to suffer for Jesus Christ, to bear imprisonment which will end when God wills, either in liberty that I may work again in His service, or in death for Jesus Christ. I am well. Thank you for the cans of milk. I have sent them to the hospital of the Reds, that I may return charity for their hatred."

On October 22nd, Fathers Fernandez and Eguizábal, of the Wuhu Mission, set out for Koyuan, which with the aid of Bishop Misner, of Yükiang, and two Vincentian Fathers they succeeded in reaching. Their investigations were crowned with success. Following the indications of the very man who had buried Father Esteban, they discovered and identified his remains without difficulty, November 8th. They escorted them to Wuhu where, upon their arrival, a Te Deum was chanted. The following day, after solemn Requiem Mass, the precious relics were transported to the community cemetery for final interment.

A fitting epitaph for this great-hearted Spanish missionary would be the concluding sentence of his last letter, penned after two years of rigorous captivity: "If they (the Communists) but knew how much I love them and all the Chinese."

—Lumen.

Hockey is a popular recreation pastime with the students. Our rivals at St. Augustine's are a game up on us just now (January 20th)—and (so the records say) our Juniors are not quite in form this year against the Seniors.

Toronto Ladies to Aid China Mission Seminary

EARLY in January there gathered in Columbus Hall, Sherbourne St., Toronto, an enthusiastic group of Catholic ladies whose interest in China Mission Seminary prompted them to come together to discuss some method of raising funds to aid our work, at the suggestion of Father James Leonard.

Priests from the Seminary were invited to the meeting to present to the ladies an outline of the most pressing needs. Father Chafe spoke briefly, giving information about the foundation and progress of the Seminary to the present day, and then the President of the Seminary, Very Rev. J. E. McRae, expressed his pleasure at being given the opportunity to present to the gathering the "inside story" of the financial problems of our Institution. He said he was especially gratified to know that something was about to be done to awaken interest amongst the people of Toronto in the work that was being carried on under difficulties at Scarboro Bluffs, and it was his hope that through the efforts of the genuinely-interested people present at the meeting a greater number in Toronto would learn of the Seminary and come to its assistance. Father Leonard thanked the ladies and offered some helpful suggestions.

Following discussions by the ladies it was decided that a mammoth Bridge and Euchre Party be held at Columbus Hall in aid of the Seminary on Thursday night, April 16th. Mr. Cecil Barry kindly consented to act with the Ladies' Committee to promote the Card Party, and the following capable Committee was appointed to make plans for what undoubtedly will be one of the major social affairs in Toronto in the coming months:

Mrs. E. Doherty, Mrs. S. Fairley, Miss E. Doyle, Mrs. J. Quinn, Mrs. H. Moore, Miss S. Doyle, Miss H. McGrath, Miss M. McMahon, Baroness De Hueck, Mrs. R. Archambault, Miss M. Hurley. Co-operating with this energetic Committee will be the following, who were amongst those at the meeting: Mrs. W. Wilson, Mrs. Ryan, Miss J. Vahey, Miss M. Dolan, Mrs. G. Carroll, Mrs. E. Cowley, Mrs. J. McGoey, Mrs. W. Delaney, Mrs. Fahey, Mrs. R. Hulseman, Miss C. Cronin, Mrs. J. Doherty, Mrs. B. Cronin, Mrs. A. Coffey, Mrs. R. Stephenson, Mrs. G. Spielmacher, Misses K. and M. Harrigan, Misses K. and C. Bird, Mrs. R. Kinsella, Mrs. S. Sauvé, Mrs. Gauthier, Miss E. McGarry, Mrs. J. Brennan, Mrs. S. Murphy, Miss Kilcawley, Mrs. Fitzpatrick.

We anticipate widespread support for the affair which has been begun so auspiciously. We urge our Toronto friends, men and women, to keep the date open, Thursday night, April 16th, in Columbus Hall. Tickets are now on sale at only fifty cents each; twenty-five valuable prizes are being offered. Let every Toronto subscriber to "China" help the ladies to make April 16th a big night for the Missions!

A Prayer for the Conversion of China

O LORD JESUS CHRIST, who didst come on earth to save the souls of men, open now Thy most Sacred Heart in mercy to the people of China, who still sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, and shower Thy graces on them, that they may come to the knowledge of Thy Gospel. Bless also and protect Thy missionaries, and make their work fruitful for Thee of countless souls. —Amen.

(300 days' Indulgence)
With Ecclesiastical Approbation

HARD TIMES

make it difficult for many to do much for the missions. But, think! the mission thrives on little gifts. Great gifts are few; it's the many little gifts that do the work in the missions. Can you help?

Problems Can be Solved by

CATHOLIC WILLS

For Mission Needs

The instinct is strong to "keep what we have". Yet when death summons we must go to the grave "clutching in our dead hands only that which we have given away". If you feel you cannot share your earthly possessions now with God, perhaps you will be mindful of Him and His Missions when drawing up your last will. You can be sure that what you leave to carry on Catholic Mission work will merit a blessing on your soul, and cause your name to be held in benediction long after you are dead. In China, our priests need funds for new chapels, for new schools, for new homes, and for payment of salaries to catechists. In Canada, our Seminary needs support for the training of young apostles and for the maintenance of their home. Think of our Mission work when making, or changing, your last will. Here's how you can do it; insert this clause in your will:

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO, THE SUM OF ....."

NONSENSE

"IF YOU DON'T LAUGH AT THE JOKES OF THE AGE, THEN LAUGH AT THE AGE OF THE JOKES"

Lady: "What! After me giving you a whole cake, you refuse to saw up the wood as you promised?"

Beggar: "Oh, no, lady. Not refuse. I just can't do it. I spoiled the saw cutting up your cake."

Sheridan was once very much annoyed by a fellow-member of the House of Commons who kept crying out every few minutes, "Hear, hear." During the debate Sheridan took occasion to describe a political contemporary who wished to play the rogue, but had only sense enough to act the fool.

"Where," exclaimed Sheridan, with great emphasis, "where shall we find a more foolish knave or a more knavish fool than he?"

"Hear, hear," was shouted by the troublesome member. Sheridan turned round, and thanking him for the prompt information, sat down amid a general roar of laughter.

"Who was the straightest man on earth?"
The teacher asked with glances grim.
"Oh, Joseph was," the girl replied;
"They made a ruler out of him."

"This soup isn't fit for a pig," said the indignant customer.

"I will take it away," said the waiter, "and bring you some that is."

Willie: "Please, teacher, what did I learn today?"

Teacher: "What a peculiar question!"

"Well, they'll ask me when I get home."

"Daddy, why don't you buy Grandma an air rifle for her birthday next week?"

"Air rifle? Grandma doesn't want an air rifle!"

"I know, but you know how good she is about lending her things."

The judge was trying to secure a jury for the trial of a criminal. A man was being questioned as to his fitness for jury service.

"Do you believe in capital punishmen?" asked the judge.

"Yes," replied the man, "if it isn't too severe."

"How do you like that new filing clerk you hired?"

"She does splendidly with her nails, but she has no apparent interest in my letters."

Two fishermen were angling in a river when one suddenly dropped his rod.

"Heavens!" he ejaculated. "Did you see that feller fall off that cliff over there into the river?"

"Don't get excited, Bill," said the other. "Perhaps it was a movie actor makin' pictures."

"But, my stars! How can we tell?"

"Well," replied the other, "if he drowns, he ain't."

"Where did you go last night?"

"I went to a sleight-of-hand performance. I offered my hand to Doris and she slighted it."

Very Old Inhabitant: "Yes, and my secret for long life and good health is in eatin' plenty of garlic every day."

Visitor: "Don't think for one moment that it's a secret."

Wife (heatedly): "You're lazy, you're worthless, you're bad-tempered, you're shiftless, you're a thorough liar."

Husband (reasonably): "Well, my dear, no man is perfect."

Wife (reading): "It says here that they have found a sheep in the Himalaya Mountains that can run forty miles an hour."

Her Hubby: "Well, it would take a lamb like that to follow Mary nowadays."

Traveller—"Can't I get anything to eat in this dump?"

Waiter: "Yas, sah, you kin."

Traveller: "Such as what?"

Waiter: "Such as it is, sah."

"Weren't ye fear't in the airy-plane, Sandy?"

"Aye, I was fear't! I cried oot to the pilot, 'Five poun's if ye'll put me doon safe an' sound! . . . Fortunately he didna' hear me."

"Who was the King of France at the time of the French Revolution, James" asked the teacher.

"Louis the Thirteenth—er, Fourteenth—er, Fifteenth—oh, I don't know, but he was in his teens, anyway!"

The magistrate said, "Can't this case be settled out of court?"

"Jes' what we's trying to do, you' honor, when the policeman interfered."

Diner: "Look here, miss, I only had a portion of trout and here I'm charged with the whole fish."

Waitress: "Sorry, sir, but it's the custom of the establishment."

Diner: "Then it's a good job I didn't order steak."

"Why do they call it a dental parlor?"

"Parlor is another name for a drawing-room."

She (playing piano): "That was 'Siegfried's Death'."

He: "I'm not surprised."

She: "Did you learn right from wrong at your mother's knee?"

He: "No, across my father's."

"So your daughter can play the violin now."

"No, she can't—but she does."

"Who writes the advertisements for the bank?"

"I don't know, but I'm sure it isn't the same man that makes the loans."

Teacher: "Some fish travel long distances. Can any one give me an instance?"

Scholar: "Yes, sir, a goldfish. It travels round the globe every day."

Insurance Doctor: "How old was your father when he died?"

Applicant (determined to pass): "104."

Insurance Doctor: "What did he die of?"

Applicant: "Strained his heart playing football."

Little Rosalie, a first-grader, walking with her mother, spoke to a small boy. "His name is Jimmy and he is in my grade," she explained.

"What is the little boy's last name?" her mother asked.

"His whole name," said Rosalie, "is Jimmy Sitdown—that's what the teacher calls him."

Mrs. Yapp: "After all is said and done—"

Hubby: "I wonder if that glorious moment will ever come!"

Niece: "Aunt Sarah, this is the famous 'Angelus' by Millet."

Aunt Sarah: "Well, I never! That man has the nerve to copy the calendar that has hung in our kitchen for a dozen years or more."

All Together, Now!

LET'S HELP THE MISSIONS!

WE wish to remind all our readers that the financial burden of St. Francis Xavier's Seminary is becoming heavier as the number of our priests in China and students at home increases, and if we are to be able to support our growing institutions here and in China we shall need much more financial assistance than has come to us through the day-to-day donations during 1935. We know that "times are hard" with many. We certainly are amongst the number ourselves, and so we appeal to Catholic wage-earners, young and old, to sometimes make a little sacrifice and send a gift to aid our mission work. Those who do give to the missions find joy in the giving, and are none the poorer for their sacrifices. During 1936 enlist with those faithful friends of the Missions who give us a helping hand regularly. If you have never given to the Missions, why not begin now? Giving to the Missions ought to be a habit with every Catholic family.

HOLY SCRIPTURE SAYS:

"If thou have much, give abundantly: If thou have little, take care even so to bestow willingly a little. For thus thou storest up to thyself a good reward for the day of necessity."

(Tobias IV: 9, 10.)

Give your gift for the love of God, and you will give a gift that is worth while, no matter how small it is.

LET'S HELP THE MISSIONS!

St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario

Very Rev. John E. McRae, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT. MARCH 1936

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.

2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.

3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.

4. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Quality Printers

ADelaide 2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West - Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutator Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.

2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.

3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.

4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.

5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 24,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XVII. MARCH, 1936 No. 3

A THOUGHT FOR LENT

WE are now entered upon the Penetential Season of Lent. During the forty-day period the Church presents to her children in an emphatic way the necessity of "seeking the things that are above" in order that the salvation of their souls may be a matter of careful attention. Everywhere that the Catholic Church is solidly established there will be given to her people during these days of Lent special opportunities of hearing sermons and instructions and of receiving the life-giving Sacraments. Most Catholics will avail of these opportunities, and perhaps accept these graces from God merely as a matter of course. For ourselves, we like at such times to remind people of their benefits and to ask them to draw a contrast between their own fortunate condition and the miserable lot of those hundreds of millions who will not have the privilege of being so solicitously ministered to in spiritual matters. And we have in mind especially the poor pagans of far-off countries. We cannot forget that these neglected people also have a rightful claim to the benefits of the teachings of Christ and the ministrations of His Church.

THE saving will of God embraces all mankind in every age; He wills all men to be saved and to come to the knowledge of truth. Every member of the human race must be made a member of the empire of grace and truth founded by Christ, our Lord. This catholicity, which is so marked a characteristic of the Christian religion, necessarily implies that at all times and in all places efforts should be made to spread the faith.

NOW it is evident that we, who share in the blessings that have come to the world by reason of the carrying out of the Divine Commission on the part of the rulers of the church, should ourselves give some consideration to our individual responsibility of sharing in the work. No Catholic worthy of the name, and no Catholic who sets a proper value on his Faith, can escape the truth that he ought to be personally concerned with the missionary activity of his church. Christ has not stinted Himself in the means of grace He has placed at our disposal; we ought not to stint ourselves in the enjoyment of these graces, we ought not to regard our spiritual riches as something to be locked securely in our own treasure-vault. We ought, and indeed we must, increase and develop our riches by giving them away, by sharing them. There is much truth in the words of Cardinal Manning: "The Apostolic spirit is the condition of our progress; it is the proof and the measure of our Catholicity."

ALL that has gone before leads up to this, that we are going to ask you to do something during this Season of Lent to further the efforts of missionaries who are giving their all to bring the blessings of the Catholic Faith to the poor pagans of China. We are asking you now to give them the support of your prayers and your sacrifices. They have a right to expect that assistance from you. Day after day, with unrelenting enthusiasm, your missionaries in China are striving to win immortal souls for Christ. Their efforts mean sacrifices that we scarcely realize. Away from home and friends, living in uncongenial surroundings, enduring hardships of a new kind of life, and doing it all for love of souls, they excite our admiration and they merit our support.

AS our Lenten message to you, dear readers of "CHINA", we are going to give you the words of our Mission Superior in Chuchow, Monsignor McGrath, who, in his book, "The Dragon At Close Range", speaking of the facts that have been presented to you through the letters of our Canadian missionaries, writes as follows: "They have not shrunk from using the words 'fallen-away Christians', and have intimated that as a result of the years when this district was without adequate number of priests it is going to take time to win back those strayed sheep as well as to bring new converts into the fold. 'Be careful!' some will say, 'don't dishearten the people!' We think we know the people of Canada and Newfoundland. We think they would want to be the first ones to know it if their boys were up against it good and hard. And we are. And we tell you so because we need your prayers, and because we should like you never to leave the church without a plea for us to Christ in the tabernacle.

"BUT waste no pity on us, dear friends. Whether God sees fit to reward our poor efforts with objective results that can be humanly satisfying, or to leave the harvest for those who will follow after, our success is assured if we but keep on trying to the end. Pity the suffering Saviour on the Cross, to whom immortal souls will be lost forever. This very night, ere another day has dawned, Satan will quietly, exultantly, take unto himself a grim harvest of hapless souls for whom Christ's Blood was shed. Pity the blood-stained Sufferer in Gethsemane! The vision of those wretched creatures cost Him something of that awful agony in the garden. Victory is not yet while souls stream daily into hell and there are those on earth for whom Calvary will have been in vain. Pray without ceasing—for there are souls whom only your prayers will save."

JOTTINGS

By

REV. GERALD DOYLE

MOUNTAINS are to the right and to the left, and also to the front and to the rear of our mission compound here in Tsingtien, but fortunately there is no charge for them.

I had just written the above lines when a boy arrived and asked for a priest to go and baptize his baby sister who was dying. Accompanied by the catechist we started out. After a half hour walk down the road we crossed the river on the public ferry, which was operated by chance passengers. A passenger opposite me wore "big toe" shoes, with a separate section for the big toe, like the thumb on a mitt. And then began the climb over the mountains. Up and down we went so that in addition to the first paragraph I now add: mountains above and below us. From time to time I would glance up to estimate how many more thousand steps to the present mountain, but most of the time my eyes were on the narrow path, selecting the place for each step.

Even on the mountainside were to be found small fields, painstakingly terraced by untold labor, so that the precarious path was sometimes between a water submerged field and a deep valley. At first the going down was easier than the going up, but when it was prolonged it became more difficult as a new set of muscles was called into play and the slanting stone steps came up to hit the soles of the feet. There were numerous beauty spots of valleys, carefully cultivated fields, and mountain peaks, while once we caught a glimpse of Tsingtien, far below and across the river.

Finally we left the makeshift path, forded a couple of streams, scrambled around the side of a mountain and came to rest at the home of the Christian. The family was simple, friendly, and very likeable. The sick baby was brought forward and even to my inexperienced eye it was evident that the infant had not long to live; so, as is permitted in such circumstances, I conferred not only the Sacrament of Baptism but also the Sacrament of Confirmation, giving the names of Mary and Teresa.

Before we left the home the women prepared a lunch consisting mainly of sweet potatoes, which are plentiful in this district.

On the return trip in the afternoon the catechist pointed out a former stronghold of the bandits.

Reaching the ferry once more, I quickly made use of the opportunity to remove my shoes and shake out the little stones that had slipped inside. That is one disadvantage of a low shoe for walking in the country. In another half hour I was back at the Mission and found Father Stringer and Father Strang busy in their rooms.

* * *

BUT to come back to the beauties of the country surrounding Tsingtien. For the present I will forget the narrow streets and houses in the city, which are anything but beautiful. We are boxed in by mountains so that the horizon is very close. The best view is from our front door and the centre snapshot on this page fortunately cuts out our tumbledown school and shows the hedge at its best. My trip this morning took me over two mountains behind the one in the picture, but veering to the left. Besides the mountains there are a few nice walks outside the city, a favorite one being through the bamboo grove which would probably be called a "lovers' lane" in Canada. At places the trees meet above, while at one spot an arch is formed, casting a deep shadow. It is pleasant there in the morning.

* * *

FROM Father King comes word that the bandits are active in his section of the district, Huang T'An. Several times he and Father Amyot have hurried to the hills as the result of word that the bandits were about to enter the village. He writes: "Everything with the exception of books and a few odds and ends is packed here ready to be hustled off to some place of hiding. At present

"At one spot an arch is formed by the trees".

The view as one looks out through the front door of the Tsingtien mission house.

The beautiful walk of the bamboo grove at Tsingtien.

the Red demons are supposed to be lodged in a temple 12 miles away. We have not had the Blessed Sacrament reserved since yesterday morning." (Early in January.)

CHINESE BANDITS EXECUTED

"IT happened about a month ago, on December the 14th," writes Father Doyle in his "Jottings". "On that day for the first time I noticed ice in the holy water font in the unheated chapel, while the ground was covered with ice and snow. Usually the sun melts the snow after a few hours, but there was no sun. Through the streets of Tsingtien two bandits were led, their feet chained, hands tied behind and supporting the official placard bearing notice of their crime, as they were led to the outskirts of the city to be executed. One of the bandits had bare feet. Both seemed indifferent and even carefree. They had been doped. Pausing for the official photograph, one yawned while the other gave a little speech and called to an acquaintance in the crowd. Then they were led aside, forced to their knees. Behind each stood a soldier with a loaded rifle. In a few moments both were dead."

OUR Christmas here was very happy. Father Strang said his Masses at two Mission stations, while Father Stringer said the Midnight Masses here. The chapel was crowded and a good number received Holy Communion and following the Masses visited the Crib. In the morning I celebrated my three Masses, the one at ten-thirty o'clock being a High Mass.

Father Strang returned in the afternoon and we had our Christmas dinner at night; and the goose was fine, too.

During the week preceding Christmas Father Stringer gave a mission to the Christians and catechumens of Tsingtien, as he had previously done in all the mission stations.

The Christmas decorations still provide a festive atmosphere in the mission compound. Father Strang had charge of the Crib and for a few days before the Feast of the Epiphany he had the Magi coming closer and closer to the Crib, arriving just at the right time.

MASS INTENTIONS

Practically the only means of support for our priests on the Missions is their Mass stipends. Could we give each of our missionaries a daily Mass stipend it would mean a great help to them. If you wish to have a Mass offered for any intention we would be pleased to have you send us the stipend, and our missionaries will benefit from your remembrance. To Priests who have surplus intentions to dispose of we make the request that they keep in mind our Canadian priests in China.

BURSE FUNDS

To pay for the education of our students for the Priesthood we have a fund known as a Burse Fund. This is in the nature of an endowment, the interest from which is available to pay the tuition of students whose families are not in a position to meet that expense. In sending us a donation to our Burse Fund recently, a priest-friend commented on the lack of response to appeals for contributions to our Burse in honor of the Blessed Sacrament. May we now suggest to our readers that if they wish to contribute to the education of priests here at China Mission Seminary they designate their gifts during this month as an offering to help along our Blessed Sacrament Burse.

The Last Chapter in the Story of YU SHAN

by

Rev. Craig Strang

"TRUTH is stranger than fiction," 'tis said, and surely the story of a little Chinese girl named Yu Shan furnishes trials, triumphs and adventures that rival the best of story books for interest.

In the March issue of "China" last year Yu Shan was introduced for the first time to the readers of our magazine. Then they read of her heroic life—of her baptism—of her struggle to preserve her gift of Catholic Faith —and of her wonderful apostolic work in bringing almost her entire village into the Church, after she herself had learned to appreciate her Catholic religion through her years spent at the Lishui Convent with the Grey Sisters of the Immaculate Conception.

Yu Shan became a much-publicised young lady when the newspapers of Canada and the United States told of an incident in which she figured, and how, through the timely assistance of Father John MacDonald of our Canadian Mission, she successfully saved herself from a life of virtual slavery under a pagan husband who claimed her by virtue of an illegal document of betrothal. She won a legal battle herself, and on her behalf a Catholic priest fought and won a real he-man fistic battle with the disappointed and foiled "villains". Story-books don't come any better.

And then, a more recent issue of "China" showed a picture of Yu Shan, taken on the occasion of her marriage to Fu K'uei Ling, a sacristan of Lishui. Now that is the natural place for the story to end and according to the best traditions they were supposed to "live happy ever after," but now comes another chapter in quick succession, and after it there will be no more chapters, for all her personal friends have said their last good-bye to her and this chapter is written to give her story-acquaintances the same opportunity.

Immediately after her marriage, consumption, the symptoms of which had been dormant for some time, began to weaken her and to mar her happiness of married life. When she reported to the Sisters her condition she was already too far gone for them to help her; she tried a visit to the hospital at Wenchow, but a month's stay there resulted in no improvement, and so she returned to her mother's house at Lei Zhih and kept to her room, which was really only part of a loft and an outlet to the smoke from the stove in a room below. In such circumstances, of course, she was not expected to get better. Consequently when the sick call came to Lishui just after retreat it was not surprising. Father Venadam attended the call and performed all the last Rites. As Yu Shan seemed to pick up a bit, he returned to the mission.

Our next contact with her was when Father Stringer and I were making the fall mission there early in November. She made her confession on the first night and received Holy Communion in bed every morning of the week we were there, and she very bravely offered her suffering for the success of the mission. When the week was up we moved on to Do Lu, a village some five miles in the mountains, and opened the mission there and reserved the Blessed Sacrament as we did at Lei Zhih in case of need of Viaticum.

After three days a turn for the worse came to Yu Shan and the catechist sent a messenger to us for one of us to come. Father Stringer appointed me to go and with the Blessed Sacrament and the sick call case I set out on the five-mile walk. It was near nine o'clock at night when I started; half the way was over a cobble stone path, winding in the valley through the rice fields and along the mountainside past the white graves. The hidden moon gave sufficient light to see the way without use of the flashlight and made the walking rather pleasant. In less than two hours I arrived at the sick room to find Yu Shan in a state of semi-consciousness with her husband and mother and father at the bedside tendering every help that their love for her suggested. At first she did not recognize me, but after a while her mind cleared and she asked to go to confession. After confession she received the Sacrament of Extreme Unction and Holy Viaticum with great devotion; in fact her conduct was most edifying and showed how deeply the Faith was rooted in her. After the conferring of the Sacraments the family and many of the Christians recited the rosary, and, that over, I made preparations to return, for I still had the Blessed Sacrament with me (having given her only a portion of a Host), and after some parting words of encouragement and consolation I set out for the walk back and reached the mission somewhere around twelve-thirty. For two more days she lingered, and on Friday evening she gasped her last feeble breath and with the name of God on her lips and the prayers for the dying in her ears she brought to an end the beautiful chapter that was the last of the stirring and adventurous story that she lived.

And as with story books, we like to go back and make acquaintance with characters whom we learned to admire and cherish, so too we like to discuss amongst ourselves the incidents that made Yu Shan very dear to all of us. And so also do the Christians; since her death, obituary notices have been sent to all the Churches and chapels in the Prefecture, and especially fervent are the prayers of those who lived the story with her. And we all like to think that she still is influencing us by intercessory prayers as she gazes down upon her home village so recently converted to the faith.

LITTLE FLOWER CHURCH BLESSED.

THE above group was taken on the occasion of the dedication of the new church in the village of Siao Kao Tsu in the Kinhwa district. Monsignor Fraser who performed the ceremony is seated in the centre. Father Ly, his assistant, who evangelized this village and built the church, is at his right; Father Ouang, Vicar Forane of Chuchow, at his left. Here is a church and congregation that sprang up like magic. A year ago neither were in existence. All the people in the group are recent converts from paganism; and the church had to be built to accommodate them. On December 8th, Feast of the Immaculate Conception, Monsignor Fraser and Father Ouang left Kinhwa by special car, made 40 miles in an hour, then 10 miles in sedan chairs carried by men in 2½ hours, arriving at 10.30 a.m. Outside the village they were met by the pious congregation, men, women and children, who conducted them in procession with banners and firecrackers to the new church. Father Ly, who had been making preparation for several weeks, received them at the church door. The decorations were very pretty. Father Ouang preached the sermon. Some three hundred Christians and catechumens attended. After the Blessing ceremony and Mass, celebrated by Msgr. Fraser, Little Flower roses were blessed and distributed, this new church being dedicated to Saint Teresa of the Child Jesus. The return journey was made the same day by chair, motor car and rickshaw. Monsignor asks the prayers of the readers of "China" for the perseverance of these neophytes, and that God may soon send them a priest to reside continually in their midst to instruct them and administer the Sacraments to them.

THE MISSION AT TSINGTIEN

By

REV. CRAIG STRANG

FOR the past six weeks we have been touring the whole countryside, along winding rivers, over climbing mountains, and through sweeping valleys. Wherever it has pleased the Holy Ghost to make a Christian settlement within a range of thirty miles of the city of Tsingtien there we have travelled, and we have fared as travellers fare in remote villages of China, far removed from the conveniences, not to speak of the luxuries, of "home".

Father Stringer and I have just "come in" from the Missions. Three more places remain to be visited, but we have decided to give a mission right here in Tsingtien city for the week prior to the Christmas celebrations. The Mission itself will be along similar lines to those given elsewhere during our tour, but the accidental circumstances will make a big difference. Here we are not puzzled so much by the ever-changing dialects; here the walls of the house are substantial enough to keep out the cold; here we have an improvement on the board and plank beds of the past six weeks. Here, too, the food is cooked more in "foreign" fashion, and we are free from the nauseating smoke in badly ventilated cramped rooms; on the whole, we find this week comparatively "easy going".

On the night of December 16th the mission was formally opened. Efforts had been made to round up everybody, and though we did not succeed in getting all, still we had the satisfaction of seeing new faces as well as all the more familiar ones. From six o'clock on they came strolling in, and the hum of conversation was heard about the premises—at least they all knew the way. With scarves about their necks, and with little "ho-lu" charcoal stoves in their hands, they came and smoked their long pipes and bowed most profusely to us. Our chapel runs the length of our residence, upstairs, and the men were arranged on one side while the women and children sat opposite them.

Father Stringer gave the "Asperges," followed by a prayer to the Holy Ghost, after which the opening discourse was given in which he pointed out to his interested hearers "the one thing necessary," and how they were to attend to it. Night prayers concluded the first exercise of the Mission. Many lingered around for a little while afterwards, but of Saint John's, Newfoundland, assistant priest at Tsingtien Mission, Chekiang. Since his arrival in China sixteen months ago, Father Strang has been a very faithful contributor to "CHINA", and he has presented to our readers in an admirably facile style many accounts of mission life. Last month, "CHINA" carried the first instalment of his account of the Fall Missions in Tsingtien. We have interrupted the continuity of that account this month to give place to the write-up on a Mission given at the home-station at Tsingtien City.

REV. CRAIG STRANG

the chill of the weather hastened their departure, and soon we were left to ourselves, the gates were closed, and we retired to our rooms to check up on the attendance.

The following morning (Dec. 18th) the first of the three Masses was celebrated at seven o'clock; at eight came the Mission Mass, at which the catechist delivered a discourse on the needs of the soul. The attendance was not as good as last night, and even then it took a good bit of "rounding up"; some had not yet arisen, and others had gone off to their day's work.

As on the other mission, Father Stringer gave me charge of the children, and so after breakfast, armed with a list of the students and a penny Catechism, I walked into the school, received the usual salutations, and knelt for prayers. Of 24 present, but 4 were Christians; three of these latter were over seven years of age, and only one had yet made his first Confession and Holy Communion. The others were the children of pagans. Most of them knew the ordinary prayers. An hour and a half was occupied in giving them instructions. After dinner, the class was resumed till the bell for the rosary sounded. The rosary, to be followed by a conference given by the catechist, was for everybody, but not more than 15, besides the children, turned up. The exercise at seven p.m. brought together only two-thirds of the number present the opening night.

And thus the week passed by, each day in the same order. Father Stringer obtained a complete record of all parishoners and found himself very busy fixing up marriages of those who had previously contracted marriage with pagans without obtaining a dispensation. There was no exercise as well attended as on the first night—until Sunday, December 22nd. Friday and Saturday confessions were heard, but none of the catechumens were ready for Baptism. The attendance at Mass on Sunday morning was very good, and Father Stringer gave a beautiful sermon on the relations between parents and children. The usual afternoon Benediction was deferred till night, and then it took the form of a "Holy Half-Hour". The altar was tastefully decorated and brilliantly lighted; the teacher and catechist had been summoning in as many people as possible. Only the lights in the sanctuary were left on as Father Stringer, from the rear of the church, spoke some thoughts on the Blessed Sacrament. May we not state that the light from the candles on the altar, reflected in the faces of the congregation, was a symbol of the grace that Christ from His altar-throne was shedding upon those who knelt before Him?

All in all, as we review the week, we had expected much more. A few Christians did not come at all; some came for several exercises, and only the more devout Christians attended every exercise. Also, we were disappointed in their knowledge of Christian Doctrine. However, it has enlightened us as to the true state of affairs, and as soon as the New Year begins we hope to take steps both to increase their opportunities for studying Doctrine, and to excite in them a deeper appreciation of religious exercises.

It is in work of this nature that we depend so much upon the spiritual assistance of our friends at home—you readers of "China". Please do not deny us that help which is so easy to give, and which, when given, can effect such wonders where souls are at stake.

These highly ornamental memorial arches span a narrow street in Tsingtien

MISSION CIRCLES

Encouraging returns still continue to come in from the Promoters of our Mission Circles, and their efforts in aid of our Seminary have meant much to us in recent months. A very enthusiastic group in Toronto is known as "The Happy Family Circle". A letter from the promoter recently has this: "We are planning our first Euchre as a means of getting our members together in order to create a consciousness of what their little donations can do when made regularly. In this manner we hope to encourage daily prayers for the conversion of China and by other means to foster the necessary missionary spirit among our members. This circle is larger than required by the rules. However, circumstances in this case were such that it reached its present proportions by requests for membership rather than by our efforts. We now number 15, and our enrolment still grows."

Another promoter writes that the circle idea seems to be ideally suited to the average Catholic as a means to contribute a little to the missions. None of the friends whom she approached found any difficulty in parting with a quarter; it would, perhaps, be quite different if they were asked to contribute three dollars a year to the missions. The regular monthly "painless extraction" of twenty-five cents does nobody any harm, but it does the work of the missions a lot of good.

FACTS YOU SHOULD KNOW

THE work of the Foreign Missions is not a whim or fad of a few individuals. It is a sacred trust given to all Catholics, young and old, by Jesus Christ our Lord.

Vast masses of people in China and elsewhere still await the word of salvation that can be brought to them only through foreign missionaries.

Nearly three hundred years ago the Catholic Faith was brought to Canada by the saintly Jesuit Martyrs from France.

Canadian Catholics owe a deep debt of gratitude to those pioneer Missionaries for the gift of their Catholic Faith.

Today Canada is making an effort to pay this debt by sending out her own missionaries to pagan lands.

An Institution for the development of Mission Vocations among English-speaking Canadian boys was founded in 1918 by Father John M. Fraser. That Institution is known as St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, now located at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

To date the Seminary has sent 20 priests to China. These priests are evangelizing a district (Chuchow) comprising a population of 1,500,000. Fewer than 3,000 are yet Catholics.

The present personnel of China Mission Seminary is: 34 priests and 43 students. This personnel has been recruited from 20 different dioceses, as follows: Toronto, 13; London, 8; St. John's, Nfld., 8; Alexandria, 6; Antigonish, 6; Ottawa, 5; Hr. Grace Nfld., 5; Kingston, 4; Montreal, 4; Halifax, 3; Hamilton, 2; Pembroke, 2; China, 2; Spain, 1; Victoria, 1, Peterboro, 1; Charlottetown, 1; St. John, N.B., 1; Vicariate of Northern Ontario, 1; Fall River, Mass., 1.

The Grey Sisters of the Immaculate Conception, from Pembroke, Ontario, are assisting the priests of China Mission Seminary in Chuchow Prefecture, China. Seven Sisters are at the Lishui Convent.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary has the endorsement of the entire Canadian Hierarchy. The President of the Seminary is Very Rev. J. E. McRae, D.C.L. The Prefect-Apostolic of Chuchow is Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary for its upkeep, and the development of its Missions in China, depends entirely on free-will offerings given by interested friends.

As a Catholic, you should contribute to this national endeavor for Foreign Missions. "Charity for the Missions surpasses every other work of charity." (Pius XI).

"Without doubt, it is by prayer and sacrifice that we can best help our missionaries."—ST. THERESE, Patroness of Missions.

THE CHURCH AND THE CHINESE NATION

"THREE million Chinese Catholics are willing to offer their services for the reconstruction of China."

This was the stirring declaration made by Mgr. Zanin, the Apostolic Delegate to China. He had at that time just returned to Peiping after an extensive tour of the central provinces. During the first six months that he had spent in China, he had visited many places, he had spoken with the chiefs of the State, with civil and military leaders, with statesmen and scholars, and he had personal proof not merely of the reality of the Chinese Renaissance, but also of its great moment for the future of the country, and of the serious importance attached to it by those who had most at heart the interests of China. He saw how much China needs the cooperation of every one of its sons, and, as the representative head of the Catholic Church in China he expressed the desire and determination that are in the heart of every Chinese Catholic—to do his part to help his country.

While the Apostolic Delegate was speaking in Peiping in the name of the Chinese members of the Catholic Church, his predecessor, Mgr. Costantini spoke in somewhat similar terms in Rome on behalf of the missionaries in China. Dealing with the changing scene in China and the missionaries' part, he said: "The troubles will pass, but China will remain. A nation of 450 millions cannot disappear. This people comprises a quarter of the human race, it is more than a nation, it is a race, and it is spread over an area vaster than Europe. Moreover, the Chinese people have a unity of race and culture such as is possessed by no other people in the world. It has in itself immense resources, too great to be restrained, and with these it will force its way forward to a prominent place in the future history of the world. . . .

"In the painful re-birth of the nation, between a world that is crumbling and a new one that is arising, a special part is being played by the Catholic missionaries, a silent but a great part.

"We, missionaries, want to bring to China nothing else but the salutary knowledge of God and the peace that is promised to men of good will. We do not want to denationalize the people of the East. We respect all that is good in Eastern civilization, and desire to cooperate in the rebirth of that culture and to make it Christian. It is our constant endeavour, too, to bring about a better understanding and closer relations between the East and the West."

These utterances are important, for they are a reaffirmation of assurances already given, which have been put into practice, but which need to be repeated again and again. In 1928, Our Holy Father the Pope sent his historic message to China, wishing it "an era of peace and reconstruction, and the fulfilment of the legitimate aspirations of the noble people of China." Since that date, he has more than once reminded missionaries in all parts of the world of the opportunities at their command for helping the countries in which they are working, and he has never tired of instructing all Catholics in their obligation of loyal devotion to their country and of showing an example to all of true patriotism.

In practice, one may ask, what do these declarations mean? In what way can Catholics help in the reconstruction of China? For answer, one need only point to the constant appeals that have been made to the people by the leading men of the country within the last year, urging them "to build up a new nation richer and more complete in its moral and cultural attainments"—as a widely displayed poster expressed it. To achieve this worthy end the people were asked to practise the virtues of propriety, honesty, and justice. On other occasions they have been urged to help the State in suppressing banditry and Communism, in stamping out the opium evil, in putting an end to the inhuman practice of selling children, in cutting down extravagance at marriage and funeral ceremonies, in promoting public health and hygiene, and in doing their utmost to advance education. In every phase of this comprehensive programme, Catholics not only can participate, but have long given a lead.

It is unnecessary to point out how consistent has been the Catholic opposition to all teaching of Communism, how uncompromising has been its attitude towards opium-smoking, and how earnest has been its effort to promote honesty in public life. The unchanging teaching of the Catholic Church on these matters is well known to all, Christians and non-Christians. It is equally well known that Catholic parents do not sell their children, and that the Catholic missions rescue tens of thousands of infants from exposure and suffering every year. It is recognized, too, that public propriety is insisted on among Catholics, and that it is more than an outward form, for it is the outcome of that strict Catholic moral teaching which the Church will never agree to relax, and which experience has proved not to be, as some unfriendly critics of China wished to maintain, beyond the capacity of people newly converted from paganism.

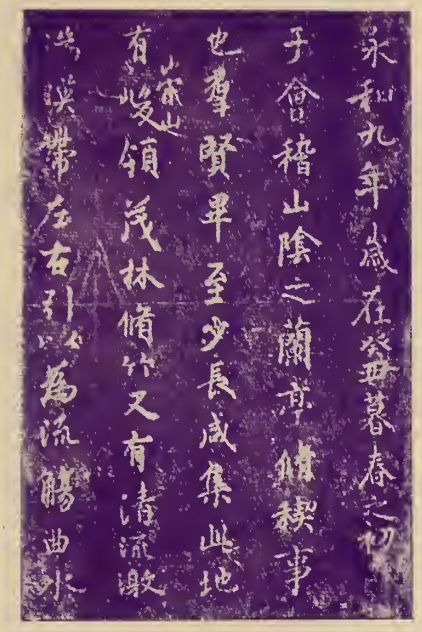
In the matter of family thrift, too, the Catholic Church in China has marked admirable progress, to such an extent that among Catholics one no longer expects those extravagant celebrations which led in the past, and still lead, to so much unhappiness.

Of the Church's work for public health and education it is least necessary to speak. Every Catholic Mission in the country is a centre of improvement in the health of the people, and of much-needed teaching in simple hygiene, while the value of its education work is beyond calculation.

If one, therefore, were to consider the mere temporal interests of the nation, it would be realized that the Catholic Church is a valuable asset, and that the three million of Chinese Catholics are doing their part to hasten the day of restoration of China's ancient greatness. But this is the least part of the Church's mission. It works in China that men may come to know the Saviour of the world, and, following Him, may enjoy the highest blessings that man can have on earth—His peace and His protection.—The Rock.

THE WORLD'S "BEST SELLER"

By K. C. Chow



EVERY now and again someone who has literary tastes and a flair for statistics works up some very interesting figures showing how many copies of certain boks, poems or songs have been published. Recently Mark Sulliven in his interesting series of volumes on American contemporary history, "Our Times", went into a great deal of detail to show how many copies of the song, "My Rosary", had been printed, how many school children had been brought up on the old series of McGuffey's Readers, etc. The figures, running in every instance into millions, were quite impressive—but pale into statistical insignificance when compared with the number of copies of the Bible or of Pilgrim's Progress which have been printed.

However that may be, there can be no doubt that the most widely read literary work in the world is an essay composed by the celebrated Shaohing calligrapher, Wong Shi-tse. He lived and acquired his undying fame in the fourth century, and even at the time he was still alive he was known as the master whose writing of Chinese characters was to be taken as the example to be followed by all Chinese students and scholars.

Wong was a scholar as well as an artist with the brush, not a mere copyist of the words of others. He produced a great many epitaphs, poems and essays. One of his productions, which is ranked in Chinese literary works as a great essay, had a rather casual inspiration. A friend in Shaohing had invited him, together with many other scholars, to look at a collection of classical manuscripts, and Wong wrote a preface or dedication to the collection.

The essay was, of course, written in Wong's perfect hand and was engraved on stone. It is said that the original authentic copy became the property of the imperial court and was preserved through many dynasties. Copies were made and gained a wider distribution even than Shaohing wine or Shaohing spirit money. For more than 1,500 years this essay has been read, copied, reread, recopied and memorized by every Chinese student.

When one figures the centuries

Above is a reproduction of the faultlessly written Chinese characters in Wong's own penmanship from the "best seller" here mentioned.

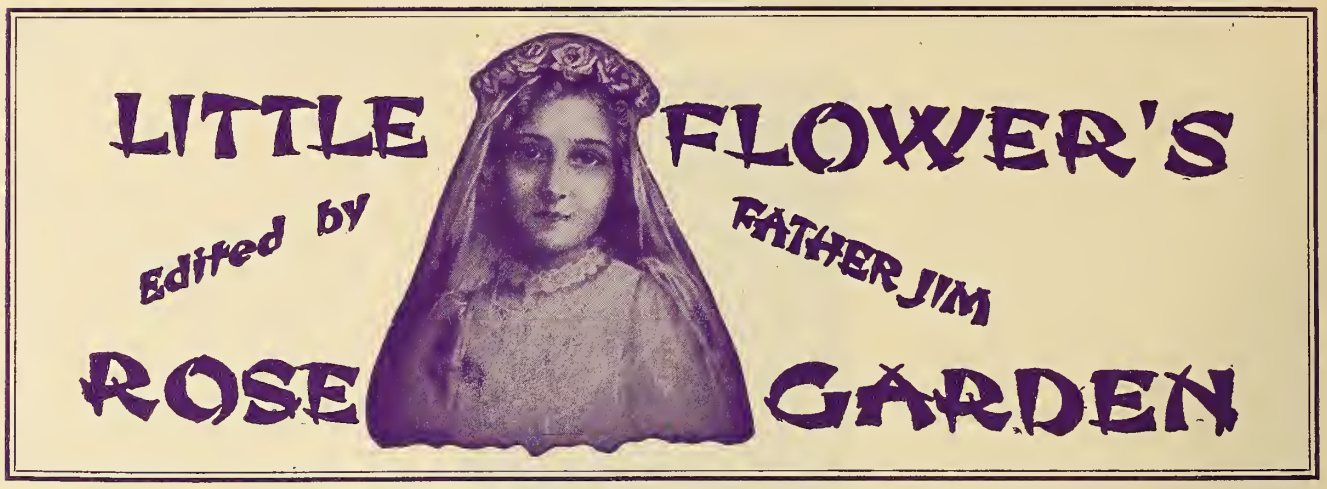
during which this essay has provided the copy book for all Chinese students, the millions of Chinese students who have annually been given the essay to copy, the dozens or perhaps hundreds of times every student has had to make his copy before becoming letter perfect, the calculation reaches the third geometric equation and rather staggers the imagination of those who are accustomed to think of large figures in terms of lahks.

A LETTER FROM MONSIGNOR FRASER.

Dec. 30, 1935.

Catholic Mission,
Kinhwa, Che, China.

Dear Father Editor:



Mass was celebrated in five different places of this district on Christmas Day. Here at headquarters the Church was packed for Midnight Mass. The service began at 7.30 on Christmas Eve and ended at two in the morning. As I was alone the Bishop kindly sent a young Vincentian to help me. The Church was brilliantly illuminated inside and out by eight mantle lamps. The Christians alternated their prayers, rosaries, hymns and recreations until midnight, when I celebrated High Mass, chanted by the convent Sisters and pupils. There were five railfuls of Communions. Then followed my two other Masses, during the first of which the congregation recited the acts of thanksgiving after Communion, Refreshments—steaming bowls of rice gruel—were served to all who wished, and then to bed on the straw mats and rented quilts; for, like the Holy Family, being all poor, there was no room for them in the big inns and hotels of the city. During the service the Crib attracted the eyes of all. The chubby Infant with outstretched hands lay on the straw of the manger diffused with light from a flashlight concealed in the upper recesses of the cave on the side of a very natural-looking mountain, artistically fashioned by my new sacristan.

While at breakfast between two and three a.m., the old helper in the kitchen passed me with a heavy basket of rice which he said he intended to put on the fire right away for the morning meal; but as he descended the stone steps, it being dark, he missed his footing and fell, striking his face on the pavement. The rice was a mess all over the ground. He received an ugly gash over the eye, and wounded his nose and mouth. I had to act the doctor, dressing his wounds with peroxide. I finally got to bed, but we were all up again at six. Father Chow said his Masses; I preached.

Father Ly celebrated the Christmas services in Lanchi for the usual big congregation, augmented this year by 94 baptized last October. Father Kiang held the fort in Siaokaotsu for the newly-formed congregation, baptized one and all this year. It was their first Christmas, their first Crib. Father Sing, my new assistant, said his three Masses in Pukiang in the new Church, which will be blessed by the Bishop on February 9, 1936. There were about 300 Christians and catechumens present. This is also a newly-formed congregation. Father Tcheng said Mass in Tungyang, 75 being present, and 45 Communions. Thus in the whole district of Kinhwa opportunity was given to over a thousand persons to assist at Midnight Mass and approach the Sacraments. Evidently God is blessing this Mission.

Asking the prayers of the readers of "China" and wishing them a Happy New Year.

Yours faithfully,
J. M. FRASER.

CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP

The only conditions of membership in the Rose Garden are: (1) To say every day the Prayer for the Conversion of China; (2) To go to Holy Communion once a month for the Intention of Missionary Vocations. Certificates will be sent to all members.

Dear "Buds":

I really do not know how to excuse myself for not having printed our column in the past few issues of "China". This time I cannot blame the editor (I always do when I have a reason) but only myself. It has been really sad for me to read the many letters I received asking why I did not continue our club records after the new start made last November. That new appeal for members brought such a response that I began to think I could get as many members even if I stopped printing their letters. I have not been idle since, but I know you want to hear how things are going.

There has been no let-up in the activities of our members, and I am delighted to hear such glowing reports of all the prayers that are being offered for the missions, and how earnestly our boys and girls are putting into practise the resolutions they made as "Buds" of our Rose Garden.

During Lent I know you will pray hard and work hard for the missions. I am glad to print this month a letter from Father Curtin, one of the priests who went to China just a few months ago. From that letter you will learn how much the missionaries value your prayers, and after all, that is the biggest help that any boy or girl can give to the missions.

Please keep in mind that if you wish a Certificate of Membership for yourself you must write a personal letter; when your name comes with a large number of other names from your school, only a single certificate is sent to the class. And once more I want to ask you to send me your picture.

Yours for Mission Service,
FATHER JIM.

Thanks to Evelyn Campion, Secretary of the Crusaders at St. Monica's School, Toronto, for the gift sent for the missions . . . and to Edwin Ryan for the contribution sent on behalf of the pupils of Room 5 at St. Rita's School, Toronto. I hope those in Room 5 have become good friends with Johnny Mitebox since they got the large number sent them. And to the pupils of St. Angela's School, Calgary, Alta., I am very grateful for the excellent Spiritual Bouquet they made for the missions.

LITTLE MISSIONARIES

By Rose Graffe Will

"I'm going to be a priest, I am,"
Said Tommy, New Year's day,
"I'm going to be a missioner,
And travel far away,

"And baptize lots o' little ones
And preach and teach, but you
Must stay at home and say your pray'rs—
That's all that girls can do."

Small sister hid her misted eyes
And bowed her golden head;
But mother smiled a slow, sweet smile,
And this is what she said:

"A missioner is one who helps
God's plan with work and pray'r.
My little maid"—she laid her hand
On Margie's shining hair—

"Has sacrificed some precious treats
That she might fill her hands
With aid, might work with God for souls
In far-off heathen lands.

"Which is the missionary, son,
You, dreaming of your goal,
Or she who from her little gives
To save a darkened soul?"

Red bloomed the blush on Tommy's cheek,
Low came the answer clear:
"Hereafter, you and I will work Together, Margie, dear."

—"The Little Missionary."

St. Thomas School,
Sudbury, Ont.

Dear Father Jim:

"We are the pupils of Room Three. We are sending our subscription to 'China'. Will you send us some mitboxes, as ours is a tin can? We are enclosing also a spiritual treasury. Dorothy Lanigan."

Thanks, Dorothy, and I hope the pupils of Room Three will be as good to the miteboxes as they were to the tin can.

Generous donations have been sent to help the missions by the pupils of the Congregation de Notre Dame, Ottawa, per Eileen Watson, Crusade Secretary; by the pupils of St. Mary's Boys' School, Halifax; Grades 10 and 11, St. John's Academy, New Glasgow, N.S., per Lillian Chisholm; the pupils of Immaculate Conception School, The Mines, Bell Island, Newfoundland; the pupils of St. Joseph's Convent, Farrellton, Quebec; Holy Family School, Toronto; the boys and girls of Room Nine, Corpus Christi School, Toronto; and many others whose names I would like to mention, but have no space this time. I should like to be able to quote something from the lovely letters which came with the above-mentioned gifts, but the whole issue of "China" would hardly be big enough to permit even a few lines from all the letters that have come.

From grade eight, St. Mary's Girls' School, Halifax, came the names of 25 new members for our club. We quote the following from the letter of Betty Abraham, the president: "Our class is very interested in your club and would like to join it. We have a group already in our class called the 'Little Flower Club', something like your Rosebud Club, holding meetings every Thursday . . . every morning we say a special prayer for the missions . . . the crusade convention in our city some time ago has resulted in greater interest in mission work for us all . . . we hope to have every girl attending daily mass for the missions."

Dear Boys and Girls of the "Rose Garden":

When I was about to leave for Chuchow the editor asked me if I would write a few words for the readers of "China". I protested that I would prefer to write something for the young people of the "Rose Garden" and let "Father Jim" use it. The editor didn't like that; he complained that Father Jim got all the "breaks" from missionaries leaving for China, and that he would probably be on the lookout for a "scoop", too. Well, anyhow, the editor got his contribution —and Father Jim nearly had a fit when I tried to get away without a message to his young readers. But Father Jim is not that easy to get away from. And so here are just a few words to you young boys and girls who are the pride and joy of Father Jim's life.

As you know, missionaries going to China are setting out on a difficult task, the conversion of pagans to the True Faith. To some people it seems almost an impossibility to make Christians out of the half-billion people in far-away pagan China. But then, we are not trying to convert the whole half-billion. We are going to do our best to make the Truths of our Holy Religiou known to the one and a half million people in a certain section of China, called Chuchow. In trying to do that we are not acting alone. We are depending on God's help and God's grace. To God all things are possible.

Now here is where you young people come in. You can help us by your prayers to do the work God expects of us. I was a priest for 12 years in the Archdiocese of Ottawa, and during that time I became acquainted with thousands of children. I met them in the classroom and elsewhere. I often requested their prayers to obtain favours from God through the intercession of Our Blessed Lady and the Little Flower, your Patroness. I cannot recall an instance when they failed me. I am confident it will be the same with you. Our Blessed Lord while on earth showed Himself the special friend of children, and He is always ready to grant them whatever they pray for. I ask all of you now to pray much for the missionaries in China, for the Canadian nuns and priests who are trying to bring to the young children of Chuchow the same blessings that you enjoy as happy members of God's church.

For my part, I will always have an interest in the boys and girls of the "Rose Garden", and very often will I remember them in my Masses in China. I pray that you may always continue to be interested in the work of the missions, and I can assure you that God will bless you in every way if you are faithful to your membership pledges in Father Jim's "Rose Garden".

Your missionary friend,
(Father) M. L. CURTIN.

* * *

Very pleased I was to hear from Joan Ryan, of North Sydney, N.S., telling me of the formation of a Crusade unit at her school. "China" is a welcome monthly visitor to the Crusaders there.

From Paincourt, Ont. comes a letter from a very regular correspondent Alphonse Marentette, and he has introduced to our club his little brother, Romeo, aged eight, and a cousin Yvonne Bezaire, aged 14. Yvonne's home is in Saskatoon, but while visiting at Paincourt she was enrolled in the Rose Garden.

* * *

From Doreen Nolan, the Secretary of the Rosebuds at Sacred Heart School, Sault Ste. Marie, came a very friendly letter in which she told me of the interest created in the missions among her class through the presence of Father Moore, who is going to China later on.

IT'S NOT TOO LATE YET! JOHNNY MITEBOX OUGHT TO BE A LENTEN VISITOR TO EVERY SCHOOLROOM IN CANADA AND NEWFOUNDLAND. IF YOU HAVE NOT A MISSION MITEBOX IN YOUR CLASSROOM, ASK YOUR TEACHER TO SEND FOR ONE (OR AS MANY AS SHE WANTS). AND WHEN YOUR MITEBOX DOES ARRIVE YOU DO YOUR SHARE TO KEEP HIM WELL SUPPLIED WITH YOUR SACRIFICE PENNIES. PERHAPS YOU WOULD LIKE TO HAVE A MITEBOX FOR YOUR HOME, TOO. WE SHALL BE GLAD TO SEND ANY NUMBER ANYWHERE IF YOU ASK US.

I was very pleased indeed that failure to publish our column in "China" did not diminish the number of letters from some of the "Buds" of longstanding. I thank especially Dot Grady of Peterboro and Alma Chayer for their newsy letters.

* * *

Six members of our club in one family—now that is something of a record, I believe — and the missons certainly benefit by the interest of such a group. And what nice letters come from them all, from 97 Gower St., St. John's Nfld. The names are Jim, Ted, Betty, Michael, Gerald, and Mary Fewer. And their last letter brought the contents of their mitebox, a very handsome gift, for which I thank them most sincerely.

And once again College St. School, Halifax, "gets in the news". Here is part of the letter from there: "Every cent of the enclosed thirty-five dollars was saved in miteboxes in our nine classes during a period of four months. We also ransomed two Chinese babies. Our pictures are coming in a day or so, and soon we shall be preparing our pre-Lenten candy sale to help along with our next donation." The schools in Halifax are "right in there" when it comes to doing things in a big way to aid the missions.

* * *

Thanks to the children of St. John's School, St. Catharines, Ont., for the magnificent Spiritual offering made in aid of our Chuchow missions.

* * *

The pupils at St. Vincent's School, St. John, N.B., have been very generous to our work, and they are proud of the fact that a missionary from St. John (Father Sharkey) is doing such great things for the Chinese in Western Canada.

* * *

I wonder have I ever told you "Buds" about "The Willing Nine", a little group of mission workers in a Halifax School? Well, if I haven't, you will know now that they are amongst the most enthusiastic members of our club, and their president, Gwen Hatchette, writes the most newsy and interesting letters about their doings. And they know how to spend their sacrifice pennies to the best advantage, too. But here's just a little section from one of the letters from Gwen: "I have ruined about four sheets of paper trying to write this letter. My new fountain pen is acting crazy. Every line I write I make a blot . . . It was awful nice of you, Father Jim, to answer me so soon and such a nice letter. We are sending a dollar for the Mission Band. Would have sent it sooner but we were low on funds. . . In our school library we have a copy of Msgr. McGrath's book, 'The Dragon at Close Range', also a copy of Father Sharkey's 'The Anvil of the Cross'. At a programme in school by the Eucharistic Committee five of us recited poems from Father Sharkey's book." Father Jim was highly amused at Gwen's efforts to identify him among the priests' pictures from China Mission Seminary exhibited at the Halifax Crusade Convention. And I'm not telling whether I was among the group or not.

* * *

From St. Thomas School, Sudbury, came the following letter, and it needs no comment. "Our Crusaders are very enthusiastic. At the start of the school year the following students were placed in office: President, Fay Dixon; Vice-President, Alex. Kasturik; Secretary, Veronica Modeste; Treasurer, Tena Ricciatti. We put on a cake and candy sale and netted $15.00 which we gave to Father Lacey to send to China for the ransom of three Chinese babies. We are collecting stamps for the missions, too. Enclosed is our subscription to 'China'. Trusting you are satisfied with our missionary endeavours, and promising you our daily prayer for the missions, I am, Veronica Modeste, Secretary."

NONSENSE

"IF YOU DON'T LAUGH AT THE JOKES OF THE AGE, THEN LAUGH AT THE AGE OF THE JOKES"

"Dis is one of de times!" said Uncle Eben, "when I ain't really got nuffin to say. Like de rest of de folks, I's jest' tryin' to keep on talkin'."

"How did you get on in your action for compensation against the man whose dog bit you?"

"He had a clever lawyer who proved that I bit the dog."

Customer: "Say, waiter, I can't find any chicken in this chicken-and-ham pie."

Waiter: "No, sir, but what about it? You don't expect to find a dog in a dog biscuit."

Teacher: "Johnny, what is a cannibal?"

Johnny: "I don't know."

Teacher: "Well, if you ate your father and mother what would you be?"

Johnny: "I'd be an orphan."

"Last Sabbath," said an elder with glee, "as kirk was coming out, a drover chiel from Dumfries came along the road whistling as happy as if it was the middle o' the week. Weel, oors is a God-fearing set o' lads, and they nearly killed him."

Hester, colored, had been in a railroad accident. The lawyer had just called.

"What you all want?" she asked.

"I've come," said the lawyer, "to assist you in getting damages."

"Damages, my eye!" retorted Hester. "I done got all the damages I want—what I craves is repairs."

A new-made widow called at the office of an insurance company for the money due on her husband's policy. The manager said:

"I am truly sorry, madam, to hear of your loss."

"That's always the way with you men," said she. "You are always sorry when a poor woman gets a chance to make a little money."

Hubby: "Well, dear, how are you getting on with your golf lessons?"

Wifey: "Pretty well. But when the instructor told me to address the ball I just couldn't think of a word to say!"

Tough Guy: "For two cents I'd knock your block off."

Wise Guy: "Get away from me, you dirty professional."

Horace Greeley, who always insisted that the word "news" was plural, once wired to a reporter: "Are there any news?" The reply came by wire: "Not a new."

The "Distant Husband" and the Bear.

The following missive was received by the forest ranger of the Pasadena district and read recently at the annual dinner of the Sierra Club in Los Angeles:

"Kind and Respected Cir:

"I see in the paper that a man named J——— S——— was atacted and et up by a bare whose cubs he was trying to git when the she bare came up and stopt him by eatin him up in the mountains near your town. What i want to know is did it kill him or was he only partly et up and was he from this place and all about the bare. I dont know but what he is a distant husband of mine. My first husband was of that name and I supposed he was killed in the war but the name of the man the bare et being the same i thought to know if he wasn't killed either in the war or by the bare for i have been married twice since and their ought to be divorce papers got out by him or me if the bare did not eat him all up. If it is him you will know it by him having six toes on the left foot. He also sings base and has a spread eagle tattoed on his front chest and a ankor on his right arm which you will know him if the bare did not eat up these parts of him. If alive don't tell him I am married to J——— W——— for he never liked J———. Mebbe you had better let on as if i am ded but find out all you can about him without him knowing anything what it is for. That is if the bare did not eat him all up. If it did i don't see you can do anything and you needn't take any trouble. My respeks to your family and please ancer back.

"P.S.—Was the bare killed. Also was he married again and did he leave any property worth me laying claim to?"

—Playwood Panels.

"Would your experience confirm the popular notion that there is a sense of honor among thieves?" said the visitor to the prison chaplain.

"Well—no. There may be exceptions," returned the chaplain, "but generally speaking, I find thieves to be just about as bad as other people."

Government Examiner: "How did you come to mark this man's paper 101 per cent.? Don't you know that nothin can be more perfect than 100 per cent.?"

New Assistant: "Yes, but this man answered one question we didn't ask."

"Here comes the parade and your Aunt Helen will miss it. Where is she?"

"She's upstairs, waving her hair."

"Mercy! Can't we afford a flag?"

Husband (during quarrel): "Didn't you promise to obey me at the altar?"

Wife: "Yes; but we're not there now!"

A western store ran the following advertisement:

"Apples, oranges, imported nuts. Come early and avoid the rush. The early bird gets the worm."

Kind Gent: "Do you know what happens to little boys who smoke?"

Small Boy: "Yes, I do. Why every time they go anywhere to have a quiet smoke they get bothered by rude old men."

"Tommy," said his mother, reprovingly, "what did I say I'd do to you if you remained out late?"

Tommy thoughtfully scratched his head and said:

"Why, that's funny, ma, that you should forget it, too. I can't remember, either."

A patient in a hospital who was seriously ill requested a nurse to write to his wife for him, but did not seem to know exactly what he wanted to say.

"Shall I start with 'My dear wife'?" asked the nurse.

"Yes," replied the man, "you can put that down—it'll make her laugh, anyway."

Car Dealer (indicating a car): "There is a real bargain for you, sir. She'll still do her thirty-five, and twenty to the gallon, although she's pre-war."

Prospective Customer (dubiously): "Which one?"

Car Dealer: "I mean this car, sir—the one with the hood up."

Prospective Customer—"Yes—I see. I meant which war."

LENT IS A SEASON OF SACRIFICE

"Remember, it is by prayer and sacrifice that we can best help our missionaries."
(St. Therese, Patroness of the Missions)

Are you doing anything to help save the souls of the poor pagans for whom Christ died?

The Missionaries of St. Francis Xavier Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, need your help in the work they are doing in China. Give them a share in your Lenten alms and sacrifices.

BE A BOOSTER FOR THE MISSIONS

— in your town
— in your parish
— in your Sodality
— in your own home
— everywhere you go

Give the Missions Your Personal Service by — praying every day for the Propagation of the Faith

— putting your sacrifice pennies in a Mission Mite-box

— subscribing to a Mission publication

AND (if you can do so) — Remember the Missions in your last will

---

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO
Very Rev. John E. McRae, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT. APRIL 1936

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.
2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.
3. By sending Mass Intentions to our missionaries.
4. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.
5. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Quality Printers

ADelaide 2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West - Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutator Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.
2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.
3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.
4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.
5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 24,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XVII. APRIL, 1936 No. 4

CHINESE CATHOLIC MISSION IN CANADA

IT is only commonplace to say that the Catholic Church is always on the defensive and always on the offensive. "They have persecuted Me, they will also persecute you" is one Scriptural text that explains the first-mentioned characteristic. Conditions in the world today bring home to us with much force that our Church is a persecuted Church; in the long centuries of its history there have been but few very brief periods when it was not engaged in bitter struggle against enemies from within and without its fold, enemies who marshalled against her all the forces of heresy and falsehood and bigotry. But the relentless march of time has seen the highways of the centuries strewn with the discarded "isms" and the defunct governments who feverishly but vainly sought to destroy God's Church. Being always on the defensive she yet miraculously ceased not to wage a strong offensive. "Go ye into the whole world and preach the Gospel to every creature". This Divine injunction explains the unceasing activity of the Church. No circumstances of time or place or of any kind whatsoever have been strong enough to cause the Church to desist from following out her God-given mandate, and it is her glory that she has always found a means to meet every situation as it arose and to direct her energies to grapple successfully with every new problem.

THE experience of the Catholic Church in Canada is on a parallel with that of the Church as a whole. True, she has not been obliged in this country to fight for her life against a general national policy of opposition to her teachings and practices, but she yet has borne the brunt of organized attacks in certain sections, particularly in the matter of her educational policy. Her enemies will in due time be numbered in the ranks of the vanquished. Like the Church as a whole, the Church in Canada has been active in carrying out Christ's command; she has faced many problems and she has found ways to solve them.

IMMIGRATION has been a potent factor in the development of great stretches of Canada's territory, particularly in the Far West. Beyond the Great Lakes lies the greater half of our Dominion. It is only within the last few decades that those vast stretches of land have been opened to colonization. And with colonization came a new problem for the Church, for the invasion of our Great West by Catholic people of other lands set the Church the task of providing them with means to preserve the religious traditions they brought with them. Resolutely did she face that task, and today she is labouring perseveringly to attend to the needs of her people in the West. A glorious page in the history of the Canadian Church has been written by the missionary Bishops, priests, and sisters of the Canadian West.

BUT this issue of our magazine speaks to you in word and picture of the latest problem that has been tackled in Canada's West, and we pridefully refer to the part that our Seminary is playing in the solution of this problem.

It was inevitable that the Province of British Columbia should in time absorb a large Oriental population. Chinese especially came in large numbers and settled down in the Pacific Coast port of Vancouver. For years they have made their home there and have become a notable part of a great city's population. These people, racially different from us, with a background of advanced, but pagan culture, have been extended the advantages of dwellers in our midst, and they have lived orderly and useful lives. The Church could not forget that these people have an eternal destiny the same as we have, that they have souls to be saved; and the Church has taken steps to bring to the notice of these Chinese people the claims of the Religion of Christ.

TO His Excellency, Wm. M. Duke, D.D., Archbishop of Vancouver, goes the credit of inaugurating the first movement whereby attention is henceforth guaranteed to the spiritual needs of the large Chinese population of Vancouver. It was at His Excellency's request that St. Francis Xavier Seminary recalled one of its missionaries from China and placed him at the disposal of the Archbishop for work among the Chinese in that city. For over three years our Father Sharkey has been labouring zealously to lay the foundations for the conquest of pagan souls residing in Vancouver. Last December, following negotiations between Archbishop Duke and Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of China Mission Seminary, arrangements were completed whereby the Mission among the Chinese in Vancouver becomes the responsibility of our Seminary in the matter of financing and supplying priests for the work. What has been accomplished so far, and what are the prospects for the future, are told you by Father Sharkey in this issue of "CHINA".

Canadian Mission Ransacked by Bandits

Combined Chapel and Residence Not Destroyed.
Missionaries Seek Safety in Flight.

By REV. GERALD DOYLE

QUICKLY consuming the Blessed Sacrament, Father Amyot rushed out of his Huang T'an chapel and hurried to the hills with the bandits less than four hundred yards away.

He had been quietly occupied in the mission when the sacristan came running in, out of breath and face pale, gasping that the bandits were already in the village. Father Amyot had had more than his share of false reports, so he made sure that there was no mistake before making a hurried get-away. It was fortunate that the bandits entered the village by the other end, or he would have been trapped.

From the hill above Father Amyot saw the bandits intent upon their work, but he did not linger as he was intent upon increasing the distance.

When the bandits entered the mission compound the cook answered their question and stated that the priest was away. They forced the door and made a systematic search for money but did not find any as Father Amyot had hid it too well. With studied carelessness he had wrapped it in an old paper and tossed it into a pile of papers in the corner. A few dollars under a blotter on the table also went unnoticed.

But nothing else escaped their search. Book cases were upset on the floor to see if anything was behind them. The trunks of Father Amyot and Father King, who was in Lishui at the time, were turned upside down and the contents heaped on the floor. Drawers were also emptied. They took all the ink, pens, tooth-brushes, tooth paste and socks they could find, but did not take a pair of Father Amyot's shoes; "probably too big for any of them," he states. They took all the rice and several bottles of Mass wine but did not touch an opened bottle, fearing that it might be poisoned . A newly arrived case of milk was also confiscated, but not for the milk, which was poured onto the ground, but for the small cans.

And all the while Father Amyot was in the hills praying that the chapel would not be destroyed, and his prayers were heard. The leader alone went upstairs to the chapel. He inspected everything, opening a cupboard but found nothing of value, the Mass kit having been sent out into hiding. He then struck a few notes on the organ and left the chapel without disturbing a thing.

In the village a man was captured but after a ransom was paid he ran to the hills, while another wealthy man had such short notice that he escaped through the back door as the bandits entered the front and found $450 which the man did not have time to bring with him. An incident, not devoid of humour, was the capture of a man by a bandit, and while the bandit was holding him the two brothers of the captive came from behind and with a rock cracked the head of the bandit. They then took his revolver and the three brothers fled to the hills.

* * *

AFTER about four hours in the village the bandits left and in the afternoon Father Amyot returned to the mission, which looked as though a hurricane had passed through it. It was the first day of the Chinese New Year, and the twenty-fourth day of January; usually a very peaceful day when all remain at home.

For two days, Father Amyot, at the insistence of the Christians, remained in hiding in the house of a Christian. On Sunday he said Mass in the chapel, but for the next two nights he slept away from the mission, his whereabouts being known only to a few. As the bandits were still in the district and liable to return any time he left early on the morning of January the 28th, and arrived here at Tsingtien the next afternoon, making very good time. We were very glad to see him as we had heard that the bandits were in Huang T'an but had received no definite news. After a day with us he went on to Lishui, where he is at present. (This was written on February 4th).

* * *

WE had our own bandit scare here in Tsingtien one cold wet night when the tailor rushed into the Mission and stated that the bandits were a few miles away on the other side of the river. Father Stringer and I put the important papers and the money on hand into a small package, put on good shoes and warm clothing, and then sat down and waited for more news. Father Strang was away at the time. Father Stringer placed the key in the door of the tabernacle and kept the key of the chapel in his pocket. We were prepared for a quick get-away, but when at midnight we had received no further news we went to bed, wondering how long we would be able to remain there.

No, the bandits did not come here, and while we took everything very calmly I assure you that a bandit scare provides a real "thrill."

PRIESTS WHOSE MISSION WAS INVADED BY BANDITS
The above picture appeared in "China" more than three years ago, and shows Father Joseph King, of Newburg, Ont. (left), and Father Wm. Amyot, of Ottawa, as they left Lishui to establish a Mission at Huang T'an, which recently has been raided by bandits. The two missionaries were forced to vacate and seek safety at Lishui, the headquarters of the Canadian Mission in Chuchow Prefecture, Chekiang.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND CONVERSIONS

PEIPING—With the appearance of the 1936 edition of the "Annuaire des Missions Catholiques de Chine", published by the Jesuit Fathers in Shanghai, complete general statistics on Catholic Mission work in China during the year beginning July, 1934, and ending with June, 1935, have just become available.

Always a mine of precise information, this indispensable and handy booklet offers in its present edition much data of unusual interest.

Even after only a cursory examination of its contents, it is quite evident that, despite Communist domination in several regions where mission efforts were consequently seriously disrupted, the year in review has, on the whole, been an exceptionally good one, productive of notable results in every sphere of mission activity.

The figures reveal that the total Catholic population of China, including Manchuria, now stands at 2,188,839. This number represents a net increase of 96,450 over the census of the preceding year, and, as is customary, excludes from consideration the catechumens, of whom 495,060 are registered. Conversions during the year are reckoned, as is also usual, as equivalent to the number of adult baptisms and come to 96,680.

Thus in one year the number of Catholics has increased by a little over 3½ per cent. Only once before, in 1913, has the net augmentation reached such a high figure.

From this fact, considered in relation with the corresponding data of the previous four years, it would seem legitimate to infer that the Catholic Missions in China have definitely passed the relative "depression" which set in around 1925 and reached its lowest point in a net augmentation of only 12,000 or so in 1930. From 1931 onward the upward trend is unmistakable: 46, 30, 61, 82 and finally 90 thousand.

The density of the Catholic population shows wide variations. It is as high as 4.0 per cent in Suiyuan Province, 3.2 per cent in Chagar, and 2.4 per cent in Hopeh; and as low as 0.1 per cent in Kwangsi, 0.04 per cent in Chinghai, and only 0.03 per cent in Sikang, which borders on Tibet.

The number of conversions surpasses that of the preceding year by 13,705. Here again the results of the last three years disclose a striking advance:

Conversions in 1935 exceeded those of 1934 by 16 per cent; 1934 exceeded 1933 by 18 per cent; 1933 exceeded 1932 by 22 per cent.

Of the 125 ecclesiastical areas into which the country is now divided, 22 are entrusted to the Chinese clergy. This marks an increase of one over the year before.

Chinese priests constitute approximately 41 per cent of the clergy, which totals 4,309 members. They increased during the twelve months by 5.3 per cent; the foreign clergy, by 4.3 per cent. The net augmentation of 88 in the number of the native priests is the largest hitherto recorded, while the number of ordinations during the year was 101, a figure also without precedent.

The number of Chinese priests has doubled since 1917 and trebled since 1906.

As regards the clergy of the future, the prospect is also bright. Though the number of major seminarists continued for all practical purposes stationary—935 as against 938 the year before—a remarkable increase of 11 per cent is to be noted among the minor seminarists, who aggregate at present 4,021. The still younger aspirants to the priesthood, the probationers, have also advanced, from 1,824 to 1,906, at the rate of 4½ per cent.

Chinese Brothers increased by 6 per cent to a total of 635. Foreign Brothers, on the other hand, show a loss of 24.

Sixty-three per cent of the imposing number of 5,413 Catholic nuns in China are Chinese. They show a gain of 129 for the year, while their foreign sisters record an increase of 128. The latter now total just 5 less than 2,000; the former number being 3,418.

A rather surprising discovery is the fact that, in the face of the financial stringency of the times, it has been found possible—doubtless by close figuring and at the cost of much sacrifice—to increase the number of catechists by as much as 17 per cent. That two-thirds of the increase of 1,984 should represent women catechists is also significant, since religious family life depends to so large an extent on the adequate instruction of the womenfolk.

A formidable figure is the grand total of baptisms, 565,792, which surpasses by nearly 64,000 that of the year before. Yet even this figure is dwarfed by comparison with the number of confessions during the year, 10,820,486, and Holy Communions, 27,327,233—totals which represent increases of nearly one and two millions respectively over the corresponding figures of the preceding year, and—what is of prime importance—reveal substantial increases in the fulfilment of the annual obligations of confession and Communion—increases of 55,937 and 69,628 respectively.—Lumen.

HOME FROM CHINA

REV. WM. H. McNABB

Father McNabb, due to ill health, has been obliged to return to Canada to recuperate. He left Shanghai on February 15th, and the above picture was taken on March 9th, the day he arrived at the Seminary. He went to China in 1932, in company with the late Father James McGillivray.

+ GOD + COMES TO CHINATOWN

The Heroic Romance of the Mission Among the Chinese in Vancouver, B.C.

ON THE evening of October 15th, 1932, the "Empress of Canada" docked at Vancouver, B.C., and among the passengers who disembarked was a young priest just returned from the mission field of Southeastern China. He had left one China for another—for here on Canada's Pacific Coast was the second largest colony of Chinese in North America; and this latter was to be the scene of his future apostolate.

Within a few minutes of his arrival the scene before him had shifted from the illimitable ocean to a human sea of faces—he was addressing the National Convention of the Catholic Women's League, at their closing banquet in the ballroom of the Hotel Georgia. Just one day out of a sick bed, after two weeks of fever, and with visions of junks and rickshaws still floating before his eyes, he nevertheless welcomed the opportunity of addressing the most potent body for Catholic Action, the most powerful of all the lay organizations of the Church in Canada — the Catholic Women's League. Looking back upon that historic occasion, he feels sure that it was no mere coincidence that made his arrival back from the mission field of China concur with the closing exercises of that memorable Convention. God in His sweet Providence had brought about that felicitous meeting, and had given Father Sharkey the opportunity of speaking to the assembled delegates and, through them, to the people of all Canada—of broadcasting the message of a great missionary endeavor, about to he launched in British Columbia; the foundation of the first Chinese Catholic Mission. In the years to follow, a Unit of that same C.W.L. was to give its unstinted efforts in the work among the Chinese of Vancouver, and passionately associate itself with the work of the Catholic Mission in Chinatown.

After a few months of rest at his home in Eastern Canada, and recovery from the bad attack of malaria that he had contracted just before quitting China, Father Sharkey, early in 1933, started his work among the Chinese of Vancouver. Despite the discouraging aspects of the world depression, then at its height, he determined that nothing would stand in the way of the salvation of these pagan souls; and he felt confident, supremely confident, that the foundation of this long neglected and most necessary work would call down upon our country and especially upon the Archdiocese of Vancouver, the sweetest blessings of Almighty God.

BEGINNINGS are extremely hard, but the beginning of the work among the Chinese of Vancouver was especially so. The world-wide depression was at its height; the young missioner had neither finances nor property of any sort to begin with; and there was not a single Catholic among the Chinese community, outside those in the incurable wards of St. Joseph's Oriental Hospital. The task that faced Father Sharkey was so different from his mission work in China; the dialects spoken in Vancouver were so entirely unknown to him; he lacked so completely any social contact with the Chinese community—that he was at a loss just how or where to begin, and the obstacles ahead seemed well-nigh insurmountable.

And then occurred an incident that was but another indication of St. John, N.B., priest of St. Francis Xavier China Mission Institute, Scarboro Bluffs, Ont., who returned from Chuchow, China, in 1932, and who organized the first Catholic Mission for Chinese in Canada at the request of His Excellency, Wm. M. Duke, D.D., Archbishop of Vancouver.

REV. HUGH SHARKEY,

to the young priest that God's blessing was upon the work. In visiting St. Paul's Hospital, he met a young Chinese boy in the tubercular ward—Henry Lim. It took but a very short acquaintanceship to convince the missionary that here was a very beautiful soul and a most sweet character. Henry Lim had been baptized but a short time before by the chaplain of St. Paul's Hospital, and during the months that followed Father Sharkey tried to complete the instructions necessary. He visited the boy almost daily, both at the hospital and later at the boy's own home —and again at the General Public Hospital, where the lad died. He will indeed carry to the grave with him the memory of that heavenly light that illumined the young man's face the day he received Holy Viaticum. During those visits Father Sharkey had come in contact with different members of the boy's family, and had won their gratitude and friendship. Later, four other members of this family were baptized. Henry Lim, a sweet, beautiful, holy character, was looking down from heaven and praying for his people. Thus a beginning was made.

Through the kindness of a benefactress, mission property was acquired at the corner of Georgia Street East and Princess Avenue—on the outskirts of Vancouver's Chinatown. It consisted of a piece of land, seventy-five feet wide by one hundred and twenty-two feet long, on which stood two houses. The larger of the two was converted into a Mission house (shown above), while the other was rented.

Without a cent in his pockets, Father Sharkey had gone to visit this Catholic lady, to ask her help in the acquiring of a house and property, as a Mission site. The fact that he was a total stranger to the person, and that it was the worst year of the depression, did not for a moment dampen his ardor. He intended to ask her for a certain amount of money, with which to begin his great work—and leave the rest to the good God. She received his visit most graciously, and while he was trying to work up enough courage to make his request she invited him to see the beautiful gardens that lay round about her estate. As they walked up a very pretty path, they came to a very odd spot. Inside the large hollow stump of a tree, two saplings that seemed identically the same had grown up and somebody had built a seat between them. The lady turned to Father Sharkey and said—"Father, this is called the Fairy Tree and the Wishing Seat. If you sit down there and make a wish, they say it is sure to come true." Father Sharkey sat down and closed his eyes tight and wished (or shall we say prayed) harder than he had ever wished before, that he might get the request that he had come to make. Before he left the lady's house that day, he had in his pocket a cheque for the identical sum of money that he had come to beg. To him it was nothing less than a miracle. Thus the first Chinese Catholic Mission in Vancouver was made possible.

THE KINDERGARTEN OF VANCOUVER'S CATHOLIC CHINESE MISSION

PIONEERS WHO HAVE LAID SOLID FOUNDATIONS FOR THE FUTURE PROGRESS OF A MODERN MISSION VENTURE
At the right is Rev. Roland Roberts, of Victoria, B.C., a priest of St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ont., who is Assistant to Father Sharkey. Standing behind their bright-looking pupils of the Mission School are Sister Anne Marie and Sister St. Oswald; in the foreground is Sister Mary Gertrude. These are Grey Sisters of the Immaculate Conception from Pembroke, Ontario, the same Community which staffs the Convent at the Canadian Mission in Chuchow, China. At the left is Miss Violet Wong, assistant teacher in the kindergarten.

FROM the very first, the necessity of associating with him in his work some Order of Sisters, was apparent to the missionary. He immediately thought of the Grey Sisters of the Immaculate Conception of Pembroke, Ontario, who were doing such splendid work with his brother missioners in China. He spoke to Archbishop Duke in this regard, and the latter wrote to the Mother General of the Grey Sisters, asking if two could be spared for the work in Vancouver. It was proposed that they open a kindergarten school for the Chinese children—this being the most practical of all social contacts with the Chinese people. The Mother General wrote back, saying that it was impossible to spare any Sisters at that time, although she realized full well the merit of the work proposed. Bitterly disappointed, Father Sharkey sent an urgent telegram, asking her if she would not reconsider her decision and was overjoyed to receive the promise that two Sisters would be sent as soon as possible. The seemingly impossible had happened once more—by God's grace.

Father Sharkey had up to this time been boarding in St. Vincent's Shelter on Pender Street East—a Home for the Aged, under the direction of the Grey Sisters. There the two Sisters stayed, after their arrval in Vancouver, pending the opening of the Chinese Mission.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER'S Chinese Catholic Mission opened its doors on the Feast of its great missionary patron, December 3rd, 1933. His Excellency the Archbishop of Vancouver said the first mass there and blessed the house, and in the course of his sermon that morning he drew attention to the singular fact that there was not a single Chinese Catholic present. There were none to be present. What a marvellous change has been wrought in the two years that have just gone by will be told in the course of this article. But on that memorable day in question, that day which appeared to be like any other day to the thousands of Orientals in this city, a great and wonderful thing had happened—over the door of a little house appeared this legend, "Chinese Catholic Mission", a little silver bell broke the morning stillness, a few whispered words were spoken—God had come to Chinatown, and He had come to stay.

A few days later the Sisters moved into the Mission, and opened up their kindergarten, using the dining room of their house as the school. For a time they had only one child, then came a second and a third. And when at last the number had grown too big for the little room, God's sweet Providence made itself felt once more. A hall directly across the street from the Mission, up until that time used by the Anglican Church, became vacant. To obtain it had always seemed a hopeless proposition, but now it was rented by the Mission, and placed under the patronage of St. Therese of the Child Jesus—who has lovingly guarded and blessed it ever since.

We had found the Mission fields of China hard, but we were to find these fields at home harder still. In China we had been confronted by pure paganism and ignorance, but not by prejudice. Here in Vancouver's Chinatown various Protestant sects had made the most of their opportunities, and while Catholics had remained sadly inactive for twenty-five years, progress was being made by the Protestant workers. Naturally, they viewed with disfavor the opening of a Catholic Mission in their midst, and tried to dissuade the Chinese from attending our Mission and kindergarten school. We can only hope that the Catholic inaction of the past will be atoned for henceforth by a vitalizing interest in the great work of converting the Orientals in Vancouver.

Furthermore, we found that years of social labor amongst the Chinese of this city by the Protestant churches, had engendered strong feelings of attachment and gratitude in the hearts of these people, towards these non-Catholic sects. And though we realized that the adherence of the Chinese to any one of these denominations was a matter of gratitude rather than of belief, we also knew full well just how persevering Oriental gratitude could be—and were therefore fully cognizant of the obstacles that lay in our path.

But it is not for us to chronicle the sacrifices, worries and heartbreaks of the two years gone by—suffice it to say that they were many. Nothing is born without pain and so it was with the

INTERIOR VIEW OF THE CHINESE MISSION KINDERGARTEN AT VANCOUVER

MARGARET KONG

A brilliant career as an acrobatic performer might have been Margaret's, but an accident has interfered, perhaps permanently, with her activities; she is just now a brave little patient in St. Paul's Hospital. Read in the accompanying article about her providential meeting with Father Sharkey and the results it brought about.

Chinese Catholic Mission at 572 East Georgia Street, in Vancouver. The devil was very active, seeking to discourage, working up opposition, striving to strike the shepherd that the sheep might be dispersed. That part of the story will be read only in eternity.

AT THE present time the kindergarten has an enrolment of over fifty children, and whenever a school concert is put on by the kiddies, our little hall is crowded to the doors. We are more than proud of these sweet little Chinese boys and girls and, if you ever get a chance to see them, they will steal your heart away, too.

The number of Sisters now engaged in the work here has increased to three. Shortly after the opening of the Mission in 1933, Sister St. Oswald was sent out from Pembroke as Superior. She brought with her years of missionary experience with the Chinese in their own country—an understanding and love of these people, that has made her presence here indeed indispensable. Associated with her are Sister Mary Gertrude and Sister Anne Marie—both deeply beloved by the Chinese community, especially the little ones. All three have worked extremely hard for the good of the Mission and they have accomplished wonders in a short time. Nothing seems more evident than that all three Sisters have a special vocation to this work and that God certainly directed their Mother-General in her choice. We do, indeed, owe to the Grey Sisters community at Pembroke a debt of gratitude that we can never adequately repay.

In two years' time we can number about twenty families. Our last baptisms, three on Christmas Eve, now bring the total up to ninety. One family of eleven is completely Catholic. We have over eighty-nine in our Sunday School, and a large number of adult Chinese are under instruction. Several of our baptized Chinese boys and girls have been placed in Catholic schools. Besides all this, much social service work has been done among the Chinese community—help given to the poor, sick taken care of, etc. The Mission has thus become well known in Chinatown, and we have earned the lasting gratitude of these people.

ENTIRE CHINESE FAMILY CATHOLIC

Mr. and Mrs. Kong, with their family of nine children, are Vancouver's first entire family of Chinese to become Catholics. May their example be an inspiration to others.

ASSOCIATED with Father Sharkey in his work in Vancouver is Father Roland Roberts, another alumnus of St. Francis Xavier Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, and a native of Victoria, B.C. He brings to the work that quality most necessary for success—a deep affection and admiration for the Chinese people. Besides his work among the Chinese here, he is the National Director of the Holy Childhood Association for Ontario and Western Canada. Father Sharkey could wish for no more enthusiastic and able a co-worker.

Just about a year ago, the members of Business Women's Unit of the Catholic Women's League were asked to convene the Chinese Catholic Mission. This article would not be complete without an allusion to the wholeheartedness with which they entered into the work and the personal sacrifices made by a few whom we cannot name here, but to whom we are most sincerely and deeply grateful.

And from that little bit of Chinatown that we have by God's grace transplanted into heaven, one looks down, whose name will be eternally associated with that of the Chinese Catholic Mission in Vancouver. Father Sharkey feels that it was more than mere chance that brought him back from China and led him one day to the door of a little store at 506 Main Street. For there he met the sweetest soul that he had ever known — a Chinese girl, Anne Mae Wong. He remembers now so vividly, how in reply to the question from the girl, what his work was, he had replied laughingly—"I am the conductor on the Paradise Limited; perhaps I will have you as a passenger some day". He knows now that his words were nothing less than a prophecy. A year had not gone by when Anne Mae Wong was dead, but not before she had first been baptized. She did at last make the journey and Father Sharkey was the one that prepared her going and sent her off to Heaven.

TWO SISTERS

Miss Myrtle Wong and Miss Violet Wong.

Nobody who knew Anne could help but love her, and when sickness came—as the body faded away, the sweetness of her soul became all the more evident. It would be hard to find a more perfect example of resignation to God's holy will; a greater patience under intense suffering; a more cheerful disposition in the face of oncoming death—than was hers. To hear her pray brought the tears to one's eyes, and the way in which she made sure that the vigil light was always burning before her statue of the Sacred Heart, touched us all. She died on a Saturday afternoon, in a little room, whose blue and white seemed for all the world like the enfolding mantle of Our Blessed Lady. Anne Mae Wong went to God with a smile on her lips and the words, "Do not cry, I am happy". Now she looks sweetly down upon her Chinatown, and if since her death many wonderful graces and blessings have come to our Mission—we know that it is because she has constituted herself in Heaven our angel guardian, our little intercessor, and that now there will always ever be—

"The shadow of a wing on all our years,
And in our heart a still small pool of tears."

MISS DOROTHY WONG,
who has given her untiring services to assist Catholic work in Vancouver. She is an invaluable helper to the priests and sisters of St. Francis Xavier's Mission.

THIS is in part the history of the Chinese Catholic Mission in Vancouver. And now we stand at the open gateway of a new year—with great hopes for the future. The mustard seed has taken firm root and we envision a wide spreading tree—an ever-increasing number of converts to the Church in Vancouver's Chinatown. If we had not the faith that we have in the people of Canada, we would not go forward with such high hopes as those we entertain. It is, then, with an overwhelming sense of gratitude to God that we grasp this occasion to broadcast through the medium of "China", a knowledge of our work, its necessity and its needs. We come to the people of Canada in the raiment of the Beggar-King, rich in everything save that which He holds most dear—the souls of men. We ask for Him and in His name, confident that you will not refuse Him, even though you be tempted to deny us. We ask your interest, we ask your help, and above all we ask your prayers.

HENRY LIM
A beautiful soul whom God has called to his reward. (See text).

CHINA — age-old, mysterious, pagan China; the secret kingdom of the last century; the hermit Empire of days gone by; China that was old when the rest of the world was young, and will be young when the rest of the world is old—has at last awakened. Centuries ago up in her quiet hills, like Rip Van Winkle, she fell asleep—she stopped short, while the rest of the world marched on. Today, she is awake, and the past few years of unrest are but her momentary bewilderment and confusion, as she finds herself the eccentric one—in an age of new ideas, new institutions, and new inventions. She has sent her people to the universities of the world, and they have returned to China, to disseminate social, economic and religious views picked up in our schools. They are the emissaries of a new order, and they will be the guiding stars of the New China. Thus one can readily understand and appreciate that the Catholic education of our little Far East, here on the Pacific Coast, will have a far-reaching effect on that more distant Orient of four hundred million souls. The possible ramifications of our work here in British Columbia are evident and wonderful. Our conclusions in this regard are not merely imagination, but are based on the experience garnered during some years in the mission fields of interior China. Remember, a Chinese boy educated in the schools of Honolulu became modern China's George Washington.

MISS ANNE MAE WONG, who looks down from Heaven on her country people in Vancouver's Chinatown. (See text).

The Chinese are a lovable, intelligent, honest and hard-working race. Their uprightness, their deep sense of gratitude, and their high standard of morality are bywords on the Pacific Coast. Twenty-five hundred years before the Christian era their forefathers were highly civilized—and while continental Europe was still in its infancy and the Americas as yet unknown, China had given to the world such inventions as paper, glass, the printing press; works of art, and books of poetry and prose that are the indisputable credentials of a cultured people. But above all else (and this should never be forgotten), China had produced a philosophy and code of morals unsurpassed by any contemporaneous pagan nation; a code of morals that was and is the nearest possible approach to the doctrine preached by Jesus Christ.

"SUFFER THE LITTLE CHILDREN TO COME UNTO ME"
Charming little Chinese children who attend the Catholic Mission Kindergarten. The view at lower left shows them in a Procession on the Feast of the Holy Rosary, 1934.

WHEN Father Sharkey returned from China to take up work among the Chinese in Canada, he was often greeted with the remark—"You must be glad, Father, to be back to civilization." He took exception to that remark, because it is founded on a confusion of words. We may call China unmodernized, but we certainly cannot call her uncivilized. If a high standard of morality, a deep sense of gratitude, a reverence for the marriage tie, a love of study and intellectual advancement, a unity of family life, parental discipline, honesty in commerce and simplicity of life, are the fundamentals of real civilization (and assuredly they are)—then the Chinese are highly civilized. But if divorce and family disruption, sweat-shops, licensed immorality, racketeering and gangsterism are the signs of the culture we speak of—the Chinese may indeed be barbarians. It is for us to sit down and revaluate our ideas of true progress, and after we have made that revaluation, we will have a more intense interest and a deeper appreciation of this little Orient of ours. Politically they have been refused franchise, but with Jesus Christ and His Church there is no distinction of color, race, or social standing. Let us not through any sense of superiority or prejudice refuse them the franchise of the Catholic Church.

Pius the Eleventh, Pope of the Missions, has said—"With the ever-recurring thought that the pagan world is ten thousand times one hundred thousand souls wide, we know no rest to our spirit." This perpetual and disturbing vision of the vast pagan world has stirred our Supreme Pontiff to the very depths of his soul, and from the very moment of his accession to the Papal Throne it has become, as he himself says, "the chief object of our Pontificate". He has sounded the call to Catholic Action; he has brought a new missionary mind to the laity of the Church; he has recruited the greatest army of missionary forces in the history of modern Christianity; he has inaugurated a New Crusade for the restoration of the souls for whom Christ died.

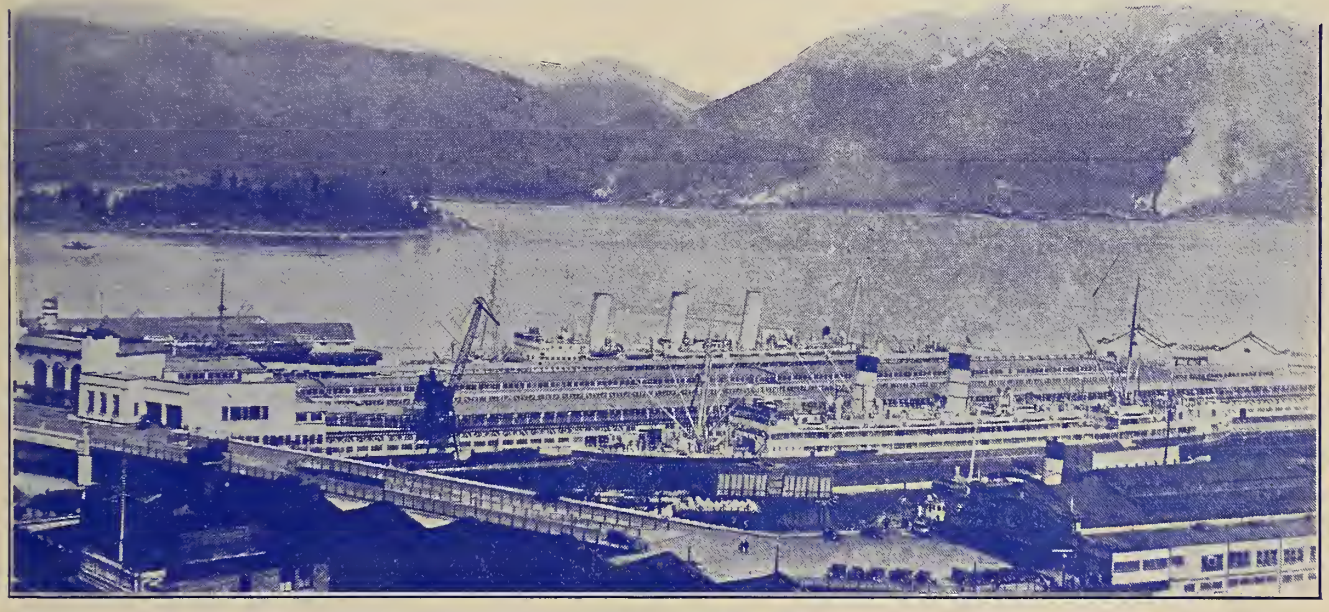
Certainly the Catholic Church in Canada has the responsibility of looking after the spiritual welfare of this China at its very doors. And if we presume to propose it as your first charity, it is because where the need is the greatest, the charity is the greatest. And we do need your help; we do beg your assistance.

PENDER STREET, IN THE HEART OF VANCOUVER'S CHINATOWN

WE write you this, dear friends, early in a New Year. We began the year with high hopes in our hearts, not the least fondest of which is that, before 1936 is on the wane, we shall have a little church for our people. The lack of one is seriously hindering and hampering our work here in Vancouver, for we cannot decently accommodate our Chinese Catholic people for Sunday Mass. At the present time, we are using as a chapel a small double-parlor in the Sisters' convent. But just consider how terribly overcrowded it is with over a hundred people in it for Holy Mass on Sundays.

Our dream is a little church—with its tiled roof, whose corners curve gracefully upwards, like the roof of some old Chinese temple; with its round moon-gate that speaks of far Cathay; with its delicately latticed windows, that bring back memories of a Shantung garden; and over all, the Cross. It is our vision of a little home for God, which we would raise here in Vancouver's Chinatown, during this year of Vancouver's golden jubilee. It is something that will make Catholic history on this North American continent—the first and only Oriental-style church in America.

If everybody that reads this article would help a little, our dream would soon come true. May the charity of Christ touch your hearts—it is for Him we beg; for Him and for souls.



TWO LITTLE SINGERS
Evelyn Lee and Irene Woo.

Please help us. Please help Him. His Sacred Heart will not forget.

WE are deeply grateful to the dear Catholic people of Vancouver, and others whose unstinted patronage and generous co-operation combined to make our efforts thus far a real success. Truly can we say that you have awakened to your responsibility in regard to this Mission. You have come to realize that the salvation of the Chinese of this city is not something individual, something in charge of the Mission; but that it is as universal as the Church; that the obligation of saving souls rests with equal force on the conscience of every individual member of the Church. This responsibility cannot be shirked. It is not a mandate of man, but a command of God Himself. It must be met according to the circumstances and state of each individual. On the already overburdened shoulders of our gallant clergy, Christ places the additional responsibility of making the Missions popular by their preaching and loved by their exhortations and examples. Our Catholic laity have the obligation of supporting the Missions by their prayers and alms giving, of realizing that when they are asked to contribute to the Missions, they are not giving to an individual priest but to that cause for which the Church was founded, namely to bring the Gospel of Christ to "those who sit in the darkness of idolatry and ignorance." That cause, which His Holiness, Pope Pius XI, has termed "the life of the Church", the only reason for Her existence" is surely one which calls for "Catholic Action", national, not merely local, and this humble beginning in Vancouver, it seems to us, is but the forerunner of a national apostleship to bring the knowledge of Jesus Christ to many Chinese scattered throughout the Dominion.

And so, dear readers and friends, God has come to Chinatown indeed—but only through your kindness and sacrifice can Chinatown come to GOD.

THE FAR WEST
View of Vancouver Harbour. In the foreground are the three funnels of one of the Empress liners on which our missionaries travel to the Far East. With its large Oriental population, Vancouver has its Foreign mission problem right at home.

NEWS FROM KINHWA MISSION

By MONSIGNOR FRASER

ON February 9th Bishop Faveau paid a visit to Kinhwa to perform the Blessing Ceremony of the new church dedicated to "The Queen of Apostles" in the city of Pukiang. The church has a seating capacity of about 500, but fully a thousand were packed into it that day—Christians, catechumens and pagan well-wishers; they pressed right up to the Communion rail. Following the blessing of the church, the Bishop administered Confirmation to over eighty recent converts. To think that a little over a year ago there were only a handful of believers in this locality! Besides myself, Fathers Tcheng and Sing, who care for that region, were present.

A number of notables came to grace the occasion; the mayor, magistrate, chief of police, several principals of high schools, and others. After the ceremony we invited them to a dinner; they seemed well pleased with the progress being made by the Catholic Church. The magistrate's secretary, who has travelled a great deal and is very versatile, was loud in his praise of the work being done by our Canadian Sisters in Lishui.

"He looked so forlorn and cold as he tottered down the stairs after the morning Mass on Christmas that I wondered if he had long to live. He was bundled in old clothing with cloth over his head and covering his neck and the lower part of his face. I took his picture.
"Three weeks later I answered a sick call. It was the old man. I administered the Sacrament of Extreme Unction and gave him the last blessing. A few days later he died."

—Father Doyle's "JOTTINGS"

On the same day, but in the opposite corner of the district, 150 miles away, another ceremony was taking place—a procession in honour of the Little Flower. Her relic was carried by Father Ly; twelve girls with veils, silk sashes, ribbons and badges, held artistic illuminated flower baskets in their hands; sanctuary boys dressed in red soutanes; boy scouts; beautiful, illuminated crosses were carried by men, and in all a hundred persons took part. There were a thousand onlookers. The procession was held at this time to offset the pagan processions of Chinese New Year's, and had the desired effect, for the latter was almost abandoned. The crowds followed the procession into the Little Flower Church for sermon and benediction; but the church was too small, and the sermon had to be delivered in the open. This taxed Father Ly's strength so greatly that he fell sick, and for several days had high fever.

New Christian communities are springing up all around the Little Flower Church in the different towns. Father Kiang and four catechists are working day and night instructing the new converts, of whom there are at least 500, and Father Ly, who has quite recovered, is going there tomorrow.

Coming nearer Kinhwa (city), my headquarters, in the village of Mao Tso San (Bamboo Mountain), there is an old patriarch, whose conversion dates back to the very beginning of the Faith in this region, some thirty or forty years ago. He is over eighty, but nevertheless every Sunday walks the five miles to church, fasting, and receives Communion. He has a big family, some forty odd children and grandchildren, all living in the same hamlet. On a recent visit I found most of them were in great need of instruction. I took ten of the children into our school, and am boarding them gratis, in order that they may learn enough to receive the Sacraments, and for the others I have placed a catechist in their midst, who is to instruct them for a month. Every day he recites the prayers and Rosary with them, and in the evening gives an instruction.

While I was eating dinner today the old man introduced a pagan monk who wishes to become a Christian. I instructed the Bonze on the tenets of our Holy Religion, and was pleased, an hour later, to see him with the Christians making the Way of the Cross and assisting at Benediction, wearing his long black robe, distinctive of his Buddhist Community.

A little over two months ago I was fortunate in being able to place a Christian woman in the pagan orphanage here in order to baptize the dying infants. I pay her a small salary, and at the end of each month she must report the number baptized. Today she reported 23 for February. This makes 78 dying infants baptized during the short time she has had the position. God be praised for opening Heaven to so many little ones, who otherwise would be lost!

P.S.—By a coincidence I notice that the Church of the Queen of (the 12) Apostles is the twelfth church I built in China. But it won't be the last, as I have begun another in Ya Mao Tien, to be dedicated to St. Anthony of Padua.

"Last Easter I received a chocolate Easter egg from Canada. I showed it to some of the school children at Lishui. Their mystification was amusing. One little girl wanted to know if a foreign hen laid this egg. The picture of the egg and the girl is shown above."

—Father Doyle's "JOTTINGS"

NONSENSE

"IF YOU DON'T LAUGH AT THE JOKES OF THE AGE, THEN LAUGH AT THE AGE OF THE JOKES"

They were on their honeymoon, and had just had their first disagreement.

Said he: "Perhaps I was a little cruel."

"Yes, you were!" she replied.

"I wasn't!" he said, in hurt tone. Then: "Well, look here, I'll say I was cruel if you'll say I wasn't."

"Very well, peach-blossom, you weren't."

"Then I'm sorry if I was."

Sambo, carrying a crate of eggs, tripped and fell headlong, with dire consequences.

His friend 'Rastus, happening along just then, threw back his head and shouted with laughter, "Ho-ho-ho-ho-ho-ho-ho-ho!" he gargled; "dem yolks, dem whites, dem shells! Ho-ho-ho-ho-ho-ho-ho-ho!"

Sambo watched him a moment. Then he commanded: "Boy! shut yo mouf so's I kin see who yo is."

Speed Fiend—"Gosh! Don't you feel glad you're alive?"

Passenger—"Glad isn't the word. I'm amazed."

"How's your wife getting along with her driving, Abe?"

"She took a turn for the worse last week, Moe."

He—"I suppose I'm only a little pebble on the beach of your life?"

She—"Yes, you might stand a chance if you were a little boulder."

Hazel: "Now that you have looked over my music, what would you like to have me play?"

Henry: "I think we had better play cards."

Son—"Say, paw, the teacher asked me to find the greatest common divisor."

Father—"Good night! is that thing still lost? The teacher had me hunting for it when I was a kid."

Richard had learned the story of Columbus at school, and was telling it to his mother. "An' his ships were the Nina, the Pinta—and—and——"

"The Santa Maria," prompted his mother.

"Aw," said Dickey, "you've heard the story before."

Mrs. Biffe: "I would never let my daughter marry a man who smokes cigarettes."

Arthur: "But I only smoke cigars."

Mrs. Biffe: "Well, I wouldn't let her marry a man that'll waste money on cigars when cigarettes are so much cheaper."

"How was the scenery on your trip?"

"It ran largely to tooth paste and smoking tobacco."

"How can you stand these small apartments?"

"Oh, everything is in proportion. We even use condensed milk."

Florist—"Want to say it with flowers? About three dozen roses, say?"

"How about six? I don't want to say too much."

Her Father: "I do hope you appreciate that in marrying my daughter you are getting a very big-hearted and generous girl."

Young Man: "I do, sir. And I hope that she has acquired those fine qualities from her father."

Mr. and Mrs. Barnes had been discussing an arrangement which implied the exercise of the "give and take" theory.

"You know," declared Mr. Barnes, "that it always takes two to make a bargain."

"Yes," returned Mrs. Barnes, "but only one of them gets it."

When the rooster crows at sunshine
In that strident tone of his,
Then the weather either changes
Or remains just as it is.
—Boston Transcript.

The Shortest Verse.

We De
Spise
Flies.
—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"You know," said the lady whose motor car had run down a man, "you must have been walking very carelessly. I am a very careful driver. I have been driving a car for seven years."

"Lady, you've got nothing on me. I've been walking for fifty-four years."

"You're home early from the court, Mrs. Murphy."

"Yes, Mrs. Kelly, I am that. They threw me out for clappin' when Mr. Murphy got three months."

Father (admiring his recently-born heir): "That fellow will be a great statesman one of these days."

Mother: "Oh, Charles, dear, do you really think he will?"

"Sure of it. Look how easily he wriggles out of everything."

They had just become engaged.

"I shall love," she cooed, "to share all your troubles."

"But, darling," he murmured, "I have none."

"No," she agreed, "but I mean when we are married."

He: "But don't you cook much more for dinner than we use, darling?"

She: "Of course, silly! If I didn't, how could I economize by making leftover dishes?"

The life insurance agent called upon a big insurance man at the close of a busy day. When the agent had been admitted, the big fellow said:

"You ought to feel honored, highly honored, young man. Do you know that today I have refused to see seven insurance agents?"

"I know," said the agent. "I'm them!"

A political meeting was in progress and the audience was growing heartily tired of a very prosy speaker. At last he worked himself up to his climax.

"And I say to you, in conclusion, that if you do not accept nationalization now, of your own free will, the time is coming when, willy nilly, you will have to accept it!"

He sat down, and the chairman rose.

"Are there any questions, please?" he asked.

There was a long silence. Then a weary voice came from the back of the hall: "Who is this Willy Nilly, anyway?"

"Is your husband a good provider, Dinah?"

"Yessum, he's a good providah all right, but I'm allus skeered dat nigger's gwine ter git caught at it."

It May Be

that you long have had the desire to contribute a gift to China Mission Seminary. Easter is a good time to put your desires into effect.

It May Be

that you have considered the donation you could afford as too small to go to the trouble of sending. The Seminary and the Missions depend on small donations from many friends, so send along yours now. However small it may be, it will be big to us.

It May Be

that you are in a position to give us a helping hand by a large donation, but are deciding to wait and leave it to us in your Will. That is good, but may we remind you that our need at the present time is very urgent, and that by remembering our work now you will make sure that your good intentions will not be interfered with after your death through legal technicalities, and that we will benefit to the extent you desire without surrendering a large portion of your intended gift in Succession Duties.

+

"CHARITY TO THE MISSIONS EXCEEDS ALL OTHER CHARITY." (Pope Pius XI)

+

St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary
Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario

Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT. MAY 1936

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.
2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.
3. By sending Mass Intentions to our missionaries.
4. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.
5. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Quality Printers

ADelaide 2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West - Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutator Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.
2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.
3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.
4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.
5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 24,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XVII. MAY, 1936 No. 5

IN DANGER

AS we write these words we know that millions of people are listening attentively at their radios, or rushing to buy the latest editions of the daily papers, to learn the latest news of the thrilling rescue work being performed at Moose River, Nova Scotia, where two human lives depend on the rescue efforts of heroic miners. From one end of Canada to the other, in countless homes and among all classes and conditions of people, the attempts of the rescuers have been followed with heartfelt and prayerful interest. The tragic entombment of the men in the Nova Scotia mine once more demonstrates the depth of human sympathy which dwells in men's hearts, and which is so readily and so quickly evoked by the sufferings and the privations of mankind.

* * *

IT has been ever thus. The venturesome activities of members of the human race have time and again created situations which called forth the best in man's nature. Marking their way through the years, carving out new paths and avenues for the progress of Science, daring individuals have not hesitated to risk their lives in Polar expeditions, in transatlantic flights, in the climbing of mountains and the penetration of disease-infected jungles. When their efforts are stalked by tragedy, and their plans are interrupted by accidents, then the element of suspense and uncertainty arouses a keen interest in widespread parts of the world. While there is possibility of saving a human life there is spared no effort or no expenditure of time and resources.

* * *

FOR us all, there is a lesson to be learned from our contact with events of recent days connected with the mine rescue in Nova Scotia. It is a splendid thing that all hearts have been touched by that tragedy. It will be a more splendid thing if our hearts are likewise moved in sympathy and interest towards a greater, every-day tragedy, which calls to us as Catholics. It is the tragedy of souls in danger, and souls that will forever be endangered unless we co-operate in their rescue. Not one of us but would gladly make generous sacrifice these days if we could know that our sacrifice would rescue safely the lives of two fellowmen from beneath caved-in earth. If any would stop at giving their personal service to the rescue, none would be found unwilling to aid the actual rescuers in their work. Like helpless, entombed men, powerless to effect their own rescue, there are millions of pagan souls waiting for others to save them. There are others engaged in the rescue. Every Catholic missionary is toiling against tremendous odds to save the precious spiritual life which cost God His very Blood on the Cross. And the missionary is full well aware that the number of his rescues from the dark pit of paganism depends almost entirely, next to the Grace of God, on the efforts of Catholics who enjoy the untrammelled freedom of their Faith amidst the comforts of Christian life. We could wish that the tragedy of paganism's hold over the souls of men would waken the imagination of all Catholics, enliven their interest, and touch their hearts unto the making of sacrifice for the sake of the imperilled souls and the comfort of the missionaries engaged in their rescue.

* * *

THE MISSION WORLD MOURNS

THE Catholic Foreign Missions suffered a severe loss on April 14th in the death of Most Reverend James Anthony Walsh, Founder and Superior-General of the Catholic Foreign Mission Society of America. It is with genuine sorrow that "China" chronicles his passing, and our sympathy goes out to the more than one thousand "Maryknollers" who revered the late Bishop Walsh as an inspirational leader and kindly father.

In the designs of Divine Providence it was ordained that James Anthony Walsh was to be the priest to sound the clarion call to the Catholics of the United States to rally to the Mission work of the Church. For more than thirty years the Foreign Missions were his soul-consuming care.

* * *

HIS highest ambition was the establishment of a seminary for Foreign Missions for the training of American youths. With the endorsement of the Hierarchy of the United States, Father Walsh, with the late Father Price, founded the now world-famous "Maryknoll" Mission Society, in 1911. In a few months will be celebrated the Silver Jubilee of the foundation, and it must be a matter of poignant regret to all Maryknollers that the First Father-General of the Society did not live to take part in the celebrations.

For a quarter of a century Bishop Walsh has been a notable figure among missionaries. He has directed with energy and zeal the development of a great institution, and he has cast much lustre on the cause of Missions by his indefatigable activities in the Orient, in Europe, and his native United States. His writings have been a most powerful influence in the formation of a mission consciousness in English-speaking countries. He will be remembered as one of the great leaders in the twentieth century mission world.

JOTTINGS

By REV. GERALD DOYLE

HERE at Tsingtien I never wonder what we will have for supper, or for dinner either; it is always the same. First, there is what the cook supposes is soup, and then comes the three reliables: pork (meat here in the interior means one section or another of the pig), potatoes and beans. The beans being considered a vegetable and not merely an accompaniment for the pork. When bananas are available we have dessert, but at present there are none in town so that is one course for which we do not have to worry about choosing the right fork. We are very fortunate in having good bread and each week we get in a supply from Wenchow, a city several hours down the river. Of course, towards the end of the week, especially in the summer time, the bread may get a bit mouldy, but that part can be cut off. And then, we always have tea.

I shall not tell you about my experience in making cookies; that calls for private telling, but recently the cook decided to mash the potatoes. The idea was all right but he also had an idea not found in the cook book. There was a queer taste to these mashed potatoes. The cook was questioned but he insisted that he had done nothing unusual. We continued to eat them until suddenly a light appeared in Father Stringer's eyes. He went out to the kitchen and searched till he found an old bottle of lemon extract. When thus confronted the cook admitted that he had used "just a little".

* * *

IT is said that the Chicago packing houses have a use for every part of the pig except the squeal. Well, the Chinese go them one better and here the squeal serves instead of an alarm clock, the pigs being killed very early in the morning. This morning I was awakened an hour too early when a neighbor had his pig killed.

* * *

As to rice and chop sticks, both are very much in prominence when we make the missions and visit the outlying chapels, but here at our little headquarters we use knives and forks and very little rice. Oh yes, on days of abstinence the pork is replaced by eggs, or perhaps a can of salmon is opened, if we are fortunate enough to have it.

* * *

AND now a few words on a more important subject, although I suppose food at times is even more important than money; but if there is no money there is usually no food.

A few days ago I returned from a visit to Lishui where I had a talk with Monsignor McGrath. He spoke of the present financial situation of the entire mission. Not since our priests have been in China have things been so serious. Our need is urgent. Will you "lend a hand"? Letters addressed to: Catholic Mission, Lishui, Che., China, will reach Monsignor McGrath, me, or any of our priests in China. Money may be sent by personal cheque or money order, or even a bill in a letter would very probably reach us safely. An offering of one dollar will receive a real welcome here and you will receive an acknowledgement from China.

* * *

BANDITS are still in existence and are continually bobbing up some place. Last night they were in a village ten miles away, but it was not likely that they would come closer. While the bandits are not actually in Huang T'An, the mission of Fathers Amyot and King, who are at present in other Missions, they are in that district. Yesterday the catechist from Ba Nga took delight in describing how the bandits had killed a man by cutting his throat. They do not waste bullets as they look upon their supply of ammunition as very precious.

The value of some lives is placed rather low at times, according to a practice in many places in this district. With a report that armed men are approaching the villagers become anxious and in order to determine if those coming are bandits or soldiers they hire the very poor to go out and meet them. They reason that if soldiers are coming the men will not be harmed, while if they are bandits they will not bother capturing the men as they are too poor to bother about, no chance for a ransom. But it sometimes happens that the bandits capture these poor men and kill them as spies, so these men take a real risk. How much do they get for their trouble? A little over a dollar in Canadian money, figured at the present exchange. Truly, a hard way to earn a dollar.

* * *

It is now early in March here in China, and for three days snow has been on the ground, a very unusual happening for this month and the

(Continued on page 73)

"Father Stringer bought this hundred-year-old pipe on one of his mission trips. It is fifty inches long. Just before it was sent to Canada (Father McNabb kindly taking it), Father Strang decided he wanted to have his picture taken using it. I obliged him by a time exposure late in the afternoon at our front gate. If you visit the Seminary museum some time at Scarboro Bluffs, you may see for yourself how easy(?) it is to light the long pipe."—Father Doyle's "Jottings".

One of the teachers at the convent school with her two children. The little girl, Mary, is now attending the Lishui high school seeking higher education. Only the lower grades are taught at the convent school. The two children were among the first group Father Doyle baptized in China.

The Little Red Plasters

By THE SISTERS OF CHARITY
Chusan, Chekiang

IN the autumn of 1935 there was a terrible epidemic of malignant malaria throughout our Island. The country people called it the "straw sickness", because after the second rice harvest the heavy rains came before the straw was dry and it rotted, giving out a bad odor which caused the fever. One cannot say how far this was true but certainly for two months or more after the second harvest a very bad fever raged through the country villages, but there was very little in the town.

When the people of the villages and surrounding islands are attacked by sickness, they are in a sad condition for no one cares for them; there are no remedies to be bought in the country and few of them have the means to come in and see the doctors, or buy medicines in the town, though a certain number flock to the Sisters' free dispensary, if they have the time to come in. The grown-up people may gradually get over the illness but the children and babies die by hundreds.

When we, the Sisters, hear of these epidemics, we try to get out to the country villages to care for the sick children. It is not easy, for at home we have over 500 poor to care for, orphan children, old men and women, sick people in two hospitals, our own daily free dispensary and the dispensary in the town prison with the care of the sick prisoners.

But something must be done at all costs to help the poor people in the country and also gain a harvest of little souls for Heaven by Baptism of the dying children. So long excursions are arranged, the Sisters at home generously taking on extra work to replace those who go out. In the autumn, the days are short so an early start must be made in order to be home before dark. This time, the sickness was the worst on the far side of the Island; several times, the Sisters went over three mountains to the far-off villages. It meant three hours walk there and back again in the afternoon. As soon as they arrived with their big medicine baskets, the poor people poured out of their houses and followed them in crowds, begging for remedies. It was a pitiful sight so see their white drawn faces, blue lips and shaking hands. Big men, working in the rice fields, came to us, saying: "Momo, I am good for nothing, I have no strength." It looked like pernicious anaemia, following the fever; all force was drained out of them, their blood had no color. The children were even worse, their little faces yellowish white and their lips blue white. The people brought out stools, the Sisters placed their baskets on them and tried to satisfy the eager crowd around them. Mothers hardly able to walk themselves, carried dying babies in their arms, led tiny wasted children of two and three years of age and had older children clinging to them, all in the same condition.

It was sad that one could do so little for them. Quinine and aspirin were dealt out to those still with fever; to the others one could only give packets of cinchona powder as tonics and invite them to come in to the hospital to be cured, or send their men-folk to fetch bottles of tonics, etc. Alas, few would come that distance, they rarely leave their village, but it was touching to see their gratitude to us for thinking of them and coming so far to help them. Little gifts brightened the sad situation.

When the medicines had been given, then came the joyful moment for the Sisters when they brought out their little holy water bottles and began to baptize these poor little wasted mites whom God had chosen for the Glory of Heaven. The Sisters call it the "Healing Water" which will bring happiness to the baby, and when it has been poured on the forehead, a tiny round red plaster is stuck on the side of the head. In the rare case of a baptized baby not dying quickly, one can always ask if the child has received the red plaster. The parents never forget. These days in the villages brought big harvests of Baptisms, sometimes the Sisters came back with ninety or one hundred, a week later these little souls were in Heaven surely. Since July 1st, 1935, we have had over 1,400 Baptisms in our work of visiting the sick poor outside.

On February 1st, Monsignor McGrath, Father Beal and Father Curtin, arrived at our Mission headquarters in Lishui, and were tendered a joyful reception by the missionaries and Chinese Christians. Monsignor McGrath and Father Curtin are shown above in the midst of the Lishui school boys.

The Methods of the "Reds"

By

REV. JOSEPH KING

IT is not a matter of surprise that many people at home quite naturally associate this country of China with stories of outlawry and banditry. Those readers of "China" who have been following the accounts of our missionary experiences during the past several years may have been mildly surprised that so little mention has been made of attacks by outlaws and bandits in the district where our Canadian priests and nuns are working. Fortunately, it has been the case that there were very few such incidents to record. The Province of Chekiang in which lies the Prefecture of Chuchow has been one of the favored Provinces of this great country; it has enjoyed a record of being a comparatively peaceful region, free from the encroaches of the wild bands whose deeds have given such unfavorable publicity to China as a whole. But things have changed for the worst recently, and for the past twelve months or so our Canadian missionaries have known what it means to live in dread of an attack from forces most hostile to Christianity, while bandits and rumours of bandits have disturbed the calm and routine of mission life.

I have had the rather unpleasant experience of being "chased out" of my mission home due to the danger of attack from maurading bandits. With Father Beal I have spent the past few weeks here in Sungyang, and I have learned from Father Wong of the many uncomfortable days he spent alone here in Sungyang during the period that Father Beal was on sick leave in Canada.

It appears that on the 14th of May of last year, this district was invaded by bandits who arrived unexpectedly from Kiangsi, our neighbouring Province to the West. They made a circuit over the mountains from Lungchuang and first put in an appearance at a place called Chu-Z-Ca, which is but six miles away from this thriving town of Sungyang, one of our most important mission centres. It took but a short time for them to assume full control of Chu-Z-Ca, which is a marketing centre of the district.

In Chu-Z-Ca there is a chapel with a resident Catechist. Of course, the bandits paid the catechist a visit and demanded to know the whereabouts of the priest. Not receiving any satisfaction they nevertheless refrained from taking the catechist himself a prisoner, as they did some years ago to a Catechist in Lungchuang district, whose whereabouts have since remained a mystery except for a rumour which once reached Sungyang that the victim was being held captive in Fukien Province.

IN OUR April issue we printed a report of bandit activities in the missions of Huang T'An. As a result of the invasion of Huang T'An, Fathers Wm. Amyot and Joseph King were forced to seek refuge in safer quarters. Latest news from our missionaries says that Father Amyot is now at our headquarters in Lishui, while Father King is with Father Beal and Father Wong at Sungyang. It is from a letter of Father King's, written at Sungyang on March 16th, that we glean the news of bandit raids in that territory during the past year.

TWO OTTAWA PRIESTS
Father Desmond Stringer (left), greets Father Wm. Amyot, as the latter reaches Tsingtien, having been forced by bandit attacks to leave his own mission of Huang T'An.

The few soldiers who were in Sungyang started bravely off towards Chu-Z-Ca, but the distance was but half covered when their bravery deserted them and they returned to the city. Then there was consternation among the citizens. But one of the soldiers thought of a plan—evidently most impracticable. At any rate he made it known by furiously beating a large gong till he had summoned quite a big crowd, and then suggested that the citizens of Sungyang march out in order as if to surrender, the while they carried a supply of lime with which they could blind the enemy as they mingled with them. The citizens were just not in favor of lime-throwing on that particular day and the erstwhile strategist got no support for his plan.

Although but slightly protected, Sungyang was not attacked on that occasion. Instead, the bandits retired to the hills some ten miles away. Two days later troops arrived from Lungchuang, Lishui, and other places. Several encounters took place between the soldiers and the bandits, but the final result was that the soldiers played safe by remaining inside the fortified town rather than take the offensive. Not long afterwards a massed attack was made; the soldiers routed the attackers, and after much machine-gunning had disturbed the residents of the city the soldiers were hailed as victors.

Forty thousand National soldiers were stationed in various cities throughout Chekiang Province to guard against further outbreaks. Twenty miles from Sungyang the Reds set up their headquarters at Ba-Nga, but with the capture of this place peace once more reigned. One hundred Red prisoners were brought into Sungyang from Ba-Nga. The authorities, knowing them to be but ignorant farmers who had been won over by the enthusiastic and fiery Red proaganda, endeavoured to bring them to a right way of thinking. Those who refused to amend were shot without more ado. The Mayor of Sungyang, a personal friend of Father Wong's, allowed Father

(Continued on page 71)

The month of May is not the most suitable to present a Winter scene such as the above, but the picture was taken only a few weeks ago, and shows our seminarians returning "across the field" from class at St. Augustine's Seminary. On this particular occasion the deep snow obliged the 50 students to walk single file, and the thin black line against the white background was too much for the cameraman to withstand. Our rink appears at the right, but the scene of recreational games has long since shifted to the handball alleys, a corner of which shows at the left of this view.

NEWS FROM OUR PRIESTS

FOLLOWING a health furlough in Canada, Father Lawrence Beal, of Otterville, Ontario, returned to his mission of Sungyang a few months ago. In a letter recently received from him, he says:

"It is good to be back again amid familiar scenes and old friends. If it were not for the mountains and the tiled roofs all around me I would scarcely realize I am back again among my faithful Chinese.

"Yesterday, one of the catechists from an out-station came along to see me and gave me news of his post. He said it was rather trying on the nerves last Spring when the bandits made their visitation. It was difficult to know at times which were worse, the soldiers who came along and parked at his doorstep and demanded service and sleeping quarters, appropriating what they needed without any remuneration, or the bandits who professedly respect no law, but yet who did not come in and steal. Continuing his story, he related some of the hardships visited on the people of Yan Chin Nueh, our most distant mission. There, a Christian named Mr. Ngo, was robbed of his life's savings, his throat was cut, and then his body flung to the dogs. Two others met the same fate when they could not produce enough money to satisfy the robbers. In addition, their homes were burned down and all their belongings carried off. The little village is now in a desperate state of poverty, and the catechist acted for the poor people in asking me to visit them to alleviate their sufferings. I promised I would go there as soon as the rains ceased, for just now the bridges would be impassable, and other circumstances make it undesirable to leave here just yet on this seventy-mile jaunt.

"I know there will be considerable work to do in repairing many little chapels on my missions after the destruction done by the bandits, and I am frankly worried about it because I have not the means to undertake even small outlays for necessary purposes."

* * *

Friends of Father Leo Curtin, who went to China three months ago in company with Monsignor McGrath and Father Beal, will be pleased to learn that he writes enthusiastically of his first experiences in Chuchow. He is now busily engaged in studying the Chinese language under the tutelage of Father Aaron Gignac at Lishui. Our readers can look forward to some interesting sidelights on mission life when Father Leo "gets going" with his portable typewriter.

* * *

Writing at the end of February from the Philippine Islands, where he has been for the past few months recuperating from sinus trouble, Father Hugh McGettigan, of St. John's, Nfld., reports that he is "coming along fairly well, and is awaiting word from his doctor that his condition will soon permit a return to work on the missions." Father Hughie is at the Maryknoll Convent, Baguio, Mt. Province, P.I.

METHODS OF THE "REDS"

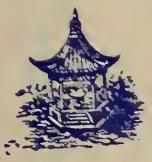
(Continued from page 70)

Wong to speak to the prisoners and appeal to them to follow a saner way of making a living. Many listened to his exhortations and were pardoned and released.

There can be no doubt about these bandits being of the class that are familiarly known as "Reds". And they do not by any means work in a haphazard fashion. They have very definite plans of campaign. The scenes of their operations are thoroughly mapped out in advance, and in every important town and village they can count on the assistance of their own spies or resident sympathizers who make it their business to know everything that can be of use to the bandits when finally an attack is made. No time is lost in locating the places where loot and victims are most worthwhile; the spies do their work well, and the Mandarin's residence, the Post Office, Police headquarters, and the stores of the wealthy are quickly visited. The poor victims found in these places are either summarily executed or else held for ransom. Occasionally, they are warned in time and enabled to gather together their more valuable possessions and flee to some more protected locality.

Sometimes, the bandits are prepared for such an eventuality. They very deliberately make it known that such and such a place is to be raided on a given date. Of course, it is the signal for the well-to-do residents to clear out. When the attack fails to materialize the citizens gradually return. And then the bandits come without warning. Some time ago this ruse worked in Sungyang, and cost the lives of three wealthy citizens. Their only crime was the fact that they were reputed to be men of means. The "Reds" will not tolerate the possession of even honestly-acquired wealth by others. Themselves preaching the doctrine of equality are nevertheless seeing to it that their own pockets are well lined with the fruits of their murderous robberies. They curry the support and sympathy of the poor and ignorant Chinese peasants by distributing some of their ill-gotten gains. It is easy for them to be generous! And the sad thing is that the ordinary hard-working peasant is led to believe that this system of wreck and ruin, murder and crime, is better by far than their present tax-burdened existence.

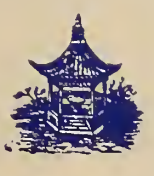
SUCCESSFUL SOCIAL AFFAIR GREATLY AIDS CHINA MISSION SEMINARY



The picture above shows a section of the large crowd assembled in the Auditorium of Columbus Hall, Toronto, on the night of April 16th, taking part in the Bridge and Euchre Party in aid of the Missions. At lower left is a view of the artistically arranged Mission Booth which attracted much attention in the lobby of the Hall. The group at the right shows members of the Executive Committee responsible for the successful party: Mrs. H. E. Moore, Mrs. S. Fairley, Mrs. G. Carrol, Mrs. E. Doherty. (Standing): Miss Josephine Vahey, Mr. Cecil Barry, Father Leonard, Miss Eva Doyle.

NEARLY 800 men and women participated in an enjoyable and most successful bridge and euchre party held at the K. of C. Hall, Toronto, on April 16th, in aid of China Mission Seminary.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary owes a big debt of gratitude to all those who contributed in any way towards making the Party the huge success it proved to be. Our thanks are due especially to the energetic Mr. Cecil Barry who acted as general Chairman; to the Ladies of the various Committees, particularly to the Executive Members; to the many friends who so kindly sold tickets; to the donors of the 52 valuable and useful prizes; to the Knights of Columbus for placing their commodious Hall at our disposal; and finally, to each and every person who attended the Party or bought tickets.



We are quite happy indeed to offer these words of appreciation for the magnificent response which favoured the zealous and enthusiastic appeal of our Toronto lady friends. We know it meant a great deal of work and entailed the expenditure of much time and energy in organizing things so efficiently, and we are glad that the results have been so encouraging. It was the first occasion in many years that the work of the Catholic Foreign Missions was made the object of such a wide appeal to the Catholics of Toronto in this manner, and we are justified in hoping that the interest thus created will have a permanent effect. Those concerned can rightly feel that they have done the Missions an inestimable favour in promoting so well the goodwill and active assistance of such a large number of people. Would that such examples of Catholic Action were more numerous and more widespread on behalf of Catholic Missions!

—J. E. McRAE.

China Corner

By FATHER ROBERTS, of the Catholic Mission in Vancouver's Chinatown, 572 East Georgia Street.

HOME TOPICS

THERE are certain standards by which we may judge the interests a family has at heart, and not the least important among them is the conversation which takes place at the dinner table—Home Topics let us call them.

Mother takes a sudden interest in a new brand of pastry flour. She always did make delicious cakes; but she is ambitious. The flour is purchased and, as luck would have it, the first trial produces a cake surpassing in lightness any of the past creations of mother's kitchen experience. The family are generous in their praise, and mother, proud of her latest success, leads one and all into a discussion of the merits and demerits of the various brands of pastry flour.

All may not be so enthusiastically interested in pastry flour as mother is, but certainly father, sons, and daughters are equally interested in the results achieved from the use of this particular brand of pastry flour, and therefore enter whole-heartedly into the discussion if only from the ulterior motive of encouraging further efforts on mother's part. Thus it is with all the events little or great, that arouse the interest of one or all members of the family.

Using "Home Topics" then as our barometer for gauging family interests, supposing we put the matter of British Columbia's Oriental Population to the test. Does this subject ever form a topic of conversation in the family circle? If it does, what is the nature of that discussion.

We know that during the campaign before the recent Dominion elections the Orientals came in for a considerable amount of comment in many homes. The candidates of the various contending parties were directly responsible for this. The radio and the newspaper carried their words into every home. Unfortunately, these speakers had an "axe to grind"—votes at any cost—so with all the skill at their command, but with little regard for facts, they placed before us vivid pictures of the moral degradation the poor defenceless white is suffering from his associations with the Oriental. The worst of crimes, and the most insidious insinuations were placed at the door of the Chinese, especially. The political speakers were listened to, their remarks certainly were discussed around the dinner table of many families—they became "Home Topics".

We who enjoy the Faith of Jesus Christ, and who have been privileged to hear His command: "Teach the Gosple to every creature", should, if we be faithful to our religion, be interested in the Orientals, not from the lower motive of worldly politics, but from the superior incentive of spiritual politics. Their eternal salvation should be of deep interest to us. Is it? Apply to that question the form of "Home Topics" and each family can answer for itself. If the immortal souls of this vast population on our very threshold has any interest to us, it would naturally be discussed now and again at the dinner table. Is it? Do the missionary efforts of our "China at home" form a "Home Topic" among our Catholic families? It should if the proper interest has been aroused.

"THE ANVIL OF THE CROSS"
By Rev. Hugh Sharkey
PRICE, $1.00
The Proceeds from the sale of this volume of Poems go to aid the St. Francis Xavier Chinese Catholic Mission, 572 George St. E. - Vancouver, B.C.

MASS INTENTIONS

Mass Intentions are badly needed by our priests in China. Send your intentions to the Seminary and they will be cabled to our missionaries in Chuchow.

HUGE CONGRESS IN VANCOUVER

First Diocesan Eutharistic Congress to be Held in June

THE first in British Columbia, a Diocesan Eucharistic Congress will be held in Vancouver, June 11th to 14th, 1936, as a feature of the religious observances in connection with the Golden Jubilee year celebrations, it is announced by the committee in charge.

More than 50,000 visitors are expected to be attracted to this important event. Bishops of the Catholic clergy throughout Canada and the Pacific coast states are being invited to participate in the Congress.

The occasion will also mark the golden jubilee of the first holy Mass celebrated in Vancouver on the feast of the Holy Rosary, in 1885. It has been postponed to be included in the programme commemorating the city's fiftieth anniversary.

The four-day congress will include the Feast of Corpus Christi in special Masses in city churches on the first day; conferences of priests and midnight Masses in several churches on the second day; a children's Mass at the Memorial Shell in Stanley Park on Saturday, June 13th; Pontifical Mass in Stanley Park on Sunday, June 14th, when His Excellency Archbishop W. M. Duke, or a visiting prelate will celebrate.

With Very Rev. J. B. McDonald acting as chairman of the committees of arrangements, this group has been augmented by lay delegates from city parishes, the Knights of Columbus, Catholic Order of Foresters, Catholic Women's League, and other organizations.

JOTTINGS

(Continued from page 68)

Chinese fear it will injure their crops. But it will be May when you read this and then the sun will be shining, perhaps too much, and the month of Mary will find China in all her glory. There will be plenty of flowers then to decorate the grotto of the Blessed Virgin in the convent garden at Lishui. While many gather at the grotto to say a prayer it is also a favorite background for snapshots. (See picture on page 60.)

BEHIND PRISON WALLS

By the SISTERS OF CHARITY,
Chusan, Che.

FROM April to the end of July last year we were busily occupied in fighting a bad epidemic in our town prison. In all, there were 289 cases of typhoid and typus in that period. The surroundings in the prison made our work most difficult, for the old type cells of 18 by 12 feet, badly ventilated, had sometimes 12 or 14 prisoners packed like sardines on a low platform. Dirt, and a total lack of fresh air and sanitation made the prisoners an easy prey to sickness. It developed into the second serious epidemic within four years.

The Sisters here at Chusan keep a dispensary cupboard in an outer room in the prison, and they go regularly to attend to the small ailments of the prisoners, occasionally obtaining permission from the Mandarin to remove the more serious cases to their hospital.

But a big epidemic calls for special daily attention, and the Sisters devoted two or three hours every afternoon to caring for the inmates of the prison during these four months. The sick were carried out of their cells on the backs of friends and placed on benches in a covered courtyard. On an average 50 or 60 cases were treated daily; some of them were new cases and others convalescents who needed tonics and strengthening food. It was pitiful to see these white-faced trembling men with blue lips.

For the most part they were brigands and pirates, who, when they first came, were big burly fellows, but three or more weeks of fever with temperatures of 104, 105, or even 106, had reduced them to a sad state of weakness, and it was difficult for us to detect when the crisis stage had been reached in their fever. Heart tonics and injections were given daily with the usual typhoid remedies, and above all, good strengthening food. The prison fare is only a little dry rice, often burnt and badly cooked, given twice a day with a little salt vegetable. The sick men could not touch this and would have starved to death but for the Sisters who brought big saucepans of hot rice gruel, rice water, meat soup, and stewed prunes (the last named are always given to sick people in China). Every morning we sent them a hot breakfast of rice gruel with chopped egg omelette in it, and hot rice water for the very ill. Breakfast tickets were distributed every afternoon to those who needed them. Some refused all food, but after their yellow leathery tongues had been gently swabbed with glycerine and boric, and their mouths and throats washed out, they could be persuaded to accept from the Sisters a cup of rice water or prune juice.

The patience and obedience of these rough uncouth fellows is remarkable; they wait their turn patiently, though they feel the fatigue terribly, held up on a bench by some kind friend. Often this assisting friend is himself a convalescent patient still white and weak. The Sister often slipped an egg or a biscuit into their grateful hands.

In the Sisters' Hospital there is a special prison ward, barred and locked, with a warden always on guard. Into this ward we took seven of the worst cases at a time. Some cases developed into blood-poison, and despite all possible treatment and care it was difficult to save them. Out of 289 sick men, 16 died; most of them were elderly men whose weak hearts could not endure the fever. All were instructed before death and baptized at their own request, and passed into eternity expressing gratitude for that charity which cares for soul as well as body. We were beseiged for medals and catechisms. It was indeed a ripe moment for saving souls. One man said to his companions: "Let us adore the God of the Sisters; they say it is He who calls them to care for us for we are also His children."

Since this epidemic, Christian men of the Sacred Heart Confraternity at Sinkomen, following their programme of Catholic Action, come once a month to preach in the prison. They are very well received, and many prisoners are studying the Christian catechism. This work at the prison is a costly one, but it brings much consolation and many blessings, for we remember the words of our Divine Lord: "I was sick and in prison and you visited me." We thank Him for the privilege of serving Him, and we have confidence in His Divine Providence.

IN A CHINESE PRISON
In the city of Paotingfu, North China, the Sisters of Charity visit the prison to administer to the inmates. One of the sisters is Chinese, the other French. The chain may be noted on the legs of the prisoner. The Sisters of Charity favor us on this page with an account of their work in similar circumstances at Chusan Island, in the same province where our Canadian Grey Nuns assist our Chuchow missionaries.

POPE HONOURS FAMOUS CHINESE CATHOLIC

Vatican City.—Pope Pius XI has named Lo Pa Hong, eminent industrialist, philanthropist, and President General of Catholic Action in Shanghai, a Secret Chamberlain of the Cape and Sword, in recognition of works of charity which have led him to be called the "St. Joseph Cottolengo of China". Lo Pa Hong, Director of electric, shipping, and transportation companies, has created in Shanghai alone 16 charitable institutions which he supports with donations of $200,000 annually.

PROGRESS OF CATHOLIC MISSIONS IN CHINA, 1935

(From July 1, 1934, to June 30, 1935)

	NUMBER		Increase over Preceding Year
Catholic Population		2,818,839	96,450
Conversions		96,680	13,705
Catechumens (not counted as Catholics)		495,060	11,855
Ecclesiastical Divisions		125	4
Entrusted to Foreign Clergy	103		3
Entrusted to Chinese Clergy	22		1
Clergy		4,309	195
Bishops	94		5
Foreign Priests	2,481		102
Chinese Priests	1,734		88
Ordinations		101	20
Brothers		1,167	12
Foreign Brothers	532		24
Chinese Brothers	635		36
Nuns		5,413	257
Foreign Nuns	1,995		128
Chinese Nuns	3,418		129
Seminarists		6,862	480
Major	935		—3
Minor	4,021		401
Probationers	1,906		82
Catechists		13,817	1,984
Men Catechists	8,048		667
Women Catechists	5,769		1,317
Baptisms		565,792	63,975
Adults	96,680		13,705
Children of Christians	92,470		5,910
Adults in danger of death	38,181		6,133
Infants in danger of death	338,461		38,227
Confessions		10,820,486	913,542
Annual, Of Obligation	1,370,151		55,937
Of Devotion	9,450,335		857,605
Holy Communions		27,327,233	1,976,822
Annual, Of Obligation	1,279,191		69,628
Of Devotion	26,048,042		1,907,194

Father Arthur Venadam, of Pomquet, N.S., has acquired an enviable reputation as a Director of Gregorian Chant. His work among the young people at Lishui, China, has met with remarkable success. Above, he is shown with the little girls of his Choir, as they were at Christmas Masses last year. Our cover picture shows his Choir boys in procession at Lishui.

LITTLE FLOWER'S ROSE GARDEN

Edited by FATHER JIM

CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP

The only conditions of membership in the Rose Garden are: (1) To say every day the Prayer for the Conversion of China; (2) To go to Holy Communion once a month for the Intention of Missionary Vocations. Certificates will be sent to all members.

Dear Boys and Girls:

Here we are again—and still going strong in our Mission Club, despite the non-appearance of some record of our members in recent months. When our young missionaries in the schools "stay with us" even when their doings are not publicized it is surest proof that their efforts are genuinely sincere, and only God will know how much good has been accomplished for the Missions through the work of the members of our "Rose Garden". Their enthusiasm does not abate, and their numbers increase steadily. It has been a real joy to have the job of "gardener" in such a beautiful "Garden" whence come those precious fruits which aid in the eternal salvation of souls. It is at this season of the year that gardens occupy particular attention, and ours ought not to be an exception. From now to the end of the school year I should like to see mission activity among our boys and girls flourish most noticeably.

To the members of the Rose Garden this month should be a very profitable one, spiritually, for I feel sure you have a very tender devotion to Our Lady, Queen of May. How much we should love the Blessed Virgin! She it was who gave us our dear Saviour, and she cared for him as an Infant and on through the years until the time came for Him to begin His Public Life, and then she, more than anybody else, shared all His joys and sorrows. In Heaven now she is pleased with us, her children, when we show an interest in the work which her Divine Son began on earth, the work of saving souls. If we would please our dear Mother, Mary, we have only to be good and be faithful to our prayers. Whenever you want God to give you something, it is well to ask the favours through God's mother; she can get favours from her Divine Son much easier than we might get them ourselves, and if you try during May to do something every day as a tribute to Mary, you can be sure that she will obtain many blessings for you. Ask her especially to bless the priests and nuns who are working in the Home and Foreign Missions, for one of Mary's sweetest titles is "Queen of the Missions".

On the 17th of this month it will be eleven years since the "Little Flower" was canonized. During the Holy Year of 1925, Our Holy Father, Pope Pius XI, solemnly declared that Teresa Martin, the holy Carmelite Nun of Lisieux, France, was worthy of the honours given to Saints. In her short lifetime Teresa Martin worked no miracles or wrought no wonders; she was a "little" saint all unknown to the world, but she has been made known by God and given to the world to teach us all the "little way" of her life. She did ordinary things, but she always did them exceptionally well, and that is the secret of her holy life. She wants all of us to be like her in her love of God and to save our souls by paying attention to small things in our lives in order to please Him. If we ask her, she will obtain many favours—"roses" she called them—for us, and on the anniversary of her canonization it would be nice if all the Buds of her "Rose Garden" would go to Holy Communion and offer It for the intention of obtaining a "rose" for the Missions. She delights in her title of "Patroness of the Missions". On May 8th, the anniversary of her First Holy Communion, I shall give all the members of our Club a very special remembrance at Holy Mass.

Yours for a very pleasant and holy Month of Mary,

FATHER JIM.

A Prayer for the Conversion of China

O LORD JESUS CHRIST, who didst come on earth to save the souls of men, open now Thy most Sacred Heart in mercy to the people of China, who still sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, and shower Thy graces on them, that they may come to the knowledge of Thy Gospel. Bless also and protect Thy missionaries, and make their work fruitful for Thee of countless souls. —Amen.

(300 days' Indulgence)

With Ecclesiastical Approbation

In the hope that many of our members may be among the executives of Mission Units in their respective schools, I publish this month a letter received some time ago from a member of the Jesuit Order at Loyola College, Montreal. It contains a suggestion worth bringing to the attention of your Mission Executives and of your Teachers. The letter is as follows:

"Rev. and Dear Father:—

"Let us hope you will excuse my prolonged delay in writing to thank you for your splendid response to my appeal for data on your missions in China. The copies of 'China' were of immense help in presenting the work of the Sisters of the Immaculate Conception and of your missionary priests. Next year we hope to send a little spiritual assistance to others among your missionaries.

"A number of us, scholastics of the Society of Jesus, have introduced into the schools in which we teach Catechism, what we call 'Mission-Boards'. A Mission Board is simply a notice board suitably adorned with spiritual pictures and inscriptions, on which we place the name of some missionary and whatever data we have on his mission. There is also a place for marking the spiritual offerings the children may wish to give. They never mark anything unless it has already been done.

"The idea originated, so far as I know, in one of our novitiates in the United States where it was used to enliven the zeal of our own men. When we adopted this idea it was only for our own houses, but after a rather successful experiment among High School boys for several years, we are convinced it can very well be used among all classes of youth. Here we have been trying it with the preparatory school and the results have been quite satisfactory.

"In using the Mission Board in High School classes, the primary intention was not so much the arousing of a missionary spirit as the fulfilment of the obligation incumbent on any religious teacher—the spiritual formation of the class. We soon became aware that if we were to prevail on our boys to frequent the church more frequently, whether for mass, communion, visits, etc., some concrete objective must be given. All the fervid eloquence one could muster did not produce anything like a commensurate result. It was not that they were spiritually indifferent but simply they had never been in the habit of doing anything more than the essentials. If their enthusiasm and interest could be excited and something worthwhile presented for the exercise of their zeal, then we might succeed in forming habits of prayer that would be permanent because they had become habits. At this point came the very happy thought to use the Mission Board. If their admiration was aroused by the heroic lives of the missionaries, it would not be difficult to appeal to that marvelous and very real generosity present in all youth, to aid the noble missionaries by their prayers, acts of self-denial, etc.

"The experiment was astonishingly successful. Boys who had never done more than the minimum were within a few months, as a matter of course, doing what would have been formerly an unattainable maximum. After the idea that piety was something reserved for girls and 'sissies' had been broken down, they increased the number of their communions, masses, etc., acquired the habit of frequent visits to the Blessed Sacrament and of ejaculatory prayer and even of making acts of self-denial. The beauty of all this was that it was free from any trace of artificiality or self-consciousness. Being convinced that, though school boys, yet they had their own duty of aiding according to their opportunities, in the salvation of souls, they readily adopted the means offered which was within their power and which while easy was yet the most potent, i.e., the spiritual assistance of their prayers and good works. It is very important to note that while the aim was the more fundamental one of building up their spiritual life, the only aim presented to them was that of assisting in so far as they were able, men whom they had been taught to admire—the Missionaries.

"Although the results obtained more than repaid the labour involved, there is no use in hiding the fact that there is great need of patient perseverance and a bit of ingenuity in presenting the idea and keeping up their interest. Then the preparation of material takes time and care, especially when the data is limited or there is lacking that variety which is so helpful in keeping them keen. A missionary is "up" for about two weeks and there should be a change of pictures, etc., at least three times a week. We have tried to have about four pictures and accompanying articles for each change, which entails a fair amount of work. The pictures and the abundance of data contained in 'China' helped greatly."

A member has inquired whether I have medals, books, etc., of St. Therese, for sale. No, the only things Father Jim has to supply are membership certificates and prayer leaflets, both of which carry pictures of St. Therese, and these are sent free of charge to all who become members of our Rose Garden.

* * *

I think the pupils at St. Albert's School, Sudbury, should take a bow. Remember how they were mentioned in our last Rose Garden page for their generosity in ransoming pagan babies? Well, they have continued their great work, and have now paid for the ransom of a total of seven Chinese babies. If that's not doing something for the mission, well, then, I don't know what is. "Albert Joseph" and "Mary Therese" are the names chosen for the babies ransomed most recently.

Three young missionaries recently added to our ranks.

Philomena Coady, 97 Monkstown Road, St. John's Nfld., comes to us with the penname of "Rose". She is 15 years old, assures us of her daily prayers for China, and asks for a mite-box.

* * *

New Victoria, N.S.

Dear Father Jim:

My friend Lorraine Ratchford and I would like to join your club. Please send us a mitebox. Lorraine is in Grade 6, and I am in Grade 7. Lorraine's penname is "Lin"; mine is "Snowdrop". Yours truly, Ursula Carroll. Ursula's sister, Marie, ten years old, is also a new "bud", with the penname "Inky".

"I have a very good love for the Little Flower, and will pray for the China Missions every day." With a recommendation like that, nobody will have to wait long before getting their certificate of membership in our Club, and so we welcome the writer, Una C. Gorman, 41 Sullivan St. Halifax. Una is 13 years old and in Grade 7 at St. Joseph's School.

Here are some snatches of a letter from thirteen-year-old Jack Sheridan of 39 Fairholt Road S., Hamilton, Ont., as he wrote to join our Club: "I read the 'China' regularly and enjoy it very much. . . . I would like to have a mite-box, as I have already saved 22 cents for the missions. . . Aren't there some prayers the members of your club say? . . . I have a cousin studying for the Priesthood at the Grand Seminary. . . Our teacher sometimes reads us some of Father Sharkey's poems which are so nice; they are not like old Shakespeare's dry old poems which are a pain in the neck. . . I save stamps for the missions. . . I am an altar boy. . . I like hockey, baseball and football, but am not a very good player. . . I like to listen to Father Coughlin and Father Lanphier on the radio."

Jack got the mitebox, his certificate, his copy of the Prayer for the conversion of China, and also a big long letter from Father Jim.

When Mary and Emmett Francis, 12½ Spring St., Charlottetown, P.E.I., receivd their certificates they wrote back a nice letter saying how much they enjoyed being members of our club. I hope, Mary, you are fully recovered from your serious illness now.

Occasionally Father Jim gets a jolt when he receives a letter from some regular correspondent which ends with the "P.S. I didn't get my certificate yet". The jolt was particularly severe when that P.S. appeared on a letter from Irene Struthers, 118 Baldwin Avenue, Cornwall, for Irene has been writing frequently and sending donations for the missions. I guess we'll have to blame the mailman, Irene, and send another certificate.

And now at last we have the happiness to announce that our club has a Chinese member, and I would be very pleased if some members would correspond with her. The best way to introduce her is by letting you read her letter, which says:

"I wish to become a member of your Little Flower's Rose Garden. My name is Dorothy Kong. I live at 793 E. Georgia St., Vancouver, B.C. I am eleven years old. I would like a girl of my own age for a penpal. Father, may I take Bright Eyes as my penname? Will you remember me to Dr. McRae. Tell him I am the little girl who did the dancing at the Christmas concert. I tried to find out from Father Roberts something about you, but I don't think you look like he said you did. If so, I feel sorry for you."

Those of you who read the beautiful account of the Chinese Mission in Vancouver which was published in the April "China" will remember seeing Dorothy's picture with the others of her family, but I have a picture of Dorothy all by herself which I hope to publish later on. I trust you will write me again, Dorothy, and tell me how your request for penpals was answered. And will you remember me to Father Roberts?

NONSENSE

"IF YOU DON'T LAUGH AT THE JOKES OF THE AGE, THEN LAUGH AT THE AGE OF THE JOKES"

"What is the difference between electricity and lightning?" the teacher asked.

"You don't have to pay for lightning," came the prompt reply from a bright pupil.

The Young Man—"But, sir, what reason have you for objecting to having me as a son-in-law?"

The Old Man—"Young man, if I didn't object to you I'd reckon I had no reason."

"Hello, Smith, old man, haven't seen you for some time."

"Been in bed seven weeks."

"Oh, that's too bad. 'Flu, I suppose?"

"Yes, and crashed!"

Teacher—"How many fingers have you?"

Bobbie—"Ten."

Teacher—Well, if four were missing, what would you have then?"

Bobbie—"No music lessons."

"I've moved to the country where I can play my saxophone to my heart's desire."

"You mean there's no one else for mile's around."

"No, I mean my heart's desire lives next door."

Sinister-looking individual (significantly): "Is yer 'usband at 'ome, ma'am?"

Lady (resourcefully): "Well, if he's finished his revolver practice, he'll be playing in the back garden with our blood-hounds. Did you want to see him?"

Sally: "Please, ma'am, I can't find the broom."

Mrs. Shipshape: "Haven't I told you often enough to have a place for everything, and everything in its place?"

Sally: "Yes, ma'am, I did that, but I've lost the place."

Jean—"Fashions may come and go, but there's always a demand for cosmetics."

June—"Yes, women can't go wan forever."

He—"And so you think women have great strength of mind? Do you believe that any woman would do as Caesar did and refuse a crown?"

She—"I think so. Of course, she might try it on to see how it looked."

Mistress: "Where's the jelly, Bridget?"

Bridget: "Faith, missus, ye told me it was moulded, so I throwed it away."

"Is your husband a member of any secret society?"

"He thinks so, but he talks in his sleep."

"Have you a book called 'Man the Master'?"

"Fiction department on the floor above, Madam."

Two colored women were discussing present conditions. One of them remarked:

"It shuah is too bad, ain't it, dat dis heah depression had to come jes' when times is so hard."

"Georges comes from a very poor family."

"Why, they sent him to the university, didn't they?"

"Yes, that's how they got so poor."

Some noisy relatives were visiting a couple, and happened to mention their dog, a big mongrel.

"He's just like one of the family," said the pup's proud mistress.

"Which one?" asked the hostess.

"Why, Donald, it must be nearly ten years since I last met ye?"

"Aye, Sandy, 'tis a mighty long time. We must celebrate."

"Aye, let's. But ye'll remember, Donald, I paid the last time!"

"And now," said the teacher, "will anyone give me an example of an indirect tax, please?"

"The dog tax," announced a pupil.

"Why do you term that an indirect tax?"

"Because the dog doesn't pay it."

The Governor of West Virginia, while travelling through Arizona, noticed the dry, dusty appearance of the country.

Governor—"Doesn't it ever rain here?"

Native—"Rain? Rain? Why, say, pardner, there's bullfrogs here in these parts over 10 years that have not learned to swim yet."

Mrs. Smith—"What rent do you pay?"

Mrs. Jones—"I don't pay it."

Mrs. Smith—"What would it be if you did pay it?"

Mrs. Jones—"A miracle."

Suitor—"Sir, I wish to marry your daughter."

Company Promoter—"In that case I want to know something of your financial position."

Suitor—"I have enough to buy and furnish a house, sir."

Promoter—"Good! Sit down. I think I can show you a better investment for your money."

"Don't give me such wordy reports when you make them out in the future," said the railway inspector to the line overseer. "Just put down the condition of the track as you find it. Leave out everything that isn't to the point. I want a business letter, not a novel."

The overseer replied that he grasped the idea. A few days later the line was badly flooded, and the overseer wrote his report to the inspector in the new style. It read:

"Where the railway was the river is."

"Yes, lady, that parrot talks, 'e do. Says 'Yes, my dear' to everythink yer says—jest like a 'usband, lidy."

"I wonder who thought of Friday as being an unlucky lay?"

"Probably some poor fish."

"How is everything at your house?" asked the friend of the bridegroom.

"Oh, she's all right," responded the young husband happily.

Brown—"Stout people, they say, are rarely guilty of meanness or crime."

Jones—"Well, you see, it's so difficult for them to stoop to anything low!"

Auto Salesman (explaining to green customer)—"This is the radiator and this is the fan."

Lady—"Oh, then, it's an all-season car?"

Poet—"Do you think there is any chance of my getting this poem in your magazine?"

Editor—"There may be. I'm not going to live always."

Arthur—"So your new job makes you independent?"

Albert—"Absolutely. I get here any time I want before eight, and leave when I please after five."

"Aren't we fools?"

"Please speak in the singular."

"Aren't you a fool?"

Get the Habit of Helping the Missions Regularly

WE wish to remind all our readers that the financial burden of St. Francis Xavier's Seminary is becoming heavier as the number of our priests in China and students at home increases, and if we are to be able to support our growing institutions here and in China we shall need much more financial assistance than that which comes to us through day-to-day donations. We know that "times are hard" with many. We certainly are amongst the number ourselves, and so we appeal to Catholic wage-earners, young and old, to sometimes make a little sacrifice and send a gift to aid our mission work. Those who do give to the missions find joy in the giving, and are none the poorer for their sacrifices. If you have never given to the Missions, why not begin now? Giving to the Missions ought to be a habit with every Catholic family.

EVERY CATHOLIC FAMILY SHOULD SUBSCRIBE TO A MISSION MAGAZINE

Enclosed find $ .....as a subscription to "China" for ..... years.

Name ..... Name .....

Address ..... Address .....

Subscription is Fifty Cents for One Year

(If you have changed your address, please give us the OLD address as well as the NEW one)

"SELL THIS BOOK AND WE SELL THE MISSIONS"

"The Dragon at Close Range"

178 Pages 55 Photographic Illustrations

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR, POSTPAID

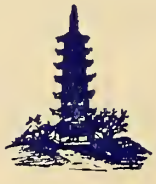
Enclosed please find $..... for ..... copies of Monsignor McGrath's book, "The Dragon at Close Range". Mail the book to

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

.....

Kindly make cheques and money orders payable to:



ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President

WRITING FROM CHINA

+

Our missionaries tell us they are absolutely "up against it" for funds to carry on their work. We have not the money to send to them, so we present their case to you. The Catholic people of Canada and Newfoundland ought not to allow their missionaries to suffer by denying them that aid they might so easily give them. May we ask you who read this to make it a matter of personal concern to contribute something right now to help our missionaries who are so sorely in need of financial assistance. Please answer their appeal to the best of your ability.

Kindly send your donations to

St. Francis Xavier Seminary

Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario

Very Rev. John E. McRae, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT. JUNE 1936

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.
2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.
3. By sending Mass Intentions to our missionaries.
4. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.
5. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Quality Printers

ADelaide 2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West - Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutator Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.
2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.
3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.
4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.
5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 24,000

Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XVII. JUNE, 1936 No. 6

ACTION IS NEEDED

SOMETHING that never fails to catch our attention is the newspaper reports of non - Catholic activities in favor of Protestant Foreign Missions, and we often wonder why it is that, as a general rule, such reports are a non-entity where Catholic Missions are concerned. Occasionally, of course, as you may notice in another place in this issue of "China", there is a small group of people who make real efforts to aid Catholic Missions, but there is yet lacking in this country that widespread knowledge and support of Mission needs which we should like to see evident. The day will surely come, we know, when this condition will be remedied, but in the meantime the work of the missionaries is being seriously handicapped because of the restricted interest and assistance given their efforts, and the individual Catholic is delaying too long the realization of his obligation to contribute according to his means towards the support of his missionary representatives in Fields Afar.

* * *

HOW YOU MAY HELP

WE do not know how useful a purpose it serves, or what effect it may have on our readers, but nevertheless we occasionally draw their attention to the astounding expenditure of money made for such things as cosmetics, candies, cigarettes, and other items that come into the category of "luxury" expenses. Our idea, of course, is to draw a parallel between the amount thus spent and the amount that is voluntarily donated to charity or to help some cause worth while. We appreciate the fact that the millions of dollars expended on personal pleasure are not altogether unnecessary, but again we throw out the suggestion to Catholic people, especially to young men and women who are earning regular salaries, that they ought to impose a "tax" on themselves for the benefit of some Catholic charity, and we will gladly supply a mite box to any who wish to make this tax a "mission tax". Now as the season for holidays approaches there will be many planning trips and summer pleasures, and we quite seriously inquire if some Catholic people could not think of the needs of the missions and apportion a small percentage of their "budgets" to help in the propagation of the Faith in China.

* * *

WE are all disposed towards the good. But it takes the inspiration of noble example, and the realization of one's own opportunity, to summon to the surface that which is finest, noblest and best within ourselves; and to impel us to make our very own the sublime lives of the great saints of God.

By virtue of the grace of Christ within your souls, you are disposed towards the most sublime course of action. You have before you the glorious example of your own Canadian missionaries, one of whom has already laid down his life for God and the souls of men. Will you not give yourselves the opportunity of acting as magnificently in your own way as they have acted in theirs, by uniting with them in their apostolic labours, through your spiritual and material aids?

* * *

SALUTE TO SCHOOLS

IN the important work entrusted to us here at China Mission Seminary, the education of young men for the missionary priesthood, we are very often encouraged by the letters that come to us from our Catholic Schools. Looking back over the period of the last school year we realize that if it were not for the assistance given us by the young people in the classrooms throughout the country we should be very much deeper "in the hole" financially. We want the zealous teachers and pupils to know how very much we appreciate all they have done for us during the past year, and to say to them that we shall continue to look to them for co-operation in educating others to mission problems and instilling the desire to make this country conscious of mission obligations.

* * *

MISSIONARY'S MOTHER DIES

ON May 6th, at Pomquet, N.S., Mrs. Peter Venadam passed to her eternal reward after a short illness. We extend to Father Arthur Venadam, of Lishui, China, her son, our sincerest sympathy on the loss of his mother. To the other sorrowing relatives, her husband, another son, two daughters, and three brothers, we also extend our sympathy, with the assurance that in the masses and prayers of our priests and students there will be a constant remembrance of the soul of this valiant mother of a missionary. A Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated at the Seminary for her eternal repose.

Subscribers, Attention!

The regular mid-Summer edition of "China" (July-August issue), will not be printed. The next publication will be for the month of September.

JOTTINGS

By

REV. GERALD DOYLE

THAT lazy feeling that took possession of me in mid-morning one day in March should have served as a warning. I had been alone at Tsingtien for two weeks, and when Father Strang arrived the evening before we had stayed up late, talking; and this day was really a thing of beauty, in contrast to the damp, cold, dismal days of the past few weeks. Standing in front of the Mission, I stretched and half yawned as I looked at the mountains across the river, green on the lower slopes, but soon turning to white as the upper half was snow-covered. Perhaps I wondered if those living up in the mountains were cold, but certainly I gave them no more than a passing thought as I decided to take things easy for the rest of the day.

I had just turned into my room when the catechist came in with a Christian from up in the mountains, beyond where the snow begins. His wife, a catechumen, was sick, and a newly arrived daughter had not been baptized; would the spiritual father come and baptize them both and recite some prayers?

The spiritual father would, but I must admit that there was a little hesitation before saying so. I told the sacristan that he was to come, too. He did not seem overjoyed at the news; he had made the journey before, and he knew its difficulty and that we would have to travel quickly in order to return before nightfall.

The entire journey was only fifteen miles, and on the level road that is just a good hike, but there is a difference when it is up and over the mountains. Leaving the Mission, we went along the road for about a mile before turning into a path that led up into the mountains. The snow-clad peaks looked beautiful, from a distance. As we went higher, parts of the path were under water where the snow had melted, and then we waded through slush. My shoes were soaking wet, but I was rather glad, as they were a little tight, and this was a good chance to have them stretched. Finally we reached the snow, and then it was just a steady climb, although at times we had to pick our steps carefully where the path had caved in or was blocked by a landslide.

Of course, the last mile seemed like three, but eventually we arrived at the little cluster of houses and entered by a gate. Here we were greeted by a few Christians and others who were just curious. I wanted to visit the sick woman at once, but first it was necessary to say a few polite phrases and then have a little lunch. Lunch over, we went into the sick-room. The woman knew sufficient doctrine to be baptized in sickness, so I solemnly baptized her, together with her baby, giving them the names Mary and Teresa.

During the ceremony almost a score of persons had crowded into the cold, drafty room. The ceremony over, the Christians remained, reciting prayers for about fifteen minutes, and then I removed my surplice and stole for the sacristan to put in the bag. Finally we took our departure, with words of gratitude and repeated admonitions to "Walk slowly" ringing in our ears; but as the afternoon was well spent, we went as quickly as possible. Although going down hill is more tiring and the muscles in the back of the legs ache, still we made better time, resting only once on the return trip. On the level road I pushed ahead and arrived at the Mission in the dusk, several minutes ahead of the sacristan, who had a sore foot and was dead tired.

I had found the little missionary journey interesting, and I also experienced a certain spiritual joy in baptizing two more. As to the merit for the day's work, that I gladly share with those who assist me by their prayers or offerings to the missions.

* * *

IF China is cold in the winter, how do the very poor keep warm during that season? This is a question I was recently asked, and with reference to this district, the answer is that they do not keep warm; they put on all the clothes they own or can borrow, sometimes seven or eight ragged coats, and shiver until the next warm day. Most of them have a small portable basket stove, which contains a few live coals and hot ashes. The beggar pictured on this page is carrying such a stove. The meaning for the Chinese word for a beggar is: "Demand rice man."

* * *

OF course all in China are not beggars, and some dress very nicely. On this page is the picture of two girls who were at the school at Lishui. I was told, by one who seemingly spoke with authority, that the traditional dress of women in China is the short coat and long loose trousers, but some years ago some adopted the foreign styles. Chinese officials frowned upon this tendency, and in order to offset it, they gave permission for Chinese

Chinese ladies dressed like this are always in style.

With his little portable stove this poor blind Chinese beggar doesn't know his picture has been taken.

women to wear the long Chinese gown which is properly the costume of the men. The gown is slit on both sides near the bottom, and hooks up on the right side. Naturally it is cut slightly different for the women, and the sleeves are shorter, being above the wrists, not reaching to the knuckles, as do those made for men. The picture shows the two costumes worn by women.

* * *

ON HEARING that I was on the staff at Tsingtien with Father Stringer and Father Strang, my brother wrote, suggesting that I change my name to "Strung". Thinking that in this way I would rhyme better with the others: String(er), Strang, Strung!

* * *

I AM GRATEFUL to all those who in any way participated in the Bridge held at Newman Hall, Toronto, in January. I have celebrated Mass for their intentions. This financial assistance arrived at a time when the work was almost at a standstill for lack of funds.

* * *

FATHER BEAL is hard at work in Sungyang, where he has Father King for a visitor. Father King is helping out there until the bandits leave Huang T'An. At Lishui, Father Leo Curtin is now well established, and for recreation has taken up the study of Chinese. Father McGettigan has now returned to Lishui after an absence on sick leave. It is reported that he is well rounded out, but that he is still able to tie his own shoe laces. The summer here will help him to reduce.

Catholic Scientist Honoured

"CHINA" offers hearty congratulations to Dr. Peter Moloney of the staff of the Connaught Laboratories, University of Toronto, on his election to Fellowship in the Royal Society of Canada. Dr. Moloney's work in biological research, particularly with regard to diphtheria, has well merited the distinction that has come to him. We are happy at the honor paid to one who is to us a neighbor, a frequent visitor, and a very generous friend of our seminary.

A HAPPY DAY

By REV. J. L. BEAL, Sungyang

A group of school children with their teacher at Sungyang.

"KU shing t'ien lai"—meaning "bitter ended comes the sweet", is a rather good Chinese expression to characterize the feelings of our young people as the Easter holidays came to a close yesterday. The boys of the Mission were kept busy for some time preceding Holy Week getting things in order around the church for the celebration of the Divine Mysteries, which culminated in the joyous festivities of Easter Sunday. The school children got the spirit, too, and were helping in the polishing and scrubbing. Holy Thursday was a long day and a hard one on little throats reciting endless prayers before the Altar of Repose. There was a fairly good attendance at the impressive ceremonies of Good Friday and Holy Saturday. The altar was beautifully decorated for the High Mass on Easter Sunday. It was the first time that many of the school children witnessed a High Mass.

The two days in the calendar following Easter are known here as "Happy Feast" days, hence there was no school. Easter Monday was occupied in the preparations for a picnic on the following day. Father King had been to Chu Z Ca at Easter to minister to the Christians there, and immediately on his return he got busy in our kitchen and made four big apple pies, which would have done credit to an expert. The cook planned a well-balanced dinner, sharks' fins being the only item omitted, due to a depleted market. To insure the complete success of the outing we hired an orchestra. I had always had misgivings about Chinese music having charms, but yesterday I was converted, and am ready to vote it amongst the world's best.

Came Tuesday. The boys and girls were dressed in their Sunday best, the boys wearing boy scout suits, while the girls wore skirts borrowed from their big sisters or mother. The arrangement of the skirts caused no little bother, I may say.

Quite a stir was caused among the shopkeepers as our procession wended its way through the east gate of Sungyang. Five li in the country is a very pretty spot on a hillside, capped by a monastery, with all the conveniences of a well-furnished home. On the payment of a little "cumshaw", the caretaker was easily persuaded to grant us the use of the monastery. Arriving at the hilltop, five large double-header firecrackers were set off, much to the delight of all. The little girls were then allowed to lay aside their long bothersome dresses and romp around gathering wild flowers in the valley and on the hillside. It was a great day for the kids, and we priests thoroughly enjoyed the outing, too, as a change from the routine of mission duties.

About 11.30 along came the orchestra. These lads evidently keep late hours, and so do not rise very early. The opening number seemed a little bit weird to me, so I asked the boy to request the leader to liven things up with a faster number. Lacking a prima donna, the first violinist had to do the imperson-

(Continued on page 91)

Side Lights From Lishui

By

REV. LEO. CURTIN

ACCORDING to those who have made a special study of the Chinese language it is interesting and fascinating, and even after only a few weeks' application, I can corroborate that statement. In the study of the Latin or Teutonic languages we have a common alphabet to guide us. Even Greek, which looks so terrible at first sight, has an alphabet that corresponds to ours, but the student of Oriental languages has no such advantage. Each character does not represent a letter, but a word, and in Chinese there are said to be, in all, about fourteen thousand characters. The task of learning so many would be a colossal, if not an impossible one, but not nearly so many are in common use. A rickshaw coolie may employ only a few hundred; two thousand are sufficient for the ordinary speech of a well-educated man, and many of our priests have mastered more than that number. The largest newspapers have only about five thousand in their fonts of type.

The Chinese language is hieroglyphic in origin, and each character originally was a picture of some concrete object, or a representation of some action or idea. In the evolution that has taken place down through the ages, many of these pictures have so changed that they are no longer recognizable, but many of them bear some resemblance to the original, if we use our imagination. In the course of this evolution during the centuries quite frequently two or more characters have been grouped to form another character, but if the meaning of the first simple character is remembered, the meaning of the more complex one is easily learned.

A few examples will clarify this. The character for "man", as it was written while the language was still in its pictorial state, did look like the head, shoulders and legs of a man, but now it is made by two strokes, joined at the top and separated at the bottom, so as to be the crude picture of a man. The character for "fish" shows the tail and tapered nose of a fish; "mountain" is made up of three perpendicular lines, with a horizontal line at the base, to represent the peaks of a mountain springing out of the earth. "Horse" is made by a number of strokes which vaguely picture the flowing mane and tail, with the four legs underneath. Of course, it takes imagination to follow the construction of these characters, but perhaps that is what makes it all so interesting. The study of the formation of the complex characters from two or more smaller ones is even more fascinating. The characters for "woman" and "son" combine to make the word "good". It is good for a child to be with his mother, and in China especially, it is good for a woman to have a son. The word for "tree" looks like the roots, trunk and branches of a tree. Two of these stand for the word "forest" or "grove" and three combine to make the adjective "dense"! The word for "child" placed under the word for "roof" is "word", not a bad combination to suggest the meaning, for most children use many words when they are under the parental roof. The character for "peace" is "woman" under "roof", that is, in the home, peace centres around the mother, who is said to be the heart of the home, as the father is said to be the head of the family. Someone has put another construction on this character: A woman safe at home is peace, but just let her outside! The word for "sun" and "moon" combine to make the word "bright". "White" and "heart" together mean "fear". We have a similar construction in English: "White-livered".

A few days after his arrival in China (last February), Father Curtin is bidding bon voyage to Father McNabb, who looks out from the window of the Shanghai-bound bus. Fr. McNabb is now on health furlough at the Seminary, and is making fairly good progress towards recovery.

* * *

ONE of the difficulties confronting a Missionary when he comes to China, or rather, it is a difficulty for those who are already here, is the selection of a suitable name. It usually resembles his own name, or at least, the first syllable of it, and should have an appropriate meaning. Father Kam's name in Chinese means "gold". Father Amyot's means "The peace". My name happens to be "Kao" and means "high". It is made up of four characters combined, a stool, a table, a ladder, and above. Don't ask me why that one was selected for me.

One feature of the Chinese language that would appeal to the average Canadian pupil is the absence of moods, cases, gender and number. For instance, the verb "to be", which has so many forms in most of the languages we have studied, has only one form in Chinese. "Shih" is "to be, am, art, is, are, were, will be, would be", and so forth, and sometimes it is omitted. Differences of number or tense are indicated from the context of the sentence or from the addition of another word. This may be seen from the formation of the plural of personal pronouns. The word for "I" or "me" is "wo", for "he, him, she, and her" it is "ta", for "you" it is "ni" (singular). The plural of these words is formed by simply adding the word "men", thus "we" is "wo-men", "they" is "ta-men, "you (plural) is "ni-men". It is well to notice in passing that the word "men" here used means "gate" or "door" when it is alone, but when used to form plurals it is represented by the character for "man" standing beside what looks like a double gate or door. This is helpful, for it is used to form other characters. With the character for "mouth" it means "ask". "Mouth at the door" is a fine representation for asking, especially in a country where there are many beggars. The same character "men" with "ear" means "hear", another appropriate construction, for one with his ear to the door usually hears a lot.

Devil processions are frequent events in Lishui. Here's a close-up of the highly-decorated impersonator of his Satanic majesty as he is carried through the streets to receive the homage of the poor, fear-worshipping pagans. To replace Satan by Jesus Christ, and to promote the worship of God through love is the task in which our Canadian missionaries are engaged and for which they ask your help.

These are but a few examples, but they are sufficient to show how logical the Chinese are in the construction of their words in terms. The same will be seen in the construction of their sentences. If they wish to say "The book on the table in the study upstairs is his", they would reverse the order to its more logical form, so that the general locale in which the book is to be found is first mentioned, that is, upstairs; this is narrowed down to a certain room, the study; finally it is located on the table. The Chinese address an envelope in a more logical way than we do. They put down first the name of the country, then the province, then the city or town, and so on down to the surname, and last of all the "Mister". One must understand the Chinese mentality when conversing with them, and that is why we sometimes hear Pidgin English used when those to whom we are speaking are not well acquainted with our language. A classical example is seen from the sentence spoken by the servant to the lady of the house: "Missie, have ask-ee big man one piece glass. Him say no have got. All-ee same, can do, go look top side," which, being interpreted, would read: "Mrs. (or Madame), I have asked the boss for a glass. He says he has none, but I may go upstairs and look for one."

* * *

THEIR logical turn of mind is evident from the manners and customs one observes during the first year in China, when the newcomer is most impressionable. The Chinese are proverbially economical, but it is logical to be economical. It is logical to waste nothing, and to live within one's means. Two months ago, as we came by motor bus from Kinhwa to Lishui, the road wound in and out along the river in view of the mountain on the opposite side. We could see what looked like terraces from the river-bank all the way up the side of the mountain, but these terraces were rice fields. Not a square foot was wasted. The same may be said of their homes. Small branches of trees, and twigs, on which we place no value, are preserved by them and used for fuel. On the river boats, where whole families eke out an existence, grass is used to fire the tiny stove, but when the rice is cooked and served, the thrifty house wife does not throw the burning embers overboard, but carefully extinguishes them in the water and uses them for the next fire.

* * *

JUST outside my window men are busy making benches for the Church. They begin with the rough logs and saw them into boards. Then the "small carpenter" takes over the work. He planes the boards, and soon the finished article appears. It takes much longer than it would take if the work were done by machinery, but what advantage is there in using labor-saving machinery where labor is so plentiful?

* * *

AN oft-quoted passage from the writings of St. Alphonsus exhorts us to pray, for if we pray we shall certainly be saved; if we do not pray, we shall certainly be lost. Chinese Christians seem to realize how reasonable and logical this statement is, for they do pray. All those connected with the Mission, the catechists, teachers, servants, and school children, and many members of the Parish assemble three times a day in the Church to chant their prayers. In the morning, before Mass, morning prayers are said in common; during Mass the prayers of Mass are said, and after Mass they remain in the Church to recite the prayers of Thanksgiving. Early in the afternoon they gather again for the recitation of the "Beads", and again in the evening for night prayers. Every Sunday the fifteen decades of the Rosary are recited, many assist at two Masses, Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament in the afternoon and prayers as usual at night. Lenten Devotions, October and May Devotions are well attended, and the Sacraments are received regularly.

Even the pagans are logical in their religious practices, according to their lights, or rather according to their darkness. They have a fairly true idea of the Evil One. They look upon him as a tyrant, and that he is to those who are still under his yoke through Original Sin, but they think that he must be placated. A pagan procession passed our gate a few days ago, and it was pitiful to see little children as well as adults bowing down in adoration before a representative of the Devil. They worship him because they fear him, and because they have never learned that there is a Power Who can conquer him. They have never heard that in the Garden of Eden God spoke to the serpent, and said: "I will put enmities between thee and the woman, and thy seed and her seed; she shall crush thy head, and thou shalt lie in wait for her heel".

IN YOUR CHARITY

please pray for the souls of

Rt. Rev. Msgr. Curran,
Sister M. Monica Purcell,
Sister M. Ambrosia Brennan,
Sister M. Berchmans McCormick,
Sister M. Margaret Woods,
Sister M. Clara O'Byrne,
Sister M. Eileen Phelps,
Sister M. Hilda Trembly,
Mrs. Peter Venadam,
Mrs. Hugh Lackie,
Mr. McNeil.

REQUIESCAT IN PACE

"FORBID THEM NOT . . ."

By REV. CRAIG STRANG
Tsingtien

IN China, as elsewhere, Catholic schools are a vital factor in the activities of the Church. It is not my purpose to discuss the "school situation" as it may affect our whole Prefecture, but I do want to talk to you about our own school and our own school kiddies right here in Tsingtien. I think you will like to hear about them, for they are an interesting little group, and they possess those qualities, in common with school children everywhere, which makes them fit to be styled "of such is the Kingdom of God". There is this big difference, though. It is not so easy to lead them to the Kingdom of God because of the circumstances in which they live and in which we work. But we try our level best, keeping in mind that loving expression which long ago delighted the hearts of other children: "Forbid then not . . ."

* * *

I DARESAY many institutions could boast of a school with kitchen attached. Here (though we do not boast of it) we have a kitchen with school attached. In fact only a thin partition divides the respective domains of the cook and the teacher. One convenient thing about it is that the pupils can with ease slip into the kitchen and secure some hot embers for their little portable stoves, and thus the heating problem is soved—and it is a real problem sometimes when the weather is not so good. When it is cold outside it is just as cold within; and when the sun sends down its burning rays their wearying effect adds to the weary of the study, and when humidity is added to the heat it dampens equally the zeal of the teacher and his books and his chalk, and the ardor of the pupils and their desks and their clothes.

"TOP HAT"

* * *

THE outside wall of our school, and the separating partition are of wood, and inside the wall is covered with paper—paper with writing on it, to wit, what it pleased the editors of newspapers two years ago to place before their public. On the front wall there is the blackboard surmounted by a crucifix and by large pictures of the Sacred Heart and the Blessed Virgin. The desks each seat two pupils, and number twenty-four, and so of the few thousand children in the city we can accommodate but half a hundred, and at these desks, in this small school, these two score and ten hear about Him, their special Friend, and they know that whomsoever else might take exception to their presence, He will always forbid them not.

* * *

IT is from the poor and the poorest of the poor that they come. The well-to-do pagans send their children to the more commodious public school, and Christians who can afford it send their children to our boarding school at Lishui, so left to us are the youngsters — from the ages of seven to sixteen—from the poor homes near our Mission. No fancy school costumes are needed, and the expense of "dressing for school" is negligible. All wear the usual coarse cotton trousers and jacket, and in most cases it would seem from the state of wear and tear that the garments betokened several previous owners. In the summer months these two garments absorb the heat from the sun and the perspiration from their wearer's heated body; in winter the two garments are multiplied two or three times in addition to a garment of cotton padding which shields them from the cold. Often the little faces and bodies of the youngsters are disfigured with sores and skin diseases; their feet, bare for nine months of the year, are as dry as parchment and besmeared with mud. But, notwithstanding, they are lovable as all children are lovable, and they are pitiable as all poor children are pitiable. In caring for them, and in helping them, we experience some of the joy of the Good Samaritan, and the happiness of St. Vincent de Paul, and, we dare to hope, some of the love that prompted Sacred lips one to utter: "Forbid them not . . ."

Father Strang takes a passenger on his trusty bike.

* * *

WHETHER it is a peculiarity of China or not I am not prepared to say, but these children do not take readily to study; there is so little encouragement in their surroundings that studies evidently are not attractive to them. Their big problem is the reading and writing of characters. They first copy their characters on transparent paper which has the model underneath. When learning to read they first learn by sound only, and the meaning may (or may not) come to them

Born in England of a Chinese father and English mother, these boys are now attending the mission school at Lishui.

later on. They will reel off, at demand, a page of characters, without knowing the meaning of any consecutive three—and they know their lesson then. The recitation has another peculiarity, and it is this: that it excels in volume and in gusto. I would not be far from the truth if I said it was a competition in shouting and lung development. You've got to get used to noise—real hearty noise—if you want to feel at home inside a Chinese school while lessons are being recited. The piercing shouts and vociferous declamations are kept up from eight in the morning till half past four in the afternoon. May God bless their voices—but not increase them.

* * *

BUT since ours is principally a religious school, first place is given to characters found in the catechism. The learning of prayers occupies an hour every day. Prayers, together with a chapter from the catechism, must be recited by the pupils and all the Christians before the late Mass on Sundays. "Tse tien ngo ten Vu cha—at heaven my class Father person—Our Father Who art in Heaven". O sacred words that give these little ones the right to so intimately call on their Creator; O blessed five characters that bring these lonely little ones to One who understands them so well as to forbid them not.

* * *

THEY have their recreations,too—as eagerly anticipated, and as merry and carefree as the Chinese translation implies: "Sa seng—scatter-heart". In the course of a school day there are five such periods of 15 minutes each, and these they fill with opportune games and sports: flying kites (paper birds), playing hop-scotch (kick stone game), football (kick ball game). And it is often amusing to watch how they mimic the actions of their elders. The funniest "take off" I have seen them make had to do with pig-killing. And by the girls, if you please. The one who played "piggy" was caught and tied to a board by the laughing butchers. A real pail was placed by her head to catch the imaginary blood when the throat was cut, which ceremony was performed with all due solemnity. The bell for roll call often saved poor "piggy" from more vigorous treatment.

* * *

WHAT, then, can we hope for from our little school? And what are our prospects? The discrepancy between the two answers is one of the reasons which prompted me to tell you about our school. We hope to have all the pupils (and their families) become Christians, but be the little ones ever so willing for baptism we cannot baptize them all, for after their few terms here they will go back to their pagan homes and do their respective tasks pagan fashion. And thus our expectations are limited. Some we can keep, some we can fully instruct and train in all the ways of adoring and honoring God, and this some we can ultimately baptize. The others who are here—and thousands who do not come near us—we must be interested in continually. We must have a school big and good enough to attract them and retain them till they have learned a good deal of Catholic doctrine. This school we HOPE to have this year—next year—or whenever we secure the wherewithal to build—as soon as the Catholics of Canada and Newfoundland come to our aid and make possible a better fulfilment of one of Christ's most endearing entreaties: "Suffer the little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not . . ."

(Continued on page 91)

"Behold, I Stand at the Door..."

THEY say that Sir Opportunity rings but once! (—Unlike the salesman, the bill-collector and those whom we shouldn't mind missing!) And, unless we are prompt to reply to his ring, he is not there when we tardily open the door.

BUT, you know, we should not delay! We should rush to bring in this opportunity. For, purely from a "selfish" viewpoint, there can be no greater investment for the future than an interest in the missions. How great we may not realize until that future!

IF we refuse—or if we lag now in "answering the bell", we shall say then to those who seek our interest now, "But, why didn't you force me to do it? You knew what it meant!" But opportunity does not force. It rings. And sometimes, it rings only once.

OUR Lord does not push His way in to share the very object of His coming upon the earth: the saving of precious souls for eternity. Notice that He "stands at the door." It is our choice. Whether we keep Him outside, or whether we open the door. But He is waiting!

—"Catholic Missions".

From Our

VANCOUVER MISSION

NOTES BY FATHER ROBERTS

His Holiness Pope Pius XI Blesses the Mission

THE solicitude of our Holy Father for the Missions is such that it has marked him out as the "Pope of the Missions", a title he truly deserves, one which will remain attached to his memory into eternity. The spread of the Faith among the pagan people seems to be the dominating influence of his pontificate. From the Vatican he looks out upon the whole world. He sees the millions of people "still involved in the darkness of idolatry". He sees them in their own land, surrounded by all the evil influences of ancient idol worship. His eyes turn towards the Christian nations, long established under the guiding influence of the shadow of the cross, where these same pagan ones are rubbing shoulders with the chosen ones of Christ, with those of the King's household.

Before this terrible scene, like a nightmare, his heart, as was the Heart of Him Whom he represents on earth, is troubed. "My heart can know no rest." A recent gesture of his love for the Missions was to bless your Mission for the Chinese. It is with real pleasure that we quote a few lines from a letter which came to us from the Apostolic Delegation by order of His Holiness:

"The Holy Father has been pleased to grant his Benediction to all the Priests, the Sisters and the Chinese Converts of the Chinese Mission in Vancouver."

Would that the spirit of the Holy Father permeated all the members of his flock! If Catholics the world over, if all the Catholics in Canada, in British Columbia, in Vancouver, looked with the eyes of our divinely appointed Pastor of Pastors, beyond the boundaries of race and color, beyond those physical appearances which aid us to distinguish the members of one race from those of another, and looked rather to that life-giving principle, that soul which is loved by its Creator with an eternal and boundless love, their hearts, like the heart of the Holy Father, would "know no rest". They would pray as he prays for the conversion of all peoples; and with what great love, with what fuller meaning would they recite the closing lines of the "Consecration of the Human Race to the Sacred Heart of Jesus":

". . . and make the earth resound from pole to pole with one cry: Praise to the Divine Heart that wrought our salvation: to It be honor and glory for ever."

The Cross Versus Buddha

WE have told you that we have only one Catholic family; and that naturally leads to the conclusion that the other members of our growing community are dwelling with pagans.

Buddha has for centuries past been a deity quite generally worshipped by the Chinese. The early emigrants of the Celestial Empire to Canada carried their household image of Buddha across the ocean with them, and when established in their new homes the little grinning god found rest in the most honorable place in the house. The ancient rites of family worship were continued and Buddha received his offering of incense daily. That was many years ago. Today the black idol is still to be found in the majority of Chinese homes here in the West; and if he is peeved at the irregularity of the oblations he receives from many of his former devotees, he is certainly a master at disguise, for the same leering grin still distorts his countenance. He may continue to hold a place of honor in the home but in many families his status has reverted from that of a household deity to an ornamental fixture. That, however, is not the case in every Chinese home. There are some where Buddha still receives worship more or less regularly, and such a condition exists even in a few of those homes where some members of the family are in regular attendance at the Mission. It is a strange sight to see in such homes the leer of Satan in one corner of the room and the sweet, love-inflamed countenance of a Sacred Heart, the Virgin Mary, or one of the Saints, gracing the opposite wall. In one home there hangs on the wall of the sitting room a large and beautiful crucifix, while in the dining room, in a prominent position, is Buddha—a Buddha which pretty regularly receives his offering of incense. It is the Cross versus Buddha, and the Cross is gaining ground.

444

ACCORDING to a recent report from the Provincial Bureau of Statistics, four hundred and forty-four Chinese died in British Columbia last year—the highest death rate recorded from among all the various nationalities within the boundaries of our province. It is not our place to discuss the causes of this high mortality, nor to suggest remedies to control it. These questions come under the jurisdiction of the Provincial Health Department. It is, however, by no means out of place to give a word of appreciation to the Reverend Sisters of St. Joseph's Oriental Hospital, Campbell Ave., for the good work which is being done by them in the interests of those Orientals who have been unfortunate enough to have contracted the dread disease of tuberculosis. Recently at the request of the City Health Department, they have begun a new endeavor in the interests of the Chinese of the city—a Chinese Health Clinic. Here medical attention and medicine are given gratis to those in need. We ask you to encourage the Sisters in this enterprise: a prayer, a letter of appreciation, a small donation to help defray the expenses of this important work, will be appreciated by them.

We have wandered a bit from the phase of the subject we intended to discuss. What greatly interests us, and what, as Catholics, should interest you, my dear readers, is this question: How many of that large number died unbaptized? We are in a position to tell you how many we Know Were Baptized. The Oriental Hospital reports seven and we have two on record, which leaves a balance of four hundred and thirty-five doubtful, perhaps not baptized at all. Does this mean much to you? It should. You have everything you need to assist you to die well. You have all the luxuries of the Faith at your command, and yet at your very doorstep, four hundred and thirty-five souls, souls as dear to God Who created them, as your own, have gone before that God without, perhaps, even the one requisite for Salvation — Baptism. And Christ died that all might have life—Eternal Life.

What Would You Have Done

I RECEIVED an invitation from one of the pagan families we have made connections with, to visit their home. Chances like this are never missed, so right on the stroke of eight-thirty of the evening appointed, I knocked on the apartment door and awaited developments. After the customary questioning the door was opened and I was ushered into the parlor amid profuse excuses for the untidiness of a truly tidy room. Whether it was the excitement due to a priest's first visit to their home, or not, still has me guessing; anyway, no one made any attempt to accept my hat; so, after holding it for a short time I placed it on the table. The lady of the house looked at her mother

"THE ANVIL OF THE CROSS"
By Rev. Hugh Sharkey
PRICE, $1.00
The Proceeds from the sale of this volume of Poems go to aid the St. Francis Xavier Chinese Catholic Mission, and the mother looked at me. A Chinese conversation ensued, after which the hostess informed me that it was very unlucky to place your hat on the table; you might get sick. If she had said that it was very much against good manners I could have agreed with her. Anyway to please them I picked up the hat and placed it on my knee. There immediately followed another exchange of looks, another hurried conversation; and then with a certain amount of tact I was led to understand that it was even more unlucky to place one's hat on one's knee. I spent a very pleasant evening with the poor hat on the place that it was made for—my head. What would you have done?
572 George St. E. - Vancouver, B.C.

MASS INTENTIONS

Mass Intentions are badly needed by our priests in China. Send your intentions to the Seminary and they will be cabled to our missionaries in Chuchow.

A HAPPY DAY

(Continued from page 85)

ating. It was funny because it was strange. Many bowls of tea were consumed during the recitation of one piece, featuring a mother's warning to her young daughter, with the father occasionally having his say on the matter. There was a tremendous strain on the vocal chords during the falsetto recitation.

At one'clock the cook announced that dinner was ready; twenty-five little ones readily responded to his call. It was the first time that the walls of this pagan monastery ever resounded to the strains of the "Regina Caeli". According to the best traditions of Han, we had "music with our meals", the members of the orchestra having had their "tiffin" earlier than we.

The afternoon session was enlivened by the dances put on by the little girls on a green sward below the hill. The singing of the children seemed more musical to me than did the renditions of the orchestra. By four o'clock some of the young ones seemed to have had enough, so we prepared to "call it a day". Assembled before the monastery gate, we set off the last of the fireworks. Firecrackers, you must know, are indispensable in any kind of a Chinese celebration.

The joyful sounds of the children's songs on the homeward march brought many interested spectators to the doors as the happy group proceeded towards the city. The boys and girls are now studying hard in school, preparing for the final examinations before the close of school. And they are all looking forward to another day's outing.

"FORBID THEM NOT"

(Continued from page 89)

WE see them here not yet beckoned. You do not see them and hence you may not be alive to the tragedy which we witness and which you can avert, and we tell you about it so that you can join us here and make it possible for us all—working together—to bring the little ones of Tsingtien to the Sacred Hands that long ago came to rest upon young heads in loving benediction. It is a work in which we ought All to share, so let us not, by any action of ours, in Christ's sacred name, forbid the children to come to Him.

FATHER RAMON SERRA RETURNS HOME

Here are two of our veteran (and our only two bearded) missionaries. At the right is Rev. Ramon Serra, and with him is Father William Amyot, of Ottawa. Father Serra left Lishui on Monday, April 13th, to return to his home in Spain for a year's holiday with his aged father. He was accompanied to Shanghai by Father Amyot.

On December 13th, 1925, the first Departure Ceremony for priests going to China from St. Francis Xavier Seminary took place at St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto. That pioneer group included three priests: Monsignor Fraser, Father Morrison, and Father Serra. They arrived in China exactly a month later, and since that time Father Serra has been zealously engaged in missionary work in Chuchow Prefecture. He has "broken ground" for the more than twenty priests who have since joined him in the mission fields, and he has been a tower of strength in helping to form new missionaries and initiate them into the strange ways of life amongst their adopted people. To Father Serra was entrusted the care of the Prefecture during the absence of the Prefect Apostolic, Monsignor McGrath, on health furlough last year. Faithfully has he toiled at his work, and it is our hope that his sojourn amongst his family and friends in his native Spain may be a very pleasant one.

AT THE CLOSE OF THE SCHOLASTIC YEAR

The eleven young men shown above have just finished their second year in the Seminary, and have successfully completed their Philosophical studies. In September, they commence their Theological course. The class has representatives from the following Dioceses: St. John's, Nfld.; Kingston, Ont.; Toronto, Ont. (4); Hamilton, Ont.; Monteal, Que.; Harbour Grace, Nfld.; Ottawa, Ont., and Halifax, N.S.

On May 19th, the Oath of Fidelity to the Missions was taken by six students completing their second year of theology, and on the following day they were ordained Clerics by His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan of Toronto. The new Clerics are: Messrs. M. Carey, D. McNeil, J. McGoey, E. Lyons, T. Morrissey, and A. Pinfold. Mr. C. Murphy was the recipient of First Minor Orders. Eleven students who have completed their third year of theology are due to be ordained Sub-deacons on June 6th, the day when Retreat concludes with summer vacation. These will be raised to the Holy Priesthood before the end of the year. Seven young priests have finished their Seminary course and await announcement of plans for their departure to China in the Fall.

WHAT SOME ARE DOING FOR THE MISSIONS

The following letter from Sydney, N.S., will prove interesting to our readers. It came from a lady who had been requested to become a promoter of a Mission Circle, but who, instead, adopted a more effective means of securing financial aid for China Mission Seminary.

"Enclosed please find the sum of $..... being the final amount from our Bridge Club for this year. I feel that the money we have forwarded will take the place of a Mission Circle fund, and I believe if you mentioned in your magazine that a Bridge Club playing in Sydney had forwarded their charity money to China Mission it might be an incentive for other groups or clubs to send a donation. We were all interested in the large Bridge Party held in Toronto and think it would be a good idea for ladies in other places to follow suit and organize something on behalf of the Missions."

* * *

Some time ago the Daughters of Isabella, at Ottawa, forwarded to us the proceeds of a Card Party held for the benefit of our missions, and we wish to express to those responsible for the affair our deepest gratitude.

* * *

Quite an interesting method of aiding the missions has been adopted by a number of Junior Clerks in a Government Office at Ottawa. A Mission mite box is available for contributions, and once a month those concerned "draw" for a name, and the one chosen is responsible for the sending of the donation to the Seminary and is styled the missionary for that particular month.

* * *

Our thanks are tendered to Mrs. Wm. Bourke, Toronto, for her generosity in donating a beautiful hand-worked Afghan to aid our seminary. Through the efforts of Mrs. McGoey a handsome sum was realized on the Afghan, and it was won by Miss Florence McCabe, Toronto.

HELPING GOD'S WORK

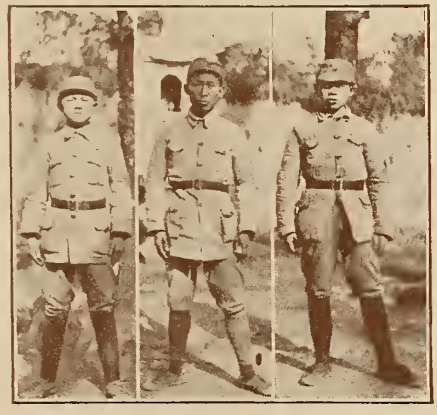
Those who readily and regularly give financial help to the Missions are none the poorer for it, but without their assistance we would be badly off. Help to swell our donation list next month.

BANDITS!

By REV. GERALD DOYLE

IT IS now near midnight on the eve of Holy Thursday, here in Tsingtien.

An hour ago all was peaceful. In the chapel upstairs preparations for the ceremonies of tomorrow had been completed, with the second chalice resting on the credence table.



Now all the sacred vessels have been placed in a battered suitcase and hidden. For the bandits are near and may attack at any moment. The city wall is in ruins in several places, and as there are no soldiers here, the bandits could enter the city without difficulty. The few police could not withstand a determined attack.

We have made our hurried preparations, put on good shoes and warm clothing, while Father Stringer has important papers in a brief case and I have the little money on hand in my pockets. Father Strang will take care of the Blessed Sacrament; so now we are quietly waiting. Occasionally a bugle blows, and a family fight of a neighbor is listened to intently, to make sure it is just a family quarrel, and then we resume our quiet waiting. A Christian will inform us if it is necessary to run. Our plan tonight is to take the road leading to Lishui, and thus go away from the bandits. Our last scare was just two nights ago, and then it was our plan to take the road for Wenchow, but the bandits have circled the town and are now on that road.

* * *

FATHER STRANG was in Lishui during the last scare, but returned here this afternoon, bringing news of bandit activities in other parts of the Prefecture. Father Boudreau having had a close call in Pi Wu Ka. His letter states: "I went to bed for a good sleep at 9 p.m. At exactly 11 p.m. the old gatekeeper rings the inside bell and calls out: 'The bandits are just four hundred paces from the mission.' On go my trousers and shoes, no sweater, coat, socks or hat, and out I go in record speed towards Chiulung. As I was going out, just at the head of the lane, fifty steps away, were bandit guards, and the road behind the Mission was guarded also. At Lung Tz Dien I could hear the bandits giving orders; they had not yet started on their rampage of the town. I reached Chiulung in record time, arriving at midnight, footsore, the road being just fairly good, and the darkness not helping matters. I woke up the Catechist, and when he came to open the gate for me he got scared stiff; he did not recognize me or my voice."

On the following day Father Boudreau returned to Pi Wu Ka, which was then in charge of the soldiers, who had come from Lishui the night before just in time to save the situation, driving the bandits out after exchanging a few shots, a couple on both sides being wounded. Earlier in the evening the bandits had dodged the soldiers on the road to Pi Wu Ka and entered the town, capturing a few rich men and holding them for ransom, but they had not finished their work when the soldiers arrived and drove them out.

Three of the Chinese soldiers from the garrison which defends the city of Lishui from bandit attacks.

* * *

THESE bandits had come from Du Kon Dow where they burnt up a highway bus, cut down telegraph poles and burnt bridges; and it was while they were so engaged that Father Venini was bicycling from Lungchuan to Lishui intending to pass through Du Kon Dow. Fortunately when about a mile away from the village a farmer shouted to him that there were Red soldiers in Du Kon Dow. Father Venini immediately hurried to the mountains and passed the night in the home of a Christian who remained on guard during the night.

The next day Father Venini continued his journey along the main road passing bridges which had been set on fire by the bandits while the country people stood around watching them burn, fearing to extinguish the fire as that would be interpreted as an act against the bandits, who probably had spies among the crowd. The poor people value their lives more than they do bridges, and the bandits do not forget.

* * *

WHILE at Pi Wu Ka the bandits killed two government road surveyors, giving as their reason that these men built roads through rice fields, ruining the fields, without giving compensation to the owners. A bus station agent on the road to Tsing Yuing was also murdered and badly mutilated by the bandits. I have not heard the reason for his death.

* * *

HOURS have passed. It is no longer the "eve of Holy Thursday", but the afternoon of that day. Thanks be to God, the bandits did not attack the city. Early this morning the sacred vessels were taken out of hiding and we had the ceremonies of Holy Thursday as scheduled, and now I can hear the Christians in the chapel above reciting their prayers while on adoration before the Repository.

Will the bandits attack tonight, or some night soon? We do not know, but we do know that their activity will hinder our work here in this district, just when we were making the Spring visitation to the outlying chapels. We still plan to visit these chapels, but it will be necessary to exercise great care, while the visitation of a few, in very dangerous locations, may have to be postponed until things are more peaceful.

NONSENSE

"IF YOU DON'T LAUGH AT THE JOKES OF THE AGE, THEN LAUGH AT THE AGE OF THE JOKES"

"Is that a momento of some kind in that locket of yours?"
"Yes, it's a lock of my husband's hair."
"But your husband is still alive."
"Yes; but his hair is all gone."

Said one golfer to another—"What's that fellow with the broken club making such a fuss about? New member, isn't he?"
"Yes. I should imagine he's swearing himself in."

"I see your little boy drive your car."
"Yes; he's still too young to be trusted as a pedestrian."

Passer-by (to angler)—"Good river for fish?"
Angler—"It must be; I can't persuade any to come out."

Young Wife—"Guess what I've cooked for your dinner."
Young Husband—"I'll try. Let me see it."

Visitor—"I'll bet you suffered real hardship to make this Arctic picture."
Star—"Yes, wearing a fur coat in Hollywood in July is torture!"

"You are accused," said the magistrate, "of hitting this Chinaman on the head with a vase. What have you to say?"
"Well, sir," said the accused, "he was threatening me in broken English, so I replied in broken china."

Gentleman—"Can you go into any business more profitable than begging?"
Beggar—"Well, sir, I'd like to open a bank, but I haven't got the tools."

Mrs. Smith—"Has your son started at his haircutting job yet, Mrs. Evans?"
Mrs. Evans—"Yes, he started yesterday, an' when he'd finished the first gennelman's head, the gennelman said, 'Good Evans!'"

"Happiness," declaimed the philosopher, "is the pursuit of something, not the catching of it."
"Have you ever," interrupted the plain citizen, "chased the last car on a rainy night?"

"Well, no one can say anything but good about her."
"No; let's talk about somebody else."

A passenger in an airplane was far up in the sky when the pilot began to laugh hysterically.
Passenger—"What's the joke?"
Pilot—"I'm thinking of what they'll say at the asylum when they find out I have escaped."

Her Partner—"If you are tired of dancing, Mrs. Newrocks, we will sit down and have a tete-a-tete."
Mrs. Newrocks—"Oh, dear me, no; after such a big supper, I really couldn't eat anything."

"You sold me a car two weeks ago."
"Yes, sir?"
"Tell me again all you said about it then. I'm getting discouraged."

Husband—"If a man steals, no matter what, he will live to regret it."
Wife (coyly)—"You used to steal kisses from me before we were married."
Husband—"Well, you heard what I said."

Policeman (to motorist)—"Why didn't you slow down? Didn't you see that notice back there, 'Slow down here?'"
Motorist—"Yes, but I thought it referred to your village."

Mrs. Guzzler—"The friend who gave me the recipe for this soup is in great trouble."
Mr. Guzzler—"Then out of respect, let's drink it in silence."

Diner (referring to raw steaks)—"I said well done, waiter, well done!"
"Waiter—"That's the first compliment we've had in a long time, sir."

Mrs. Newly-Rich—"What a horrid boarding house! It seems just like a prison."
Amicable Landlady—"Well, mum, it's all a matter of what one is used to, isn't it?"

"Did your husband threaten to strike you?"
The Wife—"Oh, no, he would not dare do that in my presence."

"You ought to lend your scooter to your little brother sometimes," said auntie, severely.
"I do, auntie," declared Freddie. "He has it up the hills and I have it down."

Hubby—"The bank has returned that cheque."
Wife—"Isn't that splendid! What can we buy with it this time?"

"Hard work never killed anybody," said the father.
"That's just the trouble, Dad," returned the son. "I want to engage in something that has the spice of danger in it."

Mrs. White—"I can't understand why you don't get on with your husband. He's all right in his way."
Mrs. Brown—"Yes; but he's always in mine."

Aviator—"Do you wanna fly?"
Gushing Young Thing—"Oh, I'd love to!"
Aviator—"I'll catch you one."

"What is your occupation?"
"Cocoanut seller."
"Have you always sold cocoanuts?"
"No. I started with monkey-nuts, and worked myself up."

"Come to the football match with me. Tell your boss your aunt is dead."
"I can't—I work for my uncle."

"Was the boss annoyed when you told him I was leaving next week?"
"Yes; he thought it was this week."

Mrs. Nexdore—"My daughter has arranged a little piece for the piano."
Old Grump—"Good! It's about time we had a little peace."

The member of the crew approached a very distressed passenger on the boat.
"Don't be downhearted, sir," he said. "Sea-sickness never killed anyone yet."
The suffering one groaned. "Don't say that," he pleaded. "It's only the hope of dying that's kept me alive so far."

Two men were talking together in a public library. One of them said: "The dime novel is gone. I wonder where it's gone to?"
The other man took a glance around at the recommended new novels and remarked: "It's gone up to $2."

Old Salt—"Once in New Zealand I was caught in a terrible earthquake."
Visitor—"Were you frightened?"
Old Salt—"Not much. I can tell you, the earth trembled more than I did!"

"Do you like codfish?"
"No, I don't like codfish, and I'm glad I don't like it, because if I did, I'd eat it, and I hate the blamed stuff."

Get the Habit of Helping the Missions Regularly

WE wish to remind all our readers that the financial burden of St. Francis Xavier's Seminary is becoming heavier as the number of our priests in China and students at home increases, and if we are to be able to support our growing institutions here and in China we shall need much more financial assistance than that which comes to us through day-to-day donations. We know that "times are hard" with many. We certainly are amongst the number ourselves, and so we appeal to Catholic wage-earners, young and old, to sometimes make a little sacrifice and send a gift to aid our mission work. Those who do give to the missions find joy in the giving, and are none the poorer for their sacrifices. If you have never given to the Missions, why not begin now? Giving to the Missions ought to be a habit with every Catholic family.

EVERY CATHOLIC FAMILY SHOULD SUBSCRIBE TO A MISSION MAGAZINE

Enclosed find $..... .....as a subscription to "China" for ..... years.

Name ..... Name .....

Address ..... Address .....

Subscription is Fifty Cents for One Year

(If you have changed your address, please give us the OLD address as well as the NEW one)

"SELL THIS BOOK AND WE SELL THE MISSIONS"

"The Dragon at Close Range"

178 Pages 55 Photographic Illustrations

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR, POSTPAID

Enclosed please find $..... for ..... copies of Monsignor McGrath's book, "The Dragon at Close Range". Mail the book to

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

.....

Kindly make cheques and money orders payable to:

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President

WRITING FROM CHINA

+

Our missionaries tell us they are absolutely "up against it" for funds to carry on their work. We have not the money to send to them, so we present their case to you. The Catholic people of Canada and Newfoundland ought not to allow their missionaries to suffer by denying them that aid they might so easily give them. May we ask you who read this to make it a matter of personal concern to contribute something right now to help our missionaries who are so sorely in need of financial assistance. Please answer their appeal to the best of your ability.

Kindly send your donations to

St. Francis Xavier Seminary

Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario

Very Rev. John E. McRae, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT. SEPTEMBER 1936

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.
2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.
3. By sending Mass Intentions to our missionaries.
4. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.
5. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Quality Printers

ADelaide 2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West - Toronto

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutator Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.
2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.
3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.
4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.
5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 24,000

Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XVII. SEPTEMBER, 1936 No. 7

A QUESTION OF GRATITUDE

TOWARDS the end of the month, on September 26th, the Church celebrates the Feast of the Canadian Martyrs. It is an occasion which should cause us to reflect on the debt we owe to those sainted missionaries who came out to our country from France and gave their lives in order that Canada might be brought to a knowledge and love of God. Today, we who enjoy, in this country, the luxuries of the Catholic Faith ought to be mindful of the fact that our Faith was brought to us at a great price, and our pride in our Holy Religion should be tempered with the remembrance that what we enjoy is the product of a great sacrifice made by young priests who answered the call to the Canadian Foreign Missions some three hundred years ago. We owe to them a debt of gratitude that can be discharged only by a lively interest in the foreign mission work of the Church. If we value the heritage of our Faith we will not remain content in its enjoyment without making some effort to share that Faith with others. Whatever we have a right to be proud of, or are compelled to be proud of, also demands our absolute and lively interest. Gratitude for the favors of the past and present should determine our policy of action for the future.

* * *

THERE was a time, not so very long past, when Canada was itself a missionary country in the strict sense of the word; when it depended on contributions of personnel and resources from other countries. But today the Church in Canada occupies a place in keeping with the prominent and honored position of Canada among the nations of the earth. The Church in Canada is established in its normal state; that is to say, it has its own hierarchy, its religious congregations of men and women, its seminaries, its schools and hospitals; in a word, it has all the evidences of a firmly-established Church. We are proud of that, and we thank God for it, but we should keep in mind a truth well-expressed by Cardinal Manning when he wrote that "the apostolic spirit is the condition of our progress, it is the proof and the measure of our Catholicity."

* * *

INTERPRETED, this means that we are not to judge the appreciation of our Faith by a mere recital of the benefits we ourselves have secured, but rather the depth of our appreciation is to be measured by the desire within us to see those benefits extended elsewhere. It is rank selfishness to keep to ourselves the enjoyment of something good. We must wish to make others participate in our blessings. The missionary spirit is the only true yardstick with which to measure our zeal for our Faith. It is so fatally easy to take all and give nothing. That was not the attitude of the Apostles and the early Christians; it was not the attitude of missionaries all down through the ages of Christianity; it was not the attitude of nations that had brought to them the Light of the Gospel. It ought not to be, nor, we think, is it, the attitude of our Canadian Catholic people when it is a question of supporting efforts that are being made to bring to distant heathen nations the same Divine favors that were brought to our shores by foreign missionaries.

FOR the past eighteen years there has been functioning an institution, national in its scope, whose purpose it is to give the Catholic people of English-speaking Canada and Newfoundland an opportunity to show their devotion to the Missions. St. Francis Xavier Seminary, at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, has the approbation of the Canadian hierarchy in its work of educating young men for the Holy Priesthood to labor in the mission-field of China. Its appeal is to every Catholic in Canada and Newfoundland to support its efforts. It is meant to be the medium through which our Catholic people can demonstrate their interest in the propagation of their Faith among pagan peoples. As such, it has the right to expect a generous measure of support. "Freely have ye received, freely give." Let it not be said of any individual that the work of God has been allowed to suffer because of his neglect. Let the remembrance of what you owe to missionaries of the past prompt you to manifest your gratitude by showing an intense practical interest in the preparation of missionaries today at St. Francis Xavier Seminary.

* * *

OUR Holy Father the Pope has told the Hierarchy, and us all, that "it requires the living conviction in every member of the Church, clergy and laity alike, that each one has an important duty to fulfil by co-operating with Us in our efforts to bring a knowledge of our holy Faith to all peoples." The near approach of the Feast of the Canadian Martyrs will give each of us an opportunity to examine how well we are fulfilling that important duty.

JOTTINGS

By
REV. GERALD DOYLE

THE LAST part of the trip to Dolu on the afternoon of Holy Saturday was along a narrow paths between water-submerged rice fields. Balanced on his shoulder pole the carrier had my Mass kit and my bed roll, which also contained personal articles including an extra pair of shoes and a sweater in case the evening turned cold; all rolled up in a heavy water-proof cover.

The little village, for which I was headed, is nestled in the Chekiang mountains and is often the subject of conversation among the priests as it boasts a very fervent group of Christians; so I was glad of the opportunity to visit it. Although it is hoped someday to build there a church, with a priest in residence, at present it is included in the Tsingtien parish and on big feast days Mass is celebrated in the little rented chapel.

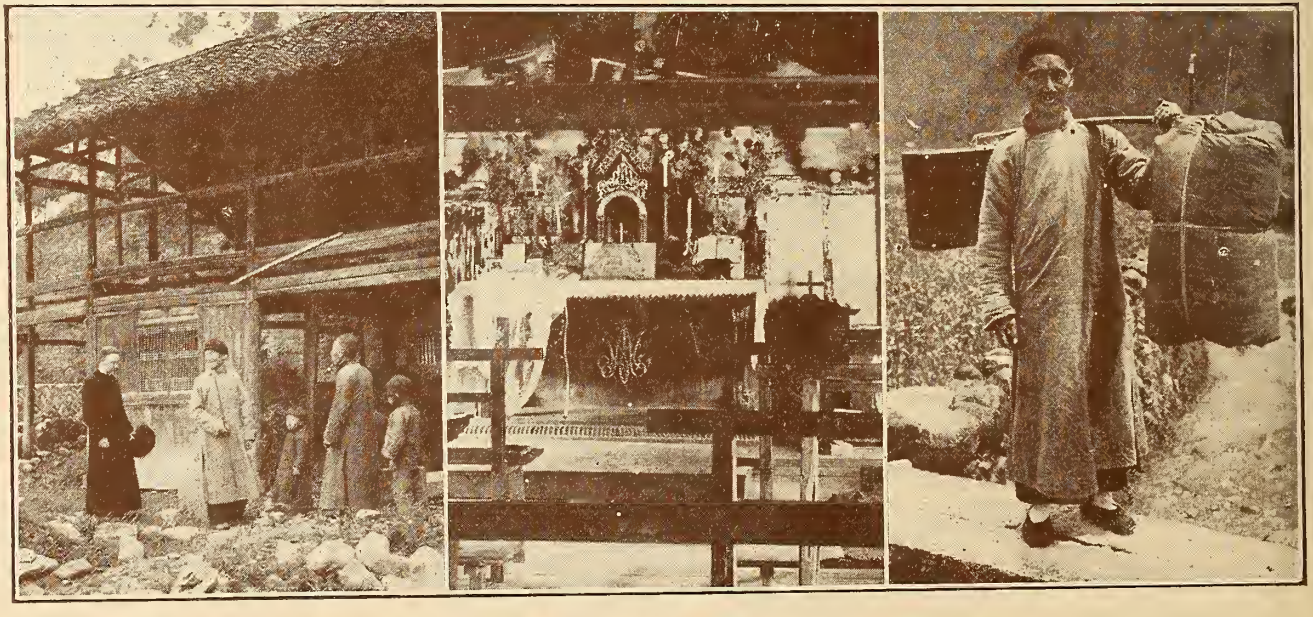
On arrival I received a real welcome and was soon at home among the simple people. They were interested in everything and enjoyed a little joke. During supper they stood around and watched the foreigner manipulate the chop-sticks.

In the evening all went to the little chapel upstairs which is fitted with a good altar, a feature which makes one forget the poorness of the rest of the room. After night prayer had been recited in common I heard the confessions of the men, then I was left alone in my room off the chapel.

I finished reciting my Office by candle light and then rolled up in my quilt on a large wooden shelf which served as a bed. Overhead was the tile roof and in the morning the light filtered through a few cracks, while the smoke which crept in the window told me that the neighbors were cooking their morning rice. From the room below came the voices of a few reciting their prayers, whether for my benefit or not I do not know.

Soon the catechist appeared with a basin of hot water and after my morning preparation I had a half hour to myself before the women came to the chapel for confessions.

At about seven thirty o'clock this Easter morn the little chapel filled to overflowing and under the direction of the catechist morning prayers and a section of the catechism was recited, followed by an instruction. Before celebrating Mass I gave a short sermon on the feast. As usual during Mass the Christians recited the prayers out loud, the men kneeling on the Epistle side and the women on the Gospel side of the chapel.



Mass and thanksgiving over I took a few pictures, had my morning rice, and under the guidance of Mr. Wong, the school teacher, visited the village, seeing the property where it is hoped to build a church someday.

The morning was nearly over before I finally broke away from their polite insistance that I stay until the next day, and with a Christian carrier I started back on my way to Tsingtien. Probably in honor of the feast the carrier wore shoes.

After walking the few miles to the road I was fortunate to catch a bus after a wait of only an hour and a half so that I arrived back in Tsingtein in good time. I was very satisfied with my visit to Dolu and one of our priests will be happy if placed in charge of that little Christian community someday.

* * *

MAKING a forced march of sixty miles in one day a Christian arrived from Huang T'An late at night in time to save Fr. Strang leaving Tsingtein in answer to a sick-call. The Huang T'An mission at present being without a priest the sacristan had arrived in Tsingtien earlier in the day with the news that a Christian woman was dying. Father Strang had packed his Mass kit intending to start early in the morning when the man arrived with the news that the woman had died. The feet of the messenger were worn like an old pair of shoes. He was given a good supper and we wished we could give him some sort of decoration for having walked sixty miles to save the priest a like journey.

FATHER DOYLE'S VISIT TO DOLU

(1) The ramshackle building now on the site where it is hoped a church will be erected some day. (2) The present "church" at Dolu, which is nothing but a rented room containing a fairly substantial altar. (3) This was a special occasion, so the carrier wore shoes. His long pipe may be seen sticking up from the bundled bedclothes he carries.

* * *

AT SUNGYANG Father Beal is busy once more although rumors of bandits forced Father Wong, his assistant, to forego a visit to one of the out-stations. Father Beal claims that eating turtle is a great aid to health and there is a standing invitation to all to visit Sungyang to sample his favorite dish.

* * *

Monsignor McGrath has recently enlarged the district under Father Bernard Boudreau's care giving him charge of the missions of Yunho and Shiht'ang. Father Joseph King, who has taken up his residence at Piwuka, will act as assistant to Father Boudreau.

* * *

Father Authur Venadam recently received the sad news of the death of his mother at Pomquet, Nova Scotia, on May 6th.

(Continued on page 109)

ON SUNDAY afternoon, June 21st, fourteen little men and women, ranging in age from five to seven years. donned mortar-boards and gowns for the first Commencement Exercises of the Chinese Catholic Mission Kindergarten School. Many friends of the Mission filled to overflowing the kindergarten school to witness what was indeed a unique ceremony, and all enjoyed very much the fine entertainment given by the graduates.

Opening the concert, which was presented on our beautiful Oriental-style stage, with their theme song "Chinatown", the children delighted all with their singing and dancing numbers. Most of the parents were in the hall, and they were justly proud of their boys and girls.

As a very distinguished and intensely interested guest at the closing exercises, we were privileged to have the Chinese Consul-General for Canada, His Excellency the Honorable Chunhow H. Pao; together with his wife and few friends. After the entertainment, he presented the children with their graduation certificates and complimented the Mission on the great work they were doing in Vancouver's Chinatown. He thanked the priests and sisters in charge, in the name of the Chinese Community.

Following the address of His Excellency, the little girl graduates were presented with flowers, by Miss Alma Savard, on behalf of the Business Women's Unit of the Catholic Women's League. This Unit of the League has adopted our little Chinese Catholic Mission, as its first charity. Father Sharkey gave the Consul, his wife and friends, a special word of greeting; he spoke of the work of the Mission and especially of the Kindergarten School; and thanked all who had in any way helped to make the Kindergarten's first Commencement Exercises such a great success.

Thus fourteen of our little men and women have left us and though we are sorry to see them go, we feel confident that they will always be our little men and women—our first little graduates.

In this picture with the pretty little graduates are Father Sharkey, Sister M. Gertrude, and Miss Violet Wong, their assistant teacher, herself a convert and a wonderful worker for the Catholic Mission.

Working Along

By

REV. DESMOND STRINGER

THIS afternoon, Father Strang and I left for the village of Du Tsi Wu to make the half-yearly visitation. We had sent our baggage ahead about half-past one and we left at four, after our tea. The road to this place —it is rather a cobblesone path— winds and worms its way up through the mountains. For the first forty-five minutes it was almost a continual climb. Although it is only the month of March the sun was quite hot—made hotter for us by heavy underwear and winter soutanes which we wore. One cannot foretell the vagaries of springtime weather in this mountain province. A roaring wind from the sea and gone is the warmth for the time being. Today, however, a fresh breeze was blowing; at times we stopped and it quickly dried the beads of perspiration that signed us as out of condition.

As we went along we noticed the beauty and fragrance of peach and cherry blossoms — a profusion of pinks and whites against the green foliage and great patches of bare sandy loam. After a while we reached a summit on which is balanced — somewhat precariously, one would think, looking up at it from the valley— a large boulder. For a few minutes we stood on it and looked far down below on Tsingtien strewn along the banks of the Chuchow River, which was rather a beautiful sight, dotted here and there by white sails. One could catch a glimpse of a new motor-road emerging from a bamboo grove and disappearing round a rocky bend. We clambered down and continued our way, and it took us through a temple which housed many gods all looking the fiercer for their new coats of paint. A young girl was there. She was preparing to go on a journey and was ascertaining a propitious day to make a start. There was much burning of joss-sticks and paper money. Somehow familiarity with such scenes has bred, not contempt, but rather a dangerous sense of futility. She stopped a moment to watch us pass. Now we were descending and I have often tried to make up my mind as to which is more wearing — going up or going down. We passed a number of kiddies, one of them just a mite carrying a bundle of brush on one end of his pole and on the other end a basket of stuffs. He made quite a picture jogging along in that easy stride all carriers learn. Then, too, we met a brother and sister whose ages I suppose were somewhere near six and seven. She was washing her hand and arms in a mud puddle while he was trying to clean some large sweet potatoes. Earthy of the earth they are and look quite healthy, too.

WE arrived and were met on the village outskirts by the Catechist who conducted us to Chapel. This is a part of a rented house — a ka-ting (public room) downstairs; and the Chapel proper and priest's room upstairs. But — grand boon — very little smoke finds its way upstairs, something which cannot be said of very many houses in China.

We had supper and found ourselves quite able to wield chop-sticks and drink Chinese wine, which is a great help in swallowing a bowl of rice. After our meal we made a quick round of the Christians to let them know we were here. Quite a crowd turned up. As usual the kiddies led the way, thus encouraging the shyer girls and women Then the men drifted in and soon everyone was talking away freely and easily, staring or taking furtive glances at us when they thought we weren't looking.

At a quarter past seven the bell announced the beginning of the Mission's first exercise. They were blessed with holy water and then listened to a sermon outlining the benefits they could reap from this visitation of the priests. A crowd of pagans came through curiosity. They are bashful at first but after a few days become more sociable. After the sermon came the night prayers. This brought the first night's activities to a close and as we were tired after our trip both of us went to bed and enjoyed one of a missioner's few real joys — a grand sleep!

Sunday morning the first Mass was at half past six for the convenience of those who had to work on Sunday. But they did not turn up! At eight o'clock the bell rang and the usual Sunday service began. I preached at this Mass on the necessity of Faith,

The largest single class we have ever had in the Seminary is this year's class of Fourth Year Theologians, shown above. The eleven young men in the picture were ordained to the Holy Priesthood in their respective Dioceses during the Summer holidays. More extended reference will be made in a later issue concerning the ordinations of these young priests. STANDING (left to right): Rev. C. Murphy (Sydney, N.S.); Rev. E. Moriarty (Hr. Grace, Nfld.); Rev. H. Steele (Dominion, N.S.); Rev. J. Kelly (Eganville, Ont.); Rev. A. MacIntosh (St. Andrew's, N.S.); Rev. K. Turner (Montreal, Que.); Rev. L. Burke (Brigus, Nfld.); KNEELING (left to right): Rev. G. Stringer (Ottawa, Ont.); Rev. J. McCann (Quyon, Que.); Rev. G. McKernan (Brantford, Ont.); Rev. A. McRae (St. Raphael's, Ontario).

but it is doubtful how much was understood. Father Strang said the Mass. Afterwards we kept the kiddies, wrote down their names and told them when to come for instructions.

AN amusing incident occurred today. One of the Christians sent us by his little son a small bowl of boiled sweet potatoes. We had just finished our meal and were unable to partake of this added nourishment. So we asked the young lad to have one; he did, and then, without further invitation devoured the lot!

As in every place so, too, here we find some Christians not practising their religion. We found one young chap in his early twenties who is of this category. He came along with that "what-do-I-care" expression written all over him. He knows nothing — just a village farmer — but filled with that dangerous knowledge born of ignorance. Perhaps before we go it may be possible to win him around. There are, too, the usual number of henpecked husbands. Having pagan wives and fearing them, they give up the practise of religion. But, I suppose people will continue to contract mixed marriages and a bird in the hand is worth a flock in the forest. Virginity is not conspicuous as a virtue of paganism —although the absence of prudery is. If it is important to have a fervent, intelligent Christian womanhood as a pillar of a living Christianity, it is essential here in China where woman fulfills her natural avocation as mistress of the home. Of all the troubles I have had to deal with among my Christians by far the biggest percentage can be laid to women. A well-instructed Christian womanhood must be the basis on which a lasting Christianity will be founded.

Sunday it rained and drizzled until well into the afternoon. When it ceased we managed to take a short stroll to breathe in the fresh clean air. Living in China does one thing for us. It gives us a keen appreciation of natural gifts. What is commonplace back at home is to us here a source of delight. There is much natural beauty, much of the gusto of little things, missed in our Western standardized modes of life. Too much artificiality. So simple a joy as that of walking is unknown to many. However, this is rather a digression. After our walk we returned and enjoyed a simple meal of rice, vegetables and wine—and these taste good After the usual evening exercises — sermon and night prayers — the crowd dispersed and we were left alone to enjoy a pipe and a chat. The room in which I am writing this is not quite the best, but is large enough for our two springless beds and a table. Just now it is 10 p.m. Fr. Strang is sleeping—the whole village is sleeping. Outside the wind is high. From a distance comes the sound of running freshets. A night for thinking — all sorts of things. The sound of the wind has a restful music all its own, a lullaby to sing us to sleep, thankful that we now have a place to lay our heads because Someone else was denied this.

Monday. Last night it turned colder and sleeted somewhat making everything damply cold. We spent the day in the usual manner until evening when one of the Christians invited us to his home to partake of a lunch. Boiled eggs in hot wine was the delicacy served to us. It isn't at best an easy dish to stomach and this afternoon it was not close to best. Then it is we see and appreciate the giver rather than the gift.

THIS evening after our dinner we had a few minutes chat with all the men Christians. They came, one by one, answered whatever they could of the questions —doctrinal—we put, listened to our words of advice and then went out to tell the others just how this spiritual father proceeds. During the course of these visits we learned the following story. Years ago Mr. .... and his wife — a catchuman — with their three children, were very fervent Christians. They would walk the arduous ten long li to Mass on most Sundays of the year. Their eldest son was a bright lad and the future for him looked very good. But without warning tragedy stalked the family circle. This lad went out one April morning to gather brush on the mountains. Time passed and he had not returned. Someone went to call him. But there was no response. The several village folk went searching for him and they found him literally frightened out of his wits. He had been attacked by the devil and the encounter had blasted his mind. This was the account on the lips of everyone. Whether it was an encounter with the devil or the result of sunstroke cannot now be ascertained. But the pagans made the most of it and kept telling the distracted father that the Christian God who was reputedly all-powerful had failed to save one of His subjects. What use to adore Him. Had not the devil clearly shown superiority over Him? The man's wife also joined in this universal condemnation. His faith in God was shaken and he began to grow less fervent in the practice of his religion Some ten years passed and a visiting missionary got him back to the Sacraments. Tonight I spoke to him and tried to encourage him to withstand the talk of pagans, to put absolute trust in God even though he could not understand why such a happening could be permitted. His other children have almost lost their faith, too, and it will be, humanly speaking, quite a task to talk down the bad effects of the occurrence.

Tuesday. Bright sunshine, blue sky, cool breezes, altogether a lovely day. The old people sitting around enjoying the warm rays of the sun. Just near me an old man and his wife. Alongside lies an enormous black pig. A few hens are picking off the swill that has hardened on his snout; a small puppy dog is busy with his fleas — everyone and everything feeling the sun's pleasing warmth. The young men have gone to the fields; while the women are drawing water — a big washing to be done after the long rainy spell when nothing could dry or be dried. In the Chapel the kiddies are looking at some large colored pictures the meaning of which is explained to them by the Catechist. Pictures are a great help in holding the attention of old and young alike — helps them to remember better the doctrine taught in these various scenes. Thus is spent the morning which began at half past five.

Wednesday's weather reminded us that it was still the month of March. Cold, foggy and rainy. It was our last full day at this Mission station and we were kept busy.

Thursday saw us both back in Tsingtien. The trip had been successful we felt. And now we are preparing to visit other stations. Do come along.

What About This BANDIT MENACE?

Is Chekiang Safe for Canadians?

By
RT. REV.
WM. C. McGRATH,
Prefect-Apostolic of Chuckow

IT WAS a lady friend in Toronto who tendered the first piece of advice. "For heaven's sake carry a gun when you get over there and be sure to get in the first shot when you meet those Chinese bandits."

Well, those Chinese bandits have been giving us a bit of trouble these days. Even now, as I am pounding out this article they are fighting with the soldiers less than 20 miles from here. We have no guns and nobody is alarmed because we are in a walled city well garrisoned with soldiers. My Newfoundland friend was more vehement. "Hang of a lot of use talking to you, I know. You will go back to China among those cut-throats. You will run the risk of being captured. And when you are they'll be calling on me and Jim here to dig down and help pay the ransom. Well, I may as well tell you now that 'twill be no use."

Warned Against Dangers

I smiled at his advice and his heartless threat, knowing that if such a dire calamity ever came to pass both he and Jim would be among the first to "dig down" to save me from a fate I so richly deserved. They'd growl a bit, of course. "Didn't we tell that blinkety blank fool that this was going to happen?"

You see, it's that way with people at home. They hate to see their friends leave for China, not necessarily because they love China the less — they don't love it very much — but because they love their friends more. They don't think much about China at all until one of those friends, "fairly sane otherwise, you know," takes "this fool notion" to convert the benighted heathen. To them China is just a remote, wild, dangerous, hopeless place where deadly epidemics vie with treacherous brigands in a relentless conspiracy against life. Of course the home newspapers don't help much. Bandits, floods, famines, disasters! Small wonder that home folk at times become pathological — almost defeatists — in their reactions toward tortured China. "You'll all be captured. Those miserable Chinese aren't worth the risk."

Nobody Captured

I said they were fighting — those bandits. Fr. Boudreau's latest letter, just in, conveys the news. He's been on the run a bit of late. "Just got back from Chiulung, to which place I had to take flight again Monday night. The soldiers and Reds had it out at a place called Tanteochu, just twelve miles from here. They fought until well on into the night. All the people here evacuated the town."

But we're not all being captured. Far from it. Not a priest or sister in our whole district has been captured since we came here, in 1925. Most of the time it is very peaceful, as it will be again when his latest scare blows over. Amazingly few missionaries, as a matter of fact, do manage to get captured in China. The number of Catholic priests in the hands of bandits right now is three, out of more than four thousand in China. Which leads to the question: "Is Chekiang safe for Canadians? What are our chances of being captured by those roving mountain bands?"

Is Chekiang Safe? Somewhat safer than Canada, judging by the statistics of the years that have slipped by since our arrival in China. In the homeland several priest friends of our have been beaten up by thugs. Others have been killed in motor accidents, hunting accidents, or drowned. We have lost but one priest during our 11 years in China, Father James McGillivray, of Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, who died of malignant malaria in August of last year. Our friends think we are in danger all the time. They do not seem to realize that death, in so many forms, is ever lurking on the highways and pleasant lakes and cool Summer resorts of Ontario and Quebec and Nova Scotia, and that hardly a mail arrives here but tells the story of its ghastly toll.

Greater Perils at Home

If you want a horrible example, take Fitzroy Harbor. Peaceful Fitzroy Harbor, a quiet Sunday afternoon, a priest seated on his verandah, at peace with the world! Till a maniac at large in a high-powered car drives up with the avowed purpose of "getting" Father Ernie Bambrick, crushes him against his own verandah and sends him to hospital for months.

There are perils aplenty on the Missions, we will agree, but China is far from having a monopoly on disease and danger. We are trained to take precautions against both, because eternal vigilance is the price of life when epidemics are raging and the thermometer hovers around a hundred and ten. Some of the precautions are not "pleasant" exactly. You might care to quaff hot tea or boiled water throughout the dog days in Chekiang, change your clothes about five times a day and live in an eternal bath of perspiration from June till September. But just try some of those cooling drinks, if you can find them, and you predispose yourself to any and all of the Summer ills that China is heir to. Drink boiled water, of course. And be sure that your mosquito net is tucked tightly around your bed at night. And take your quinine like a man, and your typhoid and cholera injections and, as you value your life, keep away from everything raw in the vegetable line.

Too Many Cold Drinks

It would be difficult to convince some of our American cousins of the wisdom of some of these precautions. But there would be fewer deaths from heat prostration in the U.S.A. if hot tea were to take the place of ice cream sodas. Don't laugh. I know it will not come to pass, such a change at home. But what would you think of the man who repeatedly kept pouring cold water on his red hot stove? In this case it is ice cold water into a red hot and long suffering human system. And the "prostrations" are not always from the heat, but from the violent reaction. No, these precautions are not very pleasant, exactly. They are well described by the unknown author of "The Call of the West".

"I am weary of curry and rice all
Commingled with highly spiced dope,
I'm weary of bathing with Lysol
And washing with carbolic soap.

I'm tired of itch skin diseases,
Mosquitoes and vermin and flies;
I'm fed up with tropical breezes
And sunshine that dazzles my eyes."

Element of Safety

And he goes on to say how much he would give to be able—
"To eat without fear of infection,
To sleep without using a net;
And throw away all my collection
Of iodine, quinine, et cet."

But unpleasant or otherwise, our very awareness of danger provides an element of safety that is too often lacking in those who flirt with death at home. Just as it is the sickly people who never die, so it is the people who are in no danger who are always getting killed. And, so far, anyway, there are no maniacs driving high powered cars over the highways of our section of Chekiang. The hunted and harried pedestrian may yet find a last stronghold on the millions of miles of cobblestone paths of China where he is in no danger of being bowled over by anything swifter or more high-powered than a three-mile-an-hour sedan-chair.

As for the actual bandit situation over here we may tell you that we are "safe enough" in the larger cities of the district, Lishui, Tsingtien, Lungchuan and Sungyang. In the thousands of little villages lost among the mountains of Chekiang there is always danger of a surprise attack as long as bands of marauders are at large. But they are not always at large. We are often free of them for years. At present, we are told, the number of so-called Red bandits is not more than 400 men. But there are not soldiers enough in China effectively to police every mountain village, so that a bandit horde would never dare come near. Especially is this the case in our district which, from end to end, consists of range after range of mountains with sufficient growth of "brush" and trees to afford an ideal hiding place. In the larger towns it is different.

Bandits Avoid Cities

Those marauders are not one bit anxious to mix it with the soldiers in open battle, much less to try to attack a walled city whose garrison outnumbers them often four or more to one. Lishui, Tsingstien, Lungchuan are all walled towns. But when danger threatens outside in the "bush" the local garrisons are reinforced to make sure that the bandits keep their distance. And while the latter are armed with revolvers and usually very short of ammunition the soldiers have the latest equipment, machine guns included, and have an unlimited supply of ammunition to draw on. In the Dublin Easter Rebellion of 1916, seven hundred Irishmen held out for weeks against 20,000 British soldiers and while our local boys lack the valor of the fighting Irish the same must be said of the marauders who roam the district and are not particularly anxious to risk their skins in pitched battle.

Strategically this small number hasn't a chance of taking a walled city.

Always "On Run"

What about the outside districts? Well, there are thousands of villages in our section of Chekiang. In how many of these villages can, say, 300 men be at once, especially as they are always "on the run" from the soldiers? And how long dare they stay in any village or small town? Just until the soldiers arrive to drive them out. It is true that in these outside places neither side is "spoiling" for a fight. The attitude of the soldiers is often that of a policeman towards a loafer on the corner. "Move on, Jack." And the bandits move on. Chinese, you know, are not fighters. In his book, "My Country and My People", Lin Yutang compares this prudence on their part to the folly of the Western people who with "gin-manufactured courage raise their heads above a trench to stop bullets for a newspaper-manufactured cause". Neither soldier nor bandit is particular anxious to die.

When the bandits are known to be in any vicinity the priests never dare go near there on any mission work. They remain at home. And so, unless they be foolhardy, there is no particular reason why they should go out of their way to deliver themselves into the hands of a prowling band who hardly dare remain a day in the same place.

Outside the bus station at Sungyang are Father Paul Wong and Father Joseph King (Newburg, Ontario). The latter sought refuge at Sungyang when forced by bandit activities to leave his Mission of Huang T'An. Father King is now with Father Boudreau at Pi-Wu-Ka.

This is about as much as we can say. We cannot assure you that there is not the remotest possibility that anyone will ever be captured. That would be overstating the case. But here that chance is a pretty slim one. When Father Boudreau had his first narrow escape it was because he waited too long in Pi-Wu. He had been warned five hours previously of the proximity of the bandits but went peacefully to bed at 9 p.m. Then, when they actually entered the village he slipped out the back door. He wasn't captured, but next time I hope he doesn't wait so long. After all, God helps those who help themselves, prudently, in this as in other matters.

But Suppose You Are Captured?

Well, suppose! It is then a question of "all is lost". Not at all. The Rev. Mr. Bosshart was released unconditionally in April of this year by the notorious Ho Lung after having been in bandit hands since 1934. The missionary must use his head and his knowledge of Chinese mentality, and the importance attached to "face" even with so-called Chinese Reds. They can be flattered and jollied along and may become either friendly or hostile, according to the tactics you employ, as the following instances will show:

The Reds entered a little village not long ago and were parading down the street. As they passed one man's house his wife became hysterical and screamed at him. "The Red bandits! The Red bandits! Flee for your life." But the husband knew he was in a tight place used his head, and, incidentally, saved it. "How dare you talk like that, you stupid old crone," he bellowed back, making sure that the soldiers heard him. "How dare you insult the honorable soldiers of the great Red Army? Go out there now and invite them in. Let our unworthy home be honored by their presence as we ask them to partake of our humble fare"

The soldiers entered, even before the terrified wife could obey her husband's command. They partook of the meal, chatting amiably with their host. Just as dinner was ended the Red leader spoke:

"How much did you pay for that wife of yours?"

"A hundred dollars," the husband replied.

"Well, here's two hundred. Go get yourself another."

He pulled his revolver and shot the wife dead. It pays to be polite over here.

Not Nice People

You see, these Reds are not nice people, exactly. To them human life is about as precious as the life of a mongrel cur. When they catch one of the unfortunate bus drivers or station masters along the road (they have captured only three to date out of hundreds) they usually cut them in three pieces, sidewise. A little while ago they sent the body of one of them back to his father, in a coffin. It was his only son and the poor old man said he wanted to get in the coffin and die with him. They hate the bus drivers and the new roads and all connected with them, because new roads mean transportation and ready movement of troops. They tell the people that they kill the road men because the latter confiscated their lands without compensation, which they did.

The Devil's Advice

The bandits who captured Father Bravo periodically consulted the devil in a pagan temple. He often heard them asking questions and heard the answers. One day, after they had performed their superstitious ceremonies and asked their question, he heard a voice saying: "Don't kill that priest, because if you do there will only be more Christians and you don't want more Christians." In this way the evil one bore witness to the fact that the blood of martyrs is the seed of Christians. Father Bravo was released, unharmed.

Then take the case of Father Bush, of Maryknoll. A friendly bandit stood by him as the soldiers were coming near the hiding place, shot the bandit leader and helped him to escape.

On the other hand, another priest who shall be unnamed, was hacked to pieces by his captors and another member of his community told me that it was the prevailing opinion that Fr. —— had been very imprudent in continually abusing the bandits. He was a bit hot-tempered, they said. Well, it doesn't pay to be hot-tempered when you are at the mercy of men who have no regard for human life.

So, speaking from the point of view of friends at home, even if one should be captured by the bandits it does not mean that all is lost. Few of us are worthy of the crown of martyrdom.

No doubt some people will feel that it would be better not to

(Continued on page 109)

One of our pioneer missionaries in the field, Father Joseph Venini of Oshawa, Ontario, as he reached our headquarters at Lishui, after the bandits made it too hot for him to remain in Lungchuan. On the way to safety at Lishui, Father Venini narrowly escaped capture by the wandering bandits. How do you like his travelling outfit?

The First Anniversary

By

Rev. Craig Strang

WITH becoming sentiments we greet each different anniversary—the joyful one of birth, the happy one of marriage, the sacred one of religious profession or priestly ordination. The years, as they roll along, measure the span of life, and bring the moment of death. In their further course, they bring anniversaries of the ending of life. And our sorrow is renewed for a departed one, for sorrow for the dead is the only sorrow from which we refuse to be divorced.

FATHER McGILLIVRAY

With grief in our hearts we commemorate a first anniversary, the passing of Father McGillivray at the Canadian Mission in Lishui, China, on August 6, 1935.

A year ago. One year ago he was busy in the active life of the apostolic ministry. For twelve months now we, his missionary companions, have tried to reconcile ourselves to his absence. In grateful memory let us think back once more to that fateful week in August of last year.

The sermon schedule for Sunday, August 4th, showed that Father McGillivray was to be the preacher. Two weeks he had passed in study for this twenty-minute discourse It dealt with the loving care of God for each one of us — the care that yet permitted bitter sorrow for His loved ones and trying hardships for His friends. It was a sermon on hope and trust in the good God. Thus were his last two weeks spent, converting this into Chinese and committing it to memory. The best place for that was on the verandah. In a rocking chair. With a fan. Preaching it to the listless birds.

On Friday — that was August 2nd — Father McGillivray met a friend from Sungyang, and a little ride into the country was suggested by way of celebration. That afternoon, he and his friend, with another priest from the Mission and the sacristan, cycled slowly to a beauty spot a mile from the city; there tea could be served, and turtle was in season. The resort was pleasant and cool; one could sit in the cave under the waterfall and sip tea in comfortable coolness But no meals were served, so the party betook itself to a city restaurant conducted by a Christian, and there they had their supper. Father McGillivray was the gracious host, and the guests toasted him and wished him many happy years.

Saturday, Father McGillivray, being chaplain at the Convent, heard confessions there in the morning, and being Bursar of the Mission attended to the daily demands of that office. Before noon he spoke of a pain in his back but attributed it to exposure during sleep on the verandah the night before. He left the dining room for bed before two o'clock he was running a temperature. The Sisters were called and administered to him. Father expressed the fear of not being able to preach next day and another priest was appointed to take his place. Saturday gone, and not so pleasantly as Friday.

SUNDAY dawns, and he cannot celebrate or even assist at Holy Mass. Signs of malaria had manifested themselves, and quinine is administered; from now on he has constant attendance all day and night. The Fathers and Sisters are praying for him. Sunday passes, a day of distress and awakening anxiety. Monday morning brings comforting reports, but at noon we hear of a relapse and begin to fear the worse. An unearthly quiet prevails, and anxiety increases. All the Christians are praying for the sick priest. Monday is going, dragging out, life is ebbing away; it is the last night, but we refuse to consider the possibility — it cannot be so quick, so sudden —

It cannot be at all. But Monday is gone, and Tuesday, August 6th comes — the day that is starting a long string of anniversaries. The sufferer senses it. In a few sentences he disposes of his worldly affairs; in a few more he sends loving messages to those at home; he makes his confession and suggests that he be annointed after night prayers, when it will least interfere with the order of the house.

But the beads of perspiration which gather on him are not only from the heat, and ere the afternoon is far spent Extreme Unction is administered. Holy Viaticum is given. We all kneel and pray. The Christians recite the Rosary in the church, and the words of their chant reach our ears: "Holy Mary, Mother of God, pray for us sinners now and at the hour of our death." Ten minutes more of Life; there seems to be no struggle to hold it longer; ten minutes more of praying and hoping, and we are bidden to recite the "De Profundis", for Father Jim's valiant life is ended and God has taken him to Himself. Tuesday is gone. August 6th, the Feast of the Transfiguration. " . . . and He took Peter and James and John to a high mountain and was transfigured before them."

ON that memorable Tuesday went the life of one whom we had learned to love. From the very first of his seminary days we were quick to recognize his sterling ability, to be edified by his solid and unpretentious piety, to be inspired by his earnestness in everything that promoted the work of saving souls, and last (dare I say not least) we were so often jovial because of his gaiety, and so often merry because of his sense of humor. His ability merited him his office as business manager of the whole Mission; his piety drew many of us to him as spiritual adviser and confessor.

We will keep ever fresh the memory of his holy life and his happy death. We attempt to honor him by writing about him on his anniversary. But no writing can every assuage the grief of our hearts when we recall the loss of our first priest companion on the missions. Father Jim, be mindful of your friends on earth from your place in the Court of the Master!

From Our VANCOUVER MISSION

NOTES BY FATHER ROBERTS

Visitors to our Catholic Chinese Mission at 572 East Georgia Street, Vancouver, B.C., have been impressed with the results already evident, and have seen for themselves how bright are the prospects of many conversions. The children especially have captured the hearts of all who meet them. During the Eucharistic Congress in June the Mission was highly honoured by a visit from their Excellencies, Archbishop Monahan of Regina and Bishop Carroll of Calgary, when the above picture was taken. The gentleman at the left is Mr. J. J. McNab of Vancouver, one of the best friends the Mission has.

Modern Mission for Chinese Children

THERE are in and around Vancouver over 20,000 Chinese, and they have taken a notable part in the celebration of the city's fiftieth birthday. The Chinese community is as old as the city itself, and has given a decidedly Oriental touch to this gateway of the Pacific. A model Chinese village has been set up in Chinatown, with Chinese houses, pagodas and a Buddhist temple with real Buddhist priests.

The beginnings of the Catholic Chinese Mission among the Chinese of Vancouver closes the golden cycle of fifty years of missionary endeavor on the part of the Catholic Church on this Pacific Coast.

The mission was founded in the fall of 1933 by Father Hugh Sharkey, who had returned from the mission field of Central China for that purpose. A member of St. Francis Xavier China Mission Institute at Scarboro Bluffs, Ont., Father Sharkey had been recalled from the Canadian Mission in China at the urgent request of His Excellency Right Reverend William Duke, Archbishop of Vancouver.

Beginnings were indeed hard, for the year that the foundation of the mission was undertaken was the worst of the depression. Yet, in the short period that has elapsed since that time, much has been accomplished. From nothing at all, there has grown up an institution in Chinatown that has passionately devoted itself to the best interests of the Chinese people. With perfect unselfishness, the priests and sisters at the mission have given, and are giving, the best that is in them for the religious, social and educational advancement of the large Chinese community. The Chinese people themselves have responded admirably and are deeply devoted to the mission and missioners.

Working with Father Sharkey is Rev. Roland Roberts, a native of Victoria, to whose zeal and hard work so much of the success of the mission is due, and three of the Grey Sisters of the Immaculate Conception from Pembroke, Ont.

A free kindergarten school for Chinese children is run by the mission at Georgia and Princess Streets. Enrolment numbers about sixty children, who are given the very best of care, instruction and moral training, and prepared for their entrance to primary grades. Visitors will tell you of the sweetness of these little Chinese children—their politeness, their neatness and their friendliness. The entertainment put on at the school by these youngsters would more than surprise anybody—for the children sing, dance, act and recite with a charm that is a mixture of the West and East.

Just recently the mission has organized a Boy Scout troop and a Girl Guide troop. Another work carried on in Chinatown that deserves special mention is that of the Sisters of the Immaculate Conception from Montreal, who are in charge of St. Joseph's Oriental Hospital on Campbell Avenue. One has only to visit the hospital and see the good sisters tending the poor Chinese and Japanese patients with the greatest of care and patience, to realize that here assuredly is the most perfect charity. Many of the persons in this hospital are tubercular, and a special section is given over to the aged and incurable. A free clinic in Chinatown is operated by this same order of sisters for the poor Chinese.

School Life Not Easy

THE school-life of the average Chinese child in this city of Vancouver is by no means one to be envied. I am pretty certain that there is no Occidental child who would wish to change places with one of them even for a day. Speaking for myself, I often thank the good God that I was not born into Chinese family. It was penance enough—and I credit myself with having been an average Canadian child—to spend from five to six hours in the class-room; and as I look back on those days, which were in truth happy days, I can see that the sentiments of my companions were not opposed to my own. Certainly to have had to spend from eight to nine hours in school every school-day, and three hours on Saturday—the school boy's recognized "day of rest"—would have been too much altogether. But to have had to continue in school until the end of June and to begin again on the first Monday of August, the hottest month of the year, instead of the day after Labor Day, and that for three hours each day except Sunday, would have caused a revolt of no small order. And yet that is the school life of the generality of the Chinese children living in this Western metropolis.

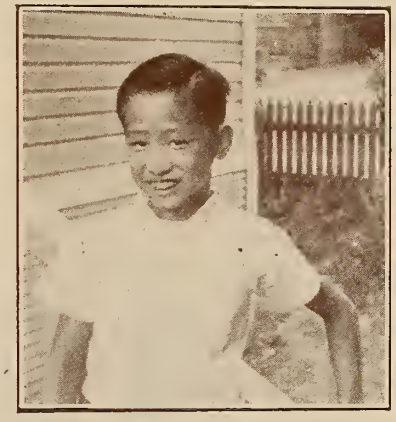
These children attend the public schools of the city, and, side by side with the children of English, Irish and Scotch parentage, follow the regular plan of studies prescribed by the Public School Board. That they are attentive in school and anxious to avail themselves of the opportunities afforded is beyond question. The examination results of these schools, as published yearly in the newspapers of the city, tell a story of hard labor plus an earnest desire to acquire knowledge —hard labor, because these children are at a distinct disadvantage; an earnest desire to acquire knowledge, for only that impulse could force them above the disadvantages which hover over them. Not the least of these disadvantages is the fact that they must attend their own Chinese school.

When the Chinese child leaves the public school at three o'clock, it is not to go home and enjoy a few hours' recreation, to play with other children in the neighborhood, or, for the more studious type, to have a few leisure hours to attend to their homework. The children of the Orient go home for a bite to eat, to glance hastily over their Chinese exercises and to start off again for school—their Chinese school. At four o'clock they are once more under the direction of a teacher, and from three to four hours they are guided through the mystic maze of their native language; they listen to the moral teachings of China's greatest moralist, Confucius; and for a while, as they turn the pages of their history books, they are lost in the confusion of dynasties which extend back to an antiquity already ancient when Moses led the Israelites out of the Land of Egypt. The gong sounds, and the children wander home to a belated supper and homework from two schools to be prepared for the following day. Saturday morning, while the rest of the school world relaxes, finds these children again at their desk in school, writing letters and compositions in Chinese characters. But, oh, the irony of it all, to be forced to return to school one whole month before their companions in the public schools! Again I breathe a prayer of thanks that I was not born of Chinese parents.

JOTTINGS

(Continued from page 101)



To Father Venadam and his relatives goes the sincere sympathy of all our priests. On the morning following her death all the priests here celebrated Mass for the repose of her soul, while Father Venadam was celebrant at a solemn High Mass for the same intention.

* * *

THE Church in China suffered a severe blow recently in the death in Scotland, where he was home on leave, of Father Andrew McArdle on May 3rd. Father McArdle, who preached our retreat in September, 1933, was a real friend of our mission. When he left China last fall he seemed in the best of health. On his way to Scotland he visited Toronto and our seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, where he endeared himself to all. Solemn High Mass was sung for the repose of his soul on May 12th. To his relatives we extend our sincere sympathy. May his soul rest in peace.

* * *

As I write this closing paragraph it is May 13th and summer has started in Chekiang. Light clothing is the order of the day and one does not venture into the sun unless wearing a sun-helmet.

WILSON LEE

The axiom so often heard: "All work and no play will make John a dull boy", does not seem to apply with much force to the Chinese children. There is ample proof of this from examination results. We who are working with the Chinese here in Vancouver can bear witness to the fact that they are generally very bright—both in their school work and in their religious studies required of them at this Mission. Bright, too, in their general disposition. I have in mind one of our own boys, Wilson Lee, who passed first and with honours in both the Public School and the Chinese School. Wilson always knows well his catechism, too. He has to be feeling pretty low not to greet you with a grin which the best Irishman in the world might be proud to possess.

BANDIT MENACE?

(Continued from page 106)

speak so plainly. If you even hint at dangers, they will say, you may deter some young men from coming to China. But aren't such young men, if any, far better deterred? We think they should know the true state of affairs before giving their lives to the work of the Missions. If they are of the type to be deterred or held back because there are bandits in China it would really be better for them to remain at home. For bandits there always have been in this country where the situation in so many places is always "hopeless but not serious" and bandits there will be in China during our stay in the Celestial Republic and long after we are dead and gone.

Work Must Go On

Meanwhile, we have our work to do and the solemn obligation of fidelity to our great missionary vocation and we must never forget that God is in China as well as at home and not a hair of our heads will be harmed against the will of Our Father in Heaven. If it be His will that we should be privileged to suffer a little more and thus come nearer to the suffering Christ then joyfully should we accept it, for we have no other will but His. But for the vast majority of us, bandits notwithstanding, missionary life will consist of the more humdrum and less melodramatic commonplaces of daily life among a peaceful people. That is God's will for the most of us and that is why we are all so happy in spite of war's alarms.

"TIME OUT!"

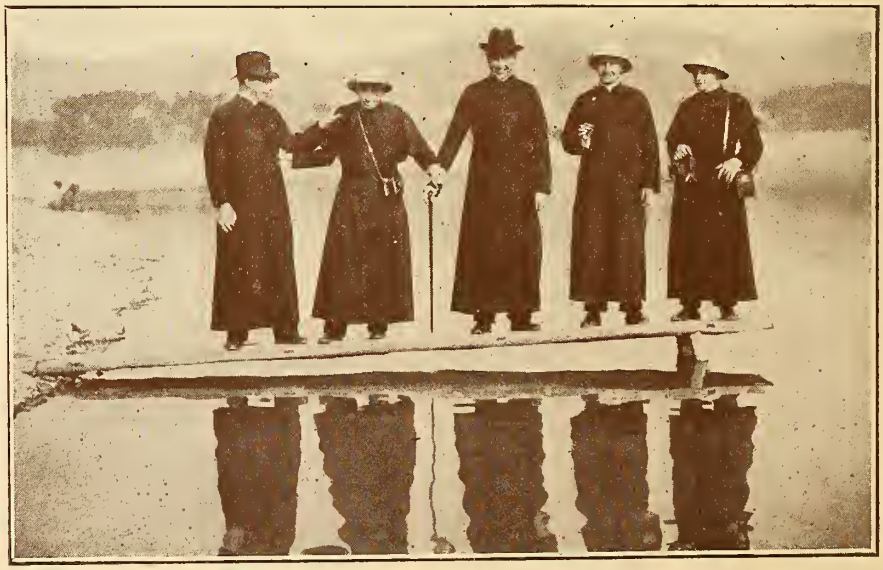
By Rev. Leo Curtin

"THE MISSIONARY in China learns how to do everything — except how to do nothing!" These words of wisdom, the fruit of a long experience in China, were written by Maryknoll's Bishop James E. Walsh in a recent article appearing in the "Ecclesiastical Review."

It is the usual thing for a young missionary, newly-arrived in the Mission field, to throw himself into his work with reckless abandon, keep hard at it all the time, and pay little attention to the effect it necessarily has on his physical well-being. To know how to relax, to relieve the tension, and get some rest for mind and body is a lesson he often fails to learn in time.

But the experience of older missionaries comes to the rescue. "Go easy, young man!" "Take a day off now and then and you can bring to your work new strength and vigor. It pays." Our Prefect-Apostolic, Monsignor McGrath, is a "convert" to the theory. It cost him many months of serious illness before he believed in the truth of it. Now he sees to it that the priests under his care use their energies judiciously. Hence the occasional "day off" is insisted on; it brings results in less sickness and fewer breakdowns due to prolonged over-exertion.

That's why I'm going to tell you about an outing we enjoyed recently as a feature of our day of leisure. Situated as we are near a river, with plenty of sampans for hire, it was not difficult for our Bursar, Father John MacDonald, to arrange for a boat to take us a few li down the river to a favorable spot. The lunches were prepared under the direction of our "Minister of the Interior", Father Venadam. The party was headed by Monsignor McGrath, and in addition to those already mentioned, included Father Hugh McGettigan, Father Aaron Gignac, Father Craig Strang (on a lucky visit from Tsingtien at the time), and yours truly. Several cameras were included in our equipment. The Editor back in Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, might be getting a report of the day's fun, and pictures are always helpful.



The sampan type of craft does not permit of much exercise inside its straw-covered roof, so Father Strang, disdaining the "passenger acommodations", sat out in the bow with the boatman, and it was not long before we spied him, minus shoes and socks, wading up to his knees in the water aiding the coolie steer the boat through the shoals. Monsignor remarked that Father Craig's Newfoundland blood got the better of him in the circumstances, and from the gleam in the speaker's eye we could easily imagine that were it not for the dignity of his position he would himself be out there, too.

THE choice of a suitable place for lunch was left to Pomquet's Father Venadam, and it was not long before he spotted a shady nook high up on the bank overlooking the river. The boat was beached, the boy was loaded up with the "eats", and we all scampered up the cliff. A meal in the open somehow seems to have a peculiar attraction, but the victuals prepared by Father Venadam would have an attraction anytime and anywhere, so our hearty efforts in disposing of the meal were a compliment to his cuisine, not to mention the tribute to our appetites.

As we returned to the Mission in the late afternoon, and "cast one longing, lingering look behind", a resolution was passed unanimously to "repeat the dose" soon. That resolution was kept in mind and a date fixed for a second day's outing, but we reckoned without the weather man on the second occasion. Father Venadam scanned the sky the night before and forecasted favorable weather. A veritable cloudburst took the place of his promised fine day. For ten continuous days the process was repeated. At night, the weather "prophet" would be encouraging us, but now we have settled down to wait for the day when he stops forecasting and admits it WILL be wet next day. Only then will it be safe to make preparations for another outing.

OUR "diversion" in these last few days has been a walk downtown. It is a period of some festival celebration by the Chinese, and the stores and streets are decorated profusely in honor of the occasion. On one of these walks Father McGettigan and I accompanied Monsignor and "ran interference" for him when he wanted to take pictures of interesting characters without their knowledge. By this time I have come to realize the untruth of the statement that all Chinese look alike. Anyhow, to judge by the stares, three "foreigners" strolling through the street must be a major curiosity for many of these people.

It has been quite interesting to watch the big parades at night which feature the celebration now in progress.

During the "Day Off", described here by Father Curtin, "Walking the plank" are Fathers John MacDonald, Hugh McGettigan, Arthur Venadam, Craig Strang and Aaron Gignac.

NONSENSE

"IF YOU DON'T LAUGH AT THE JOKES OF THE AGE, THEN LAUGH AT THE AGE OF THE JOKES"

Reporting the news that a distiller's foreman recently fell into a large barrel of whisky, a contemporary remarks that "he laughed heartily at his misadventure." In fact, he was in excellent spirits.

First Crook—"How did Bill die?"
Second Crook—"'E fell through some scaffolding."
First Crook—"Whatever was 'e doing up there?"
Second Crook—"Being 'anged."

He—"I hope my visits are not disagreeable to you."
She (politely)—"Not at all."
He—"I have sometimes thought that I worried you."
She—"Oh, no! No matter how gloomy I feel when you call, I am always happy when you go."

An aged negro saw an extraordinary looking instrument in an optician's shop. He gazed in open-mouthed wonder, and, turning to the optician, inquired:
"What is it, boss?"
"That," replied the optician, "is an ophthalmometer."
"Sho'," muttered the other, his eyes still fastened on the curious-looking thing as he backed out. "Dat's what I feared it was!"

To the consternation of the guests the vicar was very late for the ceremony.
Years afterwards he met the bridegroom, and, taking him by the hand, remarked: "Well, John, it is just ten years ago that I gave you an awful fright!"
"Yes," said John gloomily, "and I've still got her."

In a wayside sation down in Alabama an old negro shuffled to the ticket agent.
"Ah wants a ticket for Trivinia," he said.
The agent consulted the time-table and the atlas and the company records. Finally he asked, "Where is Trivinia? I can't find it."
"Why," said the negro in amazement, "dar she am, standin' right over there!"

Little Johnny aged seven, had been taken to the Zoo. He stood before the leopard's cage for a few minutes staring intently. Then, turning to his mother, he asked: "Mother, is that the dotted lion that everyone wants Dad to sign on?"

It was a London bus, and two "smart" young things were talking at the top of their voices in an affected jargon.
At last the conductor could stand it no longer. As the bus neared a stopping plae, he called out in a high-pitched voice: "Darlings, here's too, too sweet Smith Street!"
After that silence reigned!

Customer—"These shoes I bought from you are too flimsy to walk in."
Manageress — "Our establishment, madam, does not pretend to cater for pedestrians."

The teacher was examining a paper presented by a primary student.
"And where is the dot over the i, Mary?" she inquired.
"That's funny," replied the child. "I guess it must be in the pencil yet."

The Golfer (fishing for compliments)—"I suppose you think I'm a very moderate golfer?"
The Caddie—"No, mister, not yet I don't. But yer might be one later if yer improve a bit."

"A bachelor suggests that a tax on perambulators would be a good idea."
But the babies would be up in arms over that.

"Lady," asked the policeman who had motioned her to stop, "how long do you expect to be out?"
"What do you mean by that question?" she demanded, indignantly.
"Well," he replied, sarcastically, "there are a couple of thousand other motorists who would like to use this street after you get through with it."

Film Director — "In this part you have to do a number of funny falls. How are you on falls?"
Applicant (confidently) — "I rank next to Niagara."

Customer—"Will the spaghetti I ordered be long?"
Waitress—"We never measure it, sir."

Nature Teacher—"When do leaves begin to turn?"
Willie—"The day before examination."

"Mummy, isn't it wrong to strike anyone smaller than yourself?"
"Yes, dear."
"Would you mind telling teacher? I don't think she knows."

"Where's your pencil, Alf?"
"Ain't got one, teacher."
"How many times have I told you not to say that? Listen: I haven't got one, you haven't got one, we haven't got one——"
"Well, who has all the pencils?"

"Who was the first man?" inquired the Sunday School teacher.
"George Washington," promptly announced a boy on the front seat.
"Oh, no," corrected the instructor.
"I s'pose it was Adam," muttered the boy, "if you're counting those foreigners."

First Business Man—"Was the conference a success? What did you decide?"
Second Business Man — "It was great. We decided to have another conference next week."

"I am afraid our new housemaid is dishonest," said the wife.
"Come, my dear," answered the husband. "You should never judge by appearances."
"I don't," was the retort. "I judge by disappearances."

Charwoman—"What's the matter with your husban', Mrs. Miggles. I saw 'im going to the doctor's last night."
Mrs. Miggles—"The veins in 'is legs are too near each other or something."
Charwoman—"I've never 'eard of that before."
Mrs. Miggles—"Well, dearie, the doctor said as 'ow 'e got very close veins."

When Mose was told that poor Rastus had been shot dead by Judge Hicks while he was stealing the judge's chickens, he merely replied: "Oh, well, it might have been worse."
"How could it have been worse?" indignantly asked the informant. "Poor Rastus dead! De jedge just nachully blow de head right off of him. What could be worse than dat?"
"It might have been worse," repeated Mose, "if de jedge fire off de gun de night before, he might have blow de head off of me!"

He—"You were no spring chicken when I married you."
She—"No, I was a little goose."

Teacher—"As we walk outdoors on a cold winter's morning and look about us, what do we see on every hand?"
Pupil—"Gloves."

Please Do Not Read This

and then forget what you've read.

If you forget, then both of us are the losers. You will lose the opportunity of doing a good deed, and a meritorious one. We will lose all that it means to have a sympathetic, helpful friend. You see, dear Reader, China Mission Seminary this month begins another year of effort to educate young men for the Holy Priesthood. We shall have fifty students to care for, and it is going to cost many thousands of dollars to run our Seminary which provides a home and a training for these future missionaries to China. We have nobody to whom we can turn for a helping hand—except YOU. Now, if you refuse us, our work will suffer, so won't you please keep in mind our request and send us a contribution? Be it ever so small it will aid in the grand work of supporting and educating boys for the missionary priesthood. We ask only a little from each of our readers. Are you going to refuse us? It is for God's work we beg. God will give you your reward.

+

Kindly send your donations to

St. Francis Xavier Seminary

Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario

Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President

CHINA

SCARBORO BLUFFS. ONT. OCTOBER 1936

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutator Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.

2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.

3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.

4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.

5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

Help the Missions

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.

2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.

3. By sending Mass Intentions to our missionaries.

4. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year — a life subscription costs ten dollars.

5. By making a Catholic Will— our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Quality Printers

ADelaide 2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press

263 Adelaide St. West - Toronto

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 24,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XVII. OCTOBER, 1936 No. 8

OUR SYMPATHY

DURING the Summer months four of our missionary priests have suffered bereavements in their families. Father Lawrence Beal, of Sungyang, lost his father and his brother, Brother Leo of the Cistersian Order; Father Desmond Stringer, Tsingtien, suffered the loss of his father at Ottawa; Father Patrick Moore's father died at Ingersoll, Ont., and Father Lorne McFarland's mother passed away at Toronto. Fathers Moore and McFarland, whose departure for China was deferred last year, had the privilege of assisting at the bedsides of their dying parents. These two priests leave for China this month.

To the bereaved missionaries, their families, and relatives, we offer our sincere sympathy, and from our readers we beg a prayer for the repose of the souls of the deceased.

ANOTHER YEAR BEGINS

DESERTED, save for our hard-working Bursar, during the Summer vacation months, China Mission Seminary resumed its wonted measure of activity with the return of the students on September 14th. With the first week devoted to the opening Retreat, Monday, September 21st, saw the familiar trek begin as the students moved off to class. We are happy to report that again this year the seminary has a capacity enrolment, with fifty young men from various parts of Canada and Newfoundland prosecuting their philosophical and theological studies for the Holy Priesthood. Eleven of these fifty are making their final year of studies as student-priests, having been raised to the Office of Priesthood in their respective Dioceses during the Summer holidays. We'll let you see their pictures next month.

CHUCHOW

REPORTS from our Prefecture in Chuchow indicate that recently things have been going along fairly quietly in that district, and the bandit menace which gave cause for concern a few months ago has now abated. Save for a few cases of minor illnesses, the general health of our priests in China has remained good during the past few months. The weather in Chuchow was fortunately not severely warm during the Summer, but yet sufficiently dangerous to curtail the travelling activities of our men. Monsignor McGrath, with several of our missionaries, availed themselves of the lull in activities to seek a respite from their labours in short holidays spent at nearby missions. All our priests assembled at headquarters in Lishui towards the end of September, to participate in the Annual Retreat, preached this year by a Jesuit Father from Shanghai. It is expected that at the close of the Retreat some new parish assignments will be announced, news of which we hope to have for our next issue.

FATHER SERRA

ANXIETY is being felt for the safety of our Father Ramon Serra, veteran missionary of our Prefecture, who returned to his home in Spain two months before the outbreak of the civil war in that country. Since the start of hostilities no word has come from Father Serra. His home is in the vicinity of Barcelona, centre of some of the most violent outrages against the clergy in the recent unhappy incidents of the Spanish conflict. It is our earnest hope that Father Serra has escaped unharmed.

SUBSCRIPTION CAMPAIGN

THE Summer vacation period was usefully employed by most of our seminarians, and by some from St. Augustine's Seminary, in campaigning for subscriptions for "CHINA". We wish to extend our thanks to the many friends who received them so cordially, and particularly do we express our gratitude to the Pastors who made the work of our campaigners so much more easy and profitable by kindly references from their pulpits. It is co-operation of that kind that we value exceedingly and which does more than anything else to instil into our Catholic people a knowledge of, and love for, the work of Catholic Missions. We add that if you were not called on for your subscription this Summer, we shall be glad to receive the renewal of same through the mail.

MISSION SUNDAY

THE second last Sunday in October has been designated by the Sacred Congregation of Rites as a day of special prayer and effort throughout the whole Church every year in behalf of Catholic Missions. Our Holy Father the Pope desires that this Mission Sunday be observed in every diocese and parish in the world in order that Catholics everywhere may be brought to understand better the work which missionaries are striving to accomplish in the midst of privations and hardships. It is a day of prayer and of action, of propaganda and organization, set aside to awaken the dull spirits of many Catholics and to render more alive and active the enthusiasm of those who realize that there is no apostolate more beautiful or beneficient than that which is exercised in favour of missionary work.

CHECKING OFF THE SECOND YEAR

By REV. CRAIG STRANG

SHOULD you read through this attempt to describe what two years in China does to one, I beg of you not to get confused and take it for an autobiography covering two decades. You see, two years can very easily make one a little arrogant and I fear that that arrogance may appear in the following paragraphs and give the erroneous impression that when the two years are up there is not much more to know about China. It is fitting therefore to preface this letter with the warning that the scope of it really is limited to one fifth of one decade and that any conclusions drawn are private ones and therefore not authoritative.

Two years in "The Middle Kingdom" — in the Orient — in Asia — call it by any name, imposing or otherwise, yet it is a little something to think about and offers some little things to write about. The novelty that made everything so varied during the first year has faded away, and the guest-like atmosphere that surrounded our first ten months has mellowed into the more familiar one of being one of the family and consequently of doing what is expected of the family. We even play the part of the host to the new comers and point out with patronizing wisdom things that a short time ago presented mysteries to us. But the second year has more than just familiarity to recommend it —it has several special features. Each year in succession, I am told, unfolds its noteworthy contribution of strange or new phenomena, and during this year the superficial ideas and hasty judgments of the first year evolve into truer and more lasting ones — though not yet by any means solidly mature ones.

THE first and main change is the graduation from uninterrupted study of the language, to which the first year was exclusively devoted — a graduation into the active part of missionary life in the form of an appointment to a parish. The work is not unfamiliar in as much as we were watching it for a year, but the experience is entirely new. Immediately came the constant need of using all the Chinese we picked up from our books and of adding to our vocabulary, with the additional handicap of acquiring a new dialect in the different parish. People, we thought, did not have a high I.Q. if they did not understand our efforts at communication (and how weak sometimes these efforts can be); and if we did not understand them when they spoke to us we had plenty of excuses with which to console ourselves. The look on the faces of some of our listeners was not unlike the "bovine stare" that school-teacher often faces in class, and especially at mathematics. It was not so embarrassing doing our bits of business about the place; the real tests came in preparing and delivering sermons, and anxious were the first moments in the confessional — and even yet we are not without trepidation there. And yet when we spoke about our sermons or mentioned we were hearing confessions we did so in a nonchalant manner as if we were above fears of not understanding, and as if we were very adept in our choice of phrases in our sermons. For example, I would say that I explained to the congregation (as I did this morning — I write on August fifteenth) that the Blessed Virgin was assumed or taken up into heaven, and did not ascend as our Lord did, (the Chinese phrase, "mounted to heaven" is applied to both), whereas I cannot really put that sentence into good Chinese. You see what I mean — we say that we told them a certain little thing, but it took no end of circumlocution for us to put our point over. This attitude found its way into a lot of things, and even into our writing for "China" — it is what I warned against in the first paragraph.

THE making of the missions in the autumn and in the spring was about the most notable innovation in our new life—it is the part of missionary life most known to those at home, for it constitutes the most important phase of the work. I was very fortunate in being introduced to this by visiting the seven chapels with my pastor, Father Stringer, last fall, and of since calling upon other villages where isolated Christian families have settled, and again in the past spring, both with him and by myself. Accounts of them or of similar expeditions have appeared in these columns from time to time. They provide an introduction to almost every phase of mission life — but just an introduction. As you read this we will be once more on the road, only this time it will be more familiar to me and so I will be more at ease than ever about it.

The time spent in the city where the residence is (Tsingtien) was employed in rounding up the nearby Christians, preparing sermons, and studying the dialect, and to that is added the care of the school—also recently mentioned in "China". And now our second summer is drawing to a close (it is nice to count the years by the summers, isn't it? — just like the poets do) — the summer is the time of necessarily reduced activity when the heat and the humidity render travelling precarious to the health. However, we rounded up many catechumens and some new converts and gave instructions every evening after supper — ten of the catechumens were found ready for baptism for to-day's feast and the others we hope to have ready in early September.

Father Strang, with the tailor who made his new soutane.

MAY I add a personal note of appreciation to my many friends who have remembered me no less during the second year than during the first. The mere fact of being remembered serves as a stimulus to greater efforts and the spiritual and material help that they have offered have made possible the fruitful work which depends upon them just as much as upon us. The appeals that we make from time to time are based upon dire needs . . . needs that Christ has left to every Christian to supply; every year has its peculiar needs, so every year we have our peculiar appeals; so please, every year, do your part in supplying the means, for if the means do not come, why then, some year we will have a very sorry report to make, one that will fill us with regret and heap further difficulties upon the none too easy task we already have.

"Although the Chinese do not bother about stove pipe (I will write about that some time) here at the Mission, we prefer that the smoke go outside. But it is not just a matter of sending the boy out to buy pipes; it is necessary to have the tinsmith come and make them on the premises. Sheets of metal are purchased and with the minimum number of tools he makes the pipes to order, and he does a good job, too. In the picture above you see him putting on the finishing touches".

—Father Doyle's "JOTTINGS"

JOTTINGS

By
REV. GERALD DOYLE

EVEN in China Dominion Day has a special significance for Father Beal who was visiting Lishui at that time. He felt that it should be celebrated properly, so we were not surprised when the boy returned to the Mission with a good supply of firecrackers. Darkness had fallen, night prayers were over when the neighborhood was either delighted or dismayed by the fusilade. Soon a crowd gathered in the street, while the next day we heard that five gamblers, on hearing the noise, jumped from their places with cries of "Bandits!" Their lamp was upset and the pieces scattered.

* * *

TOWARDS the end of July the head official in Lishui decided to send twenty rifles to the town of Pi Wu Ka, thirteen miles away. Evidently the spies were active as the bus carrying the rifles was stopped by bandits only three miles from Lishui and the rifles confiscated. A few soldiers in the bus showed fight. One of them was killed and another wounded. The bandits got away safely.

* * *

A few nights ago the sky was reddened by the flames of a large fire which swept away a block of houses and stores. Fortunately there was no big wind or half of the city might have been levelled by the flames. Fire-fighting here is usually restricted to saving nearby houses as once the fire has a good start it is almost impossible to save the building. Mud walls which enclose many properties often stop the fire from spreading, but when there is a wind flying sparks and flames quickly ignite the nearby houses. This fire was the largest in Lishui since our priests have been here.

On the next morning the mayor sent word that those rebuilding must build several feet back from the old street line, thus widening the street. There will be no property compensation.

* * *

WHILE the Lishui church bell by no means compares with "Big Ben", nevertheless it is not hard to listen to and its ringing a few minutes ago reminded me of another bell, little more than a large hand-bell, at the chapel in Du Tsz Wu near Tsingtien. I visited that chapel a few months ago and while making the trip from Tsingtien I walked slowly behind my pagan carrier over mountains and through valleys. I had a feeling of being entirely alone. Pagan China seemed to encompass me, pressing; when suddenly over the fields came the sound of the little bell ringing the Angelus. I was thrilled. No longer did I feel alone. It is wonderful to be a Catholic. Even in pagan China.

* * *

FATHER JOSEPH KING was a recent visitor to Lishui, coming for a few days' rest before returning to Pi Wu Ka where he is doing real missionary work with Father Bernard Boudreau.

* * *

IF YOU visited our dining room these days you would probably be surprised to see the legs of the table standing in tins of water. The reason is to keep the ants from climbing onto the table. Even so, a few manage to reach the top.

* * *

YOU will be reading this in October, the month in which the new missionaries usually leave Canada for China. We will be looking forward to their arrival which will be a red-letter day here in Lishui. We will give them a real welcome and soon they will consider China a second home. At least I hope so.

A farmer had brought his few sheaves of wheat into the city and was drying it in the street in front of the mission. A chance for a picture, but a picture is more interesting if a familiar figure is in it, so I asked Father Leo Curtin to oblige. "I suppose you are asking me to examine the wheat just because I was born on a farm," Father Curtin pretended to grumble as he cheerfully posed for the picture. In the background may be seen the well from which the Mission water supply is drawn.

New Mission Established for "Down the River"

By REV. ARTHUR VENADAM

ALMOST inseparably connected with the mission work here is the making of long journeys to distant villages and hamlets where a community of Christians has been established. Some of the journeys take one or two whole days, and as the missionary travels he passes innumerable towns and settlements which are wholly pagan, and if the inhabitants know about the Catholic Church they show very little interest in its claims. On the whole "mission making" means absence and almost complete isolation from headquarters until the return is made. Why it is the Holy Ghost picks such scattered spots to work His designs is not ours to ask, but the fact remains that right here near Lishui there are lots of little towns that surely know about us but have so far discouraged all our advances, and yet, away up in the country there are communities that send regularly for the priest and regard his visits as the outstanding events of the year.

Now about two miles down the river from here is a little town or suburb called "Yuo Wu" and it means "Down the River". In this town there are several Christian families, and in past years they have been coming up the river to Mass on Sundays—and a nice walk it is. Immediately outside the town the cobble-stone path passes through a shaded grove of bamboo trees, then winds along the fringes of the rice paddies and by the edges of stagnant fishing pools till it reaches the city gate which is on the same street as the Church, although still half a mile away from it. The same path is worn smooth by the feet of many others besides the few Christians—they come and do their buying and selling and plod home again, and if they come to the Church it is only for medicine and absolutely nothing else.

IT WAS first mentioned casually in conversation, and then it became the topic of after-dinner chats, and soon plans were suggested, and finally it was decided to open a mission in this little town of "Down the River". Came visits to "Yuo Wu"—very convenient and cheap enough by rickshaw. On these visits we heard of several apostates who had given up the Sunday walk to Lishui, and how their unbaptized children were attending the community school, and how many others had heard of us through the visits of the Sisters to their sick—and how it was something like a floating population, for as soon as anyone did well there he moved himself and his chattels to Lishui. After a while we heard of a house that was for rent—a fine house in the midst of a fruit orchard and surrounded by a wall. Then our decision to open a mission there was confirmed. There were negotiations for the renting and preparations to convert the whole second storey into a chapel and to fix up a living room for the catechist and a reception room for the guests. The catechist was selected—a former sacristan at Lishui. The day was chosen—Trinity Sunday—and the mission was placed under the patronage of this sacred mystery.

Father Venadam, of Pomquet, N.S., in a happy mood as he is about to sample a pie of his own making. His ability in the kitchen puts smiles of appreciation on the faces of all our Lishui missionaries.

Most of this business was placed in my hands and kept me coming and going for two weeks till everything was ready for the formal opening and the first Mass on the morning of Trinity Sunday. The women living nearby, Christians and pagans, helped in the sweeping and cleaning; an altar was brought down and erected, and Father Strang and I together put the cross on it; benches were made and placed in position; a bell was blessed and suspended; holy pictures and scrolls with doctrine written on them were framed and hung up; an organ was carried down and placed in the chapel, notices of the opening with open invitation were stuck on the poles and houses and walls nearby; an orchestra was hired and bunting with Chinese lamps gave the scene quite a gala appearance. If our attempt was not blessed with success it would not be from want of enticement or lack of knowledge.

THE outlined program of the day differed but little from the regular Sunday order at the Mission. Father Morrison was to say the Mass, preceded by the usual Sunday prayers and sermon, with another sermon before the recitation of the rosary in the afternoon; obviously, there could be no Benediction here yet. Mr. Wong, the head catechist, had prepared a special discourse for the occasion; the choir boys and girls had rehearsed the hymns they had sung at Pentecost; the boys had their soutanes and collars and red ties newly pressed, and the girls' veils and crowns of flowers freshly arrayed. Immediately after breakfast they set out for "Down the River" in high glee, for the day promised a bit of festivity as well as duty, and our Chinese friends go for celebrations of all kinds in a big way.

The orchestra greeted us at the entrance with blasts from their trumpets and clamourous bangs from their cymbals. Already a crowd had gathered, satisfying their curiosity and wondering very much what it was all about. Many of them had just dropped in on their way to Lishui, for this was market day also, and even celebrations must take second place on these days. The sacristans prepared the altar and I devoted the next half hour to tying the red bows on the choir boys, while Sisters Daniel and Catherine arranged the veils and flowers on the girls. In the meantime the half-hour-bell had rung and many had already gathered in the chapel waiting for the opening. Father Doyle had arrived and took some pictures. The children took their places and the other Christians acted as most solicitous hosts for their pagan friends.

THE altar was erected against the back wall of the house, and so the congregation sat with their backs to the main gate, which therefore provided no distraction for them during the ceremonies, for there was no front wall to the upstairs—a feature appreciated in summer when breezes are at a premium, but deplored in the winter. When all had assembled and the bell had rung again, I blessed the people and chapel with holy water and then prayers were recited. After prayers, Mr. Wong, our learned and zealous catechist, arrayed in his white for the first time this summer, delivered a very impressive discourse on the Ruler of the universe, pointing out His power, prudence and mercy and showing what He expected of us. The speaker concluded with an exhortation to learn more about this wonderful Ruler by attending the exercises and instructions given here in their midst.

Father Morrison then vested for Mass, and as the pagans followed it with interest and even awe the choir gathered around the organ behind the people and sang their hymns in Latin and in Chinese, beginning with "Veni Creator Spiritus", and very proud they were to be able thus to do their part in making the occasion attractive—afterwards I could see what impression they made on the other school boys and girls, for they, too, had learned in their school a little about "foreign" singing. The Holy Sacrifice went on, and whether the people knew it or not, God had not only come into their midst but had offered Himself up to His Heavenly Father for their sake. All the graces we hope to bring them we will bring them through the Mass, and so, all the fervour that was ours to command we put into the hearing of that first Mass at "Down the River".

After the Mass, and even before the thanksgiving after Holy Communion was finished, the string of firecrackers suspended from a long pole was set off, and in rapid succession they exploded and scattered about the property, while the little boys came as near as they could to see if they could find any unburnt ones. The orchestra took up its strains once more, but only in a half-spirited way and soon stopped again. This orchestra was no feature orchestra and rather second rate, and we were incessantly asking them to come to life; Father Strang had requested his favourite piece, "The Three Kingdoms", but they neither had the instruments nor the ability to accommodate him. The photographer had arrived and so we were lined up for the picture —Father Doyle also took some. The catechists and teachers mixed with the crowd and were expounding or explaining doctrine, and the boys and girls lolled about until dinner time.

This is LIU NGA ZEN ("Rock of Compassion"), a servant-boy in Kinhwa. A "boy" is indispensable to the missionary in China; he serves his Mass, acts as sacristan, buys the food, serves at meals, tidies the house, accompanies him on journeys and performs a hundred-and-one other errands and commissions. This young man, baptized and confirmed some years ago in Lishui by Monsignor Fraser, is very exemplary, a daily communicant.

"Today, Sunday, April 19th," writes Monsignor, "I rose at 4:00, boarded a train at 5:20 for Lanchi; arrived at the big city at 6:15 a.m. On the outskirts we passed a famous pagan temple; crowds were pouring out of the front doors; hundreds could be seen inside praying; fully a thousand persons were in sight; they had passed the whole night in the temple praying to their gods for a plentiful rice crop this year; the planting season is about to begin. Idolatry is by no means dead in China.

"After confessions, sermon and Mass, I returned the same day to Kinhwa in time for Benediction at 2:00 p.m. Trains between Kinhwa and Lanchi are now running on a new schedule, four trains a day each way, which makes it very convenient to serve the Lanchi mission."

THEN came the first and only hold-up — we discovered that the restaurant we had asked to cater to the choir and teachers was not big enough. They had to send out and borrow dishes and help, and even then they were late; the girls had to wait until the boys were finished. Fathers Morrison, Strang and I sat down in the reception room to a cold dinner prepared by our cook the evening before, and ere we were finished a sacristan arrived with a box of biscuits from the Sisters. As we ate, the knives and forks scored again, for they seemed to have created as much interest as the combined attractions of the firecrackers, orchestra and organ, for we not even once jabbed our forks into our jaws nor cut our lips with our knives, and we foreigners eat so fast.

Things were quiet after dinner, but soon the crowd came again, and by the time for rosary there was a big assemblage. Mr. Wong elaborated upon his discourse of the morning and waxed most eloquent as he told the story of Redemption. I dare say the recitation of the rosary was boring to the uninitiated, but the second string of firecrackers brought them back to interest and an end to the ceremonies, and by five o'clock we were back at the head mission talking over the day and the possibilities for the future. It was unique in the fact that to "make the mission" here required only fifteen minutes' walk or ride, and that Mass could be said there every Sunday and that visits could be frequent during the week. It is our earnest prayer that it turns out to be a chain in the link of Christian communities that will join us to our more distant ones, and for this happy outcome we beg remembrances in your prayers and we solicit the help of your alms—for without these two we will be obliged to "close down" and take up again the passing of all the pagan visits on our way to the Christian communities in the mountains.

"THE ANVIL OF THE CROSS"

By Rev. Hugh Sharkey

PRICE, $1.00

The Proceeds from the sale of this volume of Poems go to aid the St. Francis Xavier Chinese Catholic Mission

572 Georgia St. E. - Vancouver, B.C.

OUR MISSION BAND FOR 1936 — Leaving for Chuchow This Month

REV. RONALD REEVES
London, Ont.

REV. LORNE McFARLAND
Toronto, Ont.

REV. JAMES LEONARD
Toronto, Ont.

REV. WILLIAM MATTE
Gogama, Ont.

REV. PATRICK MOORE
Ingersoll, Ont.

REV. JOHN MAURICE
Ingersoll, Ont.

REV. LEONARD HUDSWELL
Tweed, Ont.

REV. HAROLD MURPHY
Kingston, Ont.

REV. LAWRENCE McAULIFFE
Peterboro, Ont.

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY

SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

is sending

NINE MORE PRIESTS TO CHINA

The Departure Ceremony for our 1936 Mission Band takes place at St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto, on Mission Sunday, October 18th, at 7.30 p.m.

REV. GREGORY KELLY, Rector of St. Michael's Cathedral, will preach.

It is going to cost us about THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS to send these young missionaries to Chuchow. We want you to help us defray their travelling expenses. The readers of "CHINA" have never failed us in an emergency. We look to them now to give us the money to send these nine priests to the Mission Field. Please make use of the coupon below.

ST. F.X. SEMINARY,
Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Dear Fathers:

Wishing to show my sympathetic interest in the great work your missionaries are doing, I am sending you ..... dollars to aid your nine priests who leave for China this month.

NAME .....

ADDRESS .....

From Ship to Sanctuary

By the Late
Father Justin Moore, C.P.

I WAS born on January 27th, 1903, in Fall River, Massachusetts. I learned my ABC's (and a few other things) in St. Patrick's and other schools there, but really there was not anything exciting about my early years except, perhaps, that I was run over twice. I swallowed a Miraculous Medal while quite young which, of course, led to predictions that I would be a great man in Church affairs some day! At least I felt that I thereby had a special claim to the protection of Our Lady of the Miraculous Medal.

While I was still in my teens I secured a position with the Government and was sent to Harvard College for several months. There I was equipped with a very practical and workable knowledge of radio, which was almost a new science in those days but which was making wonderful strides towards the vast achievements which we now take for granted.

That of course centered my interest in the radio world. I began to travel here and there. I held a rather good position in one of the Atlantic Ship Radio Stations and in that way I became interested in the great Transatlantic Maritime work. Then one day it happened that one of the Italian passenger ships was sending out an "SOS" for a radio operator. One of the Italian operators had decided that he liked Brooklyn better than Italy, so he just "up and quit" when the vessel arrived in New York. I volunteered my service, and made my first trip to Europe as wireless operator on an Italian ship.

I laugh when I look back, because I was perhaps the highest paid official on that ship. The officers were paid according to the Italian scale of wages but I, working under American standards, received a salary that made them gasp. The trip to Italy was most interesting because it was my first. We took in the Azores and Africa between sailings as side trips.

That trip to Italy on an Italian steamship started the ball of my travelling days rolling. It opened up for me a great opportunity to see this wonderful and picturesque world of ours, and I must say I didn't let that opportunity go by unheeded. Time does not allow me to go into details but I think I have travelled over three hundred thousand miles. I travelled regularly on the passenger service between New York and South America; between New York-England, France and Germany. Then I tried the vast Pacific with its strange peoples and races. I made the regular run on the Pacific Mail steamers—always as wireless operator—between San Francisco, Honolulu, Japan, China and the Philippines. Occasionally I branched off on side trips to the South Sea Islands, Indo-China, Singapore, etc.

EVEN in fiction you will not find more interesting reading than this Story of A Vocation, by the late Father Justin Moore, C.P., which we reprint, by permission, from "The Sign". For anyone, 300,000 miles is a long log of ocean travel. The last 10,000 ended in sudden death for this young radio operator who became a Passionist missionary. He was scarcely six months in the mission of Yuanling, Hunan, when he succumbed to an attack of typhoid fever. We have nine young priests leaving for Chuchow this month. Father Justin's description of his parting with his parents serves to emphasize the sacrifice made by all missionaries in leaving home and loved ones.

Incidentally, I spent quite a bit of time in China, and became very much interested in her teeming millions. Perhaps the memory of those gentle, pleading faces has remained with me all these years and is responsible for my fifteenth trip across the Pacific that may be my last.

I DIDN'T give life a chance to grow monotonous during those days and months of travel. Each day meant new faces, new sights, oftentimes strange lands—with the ever restless sea with its perils, its fascination and its beauty. Once Heaven itself sent me a message (not a radio message!) that I had some other purpose in life, that God had a special work for me to do somewhere, sometime. I refer to one of the most thrilling chapters in the story of my life. It began in rather commonplace surroundings in Hoboken, New Jersey.

It was a day in November, the kind of day that people draw their coats closer about them and like to be indoors. I didn't like the weather any too well so I began to consider the possibility of a trip to California via the Panama Canal. That was more attractive than a winter in New York. So I dropped into the Main Office of a large radio corporation to see a friend of mine. He knew I was looking for a change of atmosphere, so he began making offers. England? No. South Africa? No. And a few other vacancies were presented for my consideration. (That was way back long before the depression, when a man had a chance to pick up his employment, and even to dictate conditions.)

Finally my friend got a little impatient. He looked at me with that tone of voice: "Say, if you don't take the next one I offer you, you and I won't be friends any more." I didn't want to lose his friendship, so good-naturedly I agreed to accept the next offer.

It was an assignment to a tramp steamer that was undergoing extensive repairs in a dry-dock in Hoboken. I thought to myself, "I don't know why in the world a ship in dry docks needs a wireless operator; but——! Oh well, I'll have to carry out my gentleman's agreement," so I said to my anxious friend: "I'll take it. Good-bye, California, with your b a l m y weather!"

So, sad of heart, I proceeded over to my tramp steamer to look over the radio outfit and nurse my grudge. Imagine this, will you! My salary was $50 a week, because I received subsistence money while the ship was in port. The ship was in port for four weeks. All I had to do was read, collect my salary each week, report on board sometimes and put up with the cold weather.

Then one day a strange thing happened—just before the ship was to sail. The young man who had been the operator on that ship had decided to become a sea captain. But who ever heard of a radio operator becoming a sea captain overnight? They don't do things that way. He had to begin from rock bottom; and oh, it was hard! From a high-salaried, carefree operator, he became a deck hand on that very ship. During that never-to-be-forgotten four weeks while I was taking in $200 at his job, he was slaving for what was perhaps less than $50 a month.

He was a fine chap and, being human, he couldn't help looking back. I could not resist suggesting to him that he was mentally off balance. Just before the ship sailed he came to me and told me he was a fool; he didn't want to be a sea captain any longer; he was sick of being a deck hand and was contented to be an operator. He was sorry that he had ever quit.

I began to figure things out. I didn't feel any more like sailing on that tramp steamer than the President of the United States would care about driving a taxi. I was interested in passenger steamers like the Leviathan and the George Washington, so I said casually, "Say, pal, how would you like to have your old job back again?" You can guess the rest of the story. He almost died of joy. So I, with the attitude—"Oh! not at all, not at all", quietly packed my bag and graciously withdrew from the scene. I had made two hundred dollars for doing practically nothing for four weeks—so, after all, things could have been worse.

BUT here is where the thrill comes: something that makes my blood run cold when I think of it! That ship sailed from New York a few days later. It loaded a cargo of sulphur in Texas and was returning to New York—but it never got there! I have heard many a tragedy of the sea, but this is one of the most gruesome. That ship with its crew and everything on board disappeared. Not a survivor lived to tell the story, not even an SOS message flashed the tale. Not even a life-boat returned to show what happened. There was many an attempted explanation; of an explosion, of the cargo shifting and the vessel capsizing, etc., but only God knows the truth. And to think that I had been scheduled to sail as operator on the death trip of that vessel, whose entire crew was buried in the depths of the treacherous sea!

God was saving me for the priesthood and China, but I knew it not. One day, as I sat conversing with a Sister who had known me for years, she said, "Do you know, I think God is waiting for you to get tired of wandering and to become a priest?" It was undoubtedly an inspiration, because it was perhaps the last thing in the word that I was thinking about. As a boy I had dreamed of being a priest someday, but my intense interest in radio and travel had relegated it to the land of forgotten dreams. I laughed at her words, but I good-naturedly listened to her arguments. I promised her that I would pray over the matter and seek light and grace from God. I redoubled my prayers when, that same evening, one of my most intimate friends, a priest, received the some inspiration concerning God's designs on my behalf.

ON my next trip to Europe I made the acquaintance of a Passionist and a Paulist Father. This is interesting in the light of subsequent events. I ventured my perplexities to both these good priests. The Paulist Father was the younger of the two and he took a greater interest in my cause, with the result that I became a Paulist. By way of parenthesis: Senator David I. Walsh of Massachusetts was instrumental in bringing about the accomplishment of my vocation, because it was through his influence that I secured the position on that transatlantic passenger steamer. And one of the first things that he asked me when I met him was whether or not I had been to Mass that morning. A beautiful thought in the life of a United States Senator!

I made my first novitiate with the Paulists in their pictureque mountain home in New Jersey; and when that was completed I took my college course at the Catholic University of Washington. I graduated in the summer of 1929. Under the careful guidance of my superiors and spiritual directors, my dear Paulist friends, we decided that God was inviting me to the life of the Passionists. But I must say that it was a hard step for me to make—a decision that was the result of prayer and advice over the space of years. The Paulists could not have done more for me. A finer class of priests is not to be found in the Church. They never questioned my right to respond to God's call to a stricter religious life, and any success I have had with the Passionists they have always rejoiced over.

It was necessary for me to make a second novitiate with the Passionists. After I made my religious profession I continued my theological studies in our various monasteries. I was ordained to the Holy Priesthood on the Feast of Our Holy Founder, St. Paul of the Cross, April 28th, 1934, by Rt. Rev. Thomas C. O'Reilly, D.D., Bishop of Scranton.

During the past few years it has been the fun of the class to mention the possibilities and impossibilities for China; that is to say, who might be chosen for China and who might not. Of course no one knew

In the centre of this group is the author of this remarkable story, Father Justin Moore, C.P., who died in China on May 10th, 1936. With him are his two priest companions with whom he sailed to China, Fr. Marcellus White, C.P., and Fr. Reginald Arliss, C.P., and Rev. Harvey Steele and Mr. Michael Dwyer of China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ont. The picture was taken last Summer when the five missionaries attended the Medical Mission Course at St. Vincent's Hospital, New York City.

the future, but somehow or other my name began to be associated with the foreign missions, though I always took the attitude—"Hands off", that is the work of God's Providence.

So in June when Father Provincial told me to begin my Medical Course in St. Vincent's Hospital, New York City, there were numbers of "I told you so", but I retorted by, "Oh, well, perhaps I'll miss the boat!" For three months Father Marcellus, Father Reginald and myself worked hard at preparing for our life in China. About a week before I was to depart for the West, I received word from home that my mother was seriously ill, and while I was at home my superiors sent word to Boston that I was not to sail for China on November 2nd with Father Marcellus and Father Reginald.

IN the religious life one learns to adapt oneself, for after all, sanctity is but a continual adaptation to duty; so while the news spread around that I wasn't going to China, I quietly settled down in our Boston Monastery working on my sermons in preparation for the home missions. Yes, I had missed my boat this time, and as the weeks and days sped by, one by one, I wondered what would become of all the preparations I had made. Father Marcellus and Father Reginald left for New York two days later to get their steamer in Vancouver.

The days wore on, and happily my mother's condition was greatly improved. In fact, it had been exaggerated in the beginning. The doctor told me that she was coming along fine and that she had many years of life as yet. That was good news indeed and during the days I spent with mother I kept her laughing so much that she grew younger.

Sunday morning, October 27th, the Feast of Christ the King, was a glorious fall day in Boston. I had despatched a hurried letter to Father Marcellus and one to Father Reginald, hoping that they would reach them in Vancouver before their departure. I bade them farewell and Bon Voyage and congratulated them on the glorious work for which God has chosen them, a work so dear to His Sacred Heart. I told them I was sorry to have missed the boat; and if they got sea-sick I advised them to take advantage of the fine medical experience they had imbibed during the hot summer months in one of New York's great hospitals.

Later that morning I had a talk with one of the priests in the Monastery, a dear friend of mine, and one with considerable experience. I told him that my mother had recovered and that the doctor had only consoling news. And then he started the ball rolling. "Well, why don't you lay the matter before Father Provincial? Why don't you tell him how things stand now, because, after all the preparations you have made, etc., he may intend to send you in a few months, and why not know?" I thanked him for his advice and told him I would think the matter over. That was ten o'clock Sunday morning, October 27th. My mind and imagination began to speed up, to calculate and reckon. Boston, New York, Chicago, Vancouver—the Empress of Canada, Saturday, November 2nd. My boat! My old experience with timetables, trains and ships came into full play and I began to consider. There was still time to make my boat, to go to China with my classmates as had been the original plan.

I went to the chapel to pray, to ask Our Lord and His Immaculate Mother for light and guidance. It was the Feast of the King of Kings, Whose empire has no boundaries and Who has commanded His followers to "Go into the whole world and preach the Gospel to every creature. For other sheep I have that are not of this fold, them also must I bring that there may be but one fold and one Shepherd."

There was a terrible struggle going on within my heart. We were divided. One time I would think, "Why go to China? That is an awful hard life, one of constant hardships and temptations; perils from bandits, disease, etc. I know from experience the loneliness and desolation of the bleak Mongolian winters without the luxury of steam heat or any of our modern conveniences. I can work at home; I have so many kind friends who would appreciate me and my efforts for them ever so much more than the Chinese. Then there is that terrible language. It's bad enough writing sermons in the good old U.S.A. and committing them to memory, without racking my poor brain with Chinese."

BUT I was conscious of another spirit within me. "Someone must go to China! You are young and strong. You have learned to love the Chinese people, to pity them. They have never had a chance to know and love our Lord Jesus Christ, the King of Kings, the King of love. Why, in our territory alone there are five million pagan souls with about thirty-two Passionist priests to represent the Church of God, to win those poor people to Christ. Yet, in this country we have thousands of priests, and how simple and easy it is for non-Catholics as well as Catholics to get in touch with a priest if they care to do so. We must sacrifice some vocations for the foreign missions if we wish God to bless us with good priests."

So the struggle went on for hours—the realization that I was at the crossroads of life. A decision had to be made between home, friends, comforts and a life of exile and constant sacrifice in China. It was too much for me to decide, but almost unconsciously I began to pack my bags and make preparations; there wasn't a moment to be lost. I consulted Father Rector and he agreed that it would be a happy thing to get in touch with Father Provincial. To telegraph or telephone was impractical in the case, so we decided that a trip to New York would be best; and as that was the first lap of a journey to Vancouver, I dispensed with my trunk and confined my belongings to two bags. A kind friend of mine drove me to Fall River, because I would not think of going without the consent of mother and father.

The evening wore on, as I sat and talked with mother and dad. Mother was sleepy and went to bed. I went in to kiss her good-night. She sensed that there was something on my mind, and asked me about it. I told her of the struggle that had been going on within, how I had come prepared to leave for New York on the Fall River Line early that evening; but how I didn't have the courage to leave her and dad.

It was then that I was to experience the faith and self-sacrifice of a good Irish mother. With her parental authority she told me that I must do what my superiors wanted. If God wanted me in China, I must go. I must not think of her. She was happy with her beads and prayer books, and an occasional visit from her Sweet Master when He came to her in Holy Communion on the First Friday of the month. She told me to go to New York and lay the matter before my superiors and abide by their decision. I told her

(Concluded on page 126)

Our Vancouver Mission

A WORD about the Chinese schools here. The majority of them are under the direction of one or other of the various Christion organizations established in the Chinese centre. Some of them are private enterprises controlled by an individual who can boast of teaching experience in the Orient. There is also a Chinese public school; but how it can lay claim to the title "public" I am at a loss to say. They charge a regular monthly fee, as do all the others. We were very pleased to be able to join the ranks ourselves this year, and Monday, August 3rd, marked another step in our efforts to serve the Chinese community of Vancouver.

Our school, like the other Chinese schools, opened with the accustomed formula of speeches and a tea party. The ceremony began with prayers in Chinese, followed by an address of welcome by our Superior, Rev. Father Sharkey, who concluded his interesting talk by announcing the school officially opened and, as is customary, introducing each child in turn to the teacher. The teacher, Mr. T. Kong, a convert to the Faith and a man of considerable teaching experience in China, spoke at length to the children in their native tongue. What he said is beyond me to tell you; however, judging from the strict attention paid by his listeners, it must have been interesting. Nor do I doubt but that there was a certain amount of humor in his words; at least the faces of the children left that impression. It was now up to me to say a few words; but what was there left to say! I suppose it would not make very much difference what I said; the main thing was to give a speech, for at any kind of a gathering the speech-making is the principal attraction—for the speakers. Generally very little attention is paid to what is being said—everyone seems to have topics of their own that are much more interesting. However, the ancient traditions must be upheld, so I started in, and I really did arouse some interest when I announced that the tea party would follow immediately. It did; and it was enjoyed to the last crumb.

—Rev. Roland Roberts.

VANCOUVER CHINESE COMMUNITY CELEBRATES CITY JUBILEE

ONE of the privileges of citizenship in Vancouver is the opportunity it affords of contact with representatives of a people so different as the Chinese. In this Golden Jubilee year of Vancouver this contact has been emphasized by the prominent role played by the Chinese colony in contributing to the success of the celebrations. Thousands of dollars have been spent to provide for Vancouverites and tourists a glimpse into the culture and civilization of the middle kingdom. What has proven to be probably the most attractive feature of the city's celebrations is the Carnival Village erected by the Chinese Community, and containing a wondrous abundance of artistic, historical and cultural exhibits imported directly from China. The cost of the treasures on exhibition is said to approximate two million dollars.

The top picture is a night view of the Chinese Carnival Village. In the foreground is the Entrance Arch, a masterpiece of Chinese architecture and decorated with thousands of delicately hand-carved images. This arch was erected without the use of even a single nail. Topped by a Chinese Pagoda is the octagonal building which houses rare objects of art secured from great private collections and Government museums in China. Old porcelain vases, pottery, earthenware, exquisitely carved jade, ivory and ebony, gorgeously embroidered ceremonial robes, rare paintings and statuary, etc., form part of this exhibit. Other attractions at the Carnival Village include a replica of a Mandarin's palace, fully furnished and containing intricately carved doors, screens and panels, with a wealth of paintings, tapestries and rugs. A peasant's home is also displayed, containing ingenious Chinese farm implements, and samples of Chinese agricultural life. Images, idols, ancient relics without number are contained in the Buddhist Temple, where one may see a real Buddhist priest in his robes. In the courtyard of the Temple is a profusion of Chinese flowers and shrubs, many of the latter carefully cultured and shaped in human form.

The lighted semi-circle in the background indicates the open-air stage, whereon marvelous performances of acrobatics and magic are given by a troupe of Chinese actors and actresses direct from China. These talented performers are shown in the lower picture taking part in one of the many processions which marked the period of the Jubilee. Two of these performers are Catholics and frequently attended Mass at our Chinese Mission, and, with their friends, spent many a pleasant hour as guests at the Catholic Mission. One of the actresses is a direct descendant of Martyrs for the Faith during the Boxer Rebellion.

A people who play such a large part in the life of one of our great Canadian cities ought not to be neglected in matters of religion, and the purpose of our Catholic Mission in Vancouver is to win many of them to the Faith. For that project to be successful the help of Catholics throughout the country is solicited. The address of our Catholic Mission in Vancouver is 572 East Georgia Street.

FROM SHIP TO SANCTUARY

(Continued from page 124)

that if I went to New York it meant China, but if I remained home that night I would not have to go to China. And then dad seconded her motion. They had everything in the world they needed. They were happy. If God could use me in the great cause of the salvation of the pagans, it was my duty to go. I was no longer Father; I was only a boy in the presence of his father and mother.

It was a trying situation. In bewilderment I put my hat and coat on and went out into the night. The hour was getting late; there was only one more bus out of Fall River to Providence that night which carried with it the possibility of the midnight train to New York. When I returned mother had gotten out of bed and was seated in her wheel chair with the sweetest smile on her face. I told her that there was still time. She told me to go. I kissed her, gave her my blessing, and told her I would see her in Heaven. She smiled and said good-bye. I embraced my father and said good-bye.

The next morning, October 29th, I offered the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass in St. Michael's Monastery, Union City—begging God, His Holy Mother and the saints to help and guide me. It was the feast of Sts. Simon and Jude, so I besought St. Jude especially to prove himself the Apostle of extreme cases. I went in to see Father Provincial, told him that mother was better, that the doctor said she would live for years yet, and that I was ready to sail as had been originally planned on November 2nd from Vancouver if he cared to send me.

OCTOBER 18th IS MISSION SUNDAY

A Few Mission Thoughts From His Holiness the Pope

EVER since Archille Ratti ascended the Fisherman's Throne as the 261st successor of St. Peter and became Pius XI, the entire world, both Christian and pagan, has had ample evidence of his deep solicitude for the missions of the Catholic Church. Rightly has he been called "The Pope of the Missions".

NOT only with nations already Christian is the Holy Father concerned. But, far better than anyone else in our day he realizes that 1,900 years after Jesus Christ died to save all men, nearly two-thirds of mankind have not even heard His Name. And this despite His solemn command! "Go ye into the whole world . . ." The Sovereign Pontiff does not forget that the great work of the Catholic Church is still ahead,—a fact overlooked by most Catholics. But no doubt does His Holiness leave. His words are: "The spread of the Gospel is the primary object of the Church".

PERHAPS the mission-spirit of Pope Pius XI can best be caught from the following statements that have been culled from his many references to the missions . . .

"PONDERING on the fact that pagans still number almost a billion, We have no peace in Our spirit and We seem to hear sounding in Our ears, 'Cry; cease not; lift up thy voice like a trumpet'."

"THAT even one single soul may be lost through Our tardiness, through Our lack of generosity; that even one single missionary may have to hold back in his work because he does not receive all the assistance that We could make possible for him, is another responsibility to which We perhaps have not given too much thought during the course of Our life."

"FROM the very beginning of Our Pontificate We have applied the most interested care to the development of the Holy Missions."

"WHAT a heartrending scene to see fields white for the harvest, so many possibilities to do good, such marvelous facilities in certain cases, and to be obliged to hold back, to see death assert itself and error stand in the place of truth!"

"WHEN one considers that with all this magnificent development of missionary activity, there yet remains such a large portion of the world in the densest darkness, truly one must say with the ancient Romans: 'Nothing is done, if yet there remains somewhat to do'!"

"HOW desolating the eloquence of statistics which show that after so many centuries already elapsed in the era of Redemption, so many souls have yet to come to the knowledge of the Light of the Gospel!"

"WE wish that all the Catholic Missions be assisted by a contribution of the Catholic universe."

"BE not ashamed, therefore, to make yourselves beggars for Christ and for the salvation of souls."

"HOW anxious We are to come to the assistance of the missionaries, and how deeply grateful We are for all that you do for them!"

"IT is Our wish that in every parish there be formed a nucleus of missionary zeal and action . . . How much good, what great glory for God, what salvation for souls would be procured, should this Our wish be realized."

"OUR missionary action behind the lines, so to speak, is efficacious not only for the missions, but also for the salvation of Our own souls."

"CHARITY for the Missions surpasses every other work of charity, even as the soul surpasses the body, or the heavens surpass the earth, or eternity surpasses time."

"HAVING close to Our heart, as We are in duty bound, the Propagation of the Faith in the world. We are accustomed to turn Our special care and thought to all that regards the organization and increase of Catholic missions."

"THERE are vast masses of peoples, as vast as the Dark Continent, as vast as the immense regions of India and of China, who still await the word of salvation."

—"Catholic Missions."

NONSENSE

"IF YOU DON'T LAUGH AT THE JOKES OF THE AGE, THEN LAUGH AT THE AGE OF THE JOKES"

Football Enthusiast (to uninterested friend)—"Don't go yet. Let's wait till the finish—it's great fun. They usually throw the referee to the crowd."

"Bobbie," said the woman in the car severely, "why don't you get up and give your seat to your father? Doesn't it pain you to see him reaching for the strap?"

"Not in the tram," said Bobbie. "It does at home."

"Yes," said the election candidate, "I'm going among the farmers today, to a cattle show, or a jackass show, or something of that sort; not that I care for cows or jackasses, but I want to show the people that I'm one of them."

"What did you think of the horse show?"

"I didn't see a single frock I liked."

Mrs. Potter—"I notice your husband always has his hair cut short."

Mrs. Cottor—"Yes, the coward!"

Rastus—"Here am a telegram from de boss in Africa. He says he is sending us some lions' tails."

Circus Owner's Wife—"Lions' tails, Rastus? What are you talking about?"

Rastus—"Well, read it yourself. It says plain: 'Just captured two lions. Sending details by mail'."

Mike sent his city friend, Jerry a crate of chickens.

Mike—"Did you get the chickens?"

Jerry—"Some of them. After I got them from the station they got out of the crates, and I was two hours scouring the neighborhood, and then I only caught ten."

Mike—"Sh—sh, Jerry, not so loud. I only sent you six."

Cooking Teacher (reviewing class in sandwich making)—"Take two pieces of bread, a layer of cheese, two slices of ham, a spoonful of mayonnaise, a piece of lettuce, and what have you got?"

Bright Pupil—"A tea shoppe."

Wife (heatedly)—"You're lazy, you're worthless, you're bad-tempered, you're shiftless, you're a thorough liar."

Husband (reasonably)—"Well, my dear, no man is perfect."

A rash broke out on Tommy's face and it gradually became worse. His mother, feeling anxious, sent him to the doctor with the following note:

"Dear Doctor—Please look at Tommy's face. He's had it a long time and it's spreading."

A schoolmistress, after impressing upon her pupils that "Upper Burma is about as big as Siam," found that half had written in their notebooks: "Upper Burma is about as big as she is."

Dolly—"How is your son getting on, Mrs. Briggs—the one who was such a clever ventriloquist?"

Mrs. Briggs—"E's doin' very nicely, Miss; 'e's in a bird shop selling parrots."

The wife of a well-known Norwegian author had been telling a story against herself.

Her husband had translated one of Shakespeare's plays into Norwegian, and it was to be produced at the National Theatre in Oslo. Wishing to see the first rehearsal, to which her husband had already gone, she presented herself alone at the door of the theatre, only to be refused admittance by the door-keeper, who did not know her.

"But I am the author's wife," she protested in indignation.

"I am very sorry, indeed, Mrs. Shakespeare," said the man politely, "but even you cannot go in."

The baby pulled brother's hair until he yelled from the pain of it. The mother soothed the weeping boy:

"Of course she doesn't know how badly it hurts." Then she left the room.

She hurried back presently on hearing frantic squalling from baby.

"What in the world is the matter with her?" she questioned anxiously.

"Nothin' 'tall," brother replied, contentedly. "Only now she knows."

Neighbor—"Say, have you folks got a bottle opener around here?"

Parent—"Yeah, but he's away at college."

An architect remarked to a woman that he had been to see the great nave in the new church.

"Don't mention names," the woman replied. "I know the man you refer to."

"The man who tells us of our faults is our best friend," quoth the philosopher.

"Yes, but he won't be long," added the mere man.

Foreman—"Hi, what are you doin', Jim?"

Bricky—"Sharpenin' a bit of pencil."

Foreman—"You'll 'av the union after you, me lad. That's a carpenter's job, that is."

"Why are you moping there, Dick?"

"I've no one to play with."

"Well, go and fetch Freddie next door."

"Oh, I played with him yesterday, and I don't suppose he's well enough to come out yet."

Mabel—"How are you getting on at college, Percy?"

Percy—"Oh, all right. I'm trying awfully hard to get ahead, you know."

Mabel—"Well, heaven knows you need one."

"I've not seen old Mrs. Wiggins lately. How is she?"

"Dead, sir."

"What, joined the great majority?"

"Oh, no, sir! She was a good enough woman, as far as I know."

He was discussing his son and heir, whom he had recently taken into the business:

"Well, yes, he's shaping pretty well, but he has a long way to go yet before he'll have a head big enough to fill my shoes."

Gus—"The horn on your car must be broken."

Mr.—"No, it's just indifferent."

Gus—"Indifferent! What do you mean?"

Mr.—"It just doesn't give a hoot."

Jones—"Your office sent me a cook last week."

Employment Office Manager—"Yes, that's right."

Jones—"Well, it will give me the greatest pleasure if you will dine with me tonight.

She—"I think that is an ideal match."

He—"Yes, the least friction will cause a flare-up."

Please Do Not Read This

and then forget what you've read.

If you forget, then both of us are the losers. You will lose the opportunity of doing a good deed, and a meritorious one. We will lose all that it means to have a sympathetic, helpful friend. You see, dear Reader, China Mission Seminary last month began another year of effort to educate young men for the Holy Priesthood. We now have fifty students to care for, and it is going to cost many thousands of dollars to run our Seminary which provides a home and a training for these future missionaries to China. We have nobody to whom we can turn for a helping hand—except YOU. Now, if you refuse us, our work will suffer, so won't you please keep in mind our request and send us a contribution? Be it ever so small it will aid in the grand work of supporting and educating boys for the missionary priesthood. We ask only a little from each of our readers. Are you going to refuse us? It is for God's work we beg. God will give you your reward. Perhaps you were going to send us something last month, but forgot to do so. It's never too late to do good, you know. Do it now—please.

+

Kindly send your donations to

St. Francis Xavier Seminary

Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario

Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President

CHINA

Scarboro Bluffs. Ont. November 1936

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutator Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.

2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.

3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.

4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.

5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

ATTENTION!

THIS is the last issue of "China", but one, for the year 1936. Our mailing list unfortunately includes many names of subscribers who are not paid quite up to date. The only means we use to advise delinquent subscribers is the expiry date on their address label. Look at the date on your "China" now. If it does not read 1937, or later, we ask you to renew your subscription after you receive this issue. It costs only 50c for one year. When sending cheques or money orders please make them payable to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.

Quality Printers

ADelaide 2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press
263 Adelaide St. West - Toronto

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 24,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XVII. NOVEMBER, 1936 No. 9

WE hope you like Invitations. We have taken up a whole display page in this issue extending an invitation to you. Now we are going to use another page to encourage you not to refuse what we ask. The very simplicity of the thing is what we fear. Hence the necessity of a little argument.

Fundamental Facts

To get off to a good start it is necessary for us first to recall, and for our readers clearly to understand, certain facts about the Missions. The Pope speaks! and says that the Head of the Church "would be false to his principal duty did he not strive by all the means in his power to win for Christ those who are outside the fold." And the reason the Pope gives is: "For the Church has no other reason for existence than, by enlarging the Kingdom of Christ throughout the world, to make all men participate in His salutary redemption." Strong words, these. An affirmation by His Holiness Pope Pius XI that his first duty is to preach the Gospel and bring the means of salvation to pagans.

What follows? The Pope cannot fulfil his task in person. He depends on others to act under his guidance. He looks to missionaries to take his place among the heathen, and he charges the faithful to support these missionaries. It explains the existence of missionary bodies such as St. Francis Xavier China Mission Institute in Canada. On these missionary societies lies a grave obligation to send out a sufficient number of missionaries to look after the pagans who have been entrusted to their care by the Pope. Furthermore, they have the strict obligation of seeking from the Catholic faithful means sufficient to support these missionaries and to enable them to carry out their work properly. Hence, it is not a whim of ours to be making appeals. We need what we ask for, and we have the obligation of asking so long as the need exists.

The Varied Means

We have been "beggars for Christ's sake" ever since our Seminary was founded. We have asked you, our friends, for money to build our Seminary; for financial assistance in educating our students for the Priesthood; for the wherewithal to buy transportation for our missionaries going to China; for money to support our priests on the Missions and to help them build chapels and pay the salaries of catechists, their chief auxiliaries. Building Funds, Burse Funds, Mission Band Expenses, Mission Needs —all have been mentioned as the need arose, and, thank God, the mention has never gone entirely without response.

An Opportunity For All

Sometimes we have felt the desire of presenting our case in such a way that everybody could respond to our appeal without the least financial inconvenience to themselves. Casually have we mentioned Mite-boxes as "the way out." This time we are not content with a casual suggestion. We are featuring their possibilities. Just read on. You'll see why you ought to join our new Mission League. It's all so easy you will feel ashamed to refuse where your active goodwill can mean so much.

OUR COVER

A picture taken early this year in the Church of the Sacred Heart at our headquarters in Lishui provides our November cover. The occasion was the celebration of a Pontifical High Mass by the Prefect-Apostolic of Chuchow, Monsignor McGrath. The missionaries on ceremonies are Fathers Amyot, Gignac, Serra, Curtin, and McGettigan.

Too Small to Bother With?

We are inviting your family to give to Canada's Foreign Mission Seminary one cent a day. "Why", you say, "everybody can afford that much. It's such a small thing I wouldn't even be bothered thinking about it." Listen, dear friend. If you, and every you who reads this, gave us one cent every day for one year then we could get along nicely without asking for any financial help whatever for the following five years. So that you may remember this startling fact do a little figuring for yourself on the basis of every reader of CHINA becoming a member of our Mission League described on page 144. Here are the figures to work on: we mail 24,000 copies of CHINA each month, and presume 4 persons on an average read each copy. 96,000 readers giving one cent every day for a year. Simple? It's so simple that it won't work — UNLESS — (and here's the "catch") —UNLESS YOU determine right now that you are going to be ONE of those who see the wonderful possibilities of a Mission Mite-box in your Catholic home.

Optimism

"But, Father," (speaks a reader) "you ask for only five thousand people to join your Mission League." Yes, dear reader, I'm a missionary. Therefore, I'm an optimist. And I'm hoping that even 5,000 people will see the truth of what I've written. If you are one of them, and 4,999 others join with you and give our Seminary one cent a day through the use of a Mission Mite-box, then we will receive enough in one year to pay half our annual current expenses. And that's worth trying. Don't you think so? Well, it's up to you now. I've done my bit. And—thank you in advance. I'm sure you'll enjoy being a Mission Leaguer!

JOTTINGS

By REV. GERALD DOYLE

WHEN a person in Canada hears of a missionary going to China one of the thoughts that may come to mind is: "Oh! He will have to eat rice and use chopsticks."

The statement is partially true but certainly rice is not the only food he will have. While away from headquarters, rice of necessity takes an important place on the limited menu and then chopsticks also come into play, and even here at Lishui the priests at table usually have chopsticks available and use them for certain foods.

In English the word chopstick is probably a combination of "chow" and "stick." One meaning of "chow" being food. The sticks, which are about ten inches long, are used in one hand to convey food to the mouth. With some foods the bowl is held close to the face and the chopsticks seemingly shove the food into the mouth, but usually they are manipulated by the thumb and fingers to pick up small pieces of food, previously cut up, from dishes on the table and convey them to the mouth.

The chopsticks in common use are made of bamboo, but there are also chopsticks made of ivory and bone, while sticks made of blackwood with the ends covered with a coating of silver are not uncommon in Chinese middle-class families. It is said that if any poison has been put into the food the silver ends would turn black owing to a chemical reaction.

Of course, fancy chopsticks made of a sort of jade, and also ivory chopsticks decorated with gold are obtainable as well as other decorative chopsticks, but for everyday use even the wealthy generally employ plain chopsticks as they are more convenient.

It is amusing to watch a newcomer to China use chopsticks for the first time. The sticks just refuse to work together and usually an anticlimax is provided when a persistent beginner finally succeeds in lifting a piece of food several inches above his plate. He then pauses to enjoy a moment of satisfaction, and at the pause the chopsticks slip in his unsteady fingers, slide past each other and the piece of food is liable to land any place except in the owner's mouth.

Father Amyot claims that the real test of a chopstick user is lifting an egg from the table. The egg must be held at the point of balance and the pressure must be just right; if there is not enough pressure the egg will remain on the table, while if too strong a hold is taken the sticks will slip on the rounded surface.

Yes, Father Amyot can lift an egg with chopsticks.

An expert with the chopsticks shows how it's done.

WELL—

You've always wanted to do something for our Missions.

NOW—

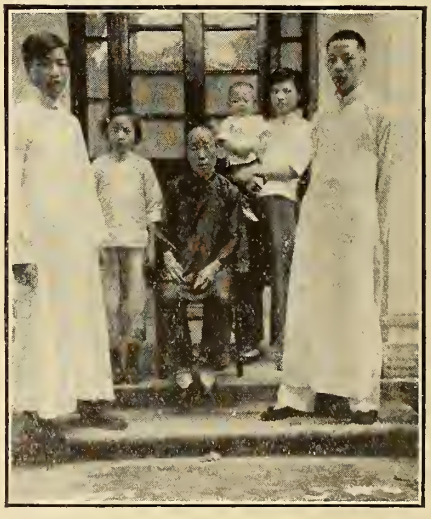
Here's your chance.

JOIN OUR NEW MISSION LEAGUE

It's very easy. Read page 144. Please don't wait till "later on". We would like to have you a Mission Leaguer right now. You won't forget, will you?

SPEAKING of Father Amyot reminds me that he has now been up in his mission of Huang T'An for a couple of months and to date the bandits have not visited him, although a small band is reported as being only several miles away. He is slowly finishing his combined chapel and residence and his complaint now is that he is held up by a shortage of bricks. The local brick maker fashions bricks only when they are required and he then demands a partial payment in advance. With a small kiln it is slow work and the brick makers received a set back recently when a heavy rain storm destroyed a "batch" of bricks which were just prepared for baking.

☼



THE MISSION SCHOOL is open once more and boys and girls from various parts of the Prefecture are now studying under Chinese teachers. Although catechism is the most important subject on the curriculum the three "R's" are not forgotten. After a course in Christian Doctrine a few children are sent to the government schools in the city so that they can qualify as teachers or, after special training, as future catechists. In the government schools long hours are kept, the children frequently arriving before six o'clock in the morning and remaining at the school, except for a short time at noon, until late in the evening.

☼

DURING THE COMING week the missionaries will arrive at the Lishui headquarters to make the annual retreat which will end a few days before the last of September. When the retreat is finished the missionaries will quickly return to their missions to take advantage of the fine autumn weather for a visitation of all mission chapels. We hope and pray that bandit activity will not hinder the work. Recently, we have had almost no word of bandits; the heat evidently curtailed their activities.

☼

FATHER VENADAM just dropped into my room for a visit, having returned from his new mission chapel at Yuo Wu, about a mile and a half from the mission here in Lishui. He was very pleased with the progress being made and greatly encouraged with the large number of catechumens present for instruction, 86 now being enrolled. It will be remembered that only four months ago there was no chapel in that little village.

Three generations are shown in this picture. With the grandmother are her two sons and a daughter, as well as the daughter-in-law and the little grandson. The young man on the left is a seminarian now studying at Ningpo. The picture was taken in front of the mission residence at Lishui.

FROM THE ARCHDIOCESES OF OTTAWA and MONTREAL

REV. GORDON STRINGER,
Ottawa, Ont.

REV. KENNETH TURNER,
Montreal, Que.

Fathers Stringer and Turner were both ordained on September 6th, 1936, the former by Archbishop Forbes, in Ottawa, the latter by Bishop Deschamps, in Montreal.

LIFE IN CHINA

Child Welfare

China now has an official "Children's Day" yearly. As a nation, China is now waking up to the importance of guarding and guiding the welfare of her children. This is particularly so in the parts where rural reconstruction is being actively pursued.

In the more advanced cities serious attention is being given to the welfare of the children. This is but a beginning of better things for the little ones, for parents, teachers and the educational authorities have at last realized the importance of this movement.

Railroad Progress

Travel is picking up in China, as witness the fact that the Canton-Hankow Railway Admnistration has recently ordered from England 24 locomotives and 430 passenger and freight cars to be used on their line. It is expected that some of this new equipment will arrive before the first of the year.

Mail and Telegrams

Astonishing progress has been made in the evolution of China's postal and telegraph service, quite in line with the many kinds of reconstruction taking place in this country.

The statistics of the Ministry of Communications point out that there are now 101,283 kilometers of telegraph lines and 500,000 kilometers of postal routes.

There are 22 postal districts, each in charge of a postal commissioner, and China now possesses 30 first-class offices, 819 second-class and 1,030 third-class offices, 295 sub-offices, and 10,113 agencies. These take care of the mail, money orders, parcel post, registered mail, etc., where once courier service was the only means of communication.

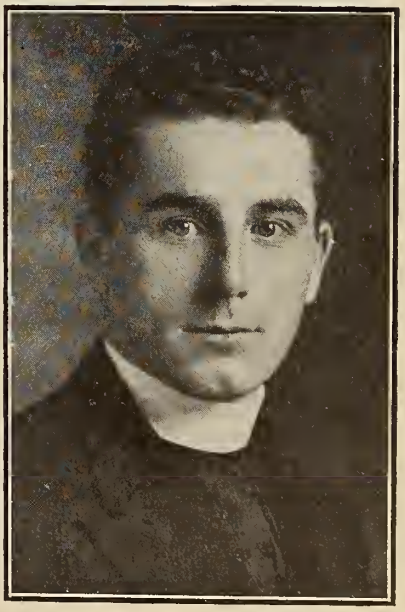
Telegraphic and wireless services have made equal progress. 1,394 agencies, consisting of 972 telegraph offices, 677 business offices and 145 branches, give efficient service throughout the country.

Radio service has reached the farthest borders, where the Ministry of Communications maintains 20 radiogram offices, in such remote provinces as Inner Mongolia, Kansu, Chinghai, Sikang and Tibet so that even these are in touch with the important commercial and governmental centres through the most modern of means—wireless.

Educational Movies

China is alert to use every means —even the latest—to help educate her people in the new ideals of citizenship of a modern nation.

Knowledge is more easily gained through talks and pictures, particularly so when so many are either illiterate or of little education, and consequently Nanking has decided to use the "Talkies" (with their vast possibilities of sound and light effects) in preference to books and pictures.



Educational pictures will be produced which will foster the national spirit, while others will instruct the

(Continued on page 139)

FROM THE DIOCESE OF HARBOUR GRACE, NEWFOUNDLAND

REV. EDWARD MORIARTY,
Harbour Grace, Nfld.

REV. LEO BURKE,
Brigus, Nfld.

His Excellency Bishop March ordained Fathers Moriarty and Burke in Harbour Grace, Newfoundland, on August 24th, 1936

INSPIRING DEPARTURE CEREMONY AS NINE PRIESTS LEAVE for CHINA

THOSE Catholics in St. Michael's Cathedral, Toronto —and there were as many of them as the Cathedral could possibly hold—who were present on Mission Sunday at the departure ceremony for nine young priests of the Canadian China Mission Seminary leaving in October for China, will never forget the experience. It was a spiritual drama charged with emotions that are not of earth. The participants, and every Catholic present must have been a participant not a spectator, were moved to the depths of their souls, but with calmness and gladness, not with merely human emotionalism or sentimentality.

Into the packed cathedral came the procession of clergy, preceding His Grace, the Archbishop of Toronto, giving his blessing to the kneeling people. The nine outgoing missionaries were in the procession marked by their plain black cassocks, for they wore no surplice, and noticeable also by their appearance of youth. They took their places before the altar in the sanctuary. The Schola Cantorum of St. Augustine's Seminary was at the side of the sanctuary and began the singing with "Veni Creator Spiritus." It was the plain chant of the Church, prayer music, with its own beauty so different from that of the music of this world that it makes the rendering of secular music in church seem a profanation. Immediately after the chant of the schola the whole congregation sang the English version of the same hymn to the Holy Ghost: "Come Holy Ghost, Creator Blest."

Sermon

The sermon followed. Father Gregory Kelly, Rector of the Cathedral, preached on the text of our Divine Lord's Command to His Apostles: "Go ye and teach all nations." The preacher commented on the apparently impossible task laid on those twelve rude, unlettered men of Galilee. The vast pagan world stretched unending before them, all peoples given up to the indulgence of passion, of ambition and greed, and these lowly Galileans had to bring that proud world under the yoke of Christ. God had deliberately chosen humanly impossible means to perform His task, because He wanted it to be known as a divine and not a human work. God chose the weak things of this world to confound the wise. He gave to these Apostles courage, which they had not at first, He gave them assurance of true doctrine, and He gave them also the gifts of miracles. After two thousand years we could see how the command to go forth and teach all nations had been fulfilled. The command was still being given and that night they were privilged to witness a going forth of apostles, an exemplification of that greatest love whereby men laid down their lives for their friends. The Canadian China Mission Seminary was sending forth its seventh band of missionaries. They went with divine credentials to carry the light of faith to those that sat in the darkness and the shadow of death. Was it not too great a sacrifice to ask of young men? Was it worth the risk? Yes, it was worth it. Dangers meant nothing to the true Catholic missionary who is endowed with a love or Jesus Christ and for souls and who has heard that divine call: "Go forth." All could learn a wholesome lesson from that scene; they could learn that all had a duty to the missions; all the faithful could share in the work of teaching all nations by their alms and prayers. In concluding, the preacher addressed himself to the nine young missionaries bidding them farewell, perhaps not to meet again except in heaven.

Invested With the Cross

At the end of the sermon the Gallery Choir sang the motet "Lauda Jerusalem." Then the Archbishop stood in front of the altar and each young missionary came and knelt before him, receiving a crucifix which the Archbishop placed round the missionary's neck by a cord. The Archbishop venerated each crucifix before placing it on the missionary, and the missionary himself performed the same act of devotion.

The Oath

With their crucifixes on their breasts the nine missionaries then knelt in a row before the Archbishop at the altar and recited their Oath of Allegiance:

"I, ————, of Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, in the presence of Almighty God, of the Immaculate Virgin Mary, Mother of God, of the Holy Apostles Peter and Paul, and of His Excellency, Right Reverend James Charles McGuigan, on bended knees make oath and promise that I will devote my whole life to

TEN NEW STUDENTS AT CHINA MISSION SEMINARY

Above are the ten young men who began their philosophical and theological studies in September at our Seminary. Four are from Ontario, three from Newfoundland, two from Nova Scotia, and one from Prince Edward Island. Our total enrolment is 50 students, embracing subjects from 14 different Dioceses in Canada and Newfoundland.

FROM THE DIOCESE OF PEMBROKE, ONTARIO

REV. JAMES McCANN,
Quyon, Que.

REV. JOHN KELLY,
Eganville, Ont.

Both these priests were ordained at Pembroke on August 15th, 1936, by His Excellency Bishop Ryan the mission work now entrusted, or that will be entrusted in future, to this Institute, and I will be obedient to its Superior General according to the constitutions of the Institute. So help me God, and this His Holy Gospel."

"I will devote my whole life . . ."

The congregation could catch these tremendous words from the young lips, and as Catholics they could feel the full force of their meaning. To give some of their possessions, to give some part of life, is common enough among ordinary good people, but to give all, irrevocably, holding back nothing, is superhuman.

Ite, Fratres

To the young men who had made their Oath and who now lay prostrate in the sanctuary, the Archbishop answered with a prayer in Latin: "Go, my beloved brethren, to the sheep that perish, that have been bought with a great price. Let the powers of darkness retreat. Let the angels of the Lord accompany thee on thy way. May the One God, invisible and immortal, have honor and glory for ever and ever. Amen."

The noble Itinerarium from the Breviary was chanted by the Schola Cantorum which sang also the Departure Hymn:

"Go forth, ye heralds of God's tender mercy,
The day has come, at last the day of joy.
Your burning zeal is by no fetters shackled,
Go forth, O brothers, happy you! Go forth.

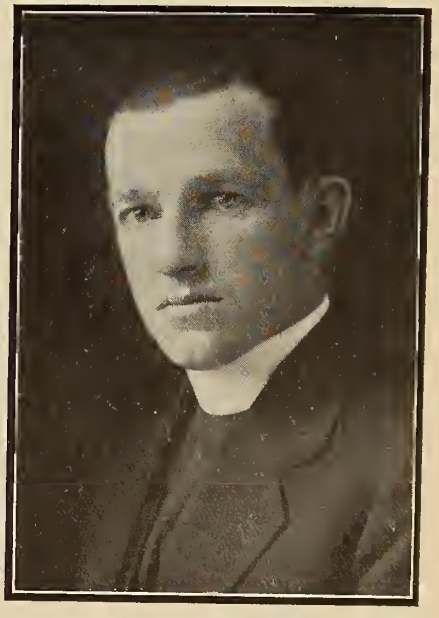
Go forth, farewell for life, O dearest brothers;
Proclaim afar the sweetest name of God.
We meet again one day in heaven's land of blessings.
Farewell, brothers, farewell."

At the end of the Departure Hymn the nine missionaries faced the congregation to which, with their newly received crucifixes, they gave their priestly blessing. The Blessed Sacrament was solemnly enthroned in the monstrance and the whole congregation burst forth into the "O Salutaris Hostia." The glorious service concluded with Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament given by His Grace the Archbishop.

—Toronto "Catholic Register."

* * *

The ceremonies were faultlessly executed by the Seminarians of China Mission, under the guidance of Mr. Michael Carey and Mr. John McGoey. Assisting the Archbishop as Deacon and Subdeacon, respectively, were Rev. A. Chafe of the Seminary staff, and Rev. Wm. McNabb, missionary returned from Chuchow on health furlough. The music was in charge of Rev. Dr. Ronan, directing both the Schola Cantorum of St. Augustine's Seminary and the Gallery Choir of St. Michael's Cathedral.



During the week the nine new missionaries left Toronto for Winnipeg, where, on Sunday night, Oct. 25, another departure ceremony was held at the request of His Excellency, Archbishop Alfred Sinnott.

The C.P.R. "Empress of Russia," sailing from Vancouver, Saturday, Oct. 31, takes the Mission Band to Shanghai, from which point they will proceed to Lishui.

FROM THE DIOCESES OF HAMILTON and ALEXANDRIA

REV. GERARD McKERNAN,
Brantford, Ont.

REV. ALLAN McRAE,
St. Raphael's, Ont.

Father McRae was ordained by His Excellency Bishop Coutourier, O.P., at Alexandria, on June 28th, 1936; Father McKernan was ordained in Toronto on September 19th by His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan

BODY a

By REV. C

A Schoolboy Talks With the Priest

"Spiritual Father, I have finished my school-course; I come to ask if you have a position for me. My unworthy name is Chan. Chan K'uei Shing. Thirteen, this year. Two years ago I was baptized. I was at school in Lishui then. The Spiritual Father there paid for me. What can I do? I know the duties of Sacristan. Yes, I serve Mass. And Benediction. Once I lead the prayers for the Way of the Cross. I could also serve the priest. No, I don't know what a fork is. A knife? For cutting vegetables and sugar-cane. I could learn it all very quickly. Yes, I know I'll have to get up early and bring water to the priests' rooms—even clean and hot water if you want it. I am a great hand at ringing bells. And hearing them too. How much money would I want? Don't think of it; I wouldn't want much if I eat my rice at the mission. No, I have no wife. The girl my father had picked for me died last year. She was twelve. No, but the catechist baptized her just before she died. You will think it over about the job? A thousand thanks, Spiritual Father—I am so unworthy. Yes, I will be around. Good-bye, Father. work slowly."

The Catechist Makes a Report

"Spiritual Father, a baby was left at the door last night. It was found when we opened the gates this morning. It seems well; it is crying a lot. A baby-girl; about two months old, I guess. No, nobody knows whose it is and no message with it except a slip bearing its first name. No clothes except what it is wrapped in. It is in a basket. No, certainly there is nothing we can do about it; we have no orphanage here yet. It is too bad, but we will have to send it to the public orphanage. No, it does not seem sick like the last one, and so we can't baptize it. Yes, it is sad. If we did take it and try to do something for it there would be hundreds of others left here within a month. No, certainly no other plan. Yes, I will have it sent away —I hear it is crying more and more—for milk, and there is no mother to feed it. Work slowly, Father."

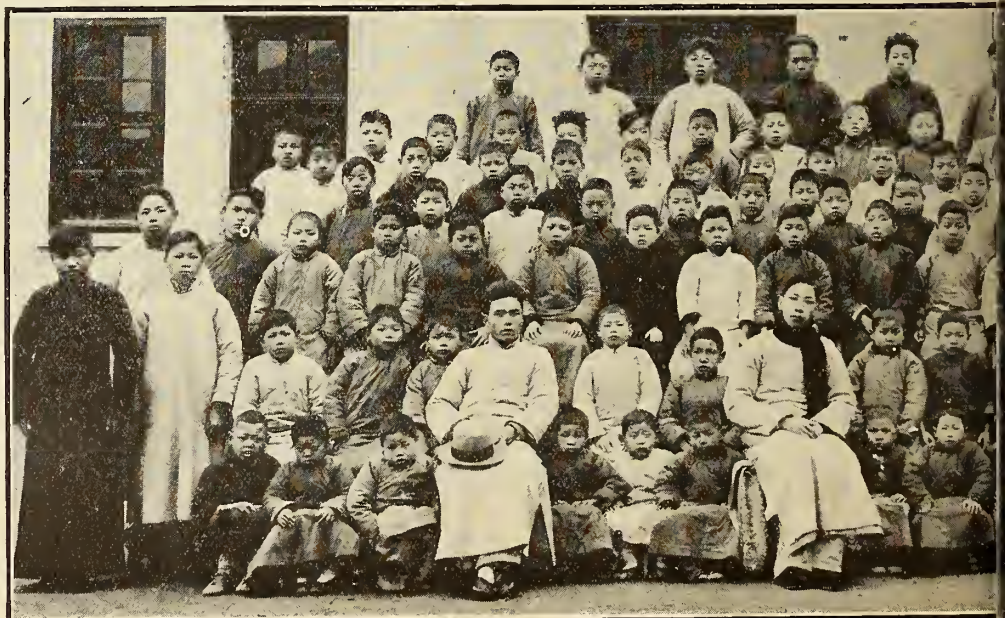
The Catechist Reports Again

"Father, the jail keeper was here today. No, he wasn't looking for any of us, neither are there any Christians in jail—now. Nor was he asking for food—he expressed thanks though for the meal you gave the prisoners last Christmas. But he just heard of the Sisters who were down here a few days ago for little Tse Ying, who had cholera. She is much better now, thank you Father. The news just reached the jail that the Sisters did some vaccinating here. Well, he wanted to know if he asked the mandarin (major) for permission, would they do the same for the prisoners. Yes, many of them are sick already. There are eighty in all—you heard of the three who escaped last week—one was caught carrying a woman on his back—he is back in jail again; two days ago they caught another who was a bandit—that's the one they shot yesterday. Anyway, I told the keeper the Sisters had gone back to Lishui, and possibly the mandarin would not care to do so, for fear of making the local doctors lose face as well as trade. Yes, I told him he was too late—he says he hopes they come again sometime. There were quite a few others here today and yesterday looking for medicine—one man sent his servant down from the country. Maybe later

THE SPIRITUAL FATHER W

Dear Readers of China: I have just gathered a repre together rather at random, and written to give you some con from the "official" kind, such as the demands of the upkeep and servants. The "official" help is supplied by the mission extras are supplied from the personal resources of the priest

The pot pourri assembled here may give the impressio of our pastors," has been turned round by the Chinese, so tha and observe it as best they can—they supply food for the whole, they are unable to do. I have been able to cite only Christian, for that man is a little better off than his neighbors



It is not through a sense of duty that we undertake to charity, and as every Christian has the duty of contributing them as generous as possible. You will understand that I am Chinese polite "proceed slowly."

Catholic Wills

For Mission Needs

In China, our priests need funds for new chapels, for new schools, for new homes, and for payment of salaries to catechists. In Canada, our Seminary needs support for the training of young apostles and for the maintenance of their home. Donations to our Burse Fund and our Building Fund are our greatest present needs. Think of our Mission work when making, or changing, your last will. Here's how you can do it; insert this clause in your will:

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO, THE SUM OF ....."

Boys attending the Mission School at Lishui, headquarters of the Canadian Mission in China. Seate seated in front are the Chinese teachers. When you help our Missions by your

d SOUL

STRANG

) HIS FRIENDS AT HOME

t by no means comprehensive compilation of incidents, strung e perpetual demands for material help, which help is separate roperty, rents, schools, dispensary and salaries of catechists n comes solely from the kind donations of you at home—the ourth Precept of the Church, "To contribute to the support n rests upon the pastors. But they have the fourth precept e mission, and candles and labor, but more than that, as a in which full expenses for a sick call were paid by the ne of the extra demands, but rather at the dictates of Christian "official" expenses, we also appeal to your charity to make ul of your help in the past as I conclude this letter with the

we will have a dispensary here. Not yet, though, eh? You are going out now, Father? Walk slowly."

A Sick Man's Last Request

"Father, I believe in God. I am a very old Christian. See my grandchildren, all baptized. I am drawing near the end, but I am not afraid. I have performed spiritual work (confession), received Last Holy Body (Viaticum) and final blessing (Extreme Unction). I thank the Spiritual Father for coming to my home. Father, drink some tea. It is very poor, I have nothing nice to offer you. And I have no coffin. I never could afford to buy one and now my children will have to go in debt to buy one for me. My father had a very nice coffin—I helped him to make it. When I am dead I want to lie by him—in a coffin like his. But I cannot buy one. I know, Father, I know my body will decay, but if I have no coffin how will the Christians come to my funeral and read prayers? Will you help to buy one, Father? It will make my last few days free from care—body and soul. I thank God for my many years, and for my sons and grandsons; I thank Father for helping to buy the coffin. Drink the tea slowly. Father. . . ."

The Guest-Master at Lishui Writes a Letter

"Reverend Father Sun, great person and Spiritual Father, this miserable sinner presumes to scribble this miserable letter and greet you with blessings of soul and body and with wishes for a long and peaceful life. This unworthy one prays for you every day. May you always meet with happiness. This poor writer often recalls how you, O blessed Father, used to talk with him at the mission gate at Lishui. I was not feeling well then and the Sisters gave me medicine, but they could not give it all the time. Cod liver oil is very expensive. Father Mo, great person, bought me some bottles. So did Father Sun. May you always enjoy perfect health. These bottles are empty now and I am feeling better, but am not real strong yet. If I had some more of that good foreign medicine, God would give me all my strength. Alas, miserable in many ways, I cannot afford to buy any myself. I know in your charity you will continue to help me a little longer.

"This mean one lives in happiness of soon seeing again your honorable body; let these words serve as a perpetual welcome, but weigh them lightly for they come from a wretched creature, your spiritual son, Zeng Bing San."

An Old Crippled Lady Greets the Priest

"Oh Father Sun, how glad I am to see you again after so long an absence. You arrived today? From Tsingtien? Yes, I still come here every Sunday with one leg always resting on this chair, for my left foot and leg are very sore yet—I don't think I'll ever be cured now—I'm so old. How is it I am here on Saturday? Well, last Saturday was our Blessed Mother's big feast and I came to Mass and doctrine. When I went home, I forgot it was Saturday and started counting the seven days as usual until the next week. Each day I put a little pebble in a bowl and when there are seven I go to church—I can't read the calendar. Today there were seven, but it was from last Saturday, not last Sunday—I will come again tomorrow. Does Father Sun understand my words? But at home I am very miserable, I have only a grandson and he is too small yet to earn much. Many is Father Paul Kam, the first and only Chinese priest ever ordained in Canada. The four others aiding in the development of such splendid groups as the one shown above.

HELP THE MISSIONS

1. By praying every day for the propagation of the Faith.
2. By your generous material assistance to our Seminary.
3. By becoming a subscriber to "CHINA", the official publication of St. F. X. Seminary. The subscription price is fifty cents for one year—a life subscription costs ten dollars.
4. By making a Catholic Will — our legal title is Saint Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

times there is no rice in the bin. I can't help it Father, if I am crying; it is so hard for an old woman like me. Father Sun used to help me out and the Sisters would give me my dinner on Sundays, but Father Sun is not at Lishui any more—he is in Tsingtien. What is that? O thank you, Spiritual Father, you are good; my grandson and I will pray for you. You cannot take my grandson and give him something to do? All right, we will talk about that later. God bless you, Father. Walk slowly."

The Catechist as Middle-Man

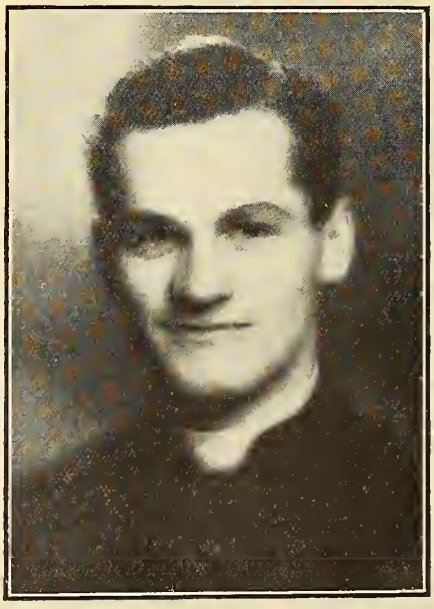
"Father, may I speak a few words with you? About the school boys going to Lishui to school. Many of them say they cannot afford to pay the whole fee—yes, they know it is very cheap—twelve dollars a term for non-baptized is very reasonable, and six for Christians is really a gift. One of the boys says he can pay in kind by giving rice—yes, he is baptized. Four Christians and three pagans can, and are willing to, pay full tuition, but the remaining eight all want help of some kind. Some of them; yes, they are really badly off; they haven't a thing and this is the only way to get them to study doctrine—the others are able to give something—they are all poor enough. You will pay the balance? And the boat-fare up the river? The mission will take care of that? All right, Father, thank you; yes, I will tell them; yes, they will all be here with their bedding and little boxes and parcels. Pardon me, Father. I was forgetting; one little boy says he has no shoes or stockings and so cannot go to Communion or serve Mass. Yes, he really cannot buy them; yes, I will buy them—oh, for the shoes about sixty cents — for the stockings twenty will be enough. He will come to thank you; no, he is not the lad who had his clothes stolen last term—that fellow is here again wearing the new suit you bought him. He wants to know if you have any medicine. Stomach-ache. Give him that? Yes, but my, he will make faces when he swallows it. Yes, that is all I have to ask just now. Work slowly, Father."

At Dinner During a Long Sick Call

"Father Sun, this is the third time this year you have come over the mountains to visit my sick Father. Yes, all this year and last he has been very weak, he cannot last much longer. He was too weak today to make his confession? But he understood enough to know that he was receiving last Holy Body and Final Blessing? He could not recall much else though—he was very anxious to know your name. Eat your rice, Father; I am sorry the vegetables are so poor. Father is very polite. Father had a long trip by chair to get here? Over four hours? Yes, it usually is about that. Eat slowly, Father. As on former occasions, Father will permit me to pay for the chair. One dollar to each of the two bearers. The first time Mr. Un, the catechist, was with you, but you know the way now and can understand some of our country dialect. More rice, Father? No? Tea? Yes, the foreign priests always like tea with their meals. Tea and peanuts. Here is the money for the carriers, Father—yes, it is better to leave soon for it will be dark by the time you get to the big river. Walk very slowly."

The Next Day at Tsingtien

"Father, my father died last night; yes, very peacefully; he was a good old Christian; I am very happy you were there yesterday. I come to ask if the catechist and some Christians may come to my poor dwelling and read prayers. The funeral is tomorrow. They will be back tomorrow night. Father, here is a dollar; will you have the death notice sheets printed and sent to the other churches so that the Christians will pray for his soul? Yes, there is enough there for the postage. Thank you, Father, I will be going now and will be down again for the big feast on August 15th. Work slowly, Father."



MASS INTENTIONS

Mass Intentions are badly needed by our priests in China. Send your intentions to the Seminary and they will be cabled to our missionaries in Chuchow.

THREE NEW MISSIONARIES FROM THE DIOCESE OF ANTIGONISH, N.S.

REV. ALEXANDER MacINTOSH,
St. Andrew's, N.S.

REV. CHARLES MURPHY,
Sydney, N.S.

REV. HARVEY STEELE,
Dominion, N.S.

These three priests were ordained at Old Bridgeport, N.S., by His Excellency Bishop Morrison of Antigonish, on Aug. 9th, 1936.

LIFE IN CHINA

(Continued from page 133)

people in sanitary knowledge, or illustrate the changing industrial and living conditions in China, or demonstrate scientific truths, etc.

Orders will be issued to the provincial and municipal governments directing their attention to the unique potentialities in this movie-educational movement, and asking their co-operation.

The special committee of the Ministry of Education must first train a personnel to be competent to produce the proposed films, then they must purchase a great many projecting machines to be distributed to the various provinces and municipalities—and then this far-sighted campaign for education of the masses will get under way.

Rockefeller Foundation and China

The annnual report for 1935 of the Rockefeller Foundation mentions several aspects of its work in China.

In connection with the development of mutual understanding with the Far East, aid was given to Harvard University for work in Oriental art; to the American Council of the Institute of Pacific Relations, to study methods of teaching Chinese; to the Library of Congress, for the development of a Far-Eastern Centre, and to the National Library of Peiping, China, for its Quarterly Bulletin of Chinese Bibliography.

It has also provided funds for diphtheria investigation in Peiping.

—Fu Jen Magazine.

A STATEMENT

EVERY year, following Mission Sunday and the Parish collections for the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, we receive numerous letters asking that individual contributions be credited in our donation records, or complaining that "my subscription expiry date has not been changed on 'CHINA'."

May we make it clear to our subscribers, and the public generally, that China Mission Seminary DOES NOT SHARE in the Funds collected at any time for the Society for the Propagation of the Faith.

China Mission Seminary has no annual collection in parish churches. The Seminary depends entirely for its support, and for the development of its Missions in China, on the free-will offerings sent by interested friends through the medium of the mail. And just now we are in need of a legion of such friends.

JOHN E. McRAE.

CHINA

SUBSCRIBERS ARE REQUESTED TO READ THE FOLLOWING VERY CAREFULLY

The subscription price to CHINA is fifty cents a year. Subscribers who do not receive the magazine regularly will confer a favor by notifying us.

CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Do not fail to inform us promptly if at any time you change your address. In doing so, please send us your old as well as your new address.

DUPLICATE COPIES

If you are receiving two copies of CHINA, and have subscribed for only one, kindly let us know.

SENDING SUBSCRIPTIONS

In sending your subscription to CHINA, be sure to state WHETHER IT IS A RENEWAL OR A NEW SUBSCRIPTION.

MRS. OR MISS

Very often we do not know which to put on our stencil, as there is nothing to indicate which it should be. Will our lady friends kindly make this clear.

ATTENTION TO THE ABOVE DETAILS WILL BE GREATLY APPRECIATED

REMITTANCES

Money should be sent by Post Office or Express Money Orders, Drafts or Registered Letters to ensure safe delivery. All such orders may be made payable to:

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONT.

OUR THANKS

During September a card party, convened by Mrs. J. H. Colvey and a number of friends, brought together a large crowd at St. Augustine's Parish Hall, Montreal, which was kindly placed at the disposal of the committee by the pastor, Very Rev. Canon Heffernan. The very creditable financial returns were donated to China Mission Seminary, and we are grateful to all concerned for their generous assistance.

* * *

To Mrs. Bunce of Toronto we express our thanks for her efforts to help replenish the Seminary larder by her contributions of preserves, etc.

* * *

To the young ladies of St. Joseph's Parish, Toronto, members of the B.V.M. Sodality, we are grateful for a large supply of Altar linens for use in China.

* * *

We avail of this opportunity also to say a hearty "thank you" to the good friends who sent various gifts to be taken to our Priests and the Grey Sisters in Lishui. On their behalf we assure the donors that their thoughtful remembrance is much appreciated.

* * *

Our appeal for funds to pay the expenses of our missionaries now en route to China met with a fairly generous response and we are deeply indebted to all who sent us aid.

DEATH OF MISSIONARY'S MOTHER

Last month we recorded deaths in the families of four of our missionaries. This month it is our sad duty to report still another. Mrs. Roberts, the mother of Rev. Roland Roberts of our Chinese Mission in Vancouver, B.C., died in hospital in Victoria, B.C., on Sunday, October 25th. We offer our sincere sympathy to Father Roberts, his sister Kathleen, and to the bereaved husband, Mr. George Roberts. From the readers of "CHINA" we ask a prayer for the soul of the deceased mother of a missionary priest. Requiescat in pace.

A SOLITARY bird, the eagle. In that, he differs from other winged creatures. They live in flocks. And they fight in flocks. But alone the eagle battles. Perhaps, that is why, inevitably, he brings the missioner to our mind. Because "in the world of men", it is in the missioner, and almost uniquely in the missioner, that the eagle's isolated strength finds its analogy. For he, more than any man, fights for what he believes, not side by side with those of his own race and ideals. But apart, in the midst of an alien culture, he struggles to bring the Truth to those who have no inkling of it. And the singleness of mind, the courage of the eagle—these he must have in his efforts. But, as he is human, he trusts two things: his God and his people at home, who are "backing" him. Because of these, he does not fly alone.

—"Catholic Missions"

CONDITIONS OF MEMBERSHIP

The only conditions of membership in the Rose Garden are: (1) To say every day the Prayer for the Conversion of China; (2) To go to Holy Communion once a month for the Intention of Missionary Vocations. Certificates will be sent to all members.

Catholic Mission Rally in Cape Breton

ON Sunday, September 6th, the Mission Crusade Units of Cape Breton held a general rally at the Sacred Heart Church in the City of Sydney. This was the first general assembly of Crusaders ever held in Cape Breton, and the success of the whole affair was beyond expectations.

The program opened with Solemn High Mass in the Sacred Heart Church, Rev. Harvey Steele of China Mission Seminary being the celebrant of the Mass, assisted by Rev. Charles Murphy and Rev. Alexander MacIntosh, also of the China Mission Seminary, as Deacon and Sub-Deacon, and Rev. John Edwards, C.C., as master of ceremonies.

The sermon for the occasion was delivered by Rev. William Gallivan of St. Theresa's Parish, Sydney. Rev. Father Gallivan strongly emphasized the importance of missionary endeavors in the life of the Church, and stressed the obligation which falls upon every Catholic to help the work of the Missions not only by our prayers, but also by seeing to it that they are supplied with the necessary material needs. He paid tribute to the three Missioners present, who were recently ordained at Bridgeport, and who would be sailing for China next Fall from St. Francis Xavier Seminary.

In the afternoon, the Crusaders from the various units, numbering about 800, filled the Lyceum Theatre to capacity. On the stage were the various speakers for the afternoon, with Rev. Ronald C. MacGillivray, P.P., presiding. Due to the absence of His Excellency Bishop Morrison (who arrived later) the opening address to the Crusaders was delivered by Rev. P. J. Nicholson, Ph.D., of St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish. A feature of the afternoon's program was the general sing-song under the leadership of Rev. Michael McLaughlin of St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish. This was perhaps the most enjoyable part of the whole afternoon as far as the younger Crusaders were concerned. Towards the end of the program, copies of "China" were distributed to those present. The Crusaders, under the direction of the various Sisters, marched to the Sacred Heart Church, where the Rally came to a close with Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, and the taking of the Crusader's pledge.

After the program had been completed, the various Orders of Sisters from the different towns met for the purpose of drawing up plans to have Crusade units established in the rural schools.

THE PROGRAM

11.00 a.m.—Solemn High Mass at Sacred Heart Church, Sydney.
Sermon—Rev. William Gallivan.

1.45 p.m.—General Assembly and Opening in Lyceum.
Chairman—Rev. R. C. MacGillivray, P.P.
Opening Address—Rev. Dr. P. J. Nicholson.

2.30 p.m.—Paper by Mr. Peter Nearing of St. F.X. Extension Department, "The Role of Catholic Youth in Combatting Communism".

3.15 p.m.—Reports of the activities of the various units during the past year were read.

3.30 p.m.—Recreational singing, conducted by Rev. M. McLaughlin.

4.00 p.m.—Paper by Rev. Harvey Steele, "The Medical Missions".

4.45 p.m.—Motion Pictures—Rev. M. M. MacDonald.

5.00 p.m.—Benediction of Blessed Sacrament—Rev. Alexander MacIntosh.
Crusaders' Pledge and closing hymn.

—H. S.

To the Boys and Girls of the "Rose Garden":—

We have been given space in "China" only a few times this year, but yet often enough to keep in touch with one another officially. The Club work goes on without ceasing, and our occasional appearance in print is sufficient to acquaint new young readers with what we wish them to do. That's all they need, apparently, for they join in large numbers, undertaking to perform the simple duties, namely, to say every day the prayer for the Conversion of China, and go to Holy Communion once a month for the intention of missionary vocations. When I receive their names they get a Certificate of Membership; if their names come with a list from their school Class then the Class only gets a certificate. I am saving some fine pictures for a future issue, and I hope lots of new pictures will be sent.

I know most of our members are trying hard to go to Mass each day during November in honour of the Holy Souls. I ask that at Mass especially our boys and girls pray hard for our nine young priests now on their way to China, and for all our priests and sisters on the Missions. I feel sure that the large number of vocations given to young men in recent years for the Chinese Missions have been in some measure due to the fervent prayers and Holy Communions of our young "Rose Garden" members.

Father Editor tells me I ought to interest my young friends this month in supporting the idea of getting mission miteboxes into Catholic homes. (They're interested, Father Editor, as soon as the subject is broached; in fact our young friends have all along been the best to fill Johnny Mitebox, but I'll make a special request to oblige you.) So, Father Jim wants every member of his Club, past and present, to send him a request for a mitebox for your home. It will be used by your parents and your working brothers and sisters. You yourselves keep on being good to the China Mission Mitebox in your school, and in interesting your companions in our Mission Club. And I for my part will continue to serve your interests as best I can, not forgetting my remembrance of you in Holy Mass. From now till Christmas holidays (which are not so very far off) let's all be keen on working hard for the Missions.

Your friend,
FATHER JIM.

Space does not permit anything more than a brief mention of the following Schools and Crusade Units from which donations and lovely letters were lately received. We thank most sincerely the pupils and their zealous teachers concerned. St. Agnes Priory School, West Kildonan, Man.; Grade 9, per Joan Ryan, St. Joseph's School, North Sydney, N.S.; St. Albert's School, Sudbury, Ont., for the ransom of two Chinese babies to be named "Albert Joseph" and "Mary Therese"; Crusaders, Notre Dame Convent, Inverness, N.S.; St. Brigid's School, Hamilton; Pupils of Room 3, St. Mary's School, Barrie, Ont.; Grade 10, St. Joseph's School, North Sydney, per Ann Meech; Notre Dame Convent's Mission Circle, Kingston, Ont., per Jean Carty; Pupils of Grades 4 and 5, Holy Angels' Convent, Sydney; St. John's School, New Aberdeen, N.S.; Pupils of Monk's Head School, Pomquet, N.S., per Theresa Broussard; Grade 11, St. Joseph's High School, Sydney, per Nan MacDonald; St. Mary's School, Campbellford, Ont.; and St. Lawrence School, Hamilton, Ont.

Thanks to the "Little Flower" for favours received.
—K. M., Sault Ste. Marie.

New members whom we welcomed to our club recently are: Patricia Davis, 9 Circular Road, Grand Falls, Nfld.; Marguerite McIsaac, 32 Livingstone St., Halifax N.S.; Alice Noseworthy, Black Head, Nfld.

"Boys, oh boys, were the 'Willing Nine' ever proud when the March 'China' came with our letter in it; we were so glad to think you gave us such a big mention in your Club columns. All the Sisters in school noticed it in the 'China', too. It is nice to know our little efforts are appreciated."

That's Gwen Hatchette's introduction to another long and newsy letter from Halifax. I told you about the "Willing Nine" in the March issue, and they're right on the job again. Gwen told me "each class in our school has to raise twenty-five dollars for the missions, so our class with another class of 25 girls planned an 'At Home' for St. Patrick's Day. We served refreshments and had a big programme. We made over fifty dollars, so each class obtained their objective."

Above are pictured some enthusiastic little Missionaries who delight in the title of "Little Workers of Our Lady". They are in Grade 6 at St. Angela's School, Calgary, Alta. The group at the right is the Executive of the "Little Workers". I should like very much to have lots of pictures of school groups and of individuals who work for the Missions. Send your picture to Father Jim.

THE "ROSE OF CHINA"

By Rev. R. Roberts, Vancouver Chinese Mission

A PERSON who has never been materially connected with our work among her country-people here in the Occident, but whom we feel to be actively interested is Marie Therese Wang, more popularly known in many circles as the "Rose of China". Marie Therese first looked upon the passing glories of this world on April 1st, 1917, when she was born into a well-to-do and cultured family in the ancient, pagan city of Pekin. She was given the name Ta-Jun—"all gracious". All the advantages of wealth and position were combined to produce in this little flower of the Orient the personification of Chinese culture—a culture which lacks only the elevating influence of true Christianity.

At the age of eleven Ta-Jun graduated from the elementary school with distinction; however, the happiness of the occasion was marred by the grave fears that she was suffering from tuberculosis, fears which became realities when she was placed in St. Michael's Hospital for examination. Strange as it may seem, Ta-Jun became immediately attached to her new surroundings and the good Sisters of Charity became at once her intimate friends. Providence had destined that this little girl should be placed in a room immediately below the chapel. The early morning and late evening prayers, the softly sung hymns, aroused that curiosity so universal among the Chinese, and soon she was making inquiries; innocent questions that have had tremendous repercussions, questions which are remotely responsible for the prayers which today are being offered up throughout the Catholic world that Ta-Jun may receive the honor of beatification.

April 25th, 1929, was a happy day for our little friend, for on that day she was baptized and took the name of Marie Therese, and on the following day the Bread of Life entered that pure sanctuary to strengthen it for the terrible ordeal ahead.

For a while she made good progress along the path of recovery, so much so that she was permitted to leave the hospital; but the recovery was not complete, and before long Marie Therese again occupied her little white room below the chapel. With this relapse crumbled all her hopes of becoming a Sister of Charity, but it did not deter her from fulfilling her desire to consecrate her virginity to God, a desire which was approved of by the Apostolic Delegate, His Excellency Archbishop Costantini, who, while visiting the hospital, gave her his special blessing.

The dread disease made alarming inroads, and on February 17th, it was considered advisable to give her the last rites of the Church. The agony began early on February 24th, and reached its climax at 6.30 in the evening. Shortly before that hour her features relaxed and a heavenly smile surmounted her lips, her eyes opened and remained fixed on some object invisible to those attending her, and her arms were extended as if to embrace the vision which attracted her, and in this manner she died. Today this little Chinese girl, this "Rose of China" receives the veneration of many of the faithful. Many requests are being made to her and many are being answered.

NONSENSE

"IF YOU DON'T LAUGH AT THE JOKES OF THE AGE, THEN LAUGH AT THE AGE OF THE JOKES"

Old Lady—"Isn't it wonderful how one policeman can dam the flow of traffic?"

Boy — "Yes, Grannie; but you should hear the bus drivers!"

Man—"Heard Dave's going in for settlement work."

Friend—"Salvation Army?"

Man—"No, bill collecting."

Old Aunt (despondently)—"Well, I shall not be a nuisance to you much longer."

Nephew (reassuringly) — "Don't talk like that, aunt, you know you will."

Lady Interviewer — "Then your knowledge, McTuggan, must cover a very wide field."

Dentist — "Thousands of achers, madam, roughly speaking."

"Ow's yr Missis, George?"

"Oh, she be a-jawin' an a-jawin' an' a-jawin'."

"What's she jawin' about?"

"Well, she don't say."

Magistrate—"I seem to know your face!"

Prisoner—"Yus, we was boys together."

Magistrate—"Nonsense."

Prisoner—"Yus, we was. We're both about the same age, so we must have bin boys together!"

Fall—"You should have seen the fish I caught last week. It was so big it pulled me into the river."

Dowell—"Got a wetting, I suppose?"

Fall—"Oh no, thank goodness, I landed right on top of the fish."

Lawyer—"You say defendant ran his car into the show window of a millinery store; that doesn't show he was intoxicated, does it?"

Officer—"No, but when I arrested him he was trying on the hats."

"Hi, there," bellowed a policeman to an inebriated citizen, "you can't stand there in the street."

"Yes, I can, orfsher," retorted the citizen proudly. "Don't you worry 'bout me. I been standin' here an hour an' ain't fell off yet."

Mother—"You must learn to button your frock yourself."

Betty—"Oh, dear, I don't know what I'd do without myself."

With a grinding of brakes the officer pulled up his motor car, and shouted to a little boy playing in the field:

"I say, sonny, have you seen an airplane come down anywhere near here?"

"No, sir!" replied the boy, trying to hide his tiny slingshot. "I've only been shooting at a bottle."

Two youths went to see a billiards match in which two well-known pros were playing. After watching one of them silently pile up a huge break, one said to the other:

"What do they call this game, Alf."

"Why, billiards, of course," replied Alf.

The other man was silent for a few minutes, then he whispered again to Alf:

"Well, what's the name of that game we played?"

"Can you get my pendulum clock to work?" asked the simple-looking person in the jeweller's shop.

"We will endeavor to," replied the jeweler.

The customer unwrapped a small parcel.

The jeweler gazed in wonderment at the contents.

"But this is no use," he said. "In order to mend the clock we must have the whole thing. You've only brought us the pendulum.

"Well," replied the customer, brightly, "it is only the pendulum as won't go."

"Gosh, you're dumb. Why don't you get an encylopedia?"

"The pedals hurt my feet."

Doctor—"I just can't diagnose your case. I think it must be drink."

Patient—"Righto, doctor. I'll come back when you're sober."

"Johnnie," said the teacher reprovingly, "you misspelled most of the words in your composition."

"Yes'm," explained Johnnie. I'm going to be a dialect writer."

"It is simply a question of veracity between us," said the oldest inhabitant. "He said I was a liar, and I said he was one."

"Humph!" rejoined the village postmaster. "That's the first time I ever heard either of you telling the truth."

"Mah bredren," said a Negro preacher, "when yo' hears Gabriel sound his horn, yo' wants to be ready to jump."

"Mah goodness!" excitedly exclaimed one of the congregation, "am he acomin' in an automobile?"

A very energetic business man bustled into his office on Monday morning to find his staff taking things rather easily.

"Come, come; this won't do," he exclaimed. "Here's Monday morning, tomorrow's Tuesday, the next day's Wednesdy—half the week gone, and nothing done."

City Girl—"And I suppose at dusk, when the sun is stealing over the Rockies in purple splendor, you cowboys are huddled around the campfire broiling venison and listening to the weird eerie, unnatural howling of the coyotes."

Rattlesnake Gus—"Well, ma'am, not ezzackly. Usually we go inside and listen to Amos and Andy."

A judge's little daughter, who had attended her father's court for the first time, was very interested in the proceedings. After her return home she told a visitor:

"Daddy made a speech, and several other men made speeches to twelve men who sat all together, and then the twelve men were put in a dark room to be developed."

Mother was trying to patch up the quarrel between her little son and daughter.

"Now, Tommy," said she, "I read the other day of a little boy in England who walked ten miles through the snow to fetch a doctor to his little sister. Now, would you do that?"

"No," replied Tommy, "but I'd do it to fetch a dentist."

A man, nearly eighty, walked twenty miles from his home to an adjoining town. When he reached his destination he was greeted with some astonishment by an acquaintance.

"You walked all the way?" exclaimed the acquaintance. "How did you get along?"

"Oh, first rate," the old man replied. "That is, I did till I came to that sign out there, 'Slow Down to Twenty-five Miles Per Hour.' That kept me back some."

THE LAST CALL to Readers of "China"!

WHEN the next issue of "China" reaches you, nine priests from St. Francis Xavier's Seminary will have completed their journey to Chuchow in China. Last month we appealed for your financial assistance to provide their passage money. We think many people to whose homes "China" is a regular monthly visitor will want to have a share in the sending to the Mission Fields of these nine new missionaries. This is the last opportunity you will have to contribute to their expenses. May we ask you once more to make use of the coupon printed below. It will take you only a minute to enclose your donation in an envelope and mail it today to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario
Very Rev. J. E. McRae, President.

Dear Fathers:

Enclosed please find $..... , my contribution to help pay for the journey of your nine priests who sailed for China on October 31st.

My Name .....

Address .....

.....

WANTED!
Five Thousand People
To Answer An Invitation

+

The Invitation . . St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, invites you to enlist your family in a Mission League.

The Object . . . . To help the Seminary educate its students for the Missionary Priesthood, and to send aid to its Missionaries working in Chuchow, China.

The Method . . . To deposit ONE CENT A DAY in a China Mission Mite-box kept in your home.

How to Join . . . Just send to us for a Mission Mite-box. That's all. You don't even have to write a letter. Just use the Coupon below.

The Easiest and Simplest Way for Every Catholic Family in Canada and Newfoundland to Do Its Duty by Supporting Canada's Only Foreign Mission Seminary for English-speaking Catholics.

READ PAGE 131
in this issue

——————————MAIL THIS TODAY——————————

ST. F. X. SEMINARY,
Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Dear Fathers:

I want a China Mission Mite-box for my home. I intend to put in the Mite-box ONE CENT every day, and from time to time I'll send you what I've collected. I think that's the least every Catholic family could do to help your missionary works. Please enter my name as a member of your new Mission League, thereby entitling me to a share in all the Spiritual Benefits extended to benefactors of your Missions.

MY NAME .....

MY ADDRESS .....

.....

CHINA

Scarboro Bluffs. Ont. December 1936

OUR WORK

St. Francis Xavier Seminary is governed by the Bishops of Ontario through their Board of Administration, consisting of His Excellency Archbishop McGuigan, Toronto; His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Coadjutator Archbishop of Kingston; His Excellency Bishop Kidd, London; Very Rev. Dr. McRae, President of the Seminary, and Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath, Pref. Ap.

In order to provide missionaries for China the Seminary provides for the education of students in our Seminary at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

It supports parishes, churches and schools in the district allotted to it by the Holy See.

It establishes schools, employs native teachers and promotes Catholic education among both Christians and Pagans.

It trains and maintains catechists for instructing the Pagans in Catholic doctrine in districts in which there is not a resident Priest and to assist the missionaries in the larger mission centres.

When circumstances permit, it establishes dispensaries, medical missions and other charitable institutions for the poor and suffering. Through these and other practical works of charity the influence of the Church is extended and many are brought into the true fold.

To carry on this work the Seminary depends solely on contributions from the Faithful. We need your assistance, dear reader, if we are to help Our Lord bring to a fruitful issue the work which He came on earth to inaugurate.

His Holiness Pius XI says of our work:

"Since Jesus Christ proclaimed that the special mark of His disciples would be that they loved one another (John, 13:35; 15:12) can we vouchsafe to our neighbors a greater or more signal charity than that of having them withdraw from the darkness of superstitions, and instructed in the true faith of Christ? Nay, this surpasses any other works or testimonials of charity, as the mind surpasses the body, heaven, earth, eternity, time; and everyone that exercises this work of charity to the best of his ability, shows that he esteems the gift of faith as much as it is meet and just that he should esteem it, and moreover, he manifests his gratitude towards the Goodness of God by sharing with the poor Pagans this gift, the most precious of all."

PRIVILEGES OF BENEFACTORS:

1. They share in all the masses offered by our priests.

2. A Solemn Requiem Mass is offered each year for our deceased benefactors on the feast of All Souls.

3. They share in the prayers of our priests and students.

4. Two novenas of Benedictions of the Blessed Sacrament are offered yearly for the intentions of our benefactors.

5. Benefactors may apply all these privileges to their deceased friends.

Donations to the Seminary should be addressed to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY - SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO

ATTENTION!

THIS is the last issue of "China" for the present year, 1936. Our mailing list unfortunately includes many names of subscribers who are not paid quite up to date. The only means we use to advise delinquent subscribers is the expiry date on their address label. Look at the date on your "China" now. If it does not read 1937, or later, we ask you to renew your subscription after you receive this issue. It costs only 50c for one year. When sending cheques or money orders please make them payable to

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
Scarboro Bluffs, Ont.

Quality Printers

ADelaide 2112-3-4-5

The Garden City Press
263 Adelaide St. West - Toronto

EDITORIAL PAGE

CHINA

PUBLISHED MONTHLY, AUGUST EXCEPTED, BY
ST. FRANCIS XAVIER SEMINARY
SCARBORO BLUFFS ONT.

Subscription: 50 cents per year. Editor, REV. A. CHAFE Circulation: 24,000
Entered as second-class matter and admitted to privileged postage rates at the Post Office, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, July 10th, 1924

Vol. XVII. DECEMBER, 1936 No. 10

We have one object in this life: to save our souls and to help others to save theirs. Nothing else should worry us. If we allow other things to enslave us and to draw us away from the goal of life's Journey, we will pay the tremendous price of sacrificing eternity for time, God for mammon.

☼

Pioneering, in whatsoever field of endeavor, is always a difficult task. Pioneers have to blaze a trail for the future, and in their labors they are without benefit of precedents. When their preparations are centered in places and circumstances more or less entirely alien to all their previous experience then their successes are all the more commendable.

When we speak of our Canadian missionaries in Chuchow we speak of pioneers. Less than a dozen years have passed since three priests from China Mission Seminary inaugurated our work in Chuchow. It was a magnificent venture. It has met with the magnificent blessings of God. It was inspired by confidence in Divine Providence. That same Divine Providence has sustained it. In the Catholic Church, where institutions are young even when they have functioned for centuries, St. Francis Xavier China Mission Institute is a veritable infant. But in its infant efforts it justifies its right to growth and expansion. Three priests went to Chuchow in 1925; a few students at the Seminary prepared to follow them. Nine priests went to Chuchow in 1936; fifty students are at the seminary preparing to go. The growth in numbers will not be stayed. It will bring an increase of difficulties in maintenance. It has already brought them. But the Directors of the Institute are seeking a solution.

Three experienced and very capable missionaries have been withdrawn from front-line duties to engage in necessary campaign work in Canada. It had to be. Always functioning under financial difficulties, our Missions have now reached the stage where further progress is impossible without increased means of financial support. The best way to receive this support is to let the Catholic people in Canada know of the pressing needs of our Missions. Those best qualified to tell of those needs are the priests who have labored long and been handicapped by lack of means on the Mission field. So Father Morrison (of P.E.I.), Father Stringer (of Ottawa, and Father Venadam (of Pomquet, N.S.) have come home. We trust that the Bishops and priests in Canada will give our returned missionaries the opportunity to present their case to the laity. From experience we know that the people at large are happy to help a deserving cause to the best of their ability.

☼

God has been good to us. He has given us life, the secret of happiness, every opportunity to gain an eternal crown. Infinitely more precious than all the honors, all the pleasures of the world is the Faith He has bequeathed to us. Cherish it; live according to its dictates; thank God daily for it. And don't forget to share it with others. God has commanded this and if we neglect this commandment only one-half of the task of life has been accomplished.

☼

China Mission Seminary wishes to give public expression of its gratitude to Most Reverend Alfred Sinnott, Archbishop of Winnipeg, for having given our missionaries an opportunity to participate for the first time in a Departure Ceremony held outside Toronto. Indicative of his own personal interest in our seminary were the measures His Excellency took to insure the success of the function. At his direction the various Pastors of the City announced special services in their churches at which priests from China Mission Seminary spoke on the work of the Missions and received generous financial support from the congregations. In a letter to his City clergy, referring to the departure of nine Canadian priests for China, His Excellency stated that it was "an event in the history of our country, and it shows unmistakeably how the missionary spirit has grown and developed amongst us during the last few years".

Communications from our priests following their stay in Winnipeg gave evidence of the lasting impressions their reception in the Western Archdiocese made on them. They were received an treated in a royal manner by their gracious host, his clergy, and his faithful people, and we are confident that the publicity resulting from Winnipeg's tribute will have long-enduring effects on the work of the Missions among Canadian Catholics.

☼

Prayer comes first for the propagation of the Faith in God's work and without Him all effort is vain. "Unless the Lord build the house, they labor in vain who build it". Alms are necessary to maintain the missionaries, to support their apostolic works, to keep catechists, to train young men for the priesthood. If we have much we should give much, if we have little we must give a little. A wonderful characteristic about such giving is that it always comes back. If you doubt this, just try it.

"China" Wishes All Its Readers A Very Merry Christmas!

JOTTINGS

By

REV. GERALD DOYLE

THIRTEEN HEADS may not be your idea of a suitable gift but, nevertheless, representatives of the village of Dalingah took great pleasure in presenting the heads of thirteen bandits to the mayor of Tsingtien. Coming from their village in the mountains across the river from Tsingtien, they carried the heads in baskets to the mayor's residence, passing the mission residence en route.

* * *

Bandits

THE AUTUMN here in China is a lovely season, but this year the bandits also seem to appreciate it and have once more commenced "activity." They are reported in several places and just now river traffic is held up as the boatmen refuse to pass certain sections of the river where bandits may be lurking. Father Amyot, in Lishui for the annual retreat, is awaiting word that the bandits have left his section of the country before returning home to his mountain mission.

* * *

Father Kearney's Work

OUR retreat this year was preached by Father James Kearney, S.J., from California, who is now stationed in Nanking, the capital of China, where he is commencing a work which may have great results for the future of the Catholic Church in China. With the help of co-labourers he is endeavouring to establish what might be called an "intellectual center" among the university students of Nanking. Following the general plan of the "Newman Hall" in America, one of the special aims of this institution will be to bring about a better understanding and appreciation of the Church among the future rulers and officials of the country. By a willingness to co-operate with university authorities in scientific research and kindred matters, and by explanation of the Catholic Church's attitude on various questions, it is hoped to break down prejudice against the Church and do away with certain misunderstandings which hinder the work of the missionary. For instance, if the future generation of officials in China were to consider the Catholic Church not as an organization teaching a foreign religion but rather a religion which is universal and in no wise opposed to the general welfare of China and the Chinese, then a great step forward would have been taken.

The work Father Kearney is starting deserves every encouragement. May it grow.

* * *

MISSIONARIES HOME FOR CAMPAIGN WORK

SO THAT our work here in China will not die, so that we may have the funds to go ahead and preach the Gospel, it has been found necessary to make a big sacrifice this year in sending back to Canada three experienced missionaries who will go about appealing to the Catholics of the country for the means to extend the Church of God in China. Our missionaries here in China are your representatives. Please assist them so that you may share in their reward. So, if Fathers Vincent Morrison, Desmond Stringer or Arthur Venadam preach in your parish church, visit your school, or meet you any other place, please respond to their appeal. No gift can be too large nor can any gift be too small. All gifts will be welcome. The continuance of our work depends upon you.

Coloured lantern slides of the work of the missionaries in China have been made so that these priests will be available not only for preaching in parish churches but also for lectures in schools and other places. The direction of the campaign is in the hands of Very Rev. J. E. McRae, St. Francis Xavier Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario. He will be glad to hear from priests and directors of schools and other organizations.

Please help us to carry on.

The Crib at Tsingtien

Parish Appointments

WITH THE commencement of another missionary year the priests are now settled at their various posts. In Lishui with Monsignor McGrath will be Father Gignac, who will have charge of the parish, and Fathers Curtin, Kam, and MacDonald. At Pi Wu Ka, Father Boudreau will be assisted by Fathers Wong and King, while Father Beal in Sungyang will have Father McGettigan to help him in that far-flung parish. Father Venini will be alone at Lungchuan and Father Amyot will be the sole member of the staff at Huang T'An. Here at Tsingtien Father Strang and I will endeavour to carry on the work which last year was under the direction of Father Stringer.

Of course the new arrivals this year will remain at Lishui to undertake the study of Chinese and become familiar with things Oriental.

* * *

Recently a former cook came to the mission and asked for old newspapers. He was to be married soon and he will use the papers to paper the walls of the bridal chamber. The bride will be delighted. No fooling.

* * *

Plans for Christmas

SHORTLY after you read these few paragraphs you will be celebrating the great feast of Christmas. On that feast Father Strang will probably celebrate midnight Mass and his Masses during the morning, in Tsingtien, while I plan to celebrate midnight Mass in the village of Dolu, saying a second Mass there in the morning, and then I shall walk the few miles to the chapel at Lei Shih where I shall celebrate my third Mass. This plan will permit a goodly number to hear Mass and receive Holy Communion. In the early afternoon I shall return to Tsingtien, where it is planned to have Christmas dinner in the evening. Perhaps one or two of the new missionaries will come to Tsingtien to pass the feast with us. We hope so.

And now, last but by no means least, I wish each of you a Holy and Merry Christmas, and a Happy and Prosperous New Year. May God be with you always.

OUR COVER

Scene during the Departure Ceremony at Winnipeg as Archbishop Sinnott receives Oath of Fidelity to the Missions from our nine priests on October 25th.

FATHER CURTIN REVIEWS THE SITUATION IN CHUCHOW

EXPERIENCED Missionaries caution the new-comer to China not to be disappointed if his work does not produce the objective results for which he hoped, and if the number of converts is far below his expectations. Despite this caution, in the Annual Report for this Prefecture, covering the past year, the number of converts seems to be small, disappointingly small. If it is human to be disappointed, it ought to be reasonable to inquire the cause or causes of this condition.

Is it scarcity of priests? Undoubtedly this is a contributing cause. The death of the late lamented Father McGillivray, the departure of Father Serla on a well-deserved holiday, and of Father McNabb on sick leave reduced the number, with no new men of equal experience to fill the gaps. In time, please God, this condition will change, with this year's band of nine, and as many, or more, in 1937. Our priests are not lacking in zeal, ability, or energy. There is a danger they are too energetic, in some cases, judging from the prevalence of sickness during the past few years.

Is it due to bandits? Yes, partly, but not entirely. One or two of our Missionaries have been forced to vacate their posts for months at a time because things became too "hot" for them, some have had to take short sorties to the mountains for safety, and more than once mission trips have had to be cancelled when the presence of bandits was reported. The people, too, are intimidated by this menace, and fearing that the Reds are hostile to a "foreign" religion, are slow to accept Christianity.

Lack of funds is another cause of the present condition. With more funds, more and better qualified Catechists could be employed, and the work of the Catechist in Mission countries is indispensable. It costs money to travel, in China as well as elsewhere, and if a priest wishes to make the contacts that will result in conversions, he must cover the territory regularly. With the present state of finances, this must necessarily be curtailed. But the dearth of conversions cannot be blamed entirely on lack of funds. Money might pour in in abundance, and yet the number of converts might still be small. There is another and greater reason.

To my mind, and I think I express the conviction of others more competent to judge, the cause of this is spiritual. We are not making converts because of the lack of prayer. Every one knows that conversion is a special grace, given only in answer to prayer. Are our friends, the friends of the Mission, using this most powerful means of gaining conversions in China? Few can go to the Foreign Missions to work directly for the salvation of souls there, but all can assist by prayer. St. Theresa has been justly chosen as the Patroness of the Missions, though she never left the soil of France for the purpose. She was an apostle of prayer. It is related in her Autobiography that she was inspired to begin the practice of selecting a Missionary for whom she offered special prayers and sacrifices, and so attractive and efficacious was the practice, that before her death she was given a second Missionary, who benefited by her prayers. She called these her adopted brother priests. This laudable practice is recommended to friends of our Missionaries, and readers of "China". It has already been referred to in these pages, and is being practised by some. A few months ago I had a letter from a pupil of one of our Catholic schools at home, telling me that it was introduced in their school. Each pupil was asked to select a Missionary, and to offer daily prayers for his success. God alone knows the good they will accomplish for His glory, and for the salvation of souls. Let us hope the practice will become more widespread, not only in our schools, but among the faithful generally. In the words of St. Theresa: "Beyond all doubt, it is by prayer and sacrifice that we can best help our Missionaries." It was a non-Catholic poet who said: "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of".

Soon the Church will celebrate the glorious Feast of Christmas, and Catholics throughout the world will once more recall the Birth of the Child Jesus. As you kneel at the Crib, and pray for "Peace on earth to men of good will", remember His words, spoken just before His Death, "If you ask the Father anything in My Name, He will give it you". While meditating on the Divine Infancy, ask the Father, in the Name of the Child Jesus, to move the hearts of the poor pagans of China to accept Him, and to embrace His religion.

REV. VINCENT MORRISON.
With Msgr. Fraser and Father Serra, Father Morrison completed the first goup of Canadian Missionaries to go to Chuchow in 1925. Having completed eleven years of active labours in China, he returns to engage in campaign work in Canada. His home is in Savage Hr., P.E.I.

REV. ARTHUR VENADAM, of Pomquet, N.S., was ordained in 1930 and went to China the following year. He is due to arrive at the Seminary early in December, having been recalled from Chuchow to engage in the very necessary work of raising funds for the benefit of our missions.

St. Mary's Cathedral
Scene of Touching Farewell

Archbishop Sinnott Bids Godspeed to Nine "Witnesses of Christ" for the Missions of Far-off China

"Go, my most beloved Brothers, to the sheep who perish, for they have been bought with a great price. May the powers of darkness retreat and may the Angel of the Lord accompany you on your way. To the One God, invisible and immortal, be honour and glory for ever and even, Amen." Thus runs the translation of the "Ite Fratres . . ." recited by His Grace, Most Reverend A. A. Sinnott, D.D., over the nine youthful missionaries to China, who lay prostrate in the sanctuary of St. Mary's Cathedral, Winnipeg, Sunday evening, October 25th, after having recited a solemn Oath of Fidelity to the Missions. The dramatic tenseness which charged the air of the crowded Cathedral. throughout the impressive Departure Ceremony, seems to have reached a climax at this point, and the utterance of these words was followed by many an audible sob. No truly Catholic heart in that huge congregation could fail to experience unearthly emotions at the touching spectacle of these mere youths giving, not some of their possessions, not some of their life, but their very all. A sense of their super-human sacrifice was forced on the minds of the congregation by the awesome words of their oath, "I will devote my whole life."

This impressive ceremony, the first of its kind to be held in Winnipeg, was made possible through the interest in the Missions of Archbishop Sinnott, and we feel quite safe in saying that it was one of the rarest privileges ever accorded the Catholics of Winnipeg. The nine young Canadian Missionaries, Rev. Lorne McFarland, Toronto; Rec. Patrick Moore, Ingersoll, Ont.; Rev. William Matte, Gogama, Ont.; Rev. James Leonard, Toronto, Ont.; Rev. Harold Murphy, Kingston; Rev. John Maurice, Ingersoll, Ont.; Rev. Ronald Reeves, London, Ont.; Rev. Leonard Hudswell, Tweed, Ont., and Rev. Lawrence McAuliffe, Peterboro, Ont., are enroute to China from the China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ont., where they have recently completed their studies. On the gracious invitation of the Archbishop, their journey was interrupted in Winnipeg for a departure ceremony. Prior to the service at the Cathedral, the Missionaries delivered sermons in the various churches of the city.

The service opened with a procession in which His Grace, the Archbishop was preceded by the clergy of the city, the nine Missionaries, clad only in their black cassocks, and the members of the Sanctuary Club. When the clergy had taken their places in the Sanctuary, the "Veni Creator Spiritus" was intoned by the Archbishop and continued by the choir, after which was sung the English version of the same hymn, "Come Holy Ghost, Creator Blest".

A sermon was then given by the Archbishop, the text of which appears elsewhere in this article. The motet, "Lauda Sion", was then sung by the choir, after which the Archbishop, standing in front of the Altar, invested each of the nine Missionaries with a crucifix. The Archbishop venerated each crucifix before placing it on the Missionary, and they were in turn venerated by the missionaries.

After they had received their crucifixes, the nine Missionaries knelt before the Archbishop and recited their Oath of Fidelity to the Missions. After the taking of the Oath, which was received in breathless silence, they prostrated themselves on the floor of the Sanctuary, and over their prostrate forms the Archbishop recited the Latin prayer, "Ite, Fratres". The Itinerarium and the Departure Hymn were then sung by the choir, following which Solemn Benediction was given by Archbishop Sinnott, assisted by Very Rev. W. G. Moore and Very Rev. J. E. Cahill. The impressive ceremony was brought to a close by the Missionaries imparting their Blessing to the congregation.

Princely Collection

Prior to the Departure Ceremony at St. Mary's Cathedral, the nine missionaries delivered sermons in the city churches. At all these services, a collection was taken up for the missionaries. These collections amounted to the princely sum of $400.00 and the Catholics of Winnipeg are to be commended for the generosity which they have shown towards the missions.

Archbishop's Sermon

"But you shall receive the power of the Holy Ghost coming upon you, and you shall be witnesses unto me in Jerusalem, and in all Judea, and Samaria, and even to the uttermost part of the earth."

These are the last words which Christ spoke to His Apostles upon earth. The Risen Saviour stood upon Mount Olivet with his little band of followers gathered around Him. "And when He had said these things, while they looked on, he was raised up: and a cloud received Him out of their sight." In fulfilment of this last message of Christ, the Holy Ghost came down upon the Apostles in the miraculous manner you know, and there, strong in the strength of the Holy Spirit, the Apostle divided the earth between them and each went forth to his appointed portion to spread the Gospel of salvation, or to use the more striking and more appropriate words of Holy Scripture: "to be witnesses of Christ not only in Jerusalem or Judea or Samaria, but even to the uttermost parts of the earth" The Apostles never for a moment forgot the last command laid upon them by Christ. Wherever they went and whatever they did; in their wanderings, their hardships and their sacrifices; in life and in death, they were what their Lord wanted them to be "witnesses of Christ."

Is it not strange and is it not extraordinary that we are gathered here to-night in this Cathedral in this City of Winnipeg in obedience to those last words which were uttered by Christ more than 1,900 years ago: In the history of the world, did the words of any man carry such far-reaching effects as these last words of Christ? Where everything is ephemeral and transitory, is it not a proof that Christ was divine and that His words were the words of eternal truth. Our office, therefore, is to be witnesses of Christ there, for the most of us, where our lot is cast, but for some, the privileged few, to be witnesses of Christ unto the uttermost parts of the earth.

Dearly Beloved Brethren, Christ is with us to-night as truly as He was on the Mount of Olivet, and He is presiding over a farewell ceremony, similar to that which scattered the Apostles to the four corners of the earth. Nine young men of our own country, chosen and called by Christ from our own Christian homes, are going forth to be His witnesses in a far-away land among a people who know Him not. They are leaving home and country, they are leaving Father and Mother, they are turning their backs upon the joys and comforts of a life of culture and refinement, they are renouncing all that man holds dear, and they are exiling themselves for Christ's sake. There are Mothers in homes in Eastern Canada to-night who are thinking of their boys—thinking of the farewell that is being tendered to them in this Cathedral,—thinking in joy and pride that there are other Christian Mothers, who will take their boys to their hearts and send them on their way rejoicing. There are Fathers too who are proud of their boys for their manliness and spirit of self-sacrifice, who are glad that there are other Fathers who share their pride and who will take their place, if only for a brief moment. And who or what has given this marvellous faith and courage to these fathers and mothers, to these young Missionaries—nothing, my brethren, but the Cross of Christ. That Cross these Missionaries bear with them in their hearts and they will plant it in a far-away land and by their words and their example they will draw pagan fathers and mothers and pagan children to come and kneel before that Cross, to look up to Him Who is hanging upon that Cross and acknowledge Him as their Redeemer and their sole hope of salvation. And in that far-away land the Kingdom of Christ will be established, and you know what that Kingdom is: a Kingdom of truth and life; a Kingdom of sanctification and grace; a Kingdom of justice, love and peace.

Ours is not merely the office of saying a brief farewell. We will follow these young Missionaries into the Mission field and before God we want a part in the work which they are going to do. That part we can have by our prayers and alms. It is the Inspired writer who said: "Ask of Me, and I will give thee the Gentiles for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession." We can pray that the Holy Spirit of God may always be with these Missionaries, to give them strength and courage to carry on their Apostolate. It is only inasmuch as that Spirit is with them that they will meet with success in their work, for it is a work of God operating through human instruments. We can help them by our alms, and that we will do according to our means before this service is ended. The Missionaries themselves will go to you and you may be sure that anything you place in their hands you are giving it with all your hearts to God.

And now, Dearly Beloved Missionaries, Dear Brothers in Christ, in saying farewell to you, we do so with joy rather than with sorrow. We cannot forget that, whilst your work is a great sacrifice, your reward will be exceedingly great.

"Everyone that for My sake has left father and mother, and lands and home, shall receive a hundredfold in his life, and in the world to come, life everlasting." Everlasting life is the goal for all of us and to you it is assured in the plainest words from the lips of God Himself. May God be always with you! May His grace accompany you.

(From the "North West Review")

Not for a long day will our young priests forget the hearty welcome accorded them by the beloved Archbishop of Winnipeg, his clergy, and people. His Excellency cheerfully poses with the departing missionaries, following the beautiful ceremony at St. Mary's Cathedral, on October 25th.

Picture, courtesy of the "Winnipeg Tribune."

CATECHISTS

By REV. DESMOND STRINGER

Conditions in Mission territories call for a plan of action on the part of missionaries which differs somewhat from the methods followed by the clergy in "home" countries. No description of activities in pagan lands is completely understood unless readers realize the part played by the "right hand men" of the Missionary, his Catechists. This article by Father Desmond Stringer is sufficiently detailed to give you an appreciative understanding of the functions and importance of native Catechists in China. Being of the race, they know how to adapt the Christian message to the Chinese mind. Gradually, by carefully and thoughtfully planned steps, our Missionaries in Chuchow are building up a School of Catechists that will accelerate conversions and knit together all the Christians into a compact body which will ultimately make its influence felt in every department of life. That is their aim. Difficulties and obstacles are being met with, but these will yield with time to the patience and prayer of our Missionaries. Pray for our Chinese Catechists; they have a most important part in the evangelization of their fellowmen.

FROM time to time you have come across the word Catechist in articles of this magazine. It may be of interest to know what such a person is; what are his duties; what are some of the obstacles that hinder his utility.

You know already, of course, that our Prefecture of Chuchow has its headquarters in Lishui, the residence of Rt. Rev. Msgr. McGrath, our Prefect Apostolic. There are five other centres where resident priests dwell. All these, Lishui included, have pastors, curates and catechists. These last are laymen—married or single as the case may be—chosen from out the Christian body, and trained to be evangelical workers. Briefly put, they are teachers of Catechism. A well-trained and virtuous Catechist can do untold good. He is a link between priest and flock,—a sort of resident pastor in those numerous towns and villages where Christians live without a priest. The Catechist has no powers to dispense the Sacraments, but he can and does baptize in cases of necessity; and also, when the priest is impeded, be present to witness marriages. In the case of marriage between Christian and pagan, he interviews the parties, obtains the promises (under witness) of the pagan that all children to be born of the marriage shall be raised Catholics and that no hindrance shall be placed which would prevent the Catholic party's practice of religion This information he forwards to the priest under whom he works.

Hard to Assemble

As a teacher of religion he finds all ages and both sexes among his pupils. You know already that the great majority of people in our Prefecture live a hand to mouth existence. Bandits—within and without the law—prey on them almost incessantly. Thus the inhabitants are forced beyond normal working hours. Conditions of living also tend to thwart orderly procedure in spreading the Gospel. Take one instance. The Catechist tries to get the children together for a lesson. He has already announced it the previous day. The hour strikes—a mere handful have assembled. Peter has gone to cut brush on the mountain-side. Anna has taken the ox to graze along the pathway. Martha has gone to do the washing in the village pool, the water of which makes one think of French pea soup. All at these jobs at the command of the parents who are "astonished" when the Catechist comes looking for Peters, Annas and Marthas. "What!" quoth the parents, "Peter not at Catechism? Ai-ya! these kids will run off. It isn't as though the Shieh-San (Catechist) hadn't told them. Well, just wait till Peter gets home!" All this and more, day after day impedes the catechism lesson. In places where we have schools there is, more or less, a regular attendance, which makes the Catechist's lot a little better.

BESIDES the children he has the grown-ups to teach,—Christians and catechumens. On Sunday he preaches to them. During the week he tries to assemble them for night-prayers and instructions. The vocabulary of his listeners—especially the women is extremely limited, generally circumscribed by the trade or work in which they are engaged. Differences of dialect add to the difficulties. Atmosphere conducive to quiet listening and pondering is in constant jeopardy. The mothers bring their babies. To politicians I recommend one sure method to bring any meeting to an untimely end. About six babies would suffice,—three hungry and three filled. The combination of yells and gurgles ensuing, accompanied by devices, vocal and otherwise, of mothers trying to quell the rising volume of infant bedlam, would, I think, snap the stoic patience of any servant of the country. Ask any Catechist!

At times a point in the instruction causes the imagination to take flight. Attention is lost and so, sometimes, is the Catechist's calm. Once I gave a Catechist a picture of the "Descent of the Holy Ghost". But! It took a lot of explaining to convince some that the Apostles weren't bad men and weren't being hit by lightning!

Settling Disputes

The Catechist is also a sort of foster-father to his Christians and Catechumens, watching over them and their interests, having a special concern for the baby girls that they be not sold into pagan homes,—or given away. He has to report any serious misdemeanours he notices among the Christians. Since he himself is Chinese, as also is his flock, there are always a goodly number who expect the Catechist to follow their line of action in dealing with the priest,—in regard to alms, as an instance. Often enough the Catechist has to report a case to be spurious; this incurs the wrath of the thwarted beggar. As guardian of his people it falls to the Catechist to act as middleman. Catechists come to grief on this rock more than on any other obstacle to their exercise of office. And, incidentally, the priest gets more headaches from it than from any other source. One faction will solemnly assure the "Spiritual Father" that this Catechist has bent, broken and mangled every law of God and man. The other side, with equal zeal, will praise him as being a strong pillar of the Church. Yet in matters of less moment the Catechist is able to patch up quarrels if only by providing an opportunity for the contestants to withdraw without loss of "face".

REV. DESMOND STRINGER, Ottawa, Ont.

During his seven years in China, Father Stringer was a faithful contributor to our pages. Looking hale and hearty, he arrived at the Seminary on Sunday, November 15th, and during the next twelve months he will be engaged in making known to audiences in Canada the facts of Mission life in China. Better than any printed word will be the actual recounting of the trials and difficulties experienced by our missionaries in Chuchow. China Mission Seminary asks a sympathetic response to the appeals which three of our returned missionaries will make to Canadian Catholics as opportunity offers.

LITTLE rifts or divisions the Catechists can rectify. There is one difficulty, however, that as yet proves insurmountable. Christians from varying localities will not mix. This state of affairs exists only in the larger towns and cities. One example will suffice to show you. In another town, where I was previously, there were a number of Christians from a seaport something over one hundred miles away. They knew they could not mix with the local Christians and, beyond attending services, did not attempt to. The Catechist's usefulness in their regard was very little. It has also occurred that a man from another district has been accepted to become a Catechist because no suitable subject could be found at hand. His utility was practically nil; he wasn't "one of the crowd". Gradually as the leaven of Christian charity begins to affect our young Christianity this difficulty will fade away. But as yet it makes the lot of the Catechist quite hard.

To "Save Face"

There is another part the Catechist plays in his general character of middleman and this when the priest is present. Not because the latter does not or cannot understand this or that dialect. In the case being given he can. But the presence of the Catechist is necessary be-

(Continued on page 158)

A STATEMENT

EVERY year, following Mission Sunday and the Parish collections for the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, we receive numerous letters asking that indivdual contributions be credited in our donation records, or complaining that "my subscription expiry date has not been changed on 'CHINA'."

May we make it clear to our subscribers, and the public generally, that China Mission Seminary DOES NOT SHARE in the Funds collected at any time for the Society for the Propagation of the Faith.

China Mission Seminary has no annual collection in parish churches. The Seminary depends entirely for its support, and for the development for its Missions in China, on the free-will offerings sent by interested friends through the medium of the mail. And just now we are in need of a legion of such friends.

JOHN E. McRAE, President, China Mission Seminary.

A LETTER TO SAINT FRANCIS

By REV. CRAIG STRANG

I HAVE been quite a while contemplating writing you this letter, St. Francis. I hope you won't mind my commenting on several incidents which your biographers have handed down to us, and which spiritual writers have presented to us as exemplifying the spirit which animated you in living the Gospel which you preached so well. I would like to recall for you several incidents which single you out as a great saint and the greatest of missionaries. You know, St. Francis the Institute which trained me and my fellow-missionaries delights in your Heavenly Patronage. We have often meditated on your heroic work and your almost fabulous success, and often, too, on your wonderful, unique death. We have honoured you on your Feasts, and made Novenas of intercession, and we keep on trying our best to imitate you. But we do not forget the differences between you and us—our weaknesses are so apparent beside your heroism; and we must reckon with the changes that have come over the world in general, and the mission world in particular, since you left it.

Yes, things have changed since your day, St. Francis. To the places you went we now can go much more swiftly, more easily and more comfortably. I remember reading with sympathy of that long five-months' journey which ensued after you left Lisbon and sailed down the Guinea Coast and rounded the Cape of Good Hope—how your ship was becalmed at times and at other times buffeted by storms. I wonder if you did not sometimes fear that your life would end on that ship and that you would never land with your cross to carry out the work to which your Father in Christ, St. Ignatius, had commissioned you.

But well I know you did not wait till you landed before commencing that work to which your whole being was devoted. How often have I thrilled at the memory of what your life on board ship brought to you. How, continually sick, wasted by heat and wracked by fever, yet your spirit rose above the poor worn body, and you preached on Sundays, catechised and instructed, made peace, silenced oaths, blasphemy, obscene songs. Yes, it is a glorious chapter in your life, this long journey passed in ministering to the sick and dying amongst a seething mass of men and vermin in the fever-swept hold of an unsanitary boat. It is really not easy for us to picture the actual hardships endured at this time as you tended to the wants of sick bodies and supplied the needs of sicker souls. I sometimes wonder what you must have thought of us as we crossed the broad Pacific in fast and comfortable liners. The starting of our missionary life was more full of fun than of sacrifice—but just the same it was a departure from all that we liked and held dear, and in that, at least, we resembled you.

Even if it be not true, Father Francis, that you deliberately passed up the opportunity of visiting your mother and bidding her a fond farewell (as some inaccurate legend has it), still I know you would have been capable of such a sacrifice in your zeal to begin your mission. Need I tell you, dear St. Francis, that our first great sacrifice is made when we say our farewells to our loved ones at home.

THERE's something I want to ask you, St. Francis. Didn't you hear your friends and acquaintances say there was enough paganism in Europe and enough work to keep you busy there without the necessity of going far afield to labour for God? And were you not hurt and pained by such remarks? Europe was just beginning to learn of the existence of people across the seas, and I guess the people at home didn't bother much about these distant souls as they bartered with them for material merchandise. But you knew that the Church had a Mission that was all-embracing, and not Europe's exclusively, and you realized that other races had need of the ministrations of God's priests, and even more so than any in Europe, where hardly anyone lived outside the hearing of a church bell. And so these remarks did not daunt nor impede you.

We are indebted to Father Doyle for many of the pictures which appear in "China." Somebody else was on the job this time, as Father Strang (left) watches Fr. Doyle arrange his camera.

About your real missionary life, dear St. Francis, I make reference now only in a general way. At the moment I want to discuss with you the pleasant topic of your phenomenal success, for you seem to have had many days quite as busy and as fruitful as was that day for St. Peter when he baptized no fewer than three thousand people. You'll forgive us, St. Francis, if we remind you that we greet with a clerical chuckle the account of one monk who wrote that you baptized three thousand yourself on a desert island. We often hear how tired you must have been, and how armweary, at the close of a busy day of baptisms. Even if you had had helpers, the task must have been enormous. You certainly are outstanding in the number of your baptisms administered. You have it all over us in that respect. We would welcome the chance to have tired arms from pouring the saving waters of baptism on our newly-made converts. But we do get immeasurable consolation from the baptisms we are privileged to administer, even though, among us all, they do not exceed a few hundreds a year.

FATHER Francis, saints like you are few and far between. Even though it be from afar off we still try to follow in your footsteps. But we are conscious of our deficiences. Perhaps we do not have the same eagerness to meet discomforts and trials and hardships as you had. We encounter somewhat the same circumstances and the same pagan mentality which you encountered, but somehow we do not meet with the same success as was yours. But still, mind you, we are not dis-

(Continued on page 156)

Reclaiming the Outcasts

By
SISTER M. TITO F.M.M.,
Shanghai

IT was in answer to an S.O.S. call from our Sisters in Tsinan that two of us were sent from Shanghai to help nurse the flood refugees. On arrival I was put on duty in the hospital, where, with the help of a Chinese Sister, 200 patients had to be cared for. As they became convalescent they were sent away to make room for others. At that time there were some 20,000 refugees round about Tsinan, sheltered in 31 disused pagodas. Diphtheria, measles, and smallpox were rife among the children and in spite of what we did to help, we were powerless to save them; but the great "remedy" was administered, and in four months 2,000 dying children received, through Baptism, their "Passport" to Heaven. It was pitiful to see these little children dying off like flies; one mother had to stand by and watch her five children carried off one after the other by one of the above-mentioned diseases. She was comforted when we explained to her that her little ones would find greater happiness in God's Kingdom.

In our own hospital not one patient died without having been instructed, and at his or her request, baptised. One day two Chinese arrived in the final stages of tuberculosis, supported by two kind neighbors, they had walked four hours, hoping to find their cure in the Hospital. Our Lord in His great mercy gave them something better. They lived just long enough to be instructed in the principal truths of our holy religion and receive the water of regeneration. Another privileged soul found among the refugees had already attained his 100th year. He took his departure for Heaven just a few hours after baptism.

The harvest of souls was great during the eight months that the shelters were open to the refugees, and we thank God for having used us as His instruments to save some of those souls.

WHEN the patients left the hospital to return to their respective villages, each was given a dollar, alloted by the government. Several left before they were cured just to have the money. In one case, a woman not feeling quite fit, decided not to leave, but her husband thought otherwise; he wanted the dollar. There was much arguing, without any definite result, until madam, in a temper, had an epileptic seizure and died three days later without regaining consciousness. Fortunately, she had asked to be baptised some time previously, but as she was in apparently good health we refused her request on the grounds that she was not suffiliently instructed, and advised her to continue studying doctrine. However, "man proposes, God disposes". She received baptism.

The local authorities seeing us at work amongst the sick gave us permission to assist in the prisons also.

I can hardly describe my first visit there. Some 200 or 300 prisoners were huddled together in a room about eight yards square, with two very small holes serving for ventilation. Sanitary conveniences there are none, and the place is in such a condition that it is only for the love of God, Whose grace upholds us, that we return a second time. The wardens, who all wear masks when they enter the prisoners' cells, are astonished when they see the Sisters speak kindly to the prisoners, give them the remedies they need for their different ailments or do what is possible to ease the sufferings of the inmates of the prison, and the Sisters do not wear masks. Poor wardens, they have still to learn that in caring for the body we are hoping to save the soul that has been ransomed by the Precious Blood of Him whom we serve.

IN one part of the prison it was so filthy we were obliged to stand at a distance and throw the remedies over to those who needed them, as it was impossible to walk between the prisoners. It is not surprising therefore that many who were brigands and malefactors are changed in a few weeks from fellows that terrorized, into weak, cowering creatures. A Chinese virgin or catechist goes daily to the prison and instructs all those who are willing to learn the principal mysteries of the Faith; there is hardly time for more or further instructions as the majority of the prisoners are awaiting the death sentence, either by shooting or from some malady. The prisoners listen willingly; it is no strange sight to see the tears rolling down the cheeks of some of those criminals as they hear the story of the mercy and love of Our Lord who cares for them as much as He cares for us. The misery these poor people endure during their term of prison life makes them enter into themselves and see things in another light.

Sister Mary Angela, of the Grey Nuns at Lishui, looks quite at home with her young friends.

The Sisters go twice a week and baptize those who are sufficiently instructed and who desire baptism, also those who, in danger of death, who ask for baptism. Although I was not present on the occasion, the Sister who usually goes to the prison told me the following: One day she baptized 84 condemned men. Another day 400 received baptism. At her next visit three days later a host of new faces greeted her. Of the 400 newly-baptised not one remained, they had all paid the penalty and passed into eternity. That same day in a yard next to the room in which she administered baptism to the 400 she saw 60 dead bodies thrown one on top of the other, like so many pieces of wood, awaiting burial,—such as it is. A huge hole is dug, all the bodies are pushed into it and then covered with earth.

There is a special part in the prison for those dangerously ill, but the prisoner who has to be transported there does not have the luxury of a stretcher. He is turned on his back—hands tied together—feet tied together, and then a bamboo pole is passed between hands and feet. Something like a pig trussed up for market.

IT happened that during Holy Week visits to the prison were stopped so that we sisters could have time to follow the ceremonies of that great week. In the meantime the prisoners had been transferred elsewhere. On Good Friday Mother Superior received a letter from the Governor informing her of the change as they thought the Sisters had not been there for some days and not acquainted of the change. Also that several brigands, feeling their end drawing near, had asked to see the Sisters and have some of their remedies and also their "Saving water".

For us, we ask nothing better than that Our Divine Lord may bless our work and give us the grace to save many more souls for Him.

LETTER TO ST. FRANCIS

(Continued from page 154)

couraged. For humbly do we claim that we give as you gave—the best possible. And I trust you are not disappointed with us or our results. I know you bear with our shortcomings, and perhaps you see many excusing factors. But I am sure that you must be very proud of all the intrepid missionaries, men and women, both in your Society and outside, who have followed your example in the past four hundred years and added their part to the work that cost you your life. Yes, I feel that you are proud of all the Church's missionaries and the results they have garnered through the years since you first blazed the trail. But, more important, I know you are interceding for them and always meriting the title of their Heavenly Protector and saintly Patron, and for that, dear Saint Francis, we thank you, and encouraged by it we keep on at the work.

And now a concluding paragraph about your death. Your lovely, lonely death — parted from all friends, distant from all help, and even deprived of the presence of a fellow-priest. Books about you tell us that your thoughts were where your glazed eyes sought to focus themselves—across the narrow strip of sea from Sancian to China, where the teeming millions of souls in that vast land offered you virginal soil for still more fruitful cultivation. And so your last thoughts must have been for them. And for your successors who would surely work amongst them. With that final thought and prayer in your mind you prepared to welcome Sister Death with all the loving longing and holy happiness as did your gentle name-sake. Father Francis, did the drama of the whole thing ever cross your mind as the increasingly-difficult breathing advised you of the falling of life's curtain? When the breath went out of you it, figuratively, entered into others. We are engaged in the same drama as you were, Francis Xavier, and we but ask that some of your indomitable spirit and courage and zeal may show forth in our lives lived for God in the land to which your last look was directed.

Catholic Wills

For Mission Needs

In China, our priests need funds for new chapels, for new schools, for new homes, and for payment of salaries to catechists. In Canada, our Seminary needs support for the training of young apostles and for the maintenance of their home. Donations to our Burse Fund and our Building Fund are our greatest present needs. Think of our Mission work when making, or changing, your last will. Here's how you can do it; insert this clause in your will:

"I BEQUEATH TO SAINT FRANCIS XAVIER CHINA MISSION SEMINARY, SCARBORO BLUFFS, ONTARIO, THE SUM OF ....."

Monsignor McGrath presides at the Commencement Exercises of the Girls' School at Lishui. At his left are Fathers Morrison, Beal, and Gignac; seated to his right are Fathers Stringer, Curtin, and McGettigan.

MONSIGNOR FRASER WRITES

IT was the Eve of Pentecost. I expected a big crowd for the Feast, which is one of the four great Feasts in China. It was after 4 p.m. and people were beginning to come in for confession. I was all alone, my assistants being distributed throughout the district to celebrate the Festival in the principal centres—Mass in six different places, a record for Kinhwa. A countryman rushed in; he had been on the road since early morning; had walked 27 miles; a Christian, dying in his village, was calling for a priest. What was to be done? Could I get one of my assistants to take the call? No, they were too far away, and there was no time to lose. But what about to-morrow's Feast? Would I be able to get back in time to celebrate?

Taking my sick-call set I hurried to the Church for the Blessed Sacrament. Mounting rickshaws my servant boy and I proceeded to the motor bus terminal. It is seldom that one sees a motor vehicle in this city, and so the rickshaw pullers are careless. Just as we were swinging through the narrow city gate a motor truck dashed by. The driver waved a reproving finger at my rickshaw puller—death had been avoided by a mere hair's-breath.

On arrival at the pontoon bridge we were delayed by a thousand Boy Scouts returning from their drill grounds. At the bus terminal I found the last bus had left. There was an auto in a corner, but it was out of commission—engine trouble. The buses were parked in the shed for the night. To hire one for the journey would be exorbitant; but there was no alternative, if I wished to get back for to-morrow's Feast.

So we bumped along at a great speed in the special bus for about an hour; then walked several miles through the country to the village where the sick man lay. I gave the Last Sacraments and hurried back to the bus which was waiting for us—the round trip having been arranged for $10. It was 9 p.m. when we got back to the Church. I was proud of the adventure, which I think is a record in this slow-moving country; and still more pleased that a churchful of Christians were not deprived of Mass and Communion on the great Festival; many of them had walked long distances from the country. The sick person died a few days later.

A few days ago a pagan family, most superstitious and devoted to their idols, brought us their little sick daughter, aged seven. She was a pupil in the Sisters' school, and was exceedingly bright for her age. She learned catechism and prayers and firmly believed in God. Her pagan parents, as usual in sickness, had recourse to all sorts of superstitions. She was placed, against her will, in the pagan temple under the protection of the idols against the devil, who the pagans think produces illness. Wonderful to say, this tiny child resisted all the pressure brought to bear on her, and firmly refused to adore the false gods. Water mixed with the ashes of incense burned before the idols was given her to drink, and many other silly superstitions were employed, but all to no avail. Finally, at the proposal of a Christian lady, she was brought to the convent, and placed under the protection of God.

Fortunate it was for the little child. As she was now very ill Father Ly baptized her, and I gave her Confirmation. We had her treated by a first-class doctor, but at his last visit he refused to prescribe medicine, as all hope was gone. We endeavoured to prolong her life with condensed milk, and she seemed to rally a little, but she had a very high fever, and fell into unconsciousness. Her pagan mother began the weird wailing usual at the approach of death, and as is the custom here, laid her on the floor to die. And so, this little child, with the staunch faith of martyrs, went to join the Angels. A little coffin was procured, covered with a white cloth, and placed in the church, where surrounded by the sanctuary boys, I performed the beautiful service of the innocents. She was then buried in our Christian cemetery.

MISSION LITERATURE

We have in stock at the Seminary a number of copies of Monsignor McGrath's book "The Dragon at Close Range", and also copies of Father Sharkey's volume of Poems "The Anvil of the Cross". Both books provide interesting and instructive Catholic reading, and we advise you to add copies to your library now before the supply becomes exhausted. The price for each book is one dollar, and you will be pleased at the investment. Send for your copy now while you think of it.

HELPING GOD'S WORK

Those who readily and regularly give financial help to the Missions are none the poorer for it, but without their assistance we would be badly off. Please include China Mission Seminary in your Christmas Gift list.

Boys in the Catholic School, Kinhwa, China (Monsignor Fraser's Mission). Some were Christians from infancy; some recently baptized; the greater number not yet baptized; all are being instructed in Christian doctrine, and assist at all Church functions. This is an out-and-out Catholic School, no pupil being accepted unless the parents agree to the child practising the Christian Religion. There are as many girls under instruction in the girls' school taught by the native Sisters of the Sacred Heart. These are the two principal schools in the District of Kinhwa, which contains eight counties with 2,000,000 inhabitants. There are besides a few smaller schools throughout the district, but the pagan schools can be counted by the thousand. Alas! "The harvest indeed is great but the labourers few".

CATECHISTS

(Continued from page 153)

cause one of the Christian's "hasn't the face" to speak to the priest directly. This most often happens with women. I was examining one once on points concerning her marriage. She would not answer me; but she spoke at the Catechist to me! This process can be reversed, If I have to speak "scold words" to a Christian, it seems that the honourable way to go about it is to call the Catechist and culprit before me and scold the latter by speaking my piece at the former. Just one of the buds from that ill-fated Tree in the Garden!

Patient Training

The training of Catechists is one of the Missionaries' pressing tasks. Because of the youth of Christianity throughout our Prefecture good subjects are scarce. Hence the building up of a strong active body of men fitted for this office proceeds slowly. To it the missionary must bring a colossal patience; an ability to confine his training to the limits of their mental machinery; and a readiness to overlook a lot of minor defects. The ideal Catechist, like ideal priest, is rare. At least St. James thinks so. The education of the millions in China consisted for centuries in sheer memorizing. So one cannot expect our Catechists to be remotely related to Aristotle. We have to tell our Catechists the same thing over and over again.

Method in Tsingtien

Every month in Tsingtien, our eight Catechists and two schoolteachers come into headquarters from their stations, there to spend the First Friday. Thursday afternoon, as each arrives, he comes to announce his presence and pay his respects to the priests; then he retires to the "Ka-ting" to meet his fellows and with them to smoke and chat. That evening they listen to a sermon specially adapted to their particular needs. Night prayers, examen of conscience and confession follow. Friday morning's meditation time is given to thinking on the sermon of the night before. In their own stations they use meditation books supplied to them. At Mass on Friday they receive their monthly Communion. Benediction follows and then breakfast. After this repast all congregate in the "Ka-ting" and one is chosen by lot to prepare, and give in the afternoon, a Catechism class to his confreres. This decided, the regular business of reports is begun. One by one they come to the pastor's office and give an account of the month's activities and happenings. The range of these is as wide as human nature. One tells me he has baptized three pagan infants shortly before they died. Another recounts how Mr. Cherish, a Christian of sixty-four summers, has rented another man's wife for ten years. A third relates that Mr. Benefit, who was too indifferent to attend the Mission last Fall, was found dead sitting in his chair. A fourth reports that Mr. Peace is henpecked by his pagan wife's mother—a termagant if ever one was —and that is the reason why he can't send his young son to learn prayers at the chapel school. And so on until all have come with their parcel of news.

In the afternoon at three o'clock the catechism class is held. In the morning the one selected received a large picture from a series of doctrinal ones. His task is to explain its meaning. Twenty minutes is allowed and at the completion of this time the other Catechists may quiz him. This method enables them to find out for themselves what talent they have and what weaknesses they must eradicate to fit themselves better for their work.

At five o'clock all assemble in the chapel and receive various pointers—corrections and commendations, with no names mentioned. This lasts half an hour and then the Stations of the Cross are made in common, for themselves and their dependants. At seven o'clock another sermon is preached to them. Saturday morning they receive Holy Communion again and, breakfast over, they go off in twos and threes to their missions.

FACTS YOU SHOULD KNOW

THE work of the Foreign Missions is not a whim or fad of a few individuals. It is a sacred trust given to all Catholics, young and old, by Jesus Christ our Lord.

Vast masses of people in China and elsewhere still await the word of salvation that can be brought to them only through foreign missionaries.

Nearly three hundred years ago the Catholic Faith was brought to Canada by the saintly Jesuit Martyrs from France.

Canadian Catholics owe a deep debt of gratitude to those pioneer Missionaries for the gift of their Catholic Faith.

Today Canada is making an effort to pay this debt by sending out her own missionaries to pagan lands.

An Institution for the development of Mission Vocations among English-speaking Canadian boys was founded in 1918 by Father John M. Fraser. That Institution is known as St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, now located at Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

The Seminary has now 24 priests in China. These priests are evangelizing a district (Chuchow) comprising a population of 1,500,000. Fewer than 3,000 are yet Catholics.

The present personnel of China Mission Seminary is: 45 priests and 39 students. This personnel has been recruited from 21 different dioceses, as follows: Toronto, 14; London, 8; St. John's, Nfld., 10; Alexandria, 5; Antigonish, 8; Ottawa, 6; Hr. Grace, Nfld., 5; Kingston, 5; Montreal, 4; Halifax, 3; Hamilton, 2; Pembroke, 2; Calgary, 2; China, 2; Spain, 1; Victoria, 1; Peterboro, 1; Charlottetown, 2; St. John, N.B., 1; Vicariate of Northern Ontario, 1; Fall River, Mass., 1.

The Grey Sisters of the Immaculate Conception, from Pembroke, Ontario, are assisting the priests of China Mission Seminary in Chuchow Prefecture, China. Seven Sisters are at the Lishui Convent.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary has the endorsement of the entire Canadian Hierarchy. The President of the Seminary is Very Rev J. E. McRae, D.C.L. The Prefect-Apostolic of Chuchow is Right Rev. Wm. C. McGrath.

St. Francis Xavier Seminary for its upkeep, and the developpment of its Missions in China, depends entirely on free-will offerings given by interested friends.

As a Catholic, you should contribute to this national endeavor for Foreign Missions. "Charity for the Missions surpasses every other work of charity." (Pius XI).

"'Without doubt, it is by prayer and sacrifice that we can best help our missionaries."—ST. THERESE, Patroness of Missions.

NONSENSE

"IF YOU DON'T LAUGH AT THE JOKES OF THE AGE, THEN LAUGH AT THE AGE OF THE JOKES"

"So you're the chief of police," said the stranger in a small American town, "Glad to know you. I wonder if I could also shake hands with the fire chief?"

"Sure," replied the police chief. "Just wait while I change hats."

Mary—"Why do they keep lions at the central telephone office?"

Teacher—"Why do you ask such a question, Mary?"

Mary—"Well, when I call my daddy sometimes the central girl says, 'The Lion is busy'."

The two survivors of a shipwreck, a seaman and a passenger, had managed to clamber on to a raft.

"If a ship doesn't sight us soon," said the seaman, "we'll starve."

"Don't talk nonsense," snapped the passenger. "I've plenty of money."

The lady was visiting the aquarium. "Can you tell me whether I could get a live shark here?" she asked the attendant.

"A live shark? What could you do with a live shark?"

"A neighbor's cat has been eating my goldfish and I want to teach him a lesson."

Johnny—"What is a brick hod used for, Daddy?"

Father—"Why, for carrying bricks, of course. You should know that. It explains itself."

Johnny (after a moment's silence) —"Then I suppose a tripod is used for carrying tripe?"

Visitor: "How old are you, sonny?"

Boston Boy: "That's hard to say, sir. According to my latest school tests, I have a psychological age of 11 and a moral age of 10. Anatomically, I'm 7; mentally, I'm 9. But I suppose you refer to my chronological age. That's 8—but nobody pays any attention to that these days!"

"Will you guarantee the upholstery of this car?" demanded the prospective purchaser. "Madam," replied the salesman with dignity, "the proof of the padding is in the seating."

Husband: "Did you have a good game of bridge, dear?"

Wife: "So-so. We lost the rubber, but I think we won the argument afterwards."

The deep-sea diver was hard at work on the ocean bed. Suddenly an urgent voice came over the telephone which connected him with the boat above.

"What's the matter, chum?" he asked.

"Come up quickly," he heard. "The captain's just told me the bloomin' boat's sinking."

The cheapjack had been holding forth on the wonderful properties of the anti-fat preparation he was hawking.

"But are you sure it's all you say it is?" demanded a female sceptic in the crowd.

"Am I sure, madame?" retorted the other. "Why, you can take it from me that it was this very preparation that made the Tower of Pisa lean!"

A negro preacher called on a white minister and found the latter writing. "What you doin'?" asked the colored parson.

"I'm preparing my notes for next Sunday's sermon."

"I suttinly nevah would do that. Don't you know the debbil is looking right ovah your shouldah an' knows everything yo' gwin t' say? Now, I don't make no notes, and when I gets up to talk, neither me nor th' debil himself knows what I'm gwine t' say."

"Now, Tommy," said the teacher. "Can you tell me what a quack doctor is?"

"Oh, yes; he's a vet that cures ducks."

"You didn't take a vacation this year, did you?"

"No, I thought I needed a rest."

"Your father looks very distinguished with his snow-white hair."

"Yes, he has me to thank for that."

"Yesterday I got a parrot for my wife."

"Um! I wouldn't mind an exchange like that."

Mistress (giving new cook instructions)—"I am getting a new griller for the kitchen."

Cook: "Then I don't want the job. I won't have one of those big hairy monkeys jumping around my kitchen."

Aristocratic Castaway (to his valet): "Just one more thing before I turn in, Thompson. Make a sundial and call me at half-past nine."

Note received by teacher explaining the absence of child: "Dear Teacher,—Beatrice is suffering from measles as required by law and cannot come to school."

"Daddy!" exclaimed the little boy.

"One more question, then," sighed the tired father. "Only one."

"How far is it," inquired the tot, "between to and fro."

Patron: "Look here, waiter, I ordered chicken pie and there isn't a single piece of chicken in it."

Waiter: "That's being consistent, sir. We also have cottage cheese but so far as I know there's not a cottage in it."

Tailor: "You have recently inherited a nice lump of money from your uncle. Why don't you pay me?"

Customer: "I hate all outward show. don't want it to be said that my newly-acquired wealth has caused a departure from my former simple habits."

Two men occupying the same seat on a bus got into conversation.

"So you are a doctor, eh," said one.

"Yes," replied the other.

"Well," said the first one, "in a way our work is alike. I'm a window washer and work on panes, to."

Rustic: "If you please, zur; Janet and I 'ud like to put off our wedding for a week or two."

Vicar: "Dear, dear, what has happened? Is Miss Janet ill?"

Rustic: "Oh no, zur; but the weddin' presents ain't a-comin' in up to expectations."

Rastus and Liza were married but a short time when he came home with a big wash-tub, a wash-board and a handsome three-foot mirror.

Liza: "Whut's all de truck you brung?"

Rastus: "Yo'-all kin take yo' pick. Yo' kin take de tub an' washboard an' go to work, or yo' kin take de mirror an' set down and watch you'se'f starve."

ANOTHER OPPORTUNITY FOR

YOU

To Answer An Invitation

+

The Invitation . . St. Francis Xavier China Mission Seminary, Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario, invites you to enlist your family in a Mission League.

The Object . . . . To help the Seminary educate its students for the Missionary Priesthood, and to send aid to its Missionaries working in Chuchow, China.

The Method . . . To deposit ONE CENT A DAY in a China Mission Mite-box kept in your home.

How to Join . . . Just send to us for a Mission Mite-box. That's all. You don't even have to write a letter. Use the Coupon below.

The Easiest and Simplest Way for Every Catholic Family in Canada and Newfoundland to Do Its Duty by Supporting Canada's Only Foreign Mission Seminary for English-speaking Catholics.

——————————— MAIL THIS TODAY ———————————

ST. F. X. SEMINARY,
Scarboro Bluffs, Ontario.

Dear Fathers:

I want a China Mission Mite-box for my home. I intend to put in the Mite-box ONE CENT every day, and from time to time I'll send you what I've collected. I think that's the least every Catholic family could do to help your missionary works. Please enter my name as a member of your new Mission League, thereby entitling me to a share in all the Spiritual Benefits extended to benefactors of your Missions.

MY NAME .....

MY ADDRESS .....

.....